The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—If the following will not be crowding out productions of great importance please publish. To the many dear brethren, sisters and friends whom I have lately visited in Pasquotank and Currituck counties, and to all the faithful in Christ Jesus, who worship God in the Spirit, and have no confidence in the flesh greeting. Dearly beloved in the Lord, being burdened as I am with a sense of my inability to write for instruction or edification of God's humble poor, were it not for the love and fellowship which I find in my heart for you, and which I have some reasons to hope has been planted there by Him who is the strength of His people, I could not thus address you. But, plead my unworthiness and weakness as I may, it does not relieve the impression of my mind to tell you how much I feel indebted to you all for kindness and tender care of me while among you. So much did you participate in my enjoyment, so many kind words of encouragement were poured out unto me by many of you who perhaps I shall never meet again on earth, that I shall ever hold you in grateful remembrance. The kindness I received while among you was very humiliating to me, and would have been more so, had I not already been crushed very low in body and mind previous to my coming into your midst. The greater part of this summer had been so dark and dreary to me. I had thought that a few days spent in your pleasant company would perhaps be reviving to both mind and body, feeling that the Lord is able to bless the effort, should it be his gracious will. My little bark had been sorely tried and tempest-tossed, the furious storm often threatening its destruction, while all around seemed to be walled up by the rolling billows which seemed almost ready to overwhelm, and day after day seemed to pass without sun or star appearing; yet in all this I was enabled to hope for deliverance in Him who hath delivered, who doth deliver, and in whom we trust will yet deliver, remembering the blessed promise that "the prey shall be taken from the mighty, and the lawful captive shall be delivered, for thus saith the Lord, I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children." While the many trials, sad temptations, and dark seasons through which we are made to pass are very trying to the flesh, yet by them we are brought into fellowship with prophets, apostles and also with our blessed Redeemer who having suffered being tempted is able to succor them that are tempted. And since it is the way that all have been brought and must come, why is it that we so murmur and complain by the way? For though we feel to be in darkness the greater part of the time, and the way seems so narrow, yet we have a guide who knows the way, and though we stumble in the way and think perhaps to rise no more, yet ere we are aware He hath taken us up and is pouring the oil of grace in our wounded conscience. He has promised to never leave nor forsake us. In Him are all our needs supplied. "For it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." O who is like unto this God, the mighty God of Jacob, slow to anger, plenteous in mercy, the sinner's constant friend? Not only did he bear the sins of his people in his fleshly body on the cross, and was pressed down by them as with many sheaves from his advent into this lower world, but he bore and carried them all the days of old, being set up from everlasting, or before the earth was. "His delights were with the sons of men. He saw of the travail of his soul and was satisfied." Ah my soul, adore and wonder. How unfathomable the depth of such love. Viewing the end from the beginning what a life of sorrow and shame opened to his merciful eyes, yet he was satisfied to bear it all for the poor fallen race of Adam or a part of that race, such as are heirs of God, chosen in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, and through his sufferings became joint heirs with Him. What a glorious mystery. We cannot tell who are the objects of his love, nor should we be caviling over this, for in due time the mystery of his will is made known, the witness brought forth and the seal set, yes firmly set, for Him hath the Father sealed. And do we not sometimes feel that we have the best of all witnesses? "The Spirit bearing witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." O yes, dear kindred, I feel that I have realized some of these blessed truths in your midst. The first time I met the little few at Flatty Creek how sweet and inexpressible was the assurance that came in my heart, dispelling the gloom that had so long hovered around me, the prison doors were at last thrown open, the narrow prison cells exchanged for a broad house whose inhabitants were all of lively stones, hewn and fitted in each one's place by the Master of the house. Hence each one thus prepared was enabled to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable unto God. O so sweet was the influences of that meeting I felt that I would ever remember it. Nor did the sweetness of my trip end there, for the two weeks that I spent in that vicinity were but a repeated feast to my soul. I rejoice to say that I never met more loving and faithful brethren and sisters than at that church. There is one command observed by them which is not often closely observed by many of our order, but is well worthy of emulation. They forsake not the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some is. From Flatty Creek I was accompanied by many of the dear brethren and sisters to Elim, Currituck county, where we had a very pleasant Union. I met some very dear brethren at that church, and enjoyed their company O so much. But at last the time came when I had to say farewell to them all, which was a task for me to do, for I can truly say that I never gave the parting hand with more reluctance than at that time. At each of these churches I met many very young brethren and sisters which was very encouraging to me, as I do not have the pleasure of meeting such as these often, as I am the only young, unmarried member of our church. And while I hope I love all of Zion's children, and feel an interest in their welfare, yet I do feel a special interest in the growth of those tender plants which have been planted so young in the garden of grace, knowing that the young and simple may be led into forbidden paths, while the more aged, having learned by painful experience many a useful lesson, are able to endure the temptation. And while the work of the Spirit in a young heart is the same as that in the aged, yet it does seem that the world has a greater claim on the society of the young than it has on the old. Therefore we who are young and simple and have by our profession turned our back upon the world, and its vain false pleasures, should endeavor to always be on our guard, knowing that the trap for us is ready set, and satan ever ready to entice us with his fairy tales. Having learned by Scripture teaching and by painful experience that to be carnally minded is death, (death to the joys of salvation.) I beg of those who I hope are my companions in the Spirit to suffer a word of exhortation from an erring one, but one who feels that she has tasted the joys of salvation, and has also been made to cry unto the Lord to restore me that joy which had been taken away for disobedience. We may feel at times that it is hard and trying to the flesh to give up all of our worldly pleasures, yet religion never was designed to make our pleasures less. Jesus says, "For no man hath forsaken these things for my sake and the gospel's, but shall receive an hundred fold now, in this time, and in the world to come life eternal." And while I thus write, yet I feel that I am ever in need of admonition and correction. I often feel so weak and unworthy, the way seems so long and dreary before me that I am constrained to say like one of old,

I shall one day fall by the hand of Saul. But when my thoughts return to the many dear old fathers and mothers in Israel around me, whose snowy locks and bent forms portray their many toil-spent days, and yet they stand firm in the faith of God's elect, as monuments of His great mercy, I am enabled to gather strength remembering the blessed promise that, as thy days so shall thy strength be. O for faith to enable me to look to Him for all good, who is a covert from the storm, and as a shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Yours in hope of a better resurrection,

SADIE E. LIVERMAN.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—While my health is feeble, not able to go as I was in by gone days, I feel still impressed to talk to the brethren and sisters of the goodness of the Lord, and tell them what great things the Lord has done for me which are so wonderful to me. Oh to whom do we owe our humble sacrifice? It is the Lord who with His eternal wisdom, power and purpose created the world and the fulness thereof, and from whom all the gifts and blessings that we are we are the happy sharers come. He spoke the world in existence, and sent us into the world, not to dishonor his name, but to honor and praise and glorify his name. Brethren and sisters, we, the church of Christ as we hope are in this day lacking in some things which are the cause of the trouble in Zion to-day. What are they? Love of the Lord and to the brethren. Do we love the Lord with our whole heart? If so we love the brethren and speak kindly to them and of them, speaking of the goodness of God, his mercy, kindness, his greatness and our failures, his greatness and our weakness. If this be the spirit in us then the word of God says by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples because you have love one for another. The same writer says, if we say we love God and hate our brother we are liars, and the truth is not in us. God is not where there is no love, for God is love. Then where God is there is love. It was love that brought his Son down into this world and made a sacrifice for us, giving his holy and perfect body as a living sacrifice for our guilty souls. Now brethren, if Jesus' love for us enabled him to give his life for us, can not we give our time to his service and keep his commandments in the spirit of love obeying his word? When Israel sinned in olden times God threatened them with death and judgment, promising them if they would turn to him and do his commandments they should live and be blest above their fathers. Brethren, we have not done the things he says do. Does this prove we love him or his word? No, we have hated one another and spoken evil of one another, taking advantage of our brethren, and without a return from this we must die from the light and love of the Lord and live in darkness and death. Let us cry, O, God, deliver us from such a damnable spirit as we have heretofore been led by, and turn to the Lord Jesus in much humbleness of spirit, and to the feet of the brethren and ask pardon, hear Jesus in all he says and do what he commands us. If Jesus' word tells us to love each other let us take the instruction of the apostle, for says he, "prove your love by your works: for by our works we are all judged by the church, and if no works no love. Therefore let us love not in word only but in deed and in truth, for the Son loved his bride and made it manifest by works." James says "Faith without works is dead." Peter says, "wherefore laying aside all malice, all guile and all hypocrisies and all evil speaking, as new born babes let us desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby;" if so ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious. Peter says again, "lay aside all filthiness and superfluities," let us receive only the engrafted word which is able to save our souls. Let us not walk with the world and its principals, for she walks in death and in the ways of death. Let us walk in Christ for he is light and peace. His word says I am the way, the truth and the life. It is so brethren. He is our peace when we obey him and walk in him. He says if ye love me keep my word. He says ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt hath lost its savor wherewith shall it be salted: so if the christians have lost their love and obedience the earth is not safe from calamities, but is prisoned in darkness. Ye are the light of the world, a city set on a hill cannot be hid: he means here the christians love, faith and practical duties done in his name. It is the light, glory and praise of his Son Jesus that lights up the hearts of men on earth to honor the Father for his Son's sake. No glory ever shines so bright as the glory of our heavenly Father when his church is obedient to him. When his church heeds the instruction of his Son, the Father smiles on all his people for Jesus' sake. Oh that the brethren everywhere would turn to the word of the Lord and heed the same, then this darkness would flee, and God would bless us, and we would feel again that we are the light of the world, our hope of heaven encouraged that we are the children of light and heirs of the kingdom of our God. Then the brethren would have that old time christian love, then they could be agreed and could walk together, then could the servants of God sing together, then those women that Ezekiel saw in the north would cease to weep, and would praise the Lord everywhere.

Brother Gold, I have written more than I expected, but the more I write the more I see to write. I will close by saying I trust the Lord will direct your mind in regard to this poor writing. If you think best you may publish it. If not throw it away. Your humble brother, BERNICE WOOD.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:—
As I could not get a horse to ride 12 or 15 miles to hear brother Morrow preach the truth, I'll talk to you through the United States mail.

The Lord has done many wonderful things for me. He has shown me his way and helps me to try to follow his paths. The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak. But as God is the giver of all good things, and if I am one of his he will be sure to give me eternal life, for he has promised that to all his, and he never goes back on his word, I feel that he has guided as he wished to. I was once a Methodist. I wanted to be immersed, but the preacher would not do it, (and I am glad he did not, for he had no right to.) So I went to a Missionary preacher, and he immersed me, (but I don't consider he has any right now.) But I joined the Missionary church, and I would have to save my soul by paying the preacher and helping the missionary cause (as they called it,) and I guess if I had died saving my own soul that soul would have gone to hell. But if I am not saved by grace I'll surely be lost. I was raised an Episcopalian. When a boy I was seldom allowed to hear any other preach. I never heard a Hard Shell preach till I went to Conway, S. C. I went with brother J. H. Jollie to Pee Dee to a Hard Shell prayer meeting, and it seemed to me that they enjoyed themselves better than any little crowd I ever saw. Oh how I wanted to be one among them. I went to sister Louremons' to dinner, and it did seem to me she was so good. Her talk was about the bible all the time. I went home spiritually benefitted. It was not very long afterwards that I went back with brother Jollie and heard brother Thos. Bell, old Mr. Bell, the man who wrote so much against Sunday Schools, the man the world abused. I used to call him old Mr. Bell, but thank God I can call him brother Bell. His text was, "Whom he foreknew he also did predestinate," &c. It was always my plan when I went to church to go to sleep. But when brother Bell got up sleep was gone. I thought it was the best sermon I ever heard. I went home with a sad heart. He told me what a great sinner I was. The Missionaries said I was a Christian, and had me almost believing it. I quit going to their church and of course they went for me. Some said brother Jollie persuaded me to be a Hard Shell, but that was false. Here is the way I looked at it. If I believed as Hard Shells do and still stay with the Missionaries, I am acting a lie. I am making the world think I believe as they do, and God says come out from among them. My wife is a Methodist, "But he that loveth wife or children more than me is not worthy of me." Thank God for his benefits to me. If there is any man in this world who loves the brethren I think I am one of them. I feel at home when I am with them. Brethren and sisters, pray for me. I need your prayers.

Love to all of the Household of faith. Your brother in hope,

H. L. HOLMES.

Anson, Jones county, Texas.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LESTER, AND ALL WHO MAY READ THIS:—I, as your little unworthy feeling brother, have many doubts and fears, and often feel that I am yet deceived and have deceived all the rest. I so often feel that no christian could have such vile thoughts as I do; but it is through great tribulation that we enter the kingdom of Heaven. So then we may not expect to go to heaven on flowery beds of ease, for this world is not our home; if it were we should never see God and be like him at all. God is true and holy, he is God yesterday and to-day and to-morrow and changes not; he is not like poor, fallen man that is not able to do anything without the mercy of God. It is in and through the mercy of God that we live and have our continuance here on earth. And in him we should trust for strength and light and liberty and give thanks and honor to his great and holy name. Brethren, how is the gospel preached? It is in and through the revelation and divine purpose of God. He is mighty and all-wise, has no beginning nor end of time. He is all, and one who speaks and none can hinder, he opens and none can shut. This is the God that I want to worship and I hope I will be made able with the help of God, and that is the only way that we can do anything as we ought. But we are often trying to pry into matters where we ought not, and such things as we ought to look after we often neglect and do wrong by so doing. This is the way that poor, sinful man, such as I am, is often doing. I feel that I am the most ignorant man that ever tried to write anything in the name of the Lord. I feel that I am ignorant in every sense of the word, only as the Lord gives me light and liberty. There are many opinions and ways proclaimed as the way of Christ; and there is but one right way and that is Christ the Lord, the only way and plan of salvation in and through the Lord our Savior. My dear brethren and sisters, there are now many hobbies and notions among the Primitive Baptists, which bring among them division and war, which is a cripple and blunder to many of our poor brethren and sisters. We claim to be the light of the world, but when we are divided and sub-divided where is our light? It is set under a bushel, and our light is nearly out, and we have departed from the Bible, and run after man and his opinion until there is a quaking in the heart for want of peace and rest. We have peace in the most of our churches here at this time; our leaders seem to be of nearly one mind. We wash feet every time that we commune and think that we have good authority for so doing. We have the written word and our experience to stand with us. If this is not right I don't know any better plan. When we have the written word of God and then take up history and Webster's and Worcester's dictionaries I feel that we had better have our Bible and if we have an experience of grace you will find them in perfect harmony one with the other. My dear readers, if we have this evidence that we have been born again it is sufficient for us. This is what we need and is sufficient for us. If we have all the letter that can be given to man in this life, and have not any experience of grace, we are as far from God as he who knows not a letter at all. Education is good in its place, but let us not idolize it. There is such a thing as men and women having respect for what is on the out-side of men and woman. Such is among the Primitive Baptist church now. There is almost more respect for the outside than there is for the inside. We should examine the heart first and if it is clean that proves the outside is clean. This is what we need, to have the inside clean and it will show on the outside and prove the mark in the forehead, and this mark should be with gentleness, meekness, love and truthfulness, showing that we are of the royal priest-hood and peculiar nation that we hear spoken of in the written word of truth. My dear brethren and sisters, we have a time salvation and that is all the salvation we have to work out with fear and trembling, and this depends upon our acts and conduct. I know that we can do nothing until we are aroused to a sense of our duty and set to work with the ability that God gives us. It is through great fear and trembling that we enter the rest of our time salvation. We as followers of Christ should be careful to maintain good works and pay our just debts and make our word our bond and security, and in this show a well ordered judge or jury. I find more at home than I can conquer. I find that in me there is nothing but a mass of sin and corruption. I can't help foolish thoughts and vain things to save my life. Dear brethren, I feel that I know nothing in a true sense of the word and love of God. I have been brought to wonder over the destitute churches that have no preaching hardly ever, and have the same hope of salvation that we have, and have the same experience of christian hope that we have, and for some cause they are much neglected and almost forsaken by our preachers, and why is it so? Has the Lord thus punished them because they have lived so ungodly that the God of heaven has removed the golden candlestick from among them and left them to mourn their sad condition, or what is the cause of their having no preachers among them? I hope that the good Lord will give them some gospel preachers to edify and comfort them. This is very strange to think upon. Why there is some destitute of having the gospel preached and we have preaching here nearly every Sunday by the Primitive Baptists, and we believe they are Baptists. We had a Union meeting here on the first Saturday and Sunday in June, 1892. We call such a meeting as this was a Union meeting. With us we had a sister from Durham to our loving meeting. We also had a gentleman from Durham at this meeting. This meeting was held at the church called Maple Hill in Pender county. Elder B. H. Wooten of Pender and Elder I. Jones of Pender, and Christopher Brown of Onslow were our preachers at this meeting. We believe that the Lord was in the midst of this meeting. I feel to say that all the powers of men and devils combined together could never do any such preaching as this was. Men study to preach the gospel but have ever failed and forever will fail. This gospel is the power of God preached in and through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who has suffered death and been buried and has risen triumphant over death and hell and the grave conquering and to conquer. All this has our Saviour suffered for the beloved of his Father. O such love as this has no man only them that love God and have been born again, and have been washed in the blood of Jesus Christ who is love and meekness, and is all that we poor sinners need. When Jesus is preached by experience of grace then the written word approves it well. Preaching is not an invention of man, but is the power of God revealed from heaven. Brethren and sisters, an experience of grace and the love of God is worth more to christians than all this world and its contents. This gospel is preached to feed the sheep and lambs of God. There is more weeping and shedding of tears under an experimental preacher than all other that I ever heard. I feel safe to say that there is none able to preach but them that are called of God. It doesn't matter whether he has education or not just so he has been taught in the school of Christ. If so then all the powers of men and devils can't prevent one from preaching the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Dear brethren and sisters, let us well consider the greatness of God and the nothingness of mankind. I don't know but there are more men now trying to study to preach than there are pleading law, and I fear that there are some among the Primitive Baptists that are at this very thing. When we know the letter of itself is dead and has no life, but does show that Jesus is the great I am, and has made us one with Christ Jesus the Lord. I desire to ask my brethren to pray for me that I may be borne up at a throne of grace, and I hope that we may reach the eternal city of glory and there remain with God and his holy love forever and ever.

Dear Brother Gold:—As I have written some and neglected to send it off as I expected to, I will now speak a few more things and send it all together. As I see so many wrongs in myself, I will speak of some of the wrongs of the church. I will speak of the pastors and poor of the church. We have covenanted and agreed to keep up and assist our pastors and poor of the church. Our brethren will murmur at paying twenty-five or fifty cents to help to pay the church expenses, but will turn around and will pay a dollar or two on big railroad excursions, and will fool away their time and means in this way, and help men of millions of dollars who do not need it at all, and will pay out money for pictures and things of no profit to them, and then murmur at hard times, after giving a portion of their means in such ways as this and other foolish ways such as annual picnics and Sunday school picnics and all such vain and unprofitable things as this, and many other things such as blockade stilling. There are some of our profession that have been messing with blockade stills, and I expect such are going on now. If so, they are wrong. We are commanded in the holy writ, the holiest book of all which is the Holy Bible, to be law-abiding citizens. But when we are running blockade stills and under-mining the laws of our land we are not law-abiding citizens. When we can find plenty of time to go into things of this life and have not time to go to meeting or turn out as messengers to visit sister churches, and then murmur over what little time we do give to this cause, when need we expect God to bless us as a nation, or expect the church to be crowned with the glory of God? And then claim to be governed by the word of God, and yet hold to custom, or what somebody else has done or practiced, and it is a custom, and hold up such things and contend for it and not have "thus saith the Lord for it" until they divide churches and turn things around in general, and yet be wrong. Where there is strife and confusion there is wrong. Ten thousand wrongs never have made one right; and just as long as we contend for a wrong we never will be right. The only way to be right is to be in the spirit of the word, and then practice what the Bible teaches us and let custom and all such things as have been kept up by our fore parents that are not according to the word of God alone. For our fore parents were just as subject to be wrong as we are in this. In our day and time it is through our disobedience that we suffer what we do. When we do wrong we need not go to our brother to find out whether we are wrong or not. The Lord will chastise us for every wrong that we do. I wish to speak a little concerning the gift of healing, as there are some of our profession that practice it and often make a failure by going through sympathy and not having been called of the Lord to do this work at this time. They are all possessed with human sympathy and would like to help all if they had the power to do it in some way of boasting in their own strength, but the way of man is ever vain. The gift of healing is by faith and fasting in prayer unto God; believing that God will do what he has promised unto us. The gift of healing is done in and through the power of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, leaving all strength of man behind as the dust from whence he came. I believe in the gift of healing in and through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. When we go in the name of the Lord at his command then healing is granted.

SUPPORT OF THE MINISTRY.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I write you a few lines on the above subject which has in times past divided the dear children of God, and which yet stands as a mark to divide those who follow Christ from those who follow anti-christ. While many good brethren may differ with me on the subject, I do not wish to abuse them in any way, only hope if I advance ideas which are not according to God's word they will correct and forgive. I have been silent to some extent on this subject because of different opinions, but of late I feel that I ought to say something not for controversy, but for the truth's sake. The mystery of iniquity doth already work, and it works in this subject as in others, hence the words, "Mission and anti-Mission" are used to distinguish one from the other. Also Means and anti-Means accord with Mission and anti-Mission. I wish to speak on this subject only to the household of faith; and, because we do not believe in the hire of the gospel, we are stigmatized by our enemies as anti-Mission—opposed to the hire of the gospel—hence opposed some say to the support of the ministry. I am not opposed to the support of the ministry, neither am I opposed to the word mission in its place. The Holy Ghost sent them away. I think there is a difference between a man-sent preacher and a Holy-Ghost sent preacher, and so there is a difference between the hire of the gospel and the support of the ministry. One is under obligation to God, the other under obligation to the preacher. Those who feel under obligation to the preacher pay him for his loss of time, and those under obligation to God pay him because God requires it of them as their duty. Brethren, have we sold what we possessed? If so, are we to keep back part of the price? If we covenant with men and fail to comply with the covenant we lie unto men; but if we covenant with God to keep his laws and ordinances relating to his kingdom, and fail to comply we lie unto God and not to man.

Therefore if the minister thinks to bring his brethren under obligations because of his preaching, or because he is poor and cannot spare the time from his own family, unless the church makes his time good, he is looking at the wrong side of the picture. That is but a man's covenant. If the church will he can. If she won't he can't. Let us turn the picture over and look at the other side. The law of the everlasting covenant that God makes with his people in the gospel kingdom was put in their hearts and written in their minds. It is the mark that distinguishes this people from all others that I wish to notice, as we are to know them by the fruit they bear.

The minister is commanded to blow the trumpets whether the people hear or not. Neither is a God-called minister delivered until he has told all that the Holy Spirit impresses on his mind. Then he can say like the man with the ink-horn by his side; that was commanded to go through Jerusalem and set a mark upon all that cry and mourn for the abominations done in Jerusalem. The man returned and said, "I have done as I was commanded." He had worked out his salvation, and it followed that all that had not this mark were slain. While I believe the minister is called of God to declare his counsel, he through love and fear discharges his duty, and in the discharge of his duty he tells the brethren what their duty is. If they discharge their duty that is a mark that they are taught of God, and are led by the Spirit, hence are sons of God; but if they fail to discharge their duty they fail to have the mark that distinguishes them from other denominations of the world. Brethren, if you feel that God has called you to preach, try to discharge that duty with the ability that God gives, and leave the result with God. Let him make the application, for it is just as binding on the church to help the pastor in his needy circumstances, and not only him but all others that are in distressed circumstances, as it is that the pastor preach. The pastor is under the same responsibility to God to help the needy, if God has prospered him, as any of the lay members. Then if God requires us to distribute to the needy it is a duty we owe him, and as a mark of his church and people let us be careful to obey and look after these things especially to the household of faith. I must confess I do not come up to the mark, but I trust that God will help us to lay down all man-made laws, and look into the perfect law of liberty. I have but hinted at the subject, yet I fear some one will think I want controversy. I do not.

EXPERIENCE.

I was the daughter of John W. and Louisa Holbrook, and was born April 16th, 1863. I was a poor unhappy mortal, conceived in sin, and brought forth in iniquity, born in poverty and raised in ignorance. When I was eight years old my brother accidentally hung himself. This was the first great trouble that came upon me, and this left myself and two sisters, Nan and Emeline, and one brother, a poor little helpless and afflicted fellow, who lived to be nineteen years old, and he never talked nor walked a step in his life. When I was eleven years old I began to feed and wait upon my little brother and he was the pet and plaything of the whole family, but on me was the burden of taking care of him. It was a hard but pleasant task or duty for me, for I loved him so tenderly. When I would do anything for him he would smile so sweetly, which more than paid me for all my labor done for him. I lived this way until I was awakened to a knowledge of my sinful state before God, then this world lost its attractions to me, hence I saw that I was lost, for there was nothing in this world that I could lay hold upon for salvation. Then to whom should I flee in my weak and foolish manner. I would try to pray, getting on my knees between the plow handles imploring the Lord to have mercy on me a lost sinner. I knew of no way to work out my salvation, and told nobody of my troubles. So I mourned until the winter of 1876, when I thought that my sins were all forgiven. There was a revival meeting at Double Creek, and I was getting ready to go to meeting when Ma said to me that she hoped that I would do good like the rest of the young people, but I didn't tell her what I thought, but I had a hope then I thought, and I had thought there was no more trouble for me, but how sadly I was mistaken, for when I had gone to meeting, and they called for mourners, I felt that if any poor sinner ever needed the prayer of the righteous I surely did. So I threw away my former hopes and went to be prayed for. This was on Friday and I continued in that condition until Sunday when I believe the Lord spoke peace to my soul. I know that I had never felt so happy before in all my life, but I came home that night, and before I slept I began to feel that I was excited and caught a shadow instead of the substance, but again I would hope that I was included in the everlasting Covenant. In March I was baptized by Elder James Shumate in Roaring river. I was fifteen years old in April following my baptism. I will now pass by many things that are of importance to me. After my little helpless brother died I felt that the Lord had no longer use for me in this poor world, and I believed he would take me soon, and I long to leave this world and be with Jesus.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, MY DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER IN CHRIST:—It is by and through the mercy of an all-wise Redeemer that I am preserved until now, but it is all for a purpose known unto God and not to poor unworthy me. You will learn from this that I received your kind and ever welcome letter which I did appreciate so much. I was also glad to learn that you were all well. You will learn from this that we are all in common health at the present, for which I hope that I feel thankful to the God of heaven for all his blessings and mercies which he has bestowed upon us poor needy creatures.

My dear brother I feel so lonely and so much in the dark I scarcely know how to write anything that would interest you for one moment, for I feel I am down in the valley and no way to get out save by the help of God, for our strength is in him alone and not in us: for we are poor dependent creatures. I feel my poverty, and I know that there is nothing good in me, for there is none good, no not one. It seems to me that I have more trials and troubles to contend with than do others. They appear to go on and have nothing to trouble their minds or to bother them in any way. They appear to be easy and to enjoy themselves, but such is not my case, for I have so many doubts and fears to contend with that it makes me think that I am wrong, for if I was right it would be altogether different with me. The older I get the more troubles I have to contend with for it seems to me since last year this time I have had more than I could bear, though the good Lord has enabled me to make me bear it all with patience. I had a sister that lost her mind last July. The first of it was caused from severe sickness. I can't tell you how great it was unless I was with you. It grieved us all to see her suffer as she did, and when her mind gave way there was more trouble for us to see for in September she was carried to Raleigh to the Insane Asylum and remained there until the seventh of March when she came home with her mind much improved. It is not as good as it once has been, but it is sufficient now as to cause no uneasiness. I felt that she was in the hands of a merciful and all-wise God who was able to sustain her in all her afflictions and to keep her by the word of his almighty power. My dear brother, none know how great our troubles were, unless they have had the trial of it. We can imagine how anything is, but we know nothing about it in a sense until we have the trial of it and then we know how bad it is. I feel like my poor weak prayers have been heard and answered in her behalf, for I did crave, if it could be the will of our blessed Lord, that she would get well and come back to us again. So you see that my hearts' desire has been answered, and if I only had the hope for myself that I have for her it doesn't seem like anything would bother me. But you see that God works everything after the counsel of his own will, it is by and through him that we live, move, and have our being. I have nothing to boast of nor to glory in, save in the cross of Christ, and it is all that the poor child of God has to boast of, and who can blame them to glory in their blessed Saviour when he is all the friend that they have, and he suffered, wept, bled and died that we poor, sinful creatures might live, and it is enough to make us rejoice when we think back to the time when we were lost in our estimation and I was like the poor, lonely dove that had no mate. I went about mourning all the time because I felt like my doom had been sealed and that no justice and mercy was due me. I was a poor, miserable creature then, and I am yet, for I fear that I am deceived and have deceived others and it grieves me to think of it, for I don't want to deceive any one if I can help it. I had rather suffer myself than to cause any one else to suffer on my account and I believe that is the case with every true child of God and every person that has been regenerated and born of the spirit of God desires peace and prosperity in the church of Christ. I for one desire peace in Zion above everything else in this world; where there is peace you will find Christ, for he is not the author of confusion but of peace, for he says, "in the world ye shall have tribulation but in me ye shall have peace." What a glorious thing it is to have peace.

When it goes well with you remember me at a throne of grace, and may the blessings of God rest and abide with you both now and forever, amen.

EDITORIAL.

Brother M. M. Morris requests my view of Prov. 10:27:

"The fear of the Lord lonongeth days; but the years of the wicked shall be shortened."

It is one thing to consider matters as the Lord sees them, but quite another to look at them as man sees them.

When a man is under conviction for sin the fear of the Lord is in him and he departs from evil: but he thinks his days are few or that he shall die. Like Hezekiah the word to him is, thou shalt die. He does die to the law or his former life. He has the sentence of death in him. It appears to him that he shall die. But the Lord adds to his days, or forgives him and he lives much longer here on this earth than he thought he would. So that the fear of the Lord lonongeth days. Take a poor, humble child of God that feels his vileness. This one does not expect to live long. He is not worthy to live and few and evil to him are his days. But the Lord giveth more grace and his days are lengthened beyond what he thought they would be.

This does not mean that the Lord is disappointed, or has changed, or that something has occurred that He did not foreknow. We must remember that in the Bible there is a recognition of the way things appear to men. To one hearing Jonah preach it looked that God would certainly overthrow Nineveh literally. Man can judge only as things appear to him. Hence the Scriptures present the fact that men judge as things appear to them. But this has nothing to do with changing realities: for man walks in a vain show, and is disquieted in vain.

In this way the years of the wicked are shortened. For a man naturally, if not convinced of his sinful state, supposes he will live quite a long while. Until the commandment comes and sin is revived there is no feeling of the sentence of death in one, nor any distressing fear of the end of his days. Those dead in sins are the wicked that do not live out half their days, or half the days they expect to live. Death comes to them sooner than they expect, and much sooner than they wish it to come.

Sometimes violent, bloody men provoke an enemy to kill them, or intemperate men, such as gluttons and drunkards, hasten their death we say according to the course of nature, and die before the time, or die an untimely death. In any event the wicked man has not lived out his days, and they are thus shortened. While a godly man lives longer than he expects and is willing to die when he dies, a wicked man never lives as long as he expected nor is ever willing to die.

Further the nature of righteousness is to prolong life, and the nature of wickedness is to shorten life. The righteous never die. The wicked never live. He that hath the Son of God hath life. He that hath not the Son of God hath not life. He that believeth is passed from death unto life and shall never die. He that believeth not abideth in death. The wages of sin is death. The gift of God is eternal life. So that one that lives by the faith of Jesus is righteous, and such have the fear of the Lord that prolongeth days; while those that believe not are wicked or abide in death.

It is also true among the Lord's people that the obedient or righteous one sowing to the Spirit of the Spirit reaps life everlasting and prolongs his days, while the disobedient and hence wicked one sowing to flesh reaps corruption—death; or if we walk after the Spirit we live: but if we walk after the flesh we shall die. Much of the proverbs perhaps have this practical, disciplinary meaning. For there is in the child of God a wise and a foolish principle, life and death being in him, or there is the opposition, warfare being waged in him. The old and foolish king that is in his nature comes out to rule and he works ruin often. How quickly may a church member destroy himself in the fellowship of his brethren by sowing to the flesh, and such may be his conduct that being guilty unto death the brethren have no heart to pray for him, for their fellowship is destroyed for him.

While a wise son makes a glad father, and the prudent live in the joys of the gospel, or he that honors his father and mother lives long on the earth, this father and mother are not the natural father and mother. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and by him shall the days be multiplied and the years of thy life shall be increased. For in him we live, move and have our being. But all they that hate God love death.

P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Times are very hard indeed in this country, the Alliance made great promise of what they were doing for the poor farmer. The Alliance have gotten things almost as they want it and times are harder than for almost a half century. A very large majority are in debt, and their cotton is gone and they do not make enough to support them. It seems that many will have to suffer for the necessaries of life. Everything is badly demoralized, religiously and politically. But thanks be unto God, if the Lord be for us who can be against us. No doubt God's children get to feeling too independent and are not as thankful as they should be for the mercies which God has bestowed upon them. Hence these severe trials that God inflicts upon his children are for their good, David said, "Before I was afflicted I went astray." God's children are afflicted in many ways, but all for their good. Paul calls them light afflictions which are but for a moment compared to eternity which work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. David said, "I have been young and I am now old, but I have not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." The Lord will provide for his poor trembling children. The world, the flesh and the devil are arrayed against the poor child of God to harass him, hence he realizes that while in the world ye shall have tribulation. May the Lord give us grace to sustain us in all the trials of life and ultimately save us for Christ sake. Your little brother in affliction.

LEE HANCKS.

Remarks.

Our people must not depend on political parties of any sort for relief. We must depend on God and obey his laws. No doubt but that we are in a bad condition. But joining secret societies, and quitting work, and losing two or three days in a week running about and paying dues to keep up designing men who beguile and deceive the people, will only make a bad matter worse.

When we fear God and serve him it will be better for us. "Be keepers at home." Am I a keeper at home when I buy my flour after others have got a living out of it? Is a farmer a keeper at home who buys his pork after others have got a living out of it, pork that was raised a thousand miles from him, and he has to pay all the expense of raising it and having it hauled to him? Am I a keeper at home if I buy all my clothes and tools to work with, and even the clothes that I am buried in come from another country, and nothing is furnished me in the South but the hole I am buried in?

All the political parties in the world cannot save a people from financial ruin who are doing as the Southern people are.

We should obey the laws of God and serve him if we hope to be blessed. I feel disturbed for myself and our people. I wish to be above party and do right towards all classes of people, obey the laws, submit to the powers that be, have good will towards all men, and live in peace with all.

No doubt deliverance will come to every one that fears God and hopes in his mercy. But to say we fear God while we do not depart from evil is a mockery. To say that we hope in God while we do not serve him is mere pretense and deception. We deceive ourselves.

Like brother Hancks I feel that all the expedients that the people betake themselves to, like secret societies, only make a bad matter worse.

May the Lord deliver us. Baptists should be a light and let their light shine for the benefit of others.

P. D. G.

JEZEBEL.

"Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts; and I will give unto every one of you according to your works."

This character is notorious in Bible writ, yet never approved by

Bible doctrine. Why things so opposed to God and godliness are suffered to exist finds some answer in the children of God who know that, while there is so much vile-ness in themselves, there is a need-be for the long-suffering of God. If he did not suffer long with us where would such sinners as we be found?

Jezebel means without a hus-band. Then if she bear children it is in fornication. But was not Jezebel of old the wife of king Ahab? Yes: but another character appears in that wicked woman. It was as it were an unlawful marriage for Ahab to marry this Zidonian wo-man: See 1st Kings, 16:31-33. Ahab did evil beyond all his fathers, and added still this sin of marrying this violent woman. He sold him-self to do evil. His unlawful mar-riage with her according to the law of marriage in Israel represents her in the type as without an husband. She had nothing in common with Israel—no interest in the worship of the true God, no love for any of his people. She was a worshipper of idols—of Baal—and full of the faith of Zidon, a city of great wealth and great idolatry.

She introduced the false worship of Baal in Israel, hired her prophets in large numbers and paid them for their false worship, and fed them at the public expense; and besides this sought to slay the Lord's prophet, and to stamp out the true worship of God. She was haughty, regardless of the rights of others, imperious, self-willed, presumptuous and wicked; nor did she at all regard the rights of others, but had an innocent man, Naboth, put to death, seized his property in the name of religion, and confiscated it to the king. For she proclaimed a fast and had Naboth set on a prom-inent place, and false witnesses ready and they said that he blas-phemed God and the King. Thus in the name of religion she had an innocent man murdered, and con-fiscated his property. When Eli-jah exposed her false prophets and they were slain, she threatened to kill him also. Thus every princi-ple of wickedness cloaked by false religion was in her.

Now this character appears in the church at Thyatira and is called Jezebel. She here figures as a false teacher or a prophetess to teach and seduce God's people to commit for-nication, and to eat things sacrifi-ced to idols.

Women that play the role of teachers, that go from place to place organizing societies, or that travel as agent, temperance wo-men, lecturers, preachers &c. are out of place, and condemned by the bible; and men that encourage such things are also guilty of wrong doing. This is a busy age of such pestiferous characters wanting to get into all sorts of public places, and are disgracing their sex: "And withal they learn to be idle, wander-ing about from house to house: and not only idle but tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not." 1st Tim. 5:13: "But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence:" 1st Tim.

2: 12. The things that Jezebel taught were in the name of a prophet, calling herself a prophetess or professing great sanctity or sacredness, but she seduced or corrupted the servants of the Lord Jesus. There were two things she corrupted them in: one was to commit fornication. This is to draw away God's people to worship a false god. The people of the Lord are married unto him, and as the wife must be true to her own husband, so the people of God must be true to the living God, and worship no other god. To worship any false god is to commit fornication. The other offense was to eat things sacrificed unto idols. This is to feed upon falsehood or eat and live upon the false doctrines of idolatry and partake with idolaters in their sacrifices or worship.

Still further in the book of Revelation this loud-mouthed, notorious character appears in a far more hideous and dreadful character as the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, and as committing fornication with the kings or leaders and rulers of earth, or as corrupting the fountains of governments, and obtaining and exercising great power over the world, even to such an extent that all save those whose names were written in the Lamb's book of life from the foundation of the world wandered after and worshipped this mystery of abominations. This character says I am no widow and shall not see sorrow. Yet she has no true husband, and all her children are the children of fornication, and many more are the children of this desolate one than are the children of her that hath a husband which is the true church. All the children of this harlot are the children of fornication or of falsehood.

She exalts herself above all that is called God, and proclaims her will as supreme authority and law. She kills God's servants in the name of religion. She causes an image of religion to be set up worshipping one that was and is not, and yet is, in apparent resemblance to Jesus, yet it is a false christ, for it does not save those for whom it dies. She is the mother of harlots or of all false doctrines, such as preaching another gospel which is not another, saying that Jesus died for many that will not be saved, and that our salvation is not of the Lord only in part, or provided we help him to save us.

The true bride, the lamb's wife, is modest, chaste, a keeper at home, bears children to her own husband, honors him as the head in all things, teaches nothing of her own authority, but is silent and learns of the man Christ Jesus, and, although she was first in the transgression, yet she is saved in child bearing. Her husband loves and honors her, and he is known in the gate of the city among the princes as chief among ten thousands and the one altogether lovely.

P. D. G.

CORDIAL.

I have a letter from a dear sister in W. Va. which expresses a state of deep exercise of mind, which she desires me to consider, which I will try to do.

You say the bitter tears of sorrow and regret are rolling down your cheeks as you write. Jesus was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief and he wept. And of his sufferings must we be partakers in order to be partakers of the consolations which come thereby.

I see no valid reason in your letter for regret. Do you regret having joined the church? Are you really without hope? You do not regret having been baptized? Do you not love the brethren? Could you live in peace out of the church do you think? "I feel that I am a poor, deluded creature." Did you ever feel this way before? You felt yourself to be a lost sinner? I will say for you no. You were then dead in sin, and knew nothing of sin nor delusion. Now you are alive unto God, and dead unto sin and cannot live therein. Like Paul: you find a law in your members warning against the law of your mind, bringing you into captivity to the law of sin which is in your members. Perhaps this is what you call delusion. This is a captivity, a working that is delusive in its tendency, and is alarming often to God's children because it is in their very nature, the flesh. One must have eternal life in order to see the delusions of sin. If you had not the light of life I can not see how you could realize the imperfections of the flesh. Are you willing to yield to the condition you fear you are in—a state of delusion—can you do it, have you tried to do it? Do you think the devil would delude you, and then tell you that you were deluded? His delusions give ease and quietude. The Lord surely does not delude any one. Neither do his people.

"My experience, as I thought, is only an imagination, and I am only deceiving the people of God."

Who told you these things? The devil almost got me to conclude once, I thought, that I was deceived, and had deceived the church. But the Lord delivered me, I believe, and will also deliver all of his children when tempted. I hope by this time you know this to be true in your own experience.

My judgment is that if you were really deceived you would have no great fears about it. Your judgment is, if you were just as good as you believe the people of God to be, you would have no more doubts, troubles and fears. Tell them your troubles and see what they will say.

"I am so low down in spirit." Jesus was meek and lowly. I am sure to be low in Spirit is a good condition in which to be. One is more like Jesus then, and is nearer the everlasting arms which are underneath. Then you can prefer others as better than yourself, and you feel like bearing their burdens. You love them then.

"I feel to say in the language of Solomon: "Look not upon me for I am black." This is good experience, for that same one said, "I am black but comely, as the tents of Kedar and as the curtains of Solomon." So are all the children of God. 'In the flesh they are black, but in the Spirit they are whiter than snow. "Ye who were sometime darkness, now are ye light in the Lord."

Where is your hope? Do you not feel to say that you are not as you once were? Do you not feel some time that you will yet praise God? Have you not felt to praise him for his goodness and mercy toward you?

To feel that you are low in the dust of humility is indeed a gracious privilege. None but the children of God reach that blessed abode. The flesh revolts at the humble character of Christ, but the Spirit rejoices in it. The blessed fruits of the spirit are among them that have humility.

Your trials are not strange to me nor to the children of God. We have tribulations in the world, but in Jesus peace, and they that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.

I am glad my few remarks in the LANDMARK have been of comfort to you.

May the Lord grant a blessing to you and to all his little ones everywhere.

P. G. L.

BROTHER GOLD :—The time is at hand again that I should send in what is due you. I am always glad to be able to pay up when due. If some of the brethren would put their minds more on their duties that they owe to one another, and let some of the secret things alone that belong to God I think it would be better. May God bless you and enable you to contend for the truth is the prayer of one of the least.

Brother Gold, I would like to have your views on Rom., 5:18.

Remarks :

"Therefore as by the offence of one judgment come upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."

No position or interpretation of scripture that is not in harmony with the current scripture can be true, because all scripture is true in the sense it is intended and no part contradicts another part.

One extreme position held by the Arminian world is that Christ died equally for all men in order to make them all the children of God, if they would agree to be such, or would perform the conditions offered to make them children of God.

This position is absurd on its very face and needs only to be fairly stated to insure its suicide or self-destruction. For the apostle is running the analogy between Adam and Christ, one being the figure of the other, and showing that, as by the disobedience of the one man Adam, all men are made sinners because they are all of him. So by the obedience of one, Jesus Christ, all men are made righteous, that is all that are of him or are represented by him are made righteous, not that he offers to make them righteous, if they will accept it any more than that Adam offers sin to men if they will accept it. We know that Adam's offspring are sinners in Adam because they are born with the life and principles of Adam in them. They make this manifest as soon as they are born and begin to develop their nature.

The other extreme position is that held by the Universalists, a set of people that hold the universal salvation of Adam's entire race. One reason they contend for this is the reading of the text we are considering. They hold that the all made sinners by Adam's disobedience is the same all made righteous by Christ's obedience. We reply that in the preceding verse it is stated that abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness is limited to those that receive abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness. This limits salvation showing it is not universal. Sin is not a gift, and righteousness is a gift.

Again, we reply that it is because men are in Adam that they are made sinners by his disobedience, and all that are in him are thus affected. Nor is it said that any are chosen in Adam. On the other hand all that are in Jesus are made righteous by his obedience, but all that are in him are so by the choice of God, and not according to nature or our works. In nature we are in Adam, not by or from choice. By choice of God we are in Christ, but as certainly as sin reigns unto death, which we know is so, so surely grace reigns in righteousness by Christ Jesus unto eternal life. There is nothing more certain than that the obedience of Jesus Christ makes righteous all to whom this righteousness is imputed, and that if it is imputed to all men then all men will be saved because of his obedience. But it is not said that it comes on all of Adam's family, but the universality and certainty of its effect on all that receive it, or to whom it is given, for no man can receive anything except it be given him from above, is what is affirmed, or the principal of atonement, the oneness of Adam and his offspring in death, and the oneness of Christ and those in him in life, is what is taught.

If there is no hell then why do the Scriptures say there is one? If a man does not believe all that the Scriptures say there is no honesty in his quoting any part of them. The same Scriptures that speak of heaven speak also of hell, which is a place prepared for the devil and his angels. There is no evidence that a devil or any of his angels will ever be saved. The goats are to be sent to hell, or the place prepared for the devil and his angels. Besides this all mankind are not the children of God, nor ever will be.

The doctrines of men and devils have pretty full sway here on earth among mankind now. But they have no place in heaven.

P. D. G.

VOLUME 26.

We enter upon another volume of ZION'S LANDMARK sensible, it is hoped, in some poor degree at least, of the great and miraculous favor of God that grace reigns in the salvation of such sinners. When I consider my vile nature and its many manifestations in what to me is forever inexcusable conduct, it appears a matter of astonishment to me that I am living. It is because the Lord is God and changes not that I am not consumed. He draws us with loving-kindness because he has loved his people with an everlasting love.

It is the grace of God that this paper would if enabled speak of, that surprising and wonderful grace of God which is ever of old and always new. In the future as in the past let this be my theme.

We still invite all lovers of gospel truth that feel so impressed to write for its columns, and desire our brethren to pray for the preservation of each of us that we may be useful to the household of faith.

Died of typho-malarial fever with hemorrhage of the bowels after an illness of fifteen days, Essie Francis Bennett who was born in Liberty county, Georgia, January 4th, 1864, and died in Volusia county, Florida, August 20th 1892. She was married to R. E. L. Strickland, August 23, 1885, who died March 3, 1886. She was married to this poor, unworthy writer October 15th, 1888 with whom she lived a devoted companion until her death. Dear household of faith, I write this obituary from the urgent request of many friends, some of whom do not understand the plan of salvation or scheme of redemption that she embraced and loved to talk about as long as she was able to speak. I desire to speak of the departed as my dear wife and sister. As a wife she had few equals, was a devoted mother, a kind neighbor, a lovely christian, and none knew her but to love and esteem her. She leaves two little children. She was raised by pious Methodist parents, and was a member of that order when we were married. She was brought up to believe that salvation was in her own hands, and naturally disliked the doctrine of God's election and predestination. But thanks to God he showed her that she was a poor sinner without strength, but in due time Christ was revealed to her as the chiefest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely. Then she rejoiced in the truth that salvation is of the Lord, and not of works lest any should boast, and gloried in the doctrine that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, therefore the children of promise will never be destroyed. Thus she died rejoicing in the doctrine she once hated. She and I, together with her sister, Miss Katie Martin were received into the fellowship of the Primitive Baptists at Mt. Zion church, Pierson, Fla., and baptised the first Sunday in August, 1891 by my father, Elder Z. H. Bennett. The following fourth Sunday I was ordained deacon in said church by Elders Z. H. Bennett and M. L. Gilbert, and from a sense of unworthiness I had a good deal of trouble, of which she bore an equal part. Last January I was prostrated upon a bed of affliction from which I came forth a living wreck of former years. My case seems to be consumption and I fear I shall never be well again. O, how she stood by my bed day after day to care for and comfort me. How those ever willing hands did minister to my needs as none others could! The Lord blessed me to speak of Jesus and the gospel of our salvation with much assurance and power to her. While she called me her preacher she had a great fear that the church would sometime take me from her, that I might go and preach to others, and while at times I was made willing, yet for her sake or something else, I refrained from attempting so fearful a calling. Alas! she is taken from me and the stroke seems too much for me. O, you that have hearts to pray, remember me in this my sore bereavement. No more can we read the Bible together and rejoice over its sweet promises. She seemed to have a premonition of her death, and would ask why did people wish to live when it would be so much better to depart and be with Jesus. Sometime before she died she called me to her and asked me to read the Bible for her. I opened and read the fifteenth chapter of Zechariah, noticing more especially the eighth verse and spoke some time on the saving power of Jesus. Then she put her arms around my neck and with tears streaming down from her eyes she said, "O, what a merciful Savior Jesus is, and I want you, my darling, to go and preach to my dear old father and mother. I feel that they are out of the way, and O, that they will hear and turn unto the truth as it is in the Lord." This request of hers I have since tried to fill and feel that the Lord blessed my labors. None but God knows how dearly I loved her. Two babes are motherless now; a home is left desolate, a husband's heart is rent in twain, a neighborhood is in tears, and the church is in mourning. Farewell my darling, God's will must be done, but I feel that our parting is not long, and I have a longing for that sweet rest that I am sure you have found. Now brother Gold and all who may read this, pray for me and my little ones who are now far from me. O, that God will bless and save them in his kingdom is my prayer. Yours, in great tribulation, PAUL J. BENNETT.

ITUREA WEEKS.

Iturea Mabry was born July 25th 1822 and died Friday before the 3rd Sunday in January, 1892. She was married to Matthew Weeks January 18th, 1844. Of this union there were born unto them ten children, five boys and five girls, all of whom together with her bereaved husband survive her. She was a good mother, and a faithful wife. Her goodness was not confined to home, but others knew of it and shared of the fruits thereof. She was also kind and affectionate to all with whom she came in contact. With these qualities she enjoyed the good will of her neighbors. She lived in peace with all, therefore all have lost a friend. But none have lost a friend so close and dear as those who call her mother—her children. No natural relationship is more entwined with our being than that of mother, and none more deeply realize and fully and readily manifest it than she does. On confession of faith in Jesus Christ who loved her and gave himself for her, she was received into the fellowship of West Fork Primitive Baptist church, Floyd county, Virginia, in June, 1877. Her life as a member of the church was ever convincing of the blessings of the spirit of God. She was as prompt in attending her church meetings as the state of health would reasonably admit. Even before she joined the church she was prompt to attend Promptness in attending church meetings—Saturday meetings—is, at this time, far below par. I doubt whether the average attendance is equal to half the membership. This ought not to be. Two of sister Week's sons are preachers, one Methodist and the other Elder Q. D. Weeks, is one of our ablest ministers of his age in the ministry—renders good service to the churches, and is worthy the confidence and respect of the people, and the churches, which he holds and maintains. By request I preached in memory of sister Weeks on the third Sunday in October 1892 to a very large and attentive audience. May the Lord bless the remembrance of her to the good of her friends, and the doctrine I preached to the comfort of all present who felt the need of Christ Jesus the Lord, the Saviour of sinners.

 P. G. LESTER.

LELIA A. CASTLE.

Lelia A. Castle, daughter of Wm. H. and Martha E. Castle was born March the 17th 1874, and died April 8th 1892. She was a good, kind and obedient child, and when grown possessed an amiable disposition. She endeavored to be sociable to her associates so as to make herself agreeable and pleasant even when she was sensible of her approaching departure from this life. Her mother died when she was about 11 years of age, leaving the care of several smaller children largely to her care for several years. She was kind and affectionate to them, and also to an affectionate step mother who took charge of the family. For several years Lelia enjoyed the pleasures of home, and the blessing of good health and the apparent promise of a long and useful life, but just as she was entering the realm of the full adornments of youth and prospective usefulness to herself and those about her, consumption claimed her for its victim. She soon saw I trust, in the light of the Spirit, that she should soon follow her loving mother into the elements of death. But God who alone saves poor lost sinners was leading her by his Spirit to know him whom to know is eternal-life. She sent for the writer of this and manifested a desire to talk on the subject of religion, and desired me to sing and pray for her which I tried to do. By her request a church meeting was held March 27th 1892 and she was received into the fellowship of Indian Creek church—Primitive Baptist, but was not able to be baptized. She wanted to live longer if it was the Lord's will, but was willing to die if he so willed. Her funeral was attended by Elder R. M. Mabry and myself. Lelia's lovely form to dust has gone; but her spirit was taken to God who gave it. She is now in Paradise with Jesus ever safe in his blessed arms, and also with her dear mother who left evidences of a good hope in Christ. She was born March the 20th, 1840, and died June the third 1885. Let them rest together in peace.

Q. D. WEEKS.

PEARLIE NEVADA GOODWIN.

Pearlie Nevada Goodwin fell asleep in Jesus the 10th of August 1892. She was the daughter of B. B. and M. C. Goodwin, was born Dec. 27th, 1886, in Wake county. Her life was short, although she enjoyed it even with great afflictions. She was so very loving and affectionate, all who knew her loved her most tenderly. Her last sickness was of short duration. She was taken Sunday morning with a chill and hemorrhage of the kidneys. She continued to have chills every day, the last on Wednesday morning took her spirit to a brighter world than this. Oh what a sad day it was to me. The day my only darling little girl was taken from us to dwell with Jesus and his angels. The doctor thought she was improving. We did all in our power to restore her to health, but the good Lord knew best for all, the Lord's will be done, not ours. She called me to her bedside and lovingly said "mama I'm going to die." I said no my child, she said Oh yes I'm going to die and leave you. She asked me where her papa was, I told her, she told me to tell him to come there for she was going to die and leave him. He came in and asked her how she felt, she said she was better. She looked at me and said mama don't cry, she raised her hand and said to me I'm happy, happy. She then became unconscious of all around her. Her spirit took its everlasting flight Wednesday 11 o'clock a. m. to the beautiful city of gold, where thieves cannot steal nor moth doth corrupt, but sleep, sweet sleep in Jesus. Oh that I could become reconciled to her death, for the Lord says suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them, not for of such is the kingdom of heaven. She is now a sweet little angel in heaven and is looking in the sunshine of God's love.

A precious one from us has gone
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which none can ever fill.

Farewell dearest, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn.
We shall meet to part no never
On the resurrection morn.

Her mother,
MITTIE C. GOODWIN.

Dear brothers and sisters.—It was very heart rending to give up little Pearlle, she was my dear little grand child, one of the idols of my heart, though the Lord giveth and he taketh away. I believe he has taken her from the evil to come. Why should we mourn for little Pearlle for he has taken her from all her sufferings, and I do believe is now resting in the arms of Jesus. Oh may we all be enabled to look away from self and look to Jesus, who is our righteousness above. I hope and trust all who read these lines will pray for me and my dear children, that we may meet little Pearlle and all saints who have gone on before.

Grieve not fond parents for your little girl,
We know she was a darling one
And you may meet her on that shore
Where parting will be no more.

Her lovely eyes, her smiling face,
How can we let them go,
Can we no more her form embrace
How sad the truth to know,
Far from this world of toil and strife,
She is present with the Lord.

Her grandma
B. W. ROY-CROFT.

ISAAC B. FARMER.

This dear, honest old brother died at his residence in Wilson Co N. C., early in October 1892. He was a member of the church at Wilson, and certainly loved peace and good order everywhere. A few years ago his precious wife was called away. Seldom have I seen one so full of love in her dying days as was sister Farmer. After her death brother Farmer remained at his home with some of his children. He prospered in business as a farmer as long as he lived. If all our brethren attended to their business as well as brother Farmer did I hardly think there would be any confusion in the churches. He was true to attend his meetings and was fond of receiving the brethren at his own house. He was well stricken with age, and had lived not only his full days out, but that age allotted to man that so few attain. From conversations with him my impression is that he was not desirous to remain here on earth. When the corn is to be gathered into the garner it seems not violent but meet and proper to carry it into the house or home of the family. To be gathered with our fathers and to be presented to the Father of spirits in the righteousness of Jesus and by him is so glorious that earth fades into vanity in comparison. To depart and be with Christ is far better. For if this earthly house of our tabernacle or body be dissolved, we have an house not made with hands, or not of this building, which is eternal in the heavens.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.

"Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me."—John 5:31.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—The christian cannot be better employed than in searching the Scriptures. If he loves Christ and is longing for the time when he shall be with him and be like him, he must feel a deep interest in all that relates to his character and mission. He is the one altogether lovely, to all his sheep. He is their Shepherd, Priest and King—the Captain of their salvation.

He told the Jews to search the Scriptures for they testify of him. Had they been quickened and born again they would gladly have done this. But they knew not the light and would not have this man rule over them. They had not his word abiding in them, for whom the Father sent they believed not. So is every natural man. "No man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him, and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, and they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me." John 6: 44, 45.

Take this teaching, or revelation away and the christian's hope is gone. But if he can sometimes lean on one who is mighty to save, and has all power upon earth and in heaven, he can trust in a finished salvation wrought out for him by Christ, and "can smile at Satan's rage."

By searching the Scriptures the child of God will find every day some new beauties unfolded to his mind in regard to his Saviour, and sometimes he can appreciate for himself, some precious promise. There may be some things that he cannot understand, but blessed be God, we have an High Priest who feels and knows our every infirmity. In his own time and in his own way he will make all things that it is necessary for us to know plain to our view. He has not left us without another Comforter.

Oh what a gracious Saviour! We cannot learn too much of him, or love or praise him too much. "We love him because he first loved us." 1st Epistle of John, 4:19. "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." 1st Epistle of John 4:9. "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life." First Epistle of John, 5:20.

Of Course the Scriptures spoken of by Christ were the Old Testament, for the New Testament was not then written. But we are told,

"For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." Romans 15:4.

The child of God now has the New Testament inspired by the same Spirit that gave the Old. Time and space would fail to speak of all the testimony that is given him by his disciples. A few prominent instances only are mentioned in the hope that all may be comforted, who will search the record.

Matthew gives a detailed account of his birth, his sojourn upon the earth, his great sermon, his transfiguration and his death and resurrection, and testifies thus: "And Jesus came and spoke unto them, saying, all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matthew 28:18, 19, 20.

Mark testifies, "The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God as it is written in the prophets, Behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight" Mark 1: 1, 2, 3. And when Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan, Mark testifies, "And straightway coming up out of the water he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him. And there came a voice from heaven saying, Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Mark 1:10, 11.

Luke testifies of what Jesus said to his disciples, after his resurrection, "And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, and ye are witnesses of all these things." Luke 24:44-48.

John testifies of him by saying, "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not." John 1:1-5.

In the Acts of the Apostle we find this testimony: The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach. Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen to whom also he had showed himself alive after his passion, by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. And being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me." Acts 1:1-4. In the Acts too we have the record of the miraculous conversion of Saul. (Is not the conversion of any sinner a miracle?) See 9th chapter. In the 10th chapter is Peter's remarkable vision. And in the 2nd chapter we have an account of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the disciples on the day of Pentecost.

In the Revelation it is testified, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city: For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers and idolators, and murderers, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. I, Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David and the bright and morning star." Revelation 22: 13-16.

John tells us, "and there are also many other things which Jesus did, which if they should be written, every one, I suppose that even the world itself would not contain the books that should be written." John 21:25.

Well may the poet exclaim,

How firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word!
What more can he say than to you he hath said,

Who unto the Saviour for refuge have fled.

Search the Scriptures and may the Lord give us understanding hearts. Yours in hope,

C. S. McDANIEL.

ELDER GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—
As I have returned from my trip down in the Abbot's Creek and Bear Creek districts in compliance with the request of the many dear brethren and sisters I will try to write a few lines to let them know that I returned home and found all in common health. I met with many very precious brothers and sisters in that country, though the Baptists seem to be suffering in some parts. I am sorry to say, that I find the Baptists using what I call lynch law. I mean by this turning members out without giving them any trial, and without any church evidence. Strict discipline is the life of the church, (I mean the practical life.) If a brother commits a crime worthy of death let him die, but don't kill him with law but kill him by the law. The law of Zion as it is given in the scripture, for it says ye are brethren. So we should try to live as brethren, and when we are falling out by the way, not in the way but by the way, it does not manifest that we are brethren; and to my dear preaching brethren, I am so vile, so prone to sin I fear that I am not born again. Jesus said, as you go preach. He does not tell us to wait until we get there and then preach, but as ye go preach. Then our department should be preaching. We should be very careful to maintain good works. We are not maintaining good works if we refuse to pay our debts, and I think it would be prudent in Baptists everywhere if they have members having means to pay their debts, and refuse to pay, to turn them overboard. Yet I would say that if your brethren are in debt to you to bear with them just as long as they are trying to pay. I have not written this to hurt feelings, but I trust for the good of the cause and to relieve my mind. Baptists should try to live inside their own means as near as they can. Some might say are you not in debt? Yes, I am in debt, yet I hope that none of my creditors are uneasy about what I owe them. I have not written what I aimed to write when I commenced.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:— I have long had a desire to write what I hope the good Lord has done for me. I was made to believe that there was a heaven and a hell, and that one or the other was for me when I died. I was one day in the field at work in the date of 1886, when there was a dark cloud gathered around me, and it seemed that I was then upon a hill, and I said Lord what shall I do. I viewed myself to be a great sinner. One night I dreamed I went to a large house and before the house was a wide deep ditch, and a white something as clear as a crystal laid across to walk on, but I stopt and saw a man come to the door and he said to me, come in, and I told him that I could not walk across, and he came and led me by the hand across the place, and I went in the house, and it was full of the nicest looking people I ever saw, all sitting in rows across the house. This caused me to see a great deal of trouble, and I would dream of joining the church and being baptized, and it seemed that my trouble grew heavier. I could see no peace day nor night. On the 2nd Sunday in August 1888 I went to bed and thought I would go to sleep when all at once it was so dark that I could not help crying and said, Lord have mercy on me a poor wretched sinner. Then all at once a light came down from above right over me, and I saw an angel right over me, and it turned and said follow me. I commenced shouting and praising the Lord. It seemed to me like that I was going up, and I got up and tried to tell what I had seen, but could not. It was so much better felt than told. It was more than a month till I went to a neighbor's house one night to preaching to hear one of our good old Baptists preach, and while he was preaching I saw the same light come down from above right before me, and I began to praise the Lord. After preaching they began to talk to me, and I talked and told a part of what is here written, and it relieved me a little while. Then it was the same old thing again. I then began to think I would join the church and would go to preaching and think I would offer myself. I would think it would be no use, for they would not receive me. My mind was to go and I went on Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in November 1888 and to my surprise was received, and the next day was baptized. I now felt like that I would never see any more trouble, but I find many troubles and dark roads to travel and contend with. Mixtures of joy and sorrow I daily do pass through.

Your little sister in hope,

ELDERS GOLD AND LESTER, DEAR BRETHREN:—If I may be permitted to claim that relationship with the dear little ones of Zion. I have had some impression for four or five years to write down some of the dealings of the Lord with poor unworthy me. I was born an Arminian July the 18th, 1861. I was born in sin though I had nothing to do with my first birth, neither did I have anything to do with the second if I have ever been born again. It is the goodness and mercy of God that snatched me as a brand from the burning and has translated me into the kingdom of his son. I was about 13 years old before I knew that I was a sinner. Some where about that time I had a very serious dream one night. I dreamed I was going to a little child's burial near where I was reared, and as I got in sight I saw a large crowd leaning against a fence near by the grave yard. As I got to the fence I did not see any one at the grave, so I got up to the fence and asked the people I saw if the burying was over, they said no. They were not done the grave yet. I did not know any one of them. I got off the fence and started on toward the grave and one man stepped up by me and I looked back and they all were coming on two and two. So we marched on down to the grave, and there was a man in the grave dressing out the vault, and it was the prettiest gray granite rock I thought I ever saw, and I asked him whose grave is this, and he looked up at me and I never will forget his looks. He said this is your grave, don't you remember that Jesus was buried in a stone, you ought to be a better boy, and take up your cross and follow Christ. Although this was a dream, but I never can express my feelings that night. I felt that I was dead. On awaking was so glad I was still alive, but I felt so bad I thought I would die before day, and hell would be my doom. I tried to pray for the first time in my life. I saw that I was a sinner before God, and all I could say was Lord be merciful to me a sinner, Lord spare me until day, and I get my right feelings and I will never sin against thee any more, so when day came I was so glad, and went where mother was and told her I was going to die soon, she looked at me and said, why Dolphus what makes you talk that way. I told her my dream and she burst out crying and said, that is a warning for you, Dolphus you are a bad boy. I went on in that condition for a long time, sometimes trying to pray to the Lord to pardon my sins, if it was his holy will, and sometimes it looked like it was a sin for me to try to pray. I felt to be such a sinner, and I felt like if I died in that condition hell would be my portion. I was in such a fix I did not know what to do. I would seek for a lonely place to try to pray and would find a place where I thought probably no one could see me and would get down and try to pray, and would make a failure. It seemed like I could hear some one coming up where I was. I would get up and I would feel so ashamed of my self for being there trying to pray. It appeared all foolishness, I would think I will not try it any more, and in a little while I would find myself trying the same thing again. I saw I was not my own keeper, but I did hope that I was in the hands of the Lord, and that he would do all things right. I went on this condition for a long time, and one night I dreamed that two old Baptist preachers were going to preach at our free school house and I was fixing to go to hear them, and when I got ready and started I had not gone more than a hundred yards from the house before I saw I was naked, so I thought I would have to go back and put on some clothes, so I turned my head toward sun rise and to see if I had time, and saw a beautiful star about one hour high, and it started toward sunset. As it went the whole element opened behind it and as it opened the most beautiful light shone around me that I ever saw, and I awoke praising God as happy as I could be. I never can tell you all how happy I felt, that was the first season of joy that I have ever had. I felt so much better for a few days that I thought there was a chance, but soon got in more trouble than ever before. So I commenced trying to pray to God to show me whether that was a hope or not, or was I deceived in the whole matter. I would read the Testament to see if I could find any comfort, but every sentence condemned. So I was cut off. Oh I felt so miserable. I saw I could do nothing of myself. So I thought I would try the mourner's bench at the next protracted meeting at Camp Spring which was to come off in a few weeks. When it came off I went. I was a mourner in deed and in truth, for I was like a drowning man. I was catching at straws. I was a mourner four days and everything could profess but me. I was in earnest about the matter. I did not want to be deceived nor deceive any one else. While I was at the mourner's bench it appeared to me as if some one spoke to me, "you have committed the unpardonable sin." So I got up from there, and these words came to me, cursed is he that trusteth in man, or maketh flesh his arm. Before that I was praying for a change. After that I tried to pray to God to forgive me for committing the unpardonable sin. My prayer was, Lord save, I perish, Lord be merciful to me a sinner. The Methodists wanted me to join the church. They said I had a hope, but poor me, I had no hope. My hope at that time was about like those hoping without God changing them from nature to grace. The Lord is the giver of every good gift and every perfect gift. There is nothing good in man. He is nothing but a lump of corruption.

If I ever received a hope it was in September of 1880. I was curing tobacco for an Old Baptist. One night after supper his daughter and I were singing a few songs in the Light of Zion, and he began to joke me about being an Arminian and I gave him some pretty rough words about the Old Baptists. Soon I started to the barn. I had not got five steps from the door before I felt that I had hurt his feelings. I thought I would go back and ask him to forgive me for what I said, but I did not then. I went on to the barn studying over the matter. I went in the barn and found my fires were gone out. I took up my basket and went to the coal-pen and filled it up, and as I rose up the love of God shone in my heart. I was not praying as I know of, but I was so happy it seemed like everything was praising God. I thought I loved everybody. There I stood by myself gazing at his amazing mercy. It seemed to me that if everybody had been there I could have shown them the way of salvation. As this glorious feeling left me I was singing, Father, I stretch my hands to thee, No other help I know. If this is not the dealings of the Lord I am yet a deceived sinner. In the year 1883, on Saturday before the third Sunday in June, I went before the church at Banister and told a part of what I have written. They received me and I was baptised on Sunday by Elder McDowell. Brethren, remember me at a throne of grace. Your unworthy brother, if one at all,

Chestnut Level, Va.

MY CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

After I joined the church I was satisfied for a while, but my mind soon became much alarmed on thoughts of Divine providence for his people and care for them. I searched the word to know his will and my duty. I did hope I was one of his children, and I desired to obey him in all that he commanded me. I learned Christians should love one another. I felt that I loved the saints. The word said watch. I watched myself carefully, and watched the saints in their lovely walk. I soon found in my mind an impression to preach, but I was not the proper one; but my impressions grew stronger. I would often dream of preaching with great liberty, and it appeared that I enjoyed it, but when I would wake it would be a dream, then I would think if I could preach with this liberty I would not mind it; but even then I did not expect ever to try to preach. I thought if I would speak privately of the things on my mind it would do as well, so I was soon speaking in a private way my views on things divine, and the more I spoke of these things the stronger the impression was to preach them. I thought it was because I so often read the Scripture, and I said to myself I will stopreading so much, and I did so, and in about three weeks from that time my mind was as dark as midnight, and I felt that I was in prison and could not get out, but the same impression was there still. I then desired the Lord to give me light again but did not receive it. I did not agree to go if he would give me that light, so it did not come. I felt I was shut up in a prison so long. I went to my bible again, but could not read with any understanding, so I commenced looking around to see if there was any cause of my preaching. I did not see any use of my trying to preach. There were three old ministers in that section, and three young ministers, and I did not know the use of my attempting to preach, yet my impressions grew stronger, but I in the dark, in prison begging for light. At last I saw that I had sinned in laying aside my bible to keep from having impressions to preach. I remembered Samson slew a thousand of his enemies with the jaw bone of an ass, and then threw it away. After this he became very thirsty and began to ask the Lord if he would let him die when he had delivered him from his enemies. Then their clave a hollow place in the jaw, and he drank and revived again. So I saw I like Samson had thrown away my last weapon. I prayed that I might read with understanding, but it does not seem to me I have since. I feel that I did wrong in this. I here advise all that have light in the word to cultivate it and live, for I feel that for this disobedience I died to a great extent. I have never received any comfort from this wrong, but feel sorry that I cannot have that enjoyment in private conversations as I did before, but when I look back at my fault I must pronounce it just. Let as many as are indeed called hear the Lord Jesus saying, "Come to me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." My impression was the same though I did not expect to preach in public. I had no learning sufficient to preach the gospel. It was too much for me. Then I had a dream that showed me it was not my knowledge that preached the gospel. I saw in my dream a great multitude of people gathered together to hear preaching. It seemed I was standing off looking at the scene. Still I had the preaching to do. I saw that my father's house was wrecked so the in-dwellers were subject to be without protection, and I had to preach till that house was rebuilt. About this time I looked across the large congregation and saw myself standing in the midst of them. It seemed as if I looked like an old shell of a stump, and from that shell the preaching should be done. I saw no possible chance for any preaching, if that shell all very dry was the dependance, and it seemed to be me myself. About this time I saw a fowl come from above direct to the shell, and a second time this old shell then commenced preaching. The fowls came thicker, the preaching got faster and more powerful, so much so in a few minutes the preaching was so powerful that a man dare to come near it. This convinced me that it was not the power of man nor his wisdom that preached, but the power and wisdom of God. The light became so great that it could not be approached by any one present. I awoke: it was a dream. I was made to wonder over this, also my mind was more impressed till I must speak it seemed, but could not bear the thoughts of speaking in public, so I would go out in the plantation where no one could see, nor hear me, and talk over the things that were on my mind. It would relieve me to some extent for a while. I dreamed again viewing myself in a swamp, and satan caught me to pull me back to devour me. I struggled for my life, and prayed to the Lord for help. Power was given me to break his hold. I that moment started home walking on a canal bank. He caught me again and said he would drown me in that canal. I prayed to the Lord for help, and power was given me to drown him but did not. I ventured toward home, and rising the hill saw a very narrow path, so narrow was it I hardly could keep my feet on it. It was a very hard way to travel, at the same time the old enemy came up behind me pelting me in the back so hard I thought I could not stand it. I saw at this time my home and the little narrow path led strait to it. I ventured hard to go home, but at last the enemy pelted me so hard in the back I turned to fight him, this gave him power to bind me at his will which he did. I had no power to move and prayed to the Lord for help. He then had no power over me to bind me, and I said in my heart I will go to my home or die on the way. I ventured hard to go, he pelted me hard on my back. I soon came in full view of the beautiful home and the narrow path went direct to it, but there was no gateto be seen, but the closer we came the less power the enemy had to hurt me. When we got to the paling there was no stop to make for the lack of a gate, for when we stepped up to the paling a little gate flew open. I stepped in and it shut together as solid paling again, and I saw I was covered with a rainbow. I stepped up in the door and began to preach with the power of my God and his Son Jesus for his great deliverance, and so great a view of my home. I saw by this deliverance and my obedience, satan would not have any power to destroy me nor my children, nor their children, and was in my preaching speaking words of the same. I awoke; it was a dream; my impressions were still the same, but I felt the least of all my father's house, and why was I so troubled about preaching seeing I was more sinful than any one else. I decided not to mention such a thing as preaching. I did not believe I was fit to preach. I hated myself for having such impressions. One night I dreamed I had to pray for some sick folks, and refused and got in trouble untold. A few days after our meeting came and I went and saw the very dream. I was asked to open the meeting and was about to refuse and thought of my dream, it struck me with fear, and didn't know what to do, and feared to go forward and was afraid of my dream. I did not want that trouble I saw, so I opened the meeting, and to my surprise had much relief all that day. Monday morning before day I woke up, and began to think, what have I done! I fear the people will think I will preach, and made up my mind to do this act no more, to my surprise there stood a man over me and said, see you the great sea, I looked and saw the great sea in the worst rage I had ever seen it, the waves breaking and dashing in every direction, then he said to me, if you turn back I will turn you into trouble, then I thought what shall I do? This lay so heavy on my mind I told it to some one, then soon I was sorry I had told it promising myself I would not say anything about it any more. One morning I arose with some heavy impressions on me, it seemed as if I could hardly live, but I went out to try to shrub bushes. I soon felt unable to work and dropped down in the field, and it seemed strange what a condition I was in. I must have slept, for there came a child running up to me and said, if you find anything to do here, do it. I looked toward the West and saw a large field full of corn stalks. I could not see across that field, and went to the house, dropped down on the floor and said to my wife, I don't think I can live. She tried to encourage me, but was heavily pressed down, could hardly work all that day. When night came I lay down thinking what does this mean. When I slept there came a messenger and told me my father said for me to go there and preach. I went as quick as I could get off, just before I got there there came some one to me and gave me a paper. I held it in my hand as I walked, looking on it. There was a line struck across it, on one side of the line the word life, on the other the word death. I walked on and it soon became very dark. The first thing I knew I had walked against a great wall and could go no further. I began to pray to the Lord for help, then I saw a man standing near me dressed in a white robe. He pointed to the west and shewed me that great field I saw that morning, stretched his hand over my head and said to me, go and gather these together. The field was as far as I could see thick with dry stalks, and these he commanded me to gather. Then I started from under his hand, and when I started I commenced preaching, for this was the way I had to gather them. I awoke; it was a dream. When I awoke the field was still in my view. One day after this my mind was so impressed it seemed to me I could not live under such burden? It seemed to me I was weighted down so heavy that it was impossible for me to live. Just here I promised the Lord if he would spare me my life until our next meeting I would try to preach. I soon felt relief, though I did not take the first thought of what a solemn vow I had made to my God until I failed to keep it. When our next meeting came on there were two ministers there, and I didn't say anything about it, nor did I keep the vow I had made for the sake of ease. I started home on Sunday evening with a heavy heart, and the nearer home I got the heavier my mind was impressed that I had lied to my God, and when I came in sight of my house it came on my mind, I have done so sinful, I shall never see any more peace in my life, besides all this, the Lord is angry with me for making this promise for the sake of ease of mind, and obtaining it from him and then failed to do what I promised him. Oh so sad I was over this, it seemed all within me failed, it seemed that if I could only forget it, or go to sleep and rest only ten minutes it would be a fortune to me. So hard I craved this at sunset I lay down to see if I could go to sleep, but alas my distress became so much greater I commenced rolling on my bed over and over again, till at once I had a view of the place where I often went to pray and talk for relief. I saw something coming from that place directly to me to destroy me, and when it came to me it struck me all over with so much power I sprang out of the bed on the floor, and when I struck the floor my tongue began to speak of the things I had been suffering, and what my great suffering was for. It was then the last of May about seven o'clock when I commenced telling my wife the cause of my trouble. I continued this speech till eleven o'clock, no one present but my wife. When I was done speaking I felt easy and slept well that night, so I was forced to tell these things the very day I vowed so to do. I felt quiet about a week. I was so well satisfied I thought I had done all I was required to do, then I dreamed I went to church and the preacher did not come, and I had to do the preaching. While I was preaching there stood a man on my left hand, and when I was done he said this shall be done the next meeting, so when the next meeting came I went, the preacher did not come, the brethren asked me if I would dismiss the people some way, I told them I had no excuse. I told them where my choice song was, and then told them I wished to speak a few words before they sang the song. I began to speak, it seemed I could not stop till I had told all my sufferings, and what they were, for I have been speaking in public ever since May 1873. I have never been able to satisfy my mind as yet, and this is the cause of my writing. I find the more there is done the more there is to be done, though I find in duty is my only peace. Your unworthy brother,

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I have been thinking of writing you ever since I had the pleasure of meeting you at the Eastern associations. I shall ever hold in grateful remembrance your dear christian wife who is indeed a faithful helpmeet to you. I always felt glad to meet the wives and children of the ministers of Christ, for I greatly sympathize with them, having to be left so often in their lonely condition. The gift of the ministry is a precious and wonderful gift to Zion, and God has dispensed the ministry as seems good in his blessed sight. He stands in the midst of the golden candlesticks holding the seven stars (ministers or angels) in his right hand. The hand of God carries the ministry wheresoever it pleases and enables them to comfort the poor and afflicted ones. Habakuk says, "His brightness was as the light, he had horns coming out of his hands and in them were the hiding his power." These horns I think are the ministry. David was anointed out of a horn and Saul out of a vial. The horn is not manufactured and all the skill of the world cannot wake one, but they can manufacture a vial. There are factories for making one class of preachers, but they cannot make a minister of the gospel. The horn comes out of the hand or power of God. These horns are coming out of his hand. The word coming denotes a continuance of an act, that they are continuing to come. Amid the sore trials of life and the chequered scenes through which the church has past, God has never left himself without a witness, notwithstanding many have been put to death and suffered martyrdom for their faith, yet God in his almighty power is raising up men to preach his everlasting gospel. These horns or ministers have come to the church in all the past and yet they come and will continue to come, not out of theological schools, but out of the hand of God. That is why the ministry have been enabled to bear the many sore conflicts that have come upon them, for they are in the hand of God and his almighty hand sustains them and upholds them. Me thinks I hear the enemy saying, "They will soon die out and in fifteen years there will not be one living." Ah! I have heard the prophecy for fifteen years. But the horns have continued to come all the same, and will continue to come, and when they cease to come God will have no more use for time. Woe be unto you false prophets. John calls these horns. Stars are angels of the churches, an angel is a messenger. A messenger is one who bears a message. Suppose a brother sends his son to bear a message, the son says father, to whom must I deliver the message, and what message must I deliver? The father replies, "son, you study up the message and deliver it to everybody." Would not the son be as apt to prepare a lie as the truth, if not more so? A father when he sends his son to bear a message sends him to a particular person or persons and delivers the message to him. Hence when our heavenly Father sends a man he gives him the message to deliver and directs his mind to a certain people. "Go to Nineveh and preach the preaching that I bid thee."

Isaiah says "Comfort ye my people" &c., and was told what message to deliver and to whom to deliver it.

There is a use for all the horns and all the stars. Every minister fills his place and the Lord prepares him to comfort so many, for that the hearts of God's children are open for the reception of the word or truth he delivers.

Oh my soul, I have had so much darkness and gloom and feel my unworthiness so greatly that many times have I concluded that I was deceived and was not a child of God much less a minister of the blessed Saviour. I have made so many failures and feel so timid to speak in the presence of able gifts that I have many times gone home and resolved to never open my sinful lips to address another audience in the way of preaching, for the bible is a sealed book, I can see no beauty in it, I cannot quote a single scripture correctly and no light on any of it. Oh the anguish of soul. No rest can I find, my mind runs after the dear children of God. I want to be with them. It is indeed like fire shut up in the bones. The scriptures begin open up with some sweetness and the desire is so great I am made willing to go forth in fear and much trembling and in weakness speak to God's humble poor. How thankful I feel, to have the assurance that I have been enabled to comfort one poor feeble saint. All my resolutions amount to nothing, I am a failure at best. The safest place I have ever found is at the feet of Jesus resigned to his gracious will, but I can't get there of myself. I can't come to Jesus till I am drawn to him and as we are drawn away from the flesh we are drawn to Jesus.

We have had some glorious meetings in this country this year. I have had the privilege of baptizing 30 since last Spring and I think there is much more material that will soon come to us and find rest to their wearied souls. Remember me kindly to dear sister Gold. Desiring an interest in your prayers, I remain your poor little brother and companion in tribulation.

ALL THINGS COMMON.

"And all that believed were together and had all things common."—Acts 2:44.

A state of things in which no man calls anything his own, but all things are held in common and equally enjoyed by all as partners or heirs and joint heirs, so that no one claims anything as his own, and yet each lacks nothing, is so unearthly and unselfish that it has never been realized except in the one blessed kingdom not of this world. In the kingdom not of men, and in the Spirit not of earth only is this found.

Man is naturally selfish, and from infancy shows a love of money, and a disposition to acquire and own property. One may desire it for one purpose, and another for quite a different purpose, but yet all crave it. One may want it to gratify his appetites of various sorts as for eating, drinking, fine dressing &c, another for the love of money in its own nature, or to amass wealth. Another may desire it for fame, or to obtain the name of liberality, or for purchasing happiness in heaven as he supposes.

The selfish spirit of man is full of bitterness and corruption, and contains in itself every seed of misery and wickedness; yet to man it does not so appear. It paints and presents to him a most attractive scene of glory and happiness. But it is full of deception. To uproot this foul nature and implant in man a wholly different and unselfish nature, and cause him to know that it is more blessed to give than to receive is not in any sense a creature work. The power therefore which destroys this selfish nature, and supplies man with spiritual desires so that he forsakes this evil world and seeks first or above all else the kingdom of God and his righteousness is a heavenly, saving, gracious power that prevails above every selfish instinct of man, and is the grandest, most glorious and wonderful power of grace that saves the lost, casting out corruption and implanting holiness. There is no power known so glorious, nor soul-saving, none other whose fruits and results are eternal in their nature and duration.

What a miracle is displayed on the day of pentecost when under the most heavenly, miraculous power of the Holy Ghost all that believed were together, not merely together locally as being in the same place, but together in the joints and bands of love or fellowship. They were together as having one heart, one soul or mind, one desire, one aim, one interest.

They were one as in one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one Spirit, in one God and Father who was above all, through all and in them all. They were the blest brotherhood dwelling in unity. They all believed one and the same thing in Christ Jesus, and that made them one. There was no planning or agreement effected and brought about by conventions or resolutions of men, that they would believe the same thing, but the faith that wrought this wonderful unity and moulded them into one was produced by the Holy Ghost.

In the natural body of man one member works for another and seeks the peace of another. The eye sees for the body. The feet carry the body. The hands toil for the body. One member is not arrayed against another, but all the members work and act together. In the true church or brotherhood of the membership or body of Christ love dwells and acts, for the body dwells in love, and no man therefore calls anything his own, but each seeks the wealth or good of others.

It is not in the matter of property at all like the people, principles, kingdoms or governments of this world. For in this world the rich oppress the poor, and often the poor covet the possessions of the rich. The rich frame laws specially favoring their schemes of wealth, and the poor become embittered against the rich. The spirit of communism now rampant in the minds of many who have miscarried in business, and are clamoring for a division of property, not offering to give anything, but wishing to take from those that own property and compel them to divide and thus put all on a financial equality, is no more like the blessed peace of brotherhood that prevailed on the day of pentecost than darkness is like light.

On the day of pentecost those that had possessions, of their own desire and love of the truth and of the brethren, voluntarily or freely sold their possessions and laid down the money at the apostles' feet, and thus everything was brought into a common stock. It was not that the poor demanded it, but it was that the rich freely did this, or gave up what they had, for they loved their brethren as they loved themselves. No man called anything he had his own. Was not this wonderful? This is where Jesus rules as King in Zion. They had all things common, and sold their goods and parted or gave them to any that were in need, and all had plenty, or no man lacked anything. To have things common in this sense does not mean that what they had was base or vile, or very inferior goods. It does not mean that they were very fine things, or costly stylish things. It has not respect to the quality, good or bad, of what they had, but it respects the equality of all, that no man called anything his own. They were partners or had all things in common, or general, public stock. For instance, a commonwealth means a public or general ownership. All have the same interest in this. Selfishness is excluded here, and love reigns. It is brotherhood of peace and love. It is a kingdom not of this world. No man can defraud or wrong another here. One loves another as he loves himself. These are joint heirs. Here each can feel a brother's sigh, and with him bear a part. Here pity flows from eye to eye, and joy from heart to heart.

In this modern day of selfishness some Baptists give an interpretation of the scripture setting forth this blessed state of things, but with such a far-fetched stretch that it admits old self with his love of money into the fold. Some say this is all spiritual and applies alone to spiritual gifts, such as preaching, exhortation, prayer, singing, &c., and does not include worldly business at all. It does not require a church to help their preacher much. It is true they should give him a place to stay all night with them while he preaches to them, and feed him and his horse while he visits them; but not much more. As for giving him money, if anything at all a quarter or half dollar, or some such small amounts as that is enough. We must be careful to keep temporal things out of the church. It is too sacred and pure a place to bring money or property. It is all spiritual. Thus we withhold our goods from the poor and needy, and do not minister of our carnal things to the pastor of our church who ministers to us in spiritual things.

But we need a religion that makes us serve God in our brethren with our worldly goods. We need a religion that causes us to remember the poor, and that leads us to minister to them, and feed the hungry, and clothe the naked—with natural bread and literal clothing. We need that faith that feeds our own souls with the bread of life, and that works by love so that it leads us also to minister to the actual needs of the poor in this world's goods, proving that we love our brethren that are poor more than we love money.

There is but little of that love in these selfish days. Every man seeks his own, and but few seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. This is an age of awful wickedness and hollow pretension of love, and of white-washing and hypocrisy and greed of gain, supposing that it is godliness. The church is but little more like it was on the day of Pentecost than black is like white. We need a faith that controls and regulates, purifies and corrects our conduct in everything according to the pattern shown in the holy Mount at Jerusalem. The church of God should reflect the light of God as a city set on a hill, the holy hill of Zion.

P. D. G.

THE HEAD—BODY.

"And it came to pass at midnight that the man was afraid and turned himself, and behold a woman lay at his feet."—Ruth 3:8.

There is the true and the false—purity and impurity—life and death—opposites in virtue and vice. A warfare rages between them often with seeming triumph of the wicked, yet always finally with glorious prevalence of the holy.

An unclean mind will see nothing but impurity in bible scenes that are clean, while to the pure all things are pure. Men judge of things outside of themselves according to the spirit within themselves. If they are vile they judge others to be corrupt, but excuse themselves; if they are clean they judge others to be better than themselves, always reproaching themselves as unworthy of favor. How safe the judgment of those made wise unto salvation.

The most important earthly relationship is that of marriage, and it most strikingly reflects and symbolizes the unity of Christ, the true Bridegroom and the bride, the Lamb's wife. In Adam is manifested the things emblematic of this unity. The Lord God sees it not good for the man to be alone. The Lord always sees in advance of man. How good when he is eyes to the blind and feet to the lame. Adam is the figure of him (Jesus) that was (then) to come. There is no other that is thus the figure of Christ. God takes a rib from Adam and makes it a woman. This is a figure of the church created in Christ Jesus and of him therefore and complete only in him. Adam's love is full in the manifestation of his bride in whom he finds his constant, inseparable companionship, and without whom he is alone. How good it is to have a companion congenial, the complement of your deficiency, the answer to all your needs, the mirror of yourself, the response to all the questionings of your nature. Adam loved his bride whom God made and brought to him, and he said this is bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave unto his wife, and the twain shall be one flesh. Paul expounding this says, this is a great mystery, for that it concerns Christ and the church, and that a man should love his wife as himself because she is bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, because they are one, for thus Christ loves his church as he loves himself and gave himself for her.

Adam hearkens to his wife, the weaker vessel, and goes down into sin and death with her, from which he cannot raise himself nor her. Jesus, of whom is the true bride, being a near kinsman, the brother born for this adversity, is found the poor wise man in the little city, in fashion as a man coming down into the place of transgression or sin without sin, and as surety must smart for the transgression of his bride or God's people. He is able to lay down his life and raise it again, or able to destroy sin and lift his bride from her guilty lost estate into his own estate of holiness and glory, and to present her before his Father without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, with exceeding joy. As a strong man this bridegroom rejoices to run this race, and as the sun full of light, grace and truth comes out of his chamber all glorious, the chief among ten thousands and altogether lovely, and conforms her unto his own glorious brightness, and she is happy and complete in her husband, and he rejoices over her to do her good.

But by nature she is poor and he must become so too. As a widow or one forsaken in youth and desolate she wanders. O thou afflicted, tossed and not comforted, behold I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. Because thy maker is thy husband, and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel: See Isai. 54th chapter.

In the Book of Ruth these things are set forth in the prominent characters, Naomi which means pleasant, Ruth, beauty, friendship, and Boaz, strength, all appear as shadows of the heavenly. Naomi goes down into Moab, the land of Pride or wickedness and distress. She is a widow and bitter is her lot. Her husband is gone, her sons are dead, her coal is quenched. She has no seed, no child, no apparent hope of issue, or of seed to keep up her name. How sad to an Israelite that his inheritance should lapse, his name be blotted out. The wise law in Israel provided that if one died without issue the surviving brother should marry the widow of the dead and raise up seed to his dead brother, that not a name or house should perish in that land. Israelites loved each other and built up each other. This is the blessed law of Zion.

Naomi is in the line of Judah, and the house and the lineage of David. But it appears as her husband dies, and her two sons die without issue, that is an end of that line. Then how shall he come of the seed of David and tribe of Judah, the governor of Israel, who shall raise up the seed or generation of the righteous, the redeemed, that shall be as the sand of the seashore innumerable, whose name is Jesus, that child born, that Son given to build up the Spiritual house of Israel forever! To human view there is no prospect of this. But shall prophecy fail? Never.

It is in men's low estate that God's deliverances are most seen, and his arm revealed most glorious.

Naomi must have seed raised up unto the name of the dead. Ruth comes in a daughter of Moab in nature, but a widow of an Israelite through whom Jesus is to come of the flesh. This woman loves Naomi, and forsakes her people for her love of the God of Israel and his people. The two came to Bethlehem at the time of harvest. They are hungry, but here is fulness. They are poor, but here they have a bounteous welcome. Love kindles from heart to heart as it is noised that Naomi is come back. She herself feels vile, but no one else sees or remembers it. She reproaches herself for having gone off, but no one else blames her. All that is forgotten in their joy at her return home.

Beautiful, lovely, friendly Ruth, what is her part? To act the virtuous, discreet part of loving and serving her mother-in-law she seeks not the bread of idleness, but the bread of industry, and she goes to the harvest field of Boaz to glean as a stranger for Naomi. She finds favor. All true strangers find favor in the harvest field of a pure Jew. The command of Boaz to his reapers and maidens giving her right to glean so richly filled her heart with gratitude, and brightly shows her lovely character. What does she do with the grain of her prosperous gleaning? To Naomi at once she goes with her treasure, and they eat together.

In the feast of the bounteous harvest Boaz tarries at night at the end of the heap of corn, and at midnight he was afraid—alone he felt, dark was the night. Fear comes on him at the hour of midnight. Fellowship he needs. He desires a companion. It is not good for the man to be alone. Is there kinship of man in Christ? Is he touched with the feeling of our infirmity? Is his desire to the sons of men? Are his delights with them? Is his joy not complete until he sees the travail of his soul? Would Jesus be satisfied if one of his little ones should perish for whom he died? Is his joy full in their love and fellowship? Does he desire that those whom the Father hath given him should be with him to behold the glory he had with the Father before the world began?

Boaz finds Ruth at his feet, humble, pure, clean. He sees the hand of God in this providing. He drops words of comfort to Ruth—commends her love and virtue to him. He perceives the ripening events of God's operations and remembers the nearer of kin to Naomi whose duty is to marry Ruth and raise up seed to the dead. To this one he goes in the gate or court of his city in the presence of elders enquiring if this man will redeem a certain parcel of ground that was Elimelech's, the husband of Naomi. This kinsman says he will redeem it. Boaz tells him that in the day he does this he must buy it of Ruth the Moabitess to raise up the name of the dead to his inheritance. To this the near kinsman replies, I cannot redeem it, lest I mar mine own inheritance. Redeem thou my right to thyself, for I cannot redeem it.

Who is this nearer kinsman that was not able to redeem this land, or marry Ruth and raise up seed to the dead? It represents the law. We by nature are born under it, but it is weak through the flesh, and cannot give life to the dead. It would mar its own inheritance. It owns the right of Jesus to do this. The law is satisfied with Jesus and is fulfilled only in him. All the right of the law is covenanted to Jesus. When the man in the presence of the elders pulled off his shoe and Boaz put it on, thus standing in the shoe or right of this man, and casting the shoe over Edom he was given the rightful ownership of all the law's rights. Hence Jesus comes righteously in ownership of his people even in every legal sense.

He is made of a woman made under the law to redeem them that were under the law that we might receive the adoption of sons, and if sons then heirs of God, and joint heirs of our Lord Jesus Christ. It was at midnight the end of the legal world in its darkness that Jesus alone went down to death for his bride, and alone trod the wine press of the wrath of God. By reason of fear in the night and darkness of his humiliation he girds the sword on his thigh and is strengthened in the conflict. Jesus is the everlasting Father of his people who are begotten again unto a lively hope by his resurrection from the dead to an incorruptible inheritance. He restored that which he had not taken away, and this is his heritage which God hath given him. This seed is raised up to the dead that the inheritance be not lost. Christ raises the dead. He is the resurrection and the life.

Naomi becomes a nurse to Obed who is born of Ruth, and in her bosom this child is brought up. The covenant of old long appeared to be without issue or effect, and Zion said, "The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me." Can a woman forget her sucking child?

The covenant of grace long appeared as though it were of none effect, as though seed would not be raised up to the dead, but out of Judah shall the deliverer come. To him shall the people be gathered. He shall repair the breach. He shall build the temple. He is the builder of the House of Israel, and in all the affliction of his people he was with them, even all the days of old. Fear and trembling took hold upon him, but he was heard in that he feared. In all their affliction he was afflicted. Fear not thou worm Jacob. He shall see the travail of his soul and be satisfied. The unity and oneness of marriage between man and wife shadows the unity of Christ and the church. The church is a chaste virgin. The woman is of the man, and the man is by the woman. Emmanuel in the interpretation is God with us. In the ripening and wonderful fulfillment he is revealed as Christ in us, and we in him—one—no more afraid—in fellowship, love and peace forever, and we suck comfort from the gracious covenant that long appeared as in widowhood and mourning.

And the true bride now is at the feet of her husband, and yet at his side or in his heart. In submission she is at his feet—in glory leaning on her beloved coming up out of the wilderness. P. D. G.

NEED OF A SURETY.

Brother B. F. Liles of Texas requests my view of Job 9:32, 33:

"For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him and we should come together in judgment.

Neither is there any daysman betwixt us that might lay his hand on us both."

Job means, He is set forth as the suffering man after having sat in his ease and moved in regal splendor, yet not with sin or in transgression; also he appears in the end of his calamity as triumphing above all his traducers, and out of all his calamities coming up a blessed one having received at the Lord's hand double for all his sorrows.

Strong as Job was when there was no trouble on him, and valient as he was to advise others what to do in the hour of grief, yet when the trouble comes upon himself he faints as another man. Affliction will abase the lofty spirit of man, and cause the strongest to bow down. Indeed man never appears in a more loving or safer estate than when he cries out in his distress for mercy. Nor is he ever in a safer place than then.

We may speak loftily of our ability, or criticize God's ways and dealings, until his hand falls on us as it did on Job teaching him that God gives not account of any of his matters—that he does his pleasure in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth—that he sweeps away the righteous as well as the wicked—that we cannot answer one of a thousand questions he puts to us—that he is wise in heart and mighty in strength. He makes and rules all worlds, and does great things past finding out. He works about us and we perceive him not. If I were righteous then would I not answer him, but would make supplication to him, said Job.

If I had called and he had answered me yet I would not believe that he had hearkened to my voice. For he breaketh me with a tempest. If I justify myself my own mouth will condemn me. Even if I were perfect I should despise my own life. God is not a man as I am, and I cannot plead with him. There is no ground of equality on which we can meet. I cannot contend with him a moment.

Man while he knows nothing of the terrors of God may speak stoutly and bring God's ways into criticism, and justify his own ways; but when the terrors of conviction enter into his soul, and the sharp arrows of light pierce his heart then man is appalled, and he is broken in Spirit, and terrors of God's greatness seize him and prostrate him in wretchedness. But he is in darkness as to what God purposes. He knows not what God is doing. He cannot find him out by searching, for he giveth not account of his matters. There is no interpreter to unfold to man the meaning of this darkness, nor to give him any comfort in this night of his despair. This state of things each convicted soul must feel for himself so that he shall be cut off from all his parts, and pride be humbled in man, then Jesus as the daysman appears—a man—the mediator between God and man—a daysman that lays his hands upon both God and the wretched sinner, and preaches peace to the sinner, and justifies the way of God to man. Here mercy and truth are met, here righteousness and peace kiss. Here love dwells in the feast of fat things, and all sorrow is turned into joy, darkness into light.

But Job is presented in the text as still under the heavy hand of darkness while there is no daysman. In point of fact Christ had not then been manifest in the flesh, nor appeared to Job; still after this Job uttered blessed words of his certainty that his Redeemer or daysman did live.

Christ must be revealed to each distressed soul, and in his own heart and spirit he is enabled to say I know that my redeemer lives. But until then, as Job was, the convicted soul cannot find God, nor does he understand any thing of what he is doing. Anguish fills his soul, for he cannot at all contend with God.

The greatest of all blessings or gifts is Jesus who speaks peace to the heathen or those afar off from God, who is in the place of God to us—a man touched with the feeling of our infirmities and who lays his hands of mercy on us, and turns our captivity, and our last days are our best days. For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government is on his shoulder, and his name is wonderful, counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the prince of peace. He is the Saviour, for he has borne our sins and carried our sorrows. All the guilt and punishment of our sins he bears, the peace and righteousness resulting from his obedience he gives us. He is the peacemaker. The effect of righteousness shall be quietness and assurance forever.

When the Lord turned the captivity of Job his woes were ended. His last days were his best days. He received double at the Lord's hands. The blessing were doubled—multiplied. P. D. G.

REQUEST.

To whom these presents may come—Greeting.

BELOVED:—I am face to face with a solemn crisis, to-wit: My grand daughter, fourteen years old, writes me, under date Oct. 20, as follows:

"Grandpa, I professed religion the other night, but don't know what church to join."

Will sisters and brethren, preachers and any who feel they can answer this question, please kindly send me a private letter directed as below, telling me what to say to her, and oblige, &c.,

NOTICE.

We have received letters time and again from brethren and friends saying they could procure new subscribers for the LANDMARK if the price was lower, that the complaint was the price was too high. Taking into consideration the hard times and these appeals we have reduced the price to one dollar and fifty cts. per annum. But our expenses have not been reduced a particle, and unless we can receive a good many new subscribers and our old subscribers renew the reduction in price will result in a loss to us. So now the price of the LANDMARK is low enough to be within the reach of nearly every one, and we trust all who feel so disposed will subscribe and get their brethren and friends to subscribe. We request all ministers and our friends to solicit subscribers and receive subscriptions for the LANDMARK.

There are quite a number of names on our list that are somewhat in arrears, and we trust they will remember us now that they are marketing their crops. Sample copies sent to any address on application. P. D. G.

Every man should be allowed to vote as he pleases. Politics should never be made a test of fellowship. Let every man vote for the men and measures he thinks best, and let every Baptist allow this right to all others.

MARRIED.

Married Nov. 9th at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. J. F. Wooten and Miss Bettie J. Musgrove, by Elder John W. Gardner.

MISS RACHEL SIMPSON BENNETT,

Was born Oct. 22nd, 1810, died Oct. 8th 1892, of heart failure, in Pittsylvania Co., Virginia. It was the writer's pleasure to be acquainted with this lady the last fifteen years of her life. She lived quite an exemplary life with one exception. Notwithstanding she had a hope for thirty or forty years, and was as prompt to attend her meetings, as she called them, wet or dry, hot or cold, although she lived three or four miles, when she had no way of riding she walked. The exception, she was never baptized. Procrastination in this duty was a source of much regret, her unfitness was her only excuse she could ever render, but no one ever served their day and generation more faithfully than she did. She always enjoyed remarkably good health, she was always cheerful and a sister of charity, in its true sense. She never had any one to study to please except her Savior. Life was seemingly without its thorns with her, she was devoted to her people and they to her, as well as her friends. She was always delighted to see me, and her people say my mother thought no more of me than she did. She had kept house for her brother Jesse for many years, and although she had three business neices she always sat at the head of the table, and a kinder hostess or a better qualified one the writer never knew. Notwithstand she was eighty odd years old, she was not at all gray and her mind was as active as it ever had been. From the conversation we had with her a few days before she died I think if she had lived a month longer she would have been baptized, but we believe she had been baptized by the Holy Ghost, and as she sank out of self her head was pillowed on Christ, and she "breathed her life out sweetly there." Thus she lived and died full of years and hope in her blessed Lord. As the morning Zephyr kissed the sleeping earth into wakefulness, the angel of God spoke unto her "it is enough, come up higher." The spirit returned to God who gave it while her body awaits its summons in the resurrection morn. May her relatives and friends try to imitate her example and while "We are wandering to and fro,

In this wide vale of woe,
Where streams of sorrow flow,
Are we not also hastening home.

"When we reach that blessed shore,
Where pain and death are no more,
May we sing forever more
With this dear old saint at home."

May the good Lord help us all, not only to imitate her virtues and good deeds, but shun her omission, is the prayer of one who loved her for Christ's sake.

J. M. HARRIS.

CALEB S. HEWITT.

He died in his seventy-third year, left a widow, ten children, twenty-one grandchildren, six great grandchildren. He was taken sick last February with Lagrippe, he would be up a little and we would have some hope of his recovering, then he would fall back, and never could get well any more. He died Aug. 6th, 1892. He was good natured and beloved by all who knew him, was Justice of Peace several years before his death. He was sent to the Legislature once, he never professed to have religion, never joined any church, though he was a believer in the Primitive Baptist faith, went to meeting regular and paid good attention. Any one that did not know him to have seen him at church would have thought him to have been a member. He was a good, peaceable man, when any little upstir arose in the neighborhood he would try to settle it in the mildest way he could. We all miss him very much indeed, he suffered a great deal at the last of his sickness, his family said he prayed earnest Friday morning before he died Saturday morning. There were a great many persons at his funeral and a great many tears shed. By request of Mary E. Weeks and Johnnie L. Morton his daughters this is written.

N. U. SMITH.

ELDER NATHAN BELL.

He was 74 years old at his death, which was the 11th of July 1892. He had been the pastor of Sugar Tree church thirty-one years. He died with grace. His sufferings were great, but he bore them with christian fortitude. I went to see him six weeks before his death. He said it was the will of the Lord for him to suffer and he wanted his will done. All his talk was of Christ and his goodness to fallen men. He said, sister Hines I am suffering two or three deaths, but I haven't forgotten the doctrine. Oh I thought if my last days could just be like his. He had the Lagrippe in the winter so bad he never recovered. He said the Lord had given him a good wife to wait on him, he was so thankful for her kindness. He married Eliza Dallas the last time. He tried to work some tobacco about three weeks before he died. He came to the house and told his wife he was no better. But I am no better to suffer than Job. While sitting there he preached a sermon, no one there but them. He would lie in bed and slap his hands together and say, bless the Lord and continued to do as long as he lived. When he could not speak he would look up and slap his hands. Oh what a glorious death to die. He was so kind to me after my husband's death. He He came to see me and spoke such comforting words. He said he knew what trouble was. He was like all of Adam's race, he had his faults. He was a good man, a kind and affectionate husband. Sister Bell takes his death very hard. She says she has lost her best earthly friend. I know this is so by sad experience, but I hope the Lord will provide for her. This is written at her request by a sister that loved him in the spirit.

MRS. C. M. HINES.

DEACON ASA R. ALLEN.

The subject of this notice was born Jan. 15th 1823, was married to Uphama Allen in 1850. She lived but a short while, he then married Mary J. Freeman of whom was born unto them nine children, only three survive him. His second wife died in 1870 and in 1872 he was married to Victoria Spruill, of whom was born unto them 7 children five living, who together with his beloved wife mourn because of their sad bereavement, but not without hope. Brother Allen united with the Primitive Baptist church at Moratock, Washington Co., N. C., Jan. 19th, 1856, was chosen deacon Jan. 20th, 1872, which office he filled in faithfulness until the day of his death Jan. 29th, 1892. It was the lot of the writer to know brother Allen and to be intimately associated with him from 1881 until his death, and I can truly say that many and pleasant have been the moments spent with him. My membership for eight years was in his church, of which I was for a short while the unworthy pastor, this gave me a good opportunity to know him. Brother Allen was a useful citizen, a kind neighbor, a good husband and father, a zealous member of the church and a good disciplinarian, always desiring and contending for the peace and order of the church. I have often remarked that I would as soon have his opinion of any matter of discipline as any brother I knew. He was ever firm and could always be relied on. In his death the church has lost one of its brightest lights, and his place none but the Lord can fill. Were I to multiply words, I could not express the high regard I had for him, he was like a father to me and I still cherish his memory and feel to pray the Lord for his blessings upon dear sister Allen and her children. His disease was Lagrippe. Just before the breath left him he called his wife and told her he was bound to go, but he wanted them all to know that he was going a hopeful Baptist, and that his faith was in Christ the fountain of eternal life. Feeling assured that brother Allen is today enjoying the full fruition of heavenly blessedness, I close hoping what I have said will prove satisfactory to sister Allen.

Yours in hope,

JOSHUA T. ROWE.

Aurora, N. C.

EMMA COUNELL.

Please publish the death of my little niece Emma Council, who died while I was absent. She was lent here two years and eleven months. Her disease was scrofula. She was a great sufferer until she died. Two physicians attended her, but both proved to no avail, that great monster death had come. Thy Father calls, come home, I think she was too good to stay in this troublesome world, so Jesus has taken her home to rest where sickness, sorrow and death are feared no more. She was unhealthy nearly all of her life. How badly she is missed around the fireside, gone yes, gone never to hear her little cooing voice any more. Jesus said suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord, for he doeth all things well. Weep not dear mother and father for your little babe is a bright angel in heaven. May it be the Lord's will to prepare you to meet her on that bright shining shore where parting will be no more.

MAGGIE A. STANTON.

MRS. ELIZA J. JONES.

The subject of this notice was my dear mother who was born the twenty third day of December, 1840, and departed this life on the night of the twelfth of October, 1892, making her stay on earth fifty two years, eight months and nineteen days. She was reared by pious parents, Methodist in religious belief. In the fall of 1867 she was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to N. G. Jones, Jr., both of Anson County, N. C. The result of this union is three sons and two daughters, all living and about grown. Father is also living. The writer is the first born and the only one married. Mother joined the Missionary Baptists sometime before she and father were married, but afterwards they both joined the Primitive Baptist church at Bethany, Anson Co., N. C. I don't remember the dates. The unworthy writer was also received in the same church in 1888. The rest of the children are non-professors but Primitive inclined. Soon after marriage mother became badly afflicted, never seeing a right well day since. But few people comparatively speaking suffer more than mother did in this life, but we believe her afflictions here worked for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory in the world to come, for we believe that she is now in Paradise, yes basking on the wings of immortal love in the sunlight of the adorable Redeemer where those that meet part no more and those long parted meet again. The ties of nature between man and wife, mother and children are close and to part seems hard, but we should be resigned to him who doeth all things well, for it is the Lord that giveth, and the Lord that taketh away, so blessed be the name of the Lord. We pray the God of heaven to apply this dispensation of his divine providence to the good of our never-dying souls, and also that we may be prepared when the angel says, "child, your father calls come home, and go shouting away to meet our dear mother with all that were redeemed by the blood of the Lamb. Mother had consumption in its worst form. Doctor after doctor was consulted but none could give only temporary relief. I hold in high esteem the many acts of kindness bestowed on mother by relatives, neighbors and friends and can only say, may the Lord reward you all. How true the saying, "Hoise is sad without a mother." Now my dear father, sisters and brothers let us emulate the example of the departed one and try and do as we would be done by.

J. W. JONES.

DAVID AMMON SCOTT.

Brother D. A. Scott was the son of Benajah and Zilpha Scott. He was born April 10th, 1825, and was married to Sallie Revell July the 22nd, 1851. Several children were born unto them. His widow with nearly all the children survive him. He was baptised by Elder John H. Daniel on the 4th Sunday in June, 1870, and died Nov. 6th, 1892. Brother Scott lived in Wilson county, N. C. at the same place about 48 years. He was a very industrious energetic man, and was prosperous as a farmer, and was of much benefit to his neighbors as a pattern of industry. Like the ant he gathered his food in summer. As a neighbor he was honest and accommodating, and he dealt in his business on the square. He was a very useful member of the church and took much interest therein. By his labor chiefly a neat house for the worship of God was built by him, and a church was constituted there called Scotts. He was a deacon and was active and useful in keeping the correspondence in general. As long as he was able he travelled much to near a distant churches to preserve to and continue the correspondence. Hence he was generally known among the brethren. He was a frank, plain, candid man that loved the peace that is the fruit of righteousness.

His health had been poor this year. He went to the church meeting near him on Saturday and first Sunday in November. On Monday morning he was found dead in his bed. How quickly man passes away. Brother Scott has gone from the evil to come let each brother say. He will be much missed by his family, his neighbors and his church with the brethren at large. I never knew him but to love him. Though he was plain and direct in his manner, yet he was as tender as one could well be.

FLEDA TREVATHAN.

Died in Rocky Mount, N. C., August 22nd, 1892, aged 14 months.

ACROSTIC.

From earth to heaven Fleda's Loved spirit is gone, Enraptured with the Lord like a Dove flown on the throne, Accepted as his own.
'Tis scripture for children to suffer the Redemer pleaded so,
Endowed by his blessings if like Valleys they enter into.
As such are the keys to heaven
To no others they are given Heart stricken it seemed,
Affectionately resigned to be,
Numbered in with the redeemed.

Truly a relative,

Mrs. A. J. AVERA.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Offices, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform us of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A PARTICLE OF MY EXPERIENCE.

Give ear my friends and I will tell
What are the labors of my mind,
I am so exercised in heart
To tell the people all around.

I feel my duty is to go,
And preach my blessed Jesus Lord,
But how unworthy I do feel,
For such a work, a gospel herald.

O! what a cross it is to leave
My dear companion in this world,
And all that's near and dear to flesh,
Leaving the crying of sweet babes.

Astonished are my wife and friends,
They think such faith has never been,
That makes me risk all in God's hand,
Onward I press, come weal or woe.

I face cold rains and ice and snow,
Through scorching rays and torrent storms,
I preach along from place to place,
Though lightnings flash and thunders roar.

Sometimes through long and weary roads,
I grope along in frightful doubts,
Then when I reach the house of God
I feel that all with me is well.

Through deepest trouble I do wade,
And weighted down with pain and toil,
I go with head bowed all the day,
Yet trusting Jesus all the way.

I often bid my friends farewell,
And go on with my strength renewed,
Hoping that God has marked my way
To his own and glorious praise.

That I the work of God shall do,
When I am going east and west,
Proclaiming what the Lord has done,
For sinners lost and all undone.

Then when I'm done my work below,
I'll gladly quit this lower world,
That I may live with Christ above,
And there forever bask in love.

"Wherefore is there the price of wisdom in the hand of a fool seeing he hath no heart to it?"—Proverbs.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I see a request in the LANDMARK from dear brother J. C. Hall for me or brother L. H. Hardy or both to give our views on Matt. 13:44:

"Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field."

I am unable to see why a man of such wonderful ability as brother Hall would call on a poor stripling to give views on the sacred scriptures. I hope Brother Hall can throw the mantle of charity over my deep imperfections in the few thoughts I give.

Jesus often spake to his disciples, in parables and there is always some sublime feature, or lesson in every parable, if we do not try to carry them too far and make them mean too much. No figure is complete or perfect, if so there would only be one used.

The Saviour here is speaking of the common salvation to the children of God, I think. By the kingdom of heaven is meant the gospel church under the gospel dispensation—this treasure is in every child of God, in a sense, for we have this treasure in the earthen vessels that the excellency of the power might be of God and not of us. Yes there is divine life in every child of God, the gift of which to the dead sinner characterizes him as a child of God. Hence the sinner is now a child of Adam according to the flesh and a child of God according to the Spirit.

The Lord leads the sinner in a way he knew not.

The lost is found and the blind is made to see, being given eyes to see, ears to hear and a heart to understand he begins to seek after truth and when he hath found this people (the church) he sees that there is a treasure hid in them for it is hidden from the wise and prudent and revealed unto babes, and this seeking child of God is made willing to sell or dispose of all that he hath for the enjoyment (treasure) in the church of Christ. I have baptised many who gave up all their secret societies, alien baptism and other idols for a home in the church, for the sweet enjoyment in Zion. Is not this a great treasure to every one who finds it? None seek and find but the living. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." This is buying or seeking the kingdom for enjoyment (treasure) in it. That man sells all he has (disposes of all his idols) for the joy that there is in obeying the precepts of God.

You remember the woman at the well of Samaria was made willing to leave her water pots, yea sell everything for the joy in following Jesus. You, dear brother Gold, were made willing to sell all that you had in Babylon for an humble home in Zion and there was no doubt a joy in this act to you. This people were no better by nature than others but there was a divine principle in them which distinguished them from the world.

It is the duty of every one when he has a view of the church or has found it to sell all and discharge his duty and receive that sweet rest.

"If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God." Prov. 2:4, 5.

This is the seeking Israelite. Again. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come, yea buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Isa. 55:1. This was addressed to God's chosen Israel and Israel to-day receives an abundance by living in discharge of duty in this kingdom.

Why does the man want to go to the church? It is not because they are better by nature, but it is because they bear the image of Jesus, for Christ is in them the hope of glory and works in them to will and to do of his good pleasure. Christ is the hidden man of the heart that leads the poor saint to come away from the world with all its allurements and cast his lot in the kingdom of Christ with those who are taught in the same school that have obtained like precious faith. There is a great treasure in the church to the poor seeking trembling soul who takes the yoke upon him and finds rest in obedience. May we dispose of everything of a worldly nature that is an obstacle in our pathway, so that we can for the joy in Christ's kingdom come and buy and eat without money and without price.

There is great joy in the church for the obedient saints. I have not time to write more at present, but hope what I have written is not so obscure but what brother Hall can understand my meaning, remembering that we see in part and understand in part while here.

Yours in hope,

LEE HANCKS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER, IF WORTHY TO CALL YOU BROTHER:—I take my pen in hand this beautiful morning to write a few lines through the LANDMARK. About twenty years ago I hope and trust it pleased the Lord to show me that I was a lost and undone sinner. I would try to keep it hid from everybody. I thought I would get religion and not let anybody know it, but to my surprise father had a meeting and after preaching he gave an invitation that if there was any one there that craved the prayers of God's people to come and give him their hand and I tried to keep it hid and not go but could not. The tears gushed out and I could not keep from going. I craved the prayers of God's people, but found no relief there. I thought that I committed a sin by going. I believed that it was the devil that told me so. I went on in this condition for some time. At times my burden would wear off, and then again it would come back more powerful than ever before. At last I began to think that there was no mercy for me at all. I would read the scriptures and they would condemn me everywhere. I went to meeting every chance I got and sometimes my heart was so hard that I could not shed a tear, then again at other times I was tender and could not keep from crying. I would go to secret prayer and there pour out my grief to the Lord. I would have changed my condition with any one else, for I was afraid that I had committed the unpardonable sin. I read in the scriptures that there was a sin unto death, and that he shall not pray for it, and I was afraid that I had committed it. I went on in this way for a considerable length of time, till the Missionary Baptists had a protracted meeting at our meeting house. They held their meeting for sometime, and called for mourners, and I did not go for awhile, but at last I went to the mourner's bench, as they call it. I found no relief there while others made a profession. I quit going to the mourner's bench and resorted to some secret place where nobody could see me. When I would go to bed at night I would think it was my last time, for I thought that I was going to die. I would get up and slip out of doors many a night and try to pray to the Lord to have mercy on me, for mercy I wanted. One night while I was laying on my bed and praying for the Lord to have mercy on me the first thing I knew I was praising the Lord. I thought my sins were gone, and joy and peace had come. I loved everybody. I thought I was up in the air for a little while. I wanted to leave this world, for I felt free from sin at that time. It was not long till doubts and fears arose, and I was afraid that I was deceived, but I have had few refreshing showers since, and have had many cold and dark seasons. Brother Gold, it is not the sins that trouble me now, that is those I committed before I received a hope. It is the things that I do now that trouble me now. I do many things that I ought not to do. I did not join any church soon, but wandered about. I married before I joined any church, and my wife became concerned about the welfare of her soul, and the Missionaries held a protracted meeting and she professed a hope in Christ and we both joined the Missionaries and remained with them for several years. The longer I was with them the more I became dissatisfied, till at length there came a preacher and said that he would preach for us twelve months for so much, and the church could not make up the salary that he wanted, and he said that he would give them 'till the next meeting, and he came back to our next meeting, and we still could not get it up for him, and this was the last time I have ever seen him. "The hireling fleeth because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep." Brother Lipps came over and preached for us, an able defender as I ever heard. He just rooted up the Missionaries' platform, and told them where they stood. The Missionaries contended that the Old Baptists left them, but Brother Lipps spoke a while of the split between them and we soon found that we were in the wrong church and joined the Old Baptists, and were baptized by Brother Lipps. I thought he preached the ablest sermon that I ever heard in my life. It seemed to me that it came from a far country. He had a two days meeting, and on Sunday my wife joined the Old Baptists, was received and the next day he baptized her. That was the day that brother Lipps preached such a good sermon as I thought, and after preaching was over he opened the church door, and I went and told the church what I hope the Lord had done for my soul, and was received and I and my wife were both baptized by brother Lipps. It was a happy day to me, but I have done so many things since then that I ought not to have done, and left undone the things that I ought to have done; but Paul says that it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me: for he says, that in me that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me, but how to perform I find not. Now Brother Gold, I have given you a small sketch of my travails. Brother Gold, you gave me a great deal of light how a person can resist a thing and not be in possession of it. I like to read the LANDMARK. I find so many things in it that comfort me and then again I find some things that I cannot swallow, but the wrong may be in me. I see in the LANDMARK that Elder John Vickers of Georgia requested me to give him my post-office address. He can get it through the LANDMARK. YOURS in the bonds of peace.

AN ENTREATY.

TO THE BRETHREN OF THE LITTLE RIVER PRIMITIVE BAPTIST ASSOCIATION:—I feel impressed to write to you. I will not plead weakness for if this impression is of the Lord it is of power. If not of the Lord it will amount to nothing. But this is one thing I think I can say, I do not intend to hurt the feelings of any one. Brethren, whom are we trying to serve? Are we what we ought or profess to be? Is it not a shame for us to be divided as we are and all trying to serve the same God? I will ask one of the most important questions, do we love one another? Brethren, confusion, evil speaking and trying to destroy one another is not the fruit of love. What do we love if we do not love the cause of Christ? What is more pleasant than to see brethren meet in love with one another? But my dear brethren what do we see when we meet together now? One trying to justify his cause and another his. Brethren, if we are what we ought to be we are one in Christ. Are we going to let the churches of this Association be divided as they are? I pray the Lord will come in our midst and show us our duty concerning them and cleanse us. Brethren, I will not clear myself. I am guilty. I feel that we are all guilty, and if we all could feel as I now do we would have peace. I feel that I could humble myself at the feet of any of the brethren. We should examine ourselves and see if we are not guilty. We should watch over one another for good and not for evil. We should also bear with one another considering our own weakness. I know of myself I can do nothing. Lord, be our guide and help in this our time of need. Brethren, I do not feel as if we ought to be divided, for a house divided against itself shall not stand. Let us therefore not judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way: Romans 14th chapter and 13th verse. We ought to pray for and confess our faults to one another, and not destroy our happiness while here in time. Where shall I go if my home among the Primitive Baptists is destroyed? I have nowhere to go. We have been looked upon as being the most united, and as loving each other best of any other people. Where are we drifting? We should not fall out with our brethren because we all do not see alike. I have had to go bowed down mourning on account of this trouble. Brethren, I feel sometimes as if it is more than I can bear. I love the church. I love the cause of Christ and I love his people. We have let the evil one creep in among us and he will destroy us if we do not resist him. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from us with all malice; Eph. 4th chapter and 31st verse. There have been too many peace-breakers and not enough peace-makers. Brethren, let us work for peace. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. Against such there is no law. Let us be kind, tender-hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake has forgiven us." "Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

The above letter is endorsed by Neuse church in conference Saturday Nov. 5th, 1892,

R. F. TEMPLE, Church Cl'k.

Remarks.

Here is an humble entreaty from brethren in distress that desire peace. Do you respond amen to this?

Let each brother be fully persuaded in his own mind, and let no brother put a stumbling block in his brother's way. Let each of us see that his own house (himself) is in order. When I am judging my brother I am neglecting my own case and wronging my own soul.

P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Your valuable paper comes to hand heavily laden with gospel truth, and its simple way of letting our enemies know what we claim to be Bible truth. It appears that the noble and wise philosophers of the world cannot comprehend by the wisdom of man. The covenant made through grace has absolutely furnished her people with power that they may become the sons of God; therefore we walk by faith and not by sight. The light that we walk by we found it to be in the Son of God, and before any one of Adam's race can be received of God he must be born again or regenerated. If any one falls short of this faith he cannot possess a light in Christ, neither can he possess the holy love in Christ Jesus and for the people of God, and the christian prosperity. This glorious work of salvation can only be made known through the revelation of God's holy Spirit communicated unto our soul showing us the right way to walk in his holy precepts and church of the living God—this holy fire of love hath come to stay in the people of God, from the fact that Christ who is our life hath sealed it with his righteous blood, and by his resurrection. Christ Jesus hath obtained our heavenly rest, "without me ye can do nothing, as it is written ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the spirit." Hence we read of the sanctification of the Spirit and the holiness of truth, and of being sanctified by the truth. By comparing these passages together, it is evident that the Divine Spirit does employ evangelical truth as the appointed instrument in producing that holiness in the heart and life of a true christian person, and they are the favorite objects of God's eternal love, which is included in this great blessing. For this reason it is that our great Intercessor prays, "sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth. Ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." We Baptist people do claim this truth to be the mirror in which we behold the gracious designs of God's grace, respecting us, and all the sufficiency that is in Christ, and his finished work, wrought out for the guilty sinners. The people of God behold the glory of the Lord, as we would look into a glass, and we are changed into the same image, from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord Jesus. As Moses' countenance did shine so radiantly that the chosen tribes could not steadily behold him, so is the believer in the gospel day viewing the great king of glory in his matchless beauty. The believer derives a likeness to the glorious object of his view and God's eternal love and fellowship of the church. The more we love them the more we desire a conformity to Christ and church for love of God's grace inspires our hearts. The more we love God the more frequently and delightfully will we behold Christ. Thus we obtain a fresh view of God's glorious image, and so we advance in true holiness and will keep pace with our view of the glory of our God in the face of Jesus Christ, as our King who will bear always exact proportion to a life of faith upon Christ as our surety and our Saviour as the word of grace is the proper warrant and ground work of our faith, and the more clearly our conceptions are concerning its truth and certainty, the more firmly shall we confide in Christ's love, and consequently, the fruits of holiness will more abundantly adorn our conversation, for the gospel spirit brings forth fruit in all God's people that know the truth, and by the great exceeding and precious promises contained in Christ's shed blood we are made partakers of his divine nature. Hence the gospel work is compared to a mould into which melted ore is cast, from which they receive their form and take the impression. God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that type of doctrine into which ye were delivered. So I hope these few remarks may be all for the glory of my Lord and good of his people.

Yours in love of the gospel,

J. W. CAYWOOD.

Mohawk, Tenn.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, MY OWN DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—I have just returned from a visit. What a glorious theme to have a hope in Jesus. How you did speak of that holy calling. Oh is it not a holy calling if we are not deceived. But with his great love wherewith he loved us even when we were dead in trespasses and in sins, and lose our sins upon the rugged Cross of Calvary. Oh that I might praise him more and to be like him each day I live. Bless him O my soul and all that is within me bless his Holy name, feeling that he has done so much for us whereof we are glad. Surely his goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and I hope I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever. I am perfectly resigned to my lot that God has marked out for me, ever looking to him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith, for by faith are ye saved through grace, and that not of ourselves, for it is the gift of God; not of works lest any man should boast. David says, "it is good for me that I have been afflicted. If I had not been afflicted I would have gone astray. "It caused us to look to him who is the author of all good and perfect gifts. I think sometimes my unprofitable life is useless, but God only knows. I am blinded with tears. Above all things I want to be one of our Father's useful servants. I have tried to ask him in my weak and feeble way. These words came to me, visit the sick, poor, distressed in body and in mind. I was impressed to visit sister Ruth Taylor. I want to tell you all about it in my weak way. This came to me, now you have been around having a good time. Had I done my duty? Had I been to see her? It was shown to me so plain that I had not. I could not keep the tears back. I thought how could I go! I had no way. I thought I could not talk to her to comfort her any, and again these words came to me, "I will fill your mouth." He did help me out. After I made arrangements to go this came to me, "in all my Lord's appointed ways I will follow at his command." I believe when you are impressed to do anything follow that impression and the good Lord will help you out. These words came to me not long since;

"He near my soul has always stood,
His loving kindness, Oh how good."

and also these, "make glad the city of our God." Sister Ruth did run that out so beautifully. How her room is filled with the sunshine of God's love. I told her I felt like I was in a heaven here below. I could have listened at her talk all night and never tired. How bad I did hate to give the parting hand at the Association? When shall I ever be blessed to attend another? It is long to be remembered by me. I have received some very good letters since then; a good long one from brother L. H. Hardy. It is indeed good news and glad tidings to me to hear from my dear brothers and sisters, the ones I love so well. I have just received a good long one from sister Bettie Whitley who is a dear sister to me. May the good Lord be with you my dear brother in all your troubles and trials through life, and bless you to continue in the ministry in the future as he has in the past. Remember me at a throne of grace and write me when you feel like it, for I will be glad to hear from you. I am your sister I hope in Christ, MAGGIE A. STATON.

Bethel, N. C.

Remarks.

Our dear sister is unable to walk a step, or even stand alone without aid. She is a child of affliction; and how wonderful that one so suffering should be so reconciled and resigned to God's providence. It is those children most chastened that have most patience. P. D. G.

ORDINATION.

In obedience to a call for a presbytery to examine brother J. B. Dallas, and if found orthodox, ordain him to the work of the ministry, the following elders and deacons met at Sugar Tree Saturday before the first Sunday in Nov., 1892, and organized a presbytery. Elders W. S. Minter and J. M. Lewis, and deacons M. L. Hanks, H. C. Turner, and J. J. Beck. Brother Minter was chosen moderator and brother J. J. Beck, clerk. When examined he was found to be sound in faith and fully qualified for the ministry, and was ordained and set apart to all the functions pertaining to the gospel ministry, with prayer by Elder Minter and charge by Elder J. M. Lewis, and it was ordered that this be sent to ZION'S LANDMARK for publication.

W. S. MINTER, Mod.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I see a piece in the LANDMARK of Sept. 15th written by D. Bartley, a faithful minister of Christ, admonishing the churches to their duty to the poor saints as taught in the Scriptures. As his spirit is stirred upon that subject, I am glad to hear from him, though sorry to hear of his weak state. I will state to him and others what I have seen of late and as I was much comforted, I hope it will be some comfort to others to know that the poor saints are not neglected by the church at every place of worship. I was with the church at Pine, Davidson county, N. C. on Saturday before the second Sunday in September in conference there. There was one of their old and faithful sisters reported to be in need of help, as she lived alone and was unable to work much. The church handed her two dollars for her immediate relief and many of the brethren arose and said they would unite in furnishing her grain and milling and deliver to her house that she may have as long as the church is blessed as it now is. We received two brethren by experience and baptized them on Sunday. I have attended that church since February 1882, about seventy-five miles. My travelling expenses have always been paid by the church and friends without having asked for a cent. I have baptized more than forty members into that church and we have had peace among ourselves. I feel glad to say to the brethren that I hope we see the spirit of obedience to the word of the Lord manifested.

JAS. A. BURCH.
Burlington, N. C.

DEAR BROTHERS GOLD AND LESTER:—By the mercies of an omnipotent Friend, I am still numbered with the living, for which I wish to feel duly thankful, and as I know that a true and heartfelt gratitude as well as every other good and perfect gift must come from above, I am dependent on the Lord for it. If He fills my heart with gratitude it will be acceptable to Him. This is one of my troubles. I am so ungrateful. It gives me much cause for grief. When we count our blessings over they far exceed our misfortunes. I believe it our duty to praise the Lord as much so as to ask for the things we need. But we can do neither unless grace sufficient is given us. These things we cannot do of ourselves, but if we are the chosen people of God we can ask and it will be given, knock and it will be opened. True our prayers are not always answered according to our wish at the time, but I verily believe are answered in the best way, for our God is too wise to err, too good to be unkind. He answers prayer in a way that will prove a far greater blessing to us than if they were answered as we would have them. To-day I received the LANDMARK for October 15th in which there is a letter written by our dear sister Sallie Wiles. The letter we can all endorse, she has been greatly afflicted with cancer, but we hope she is well of it now. But her sufferings cannot be told by mortal tongue. Day and night with untold agony did she toss on her bed. But out of it all she came fourth without a spot or blemish or wrinkle or any such thing. The Lord did uphold and sustain her, gave her strength as her day, and so I feel he will all his children. If I could feel that my feeble efforts could do any good I could say with those of olden times, let us all press onward, forgetting the things that are behind, ever looking to Jesus the author of the christian's faith. When we can do this, this world does not have many charms for us. I had hoped you, brother Gold, would come to see us this year. Perhaps you may yet. We are always glad to have you come. I send this to you subject to your better judgment. As ever, I remain in hope,

EMMA HUDSON.

Ringgold, Va.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—You and the readers of the LANDMARK know that I do not write often for publication. Indeed, I never write except when I think I have a special impression from the Lord to do so.

Unless I am deceived, I have, at this time, a solemn impression to add my feeble testimony to the truth of your statements made in your editorial of Oct. 15th, 1892. Your advice was timely and savoried of the right spirit.

If my impressions to corroborate your testimony are from the Lord it is neither my duty nor my privilege to withhold my impressions from the children of God, because I love them and want them to be thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

Your position is tenable by the Holy Scriptures. Baptists have hitherto been opposed to all secret institutions and I am in favor of our still standing aloof from such things. We should not depart from our former steadfastness. Unquestionably the people of this country have been sorely oppressed by class legislation, and scheming politicians have taken advantage of the situation and have decoyed off many good men into a cunningly devised snare and have made a tool of them to carry out their selfish purposes. I am in favor of holding out the olive branch of peace and allowing to such erring captives space to repent and return to the fold from which they have unwillingly strayed, but I am not in favor of allowing any one to add insult to injury and turn a deaf ear to the advice of good and well informed brethren.

I am glad that every citizen in the United States has the right to vote as he thinks best, but no Baptist has any right to engage in revelry so often resorted to by unscrupulous politicians in order to gain votes. I have respect for an honest Republican; I have respect for an honest Third party man who was seeking after the truth, but I do feel that a demagogue who will wilfully mislead the ignorant and make a tool of them, is a nuisance to any country. The strange part to me is that any intelligent man should so far lose sight of the fact that the Democrats have not had a in their power to pass a single national law since the war and should turn to abusing them—their best friends—and unite with their enemies to defeat them. Some men did what they did through ignorance and are more to be pitied than abused, but they certainly ought not to have had the effrontery to undertake to lead any party without being better informed than they were. Even the black people who can read are becoming convinced that heretofore designing politicians have been making merchandise of them through false promises and therefore several of them voted with us in this election.

They agreed that the Democrats, through our State government, had given them their public schools and therefore were their best friends. If I and my family were to consult our personal interest, we would be opposed to the public schools, because we could make a much better classical school if there were no other schools to interfere, but if the public schools are thus tending to conciliate and solve the race problem, it certainly would be very bad policy for us to interfere with our present system of education.

The advocates of the force bill would have been glad to mix the races in our schools, which would, no doubt, have caused blood-shed. It is as much the duty of the black people to try to keep the races distinct and preserve their national identity as it is for the white people to do so. I am persuaded that the amalgamation of the races has been one of the most heinous sins of the South for which God has so long been punishing us.

I am free to admit that some of the black people act as though they thought that a little knowledge of books meant to quit work, go to town, teach school or preach, regardless of their qualifications, but there are likewise men among the white race who act as though they thought it a disgrace to work after becoming educated.

A book worm who is devoid of practical common sense is of but little use to his fellow creatures, let his nationality be what it may. I feel very much elated over the recent election, because for the past three years I have had impressions to pray for the oppressed poor and I think that prayer has been answered. If God has impressed me to pray for a thing and then has granted me that request it is a proof that I am a christian. Of course I will rejoice in anything that makes me feel that I am a christian. We should not begin to exult as though our own arm had given us success.

I feel like saying "Blessed be God who giveth us the victory." If we begin now to waste our time in squabbling over the spoils of victory instead of attending to the needs of the suffering people we will four years hence find ourselves as weak as Samson was after his hair was cut off. I now hopefully look for the industrious poor of this country to have a more prosperous time. There is a class of persons who waste their time in going to pic-nics, sitting around stores, whittling good's boxes, reading news papers and abusing the government for not giving them more money. Such people as those would not have money long, even if there should be one hundred dollars per capita in the country. The truth is they lack energy and enterprise. I feel that it is sinful for us to waste the blessings which God has already bestowed upon us and then spend our time in murmuring because we have nothing. There is such a greed for money in this country, that people seem not to be satisfied with a comfortable living. God gave us an excellent crop of wheat this year and our other crops were medium. Therefore those who have worked have a reasonable supply of food and raiment.

A little more energy and a little less extravagance will place us in a better condition.

A change of government does not mean an exemption from work. God makes it our duty to provide things honest in the sight of all men, it makes no difference who is at the head of the government. Our children should be taught to feel that labor is honorable. Indeed we parents are too delinquent in raising our children. They should be taught to respect age and show a proper regard for our worship.

You remember I urged our brethren at our last Association for them and their children to get close to the stand and thus keep at a distance those persons who came for a frolic. If all of the Baptists and their children who attend our Associations will crowd up near the speaker and keep quiet themselves, they will form as large a congregation as any ordinary speaker can make hear. If we and our children do not show respect for our own preaching, how can we expect other people to do so? Any Baptist who so far loses sight of his moral dignity as to engage in conversation while preaching is going on deserves a more sharp rebuke than any one else. We expect better decorum of Baptists. We usually have a recess long enough for all such persons to see their kin-folks and enquire after the health of their families. This thing of bringing about quietude at our Associations must begin at home. Each Baptist parent must teach his children that if they will not behave at our places of worship they must stay at home and then we will begin to have good order. While other denominations are going on extremes in formality we are becoming too forgetful of the sanctity of worship. We frequently see young men who are not preachers up in the pulpit crowding out the preachers.

Now I have written this article in the kindest of feelings without the slightest disposition to hurt the feelings of any one.

Indeed no one has any right to take any offense, if he is not guilty of the evils which I condemn. In conclusion let me warn the churches against allowing politics to enter into our church discipline. Every one should be allowed to act according to his honest conviction in such things, but I do feel that it would be well for our preachers to cease to accept nominations to political offices. With my present feelings, there is not an office in the gift of the people that I would have. If we are not allowed to neglect our ministry to serve tables, how can we neglect it to serve the public? I know of but few things that will entangle a man worse than politics. It is commonly argued that we need good men to make laws. If we have no good men in our country except our preachers then there are very few good ones, for some of our preachers are not good. May the Lord guide us all in all things and cause us to try to heal all wounds produced by the heated campaign.

Yours in christian love,
JAMES S. DAMERON.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR SIR:—My father requests me to write you of the sad accident which befell him yesterday. He had a fall from which he sustained very painful injuries; his right arm was dislocated, and the end of the large bone, resting in the shoulder socket, was crushed. If you remember, it is the same arm of which the wrist was broken less than a year ago. He also hurt that again, sprained it I suppose, and that is causing him much pain.

He was just beginning to recover from the first fracture, and this happening just now was unusually unfortunate, (it seems to us) for him. He slept but little last night yet seems much better to-day than we had hoped. He seems to bear it very patiently indeed, indeed it is remarkable that he does stand it so well when we consider his age—he is in his eightieth year.

He wished me to write to you about it, knowing that he would have your sympathy in his affliction, and tell you that you were very precious to him, and asks that you will pray for him. He regrets so much not being able to write, as he enjoyed writing whether he ever sent the letters to any one or not, it helped to pass away the time. He often speaks of you and of the love he has for you, and not for you only but for all those whom he believes are taught of the Lord, and contending for the right way.

Mama and I join him in much love to you and Mrs. Gold. They both wish me to say how much we would appreciate a visit from you whenever you can conveniently come.

Hoping that at some time you may have a range it so as to do so, I remain

Very truly yours,

Laura A. Reed.

Remark.

We publish the above sad information that the readers of the Landmark may know the condition of our aged and precious brother. He has frequently written for publication and therefore many know him in that sense that have never seen him.

How painful and weakening it is to have a broken, dislocated or shattered bone! Then too when one is old and infirm his bones heal so slowly. Bones are the strongest parts of the body. When these are fractured or broken then we become exceedingly weak and are full of pain.

I hope brother Reid may be strengthened in spirit by the presence of him whose strength is perfect in our weakness, for not one of his bones could be broken. When we can feel that he is our strength then we rejoice.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—ZION'S LANDMARK is a welcome visitor to me, and more so now if possible than ever before, as I am where I hardly ever see a Baptist, and I cannot get to preaching often. I love to read the sweet pieces from the dear brethren and sisters from afar, and the editorials. They are as though I was sitting under the sound of your voice, hearing you proclaim the goodness and mercy of Him who is the giver of every good and perfect gift. May the Lord spare you many long years yet, and give you grace and health to wield the pen and stand as a mouth piece for him to speak of the unsearchable riches, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints is my prayer.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

J. A. BARNES.

EDITORIAL.

A friend requests my view of John 3: 5.

"Jesus answered, verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

There is no subject of scripture more wrapped up in mystery perhaps than this. Nature often furnishes us analyses that as figures suggest some useful hints on deeper matters. Of ourselves we have no understanding of these mysteries. There must be a performance of those wonders in us before we can know anything of them, and then we see only in part. When Jesus says, as the wind (emblem of the Spirit) bloweth where it listeth, and we know not whence it cometh, or whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

The two questions our friend asks are when this birth takes place, and the water.

Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

This is addressed to one already born of woman, therefore the expression born of water cannot refer to the natural or first birth. The question of Nicodemus, raised by the declaration of Jesus, how can a man enter his mother's womb and be born again, does not call for information on the first or natural birth. Jesus said, except a man be born again. Therefore his declaration born of water and the spirit refers alone to the new birth, or the being born of incorruptible seed. The being born of the flesh, which is the first or natural birth, is no part at all of the fitness for entrance into the kingdom of God. Indeed if one could be born a hundred times of woman he would still be flesh and no nearer the kingdom of heaven.

Naturally one has life before he is born, or has life in his mother's womb. His birth is the manifestation of that life. It is also a passive act, not such an act as one performs when he acts on an object, as when one fells a tree, or beats a horse, but it is the action of the mother in giving birth to him, and he is born or comes into the world. The barren womb could never give birth to a child. For there is growth of the bones in the womb. The mother is in pain to be delivered. To be born of water and of the Spirit is described in Titus by the expression (3: 5.) "By the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

Begotten again, born again, born of water and of the Spirit, describe much more than the mere act of coming to the birth. Born of woman means much more than the mere act of birth. It also includes the begetting, conception, travail, &c.

Water is a symbol of life. And God said, let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, Gen. 1: 20; see Eze. 47: 1-10; John 4: 14; river of water of life: Rev. 22: 1. These scriptures show that water is life-giving—hence everything lives where the water of life flows. There is also a power in water, a washing or purifying principle. Jesus in the washing of regeneration—where our sins are washed away, and there is a regeneration also, or begetting and bringing forth a new generation, bringing out his people from under the law or their confined, darkened state, compared to the womb, into a broad place or goodly land of liberty. The law genders to bondage. But when Jesus is brought up from the dead we are begotten again, or quickened with him. Here is a nation that is born in a day. This means the generation of Jesus Christ.

In the natural washing of soiled clothes the dirt is removed, but the garments remain of the same texture or quality that they were of before they were washed. But in the washing of regeneration there is a removal of sins, a washing away of guilt, and a regeneration—a new creation. If any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things are passed away and behold all things are become new. Hence a new principle, life or power is manifested in this man. We say he is the same son of Adam and in that sense flesh remains flesh. He is still a sinner. Nature is not gone or changed into grace, but there is a revelation of a new man or new life—a life of faith, the life of Christ.

Further also there is the renewing of the Holy Ghost. It requires all this to constitute born of water and of the Spirit. When one is quickened by being shown that he is a sinner, as Saul was when he fell to the ground and cried out who art thou Lord, then the Holy Ghost revealed Jesus unto him, and the eyes of his understanding were enlightened, and he was renewed in the spirit of his mind, and purged in his conscience to serve the true and living God. At once his conduct is changed because of this renewing by the Holy Ghost. So Christ died but once, and rose again, but for all his people at that one and the same time, and they are all quickened in him, and he is their resurrection and life, but in the proper time each vessel of mercy, which was some-time darkness, is, when he has a travail, conviction of sin, and great sorrow out of which he is delivered, and is thus light in the Lord, and has that renewing of the Holy Ghost which gives him a sound mind, blest with that entrance into the kingdom of heaven which manifests that he is an inhabitant of Mount Zion. P. D. G.

"And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter forever. And the disciples heard it."

My view has been requested of the above Scripture. Jesus was hungry as he came towards Jerusalem. Remember that Jesus, as of the seed of David after the flesh or as a man, had the necessities and infirmities of a man. He was weary, hungry, thirsty, fainting, a sufferer, full of sorrow and affliction. We are apt to suppose that one having the wisdom, power, holiness and truth of Jesus, who is the way, the truth and the life, did not feel the burdens and sorrows of life. But in all our affliction he was afflicted.

The fig tree is peculiar. Its fruit appears before the leaves put forth. Nor does it blossom or promise to bear fruit first, and after this bear fruit. But the young fruit appears first of all.

It is the nature of most fruit-bearing trees to put forth first their leaves, then blossoms or signs of fruit, and lastly their fruit. But the fig tree is diverse from all these. When therefore we see leaves on a fig tree we have evidence that fruit should be thereon, or it is a declaration that there is fruit. But here was a fig tree with leaves when the time of figs was not. In other words here was a fig tree making a promise of fruit when it had none. Do we think more of people who make great professions of goodness when it is a mere show or pretense? We think less of them. One that offers no claim to sanctity, or makes no show of honesty, is perhaps not so contemptible as one that loudly proclaims his good deeds merely with a view of deceiving. We have no apology to offer in condemning hypocrisy. In unmeasured terms we deprecate that.

But could the fig tree help this? Why did Christ curse it then? If one is so corrupt that his desire to deceive overrides all modesty, and he cannot help but profess honesty when he has none whatever, shall we not excuse him? Did Jesus excuse this fruitless but leaf-bearing fig tree?

But it was far off. Why did he go to it seeking fruit? Was he disappointed? Why take that walk? Or did he expect to find fruit thereon when he was going to it, but finding none was he disappointed? The scriptures tell us to judge nothing before the time. How does the Lord do? Does he judge men beforehand? Shall not the judge of all the earth do right? We see in the divine procedure with man God waits until the character of men is manifested in and by their works. He does not drive Adam out of the garden of Eden until after man had sinned. He does not send a flood on the earth until the earth is filled with violence, nor until he has looked upon the earth, and seen that it was corrupt. Gen. 6:12.

Nor did God confound men's tongues and scatter them while building the tower of babel until he had first come down to see men's doings: Gen. 11:5. Sodom was not destroyed by the Lord God until he had first gone down to see whether its wickedness was as great as its cry: Gen. 18:21. It was not until the wickedness of the Amorite or Canaanites was full that God destroyed them, even to deliver the land unto his chosen people: Gen. 15:16. Men receive according to their works whether good or evil. Nothing is perhaps more plainly taught in the bible than that God is a righteous judge, and never condemns the innocent, nor does he spare the guilty; but he waits until the guilty manifest their character before he judges them. So Jesus did not curse the barren fig tree until he found no fruit thereon.

What does that shadow forth or represent? For natural things are types of the greater things. It represents the Jews as a nation. They had been planted by the Lord in a goodly land, and had been nurtured or watered by the Lord God of his holy prophets. But this Jewish nation bore no fruit or bad fruit, naughty figs. Jesus sent his prophets rising early and sitting up late seeking fruit, but finding none. Last of all God sent his only Son, and he found no fruit thereon. Him they slew of envy, for they hated him without a cause.

How strangely wicked man is. No one ever treated Jesus as wickedly as did the Jews, his own people.

They were though making a great, promising show of fruitfulness. How full of leaves they were, keeping up the outward form of worship in the temple. But where was their understanding of the scripture. Where was their love of truth, their pity towards the poor, their love of justice? See how they had stoned the prophets, filled the temple with money changers, devoured widows' houses, and for a pretense made long prayers. They were full of darkness and wickedness, and bore no good fruit though they made loud professions of serving God.

When Jesus cursed this barren fig tree that so soon withered it typified the judgment that soon should fall on that cursed people that should henceforth bear no fruit forever.

Jesus came hungry, poor and needy to the Jews his own people. They gave him no meat. He was sick, but they ministered not to him. He was in prison, but they visited him not. He was poor; they pitied him not. They hated him without a cause. They killed him. They said his blood be on us and our children. Now they are cursed. They shall bear no fruit as a nation forever.

The fig leaf apron never covers Adam. He is as the fig tree promising fruit. But the time of figs is not yet. Jesus is the Green Tree in whom our fruit is found. He is the tree of life bearing twelve manner of fruit or always bearing fruit and in him there is no curse. He that in his heart believes in Jesus shall bear fruit in Jesus unto holiness and the end shall be everlasting life.

P. D. G.

Brother W. M. Harrison requests my view of 2nd Thess. 2: 7.

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way."

Read the entire chapter.

The apostles preached much of the coming of Christ and the gathering together of the saints in him.

This is not a coming however as a temporal or earthly King, nor to reign as Jesus on this earth, as men of carnal notions suppose. Carnal reasoning never has understood him. It did not any more comprehend his kingdom when he was on earth than it does now. He will never again appear on earth as a man in the flesh as he once did.

There was an expectation in the minds of the disciples in Paul's day that Jesus would speedily come again. The apostle writes his brethren and cautions them not to be troubled as though he had written or spoken such a thing. He had not, 2nd Thess. 2: 2. Further he assures them that this day of the Lord should not come until there is first a falling away of disciples.

There should be a departure from the faith of some, a defection, or falling away first, and this should make room for the coming forth or revelation of the man of sin who is the son or offspring and production of perdition, (3rd verse). And ye know what withholds, lets, or holds this mystery at present. Paul tells them they knew what withheld the full coming or revelation of the man of sin. There is a revelation of wickedness as well as of righteousness—a revealing of false religion, or the man of sin, [as well as a revelation of righteousness and of Jesus Christ. What is meant in part at least by a revelation is bringing to view what was before hidden. For instance when Saul of Tarsus was persecuting Jesus he did not know him, but when Jesus appeared to him or was revealed then he knew him in his true character, as he never before had known him. It also means that when one is revealed he is known in his true character. Now the man of sin was hidden or unrevealed until a certain time. In the experience of a child of God sin is unknown or unrevealed in him as a body of death, until the light of God shines in him.

In the case referred to in Thess. Paul tells the brethren they knew what withheld or kept back the man of sin, and that he which thus let or held back this revelation would let until he was removed, and then the man of sin would be revealed, and that this man of sin that exalts himself above all that is called God, and sits in the seat of God, or this mystery of iniquity, must be revealed before the coming of Jesus, and that the coming of Jesus would destroy the man of sin.

Now who is he that withholds the revelation of the man of sins, or in what are the principles of the man of sin locked up and held so that it must be removed to open the way for the revelation of the man of sin.

The greatest national power holding the strongest embodiment of corrupt worldly force was the Roman government, and it was the greatest engine of persecution of God's people. It is the abomination of desolation standing in the holy place or Jerusalem and destroying it. It conquered the world. It placed its governor over Judea, condemned Jesus. It represents the princes of this world. One of its great emperors assumed the title of defender of the faith, and passed an edict or law that no man should hold office who was not a christian. Here begins the falling away from the truth. It is not in the power of carnal wisdom or of man to unite the kingdom of heaven and the kingdoms of this world. They are diverse. When men attempt this there is always a falling away from the truth.

There must be a removal of the headship of political power, and the full assumption of the pope of Rome as head of the church so-called in order for the full revelation of the man of sin. In the form of religion, but in the substance of every principle of wickedness is revealed this mystery of iniquity.

In the name or assumption of the religion of Jesus, lamb-like in appearance, but with the principles of the oppressive bear, the voracious leopard, and the kingly lion does this monstrous beast devour, and, exalting himself to unheard of renown and fame, he is admired and worshipped all over the world, save by those whose names were written in the lamb's book of life before the world began.

Is this a great deceiver? It is the masterpiece of the devil's deception. All worship and follow it except those reserved and kept back from it by electing love. Strong delusion is sent to those that believe a lie that they might be damned, because they received not the love of the truth. But God from the beginning chose his beloved ones to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth.

The principles of this kingdom are corrupt or worldly. The love of money is at the foundation or bottom of it. Thirst for worldly power marks its career. Every foul and unclean principle of nature is found in it. Every vile principle of the world finds shelter in it.

What destroys it? Nothing but the brightness of the coming of the Lord Jesus. In me it has its stronghold until Jesus appears, and his coming casts it down to earth, and he is exalted and reigns. So the kingdom of God comes down out of heaven. John saw the new Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. Jesus bows the heavens and comes down to earth. The old or former heavens are passed away. The legal heaven or law is fulfilled and magnified in Jesus, and is renewed, and the new heaven or gospel heaven comes down to dwell in earth or the kingdom of God is with men. For when Jesus dwells in man the kingdom of God is with men. That casts down satan and binds him.

Jesus shall come in the glorious shining and revelation of truth that shall cast down this kingdom of pride, and the word of his mouth shall slay the wicked. What a glorious coming not with worldly wisdom or power, but as the shining of the sun drives away the darkness, so the glorious brightness of Jesus at his coming shall slay the wicked. As darkness flees apace from the light, so falsehood cannot stand before Jesus. We should hold fast what we have heard. Stand fast and hold the traditions which you have been taught whether by word or letter: 2nd Thess. 2: 15. Traditions may be true or false, good or bad, according to their quality and spirit. Here Paul uses the word in a good sense. We do well to abide in all the teaching of Jesus. For his word shall slay the wicked.

P. D. G.

CORNELIUS—PETER.

Acts 10th chapter.

The record in holy writ of Peter going to Cornelius is a memorable and marvelous example of God's mercy on the Gentiles. It shows an open door to them. The gate had been shut against them under the legal dispensation. The broadness and liberty of the gospel did not appear under the covenant of works. To the Jews almost exclusively under the law were the divine communications directed. Yet there were many prophetic declarations of coming mercy to the Gentiles.

Peter's views are an illustration of the nature of selfish man. With the Jews in general he shared the notion of exclusive blessings for their race, and regarded the Gentiles as excluded from the garden of the Lord. Though the prophets had foretold of the reign of the Messiah as reaching from the river to the ends of the earth, or as being a kingdom above all others in extension as well as character, and, though Jesus himself had said to the apostles, All power in heaven and earth is given into my hand, Go ye therefore into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, yet when God specially calls Peter to go and preach to Cornelius, a Gentile, and Peter gathers most assuredly that God has prepared Cornelius to hear the gospel, and has sent him to preach to him, and even seeing the unmistakable proof of this, he said no doubt with astonishment, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."

When he preached the gospel to Cornelius and his household the Holy Ghost fell on them as on the apostles at the beginning, or on the day of Pentecost: Acts 11: 15.

Now God here clearly shows to Peter that the middle wall of partition is broken down between Jew and Gentile, and also he effectually erased it from the heart of Peter showing to him there is no difference between Jew and Gentile. We are to call no man common or unclean. That is we are to know no man after the flesh. It matters not of what race, nation or color, language or tongue one is by nature, if he fears God and works righteousness he is accepted with God.

This is the law or rule now.

What God does is forever. We are to preach the gospel in that sense to every creature. Wherever a door of utterance is open, that is wherever there is one that fears God and works righteousness there is a subject of grace manifested. God does not respect the person of any. But he has a respect to the work of his hand. When he begins a good work he is sure to perform it to the day of Jesus Christ. So that every one that brings forth fruit meet for repentance, or every one that hungers and thirsts after righteousness shall be filled. There is not a soul that humbly and sincerely desires the forgiveness of sins but shall receive it. As Peter confidently preached the gospel to Cornelius, so may it be done now to all that are praying to God and giving alms or showing mercy to the people.

One common objection to Primitive Baptists is that they preach or hold a doctrine that discourages sinners from seeking mercy, that holds out no encouragement to the needy to seek for mercy. There is no truth in this. But the language is, Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters and drink. Let him that hath no money come and buy wine and milk without price.

Is it not much better to seek with the certainty of finding or obtaining than it is to seek where there is no certainty of finding? Like all God's works there is no chance matter, but certainty, in his operations of grace. For in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him.

P. D. G.

END OF YEAR.

We are rapidly moved to the end of another year—a year remarkable as furnishing the occasion for much virulence of passion that is hurtful and of prejudice that breaks up peace, furnishing sad proof of the inhumanity of man to his fellow man.

Those who proclaim that the millennium, the reign of universal peace and brotherly love is dawning must postpone indefinitely that epoch. Their figures are sadly out of gear. The nations that learn war no more are hid from the world, and do not act on the arena of mortal strife that still claims the attention of the world. The mystery of iniquity already is at work, and must run its course. God is slow to anger and of great mercy and wonderful in long-suffering. This we count salvation.

There has been much suffering in this South-land this year, and much discontent. Many are very poor and kindness should be shown them by the rich or those able to help them.

The root of all evil is still actively shooting forth its sprouts of poisonous, fatal growth with which as scorpions of the wilderness to chastise mankind, and to pierce through with many sorrows those that will be rich. Alas how few seek the true riches—how few are rich in faith—rich towards God.

Having obtained mercy of the Lord I continue to this present time. His mercies to me are wonderful. I am vile and not worthy of the least of all his mercies. Surely I should know that because he is good and merciful therefore I still remain, for in him we live, and move, and have our being.

HEAVY LOSS.

Elder B. C. Pitt's dwelling house, the old mansion in which his father Elder B. P. Pitt lived so long, was consumed by fire on Dec. 6th. Brother Cooper Pitt, as we call him, is a good preacher and an excellent man. Now is a needy time with him. Ordinarily when one loses by fire let the neighbors make up and help him, but this is an uncommon case calling for more help, and I desire that we help him freely.

Send what is in your heart to give to Elder B. C. Pitt, Old Sparta, Edgecombe County, N. C.

This is a time of great poverty and much suffering among many.

Our people generally are poor. But it is the poor who remember each other and have greater compassion for others, because they suffer more themselves. In our poverty let our liberality abound, and out of our weakness let strength spring up.

CONSIDER.

We have put down the price of the LANDMARK very low considering the amount of labor and expense in getting up such a paper.

Can our brethren and friends increase its circulation? There are quite a number of poor members unable to pay for it that desire to read it. If any of our urethren or friends, who are able to do so, wish to send me money in order that I may supply all these that are unable to pay for the LANDMARK I will send it to them in this way. If a fund is given in this way it shall be used to supply the destitute with the paper.

P. D. G.

CHURCH IN CONFERENCE.

On motion it was agreed to invite the churches of the Little River Association to send Messengers here (Smithfield) on Saturday before the next 5th Sunday to consider the propriety of organizing a Union. Done by order of conference Saturday before the 1st Sunday in Dec. 1892.

J. A. T. JONES, Mod.
S. H. PITTMAN, Clerk.
Smithfield, N. C.

REMEMBER.

It is a fact that I am in need of money due from many subscribers to the LANDMARK. If those that are behind cannot pay all send me a part. That will help me. All those that can please send on their dues and help me much.

P. D. G.

UNION MEETINGS.

Skewarky Union is to meet at Bare Grass, Friday, Saturday and 5th Sunday in Jan. '93.

Contentnea Union is to meet at Nahunta Saturday and 5th Sunday in Jan.

Black Creek Union to be held at Upper Black Creek Saturday and 5th Sunday in Jan.

Toisnot Union is to be held with the church at Elm City on Saturday and 5th Sunday in Jan.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

Elder J. T. Bazemore's post office is changed from West Point, Ga. to Chipleay, Ga.

Men love to be flattered. But the truth never flatters. If one loves the truth he loves the author of truth and therefore loves God. The truth makes its lover free.

OBITUARY.

LEAH MILDRED.

Infant daughter of Julius W. and Mary M. Dupree, was born in Pitt co., Sept 19th, 1892, died in Edgecomb county July 20th, 1892 of Cholera Infantum and was buried at the residence of her maternal grandfather, James D. Jenkins. Funeral services were conducted by Mr. E. C. Glenn in the presence of her relatives and friends. The precious little flower bloomed brightly and sweetly only a short time, then it withered and died. She was sick one week, her sufferings were severe but she endured them without reluctance, was attended by one of Tarboro's best physicians Dr. T. P. Wynn, and had all the attention that her loving parent and devoted maternal grandmother could bestow. But the Lord giveth and taketh away. She was the sweetest little child I ever saw. I often told her parents that she was too good and intelligent to remain long on earth. Oh with what reluctance and regret we gave up such a sweet darling babe. Since she has been gone from us there seems to be no brightness about our deserted home, all seems lonely and sad, but we have a consolation of knowing that she is gone where sickness, sorrow, pain and fear are felt no more. "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Dearest darling thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel
But 'tis God who has bereft us,
He will our sorrows heal,

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled:
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

May the Lord comfort and strengthen us to endure to the end, then relieve us into his peaceful presence in climes of unsullied bliss.

Her devoted aunt,
LEAH A. JENKINS.

MRS. NINNA HURD.

Mrs. Ninna Hurd died at the home of her husband on Reed Creek, March 2nd 1892, aged 22 years, 4 months and 15 days. The deceased was the daughter of Elder Z. T. and Nannie Turner, and has been in feeble health for nearly twenty months, had several times to all appearance been near the door of death, but would again revive and mend up and even at almost the last moments we were living in hope that she might yet live. In almost the twinkling of an eye, sad indeed to say, the king of terrors snatched her from time to eternity. While she was sorely afflicted in other respects, her attending physician pronounced heart failure that caused the very sudden death. She leaves two small children, a kind husband, a dear father and truly a kind step-mother, 3 loving sisters, two fond brothers and many dear relatives and friends, aunts and uncles and two dear old grandmothers to weep and grieve over our departed jewel, but we feel thankful to say that we do not sigh without hope, and while it gives us pain and the ties that bound us so tenderly together are hard to sever; yet we believe that our loss is her eternal gain. Her manners and ways were more like a woman than a little girl. She seemed to be thoughtful of duty to her parents when quite young, delighting to help her mother to wait on the family, though it was her misfortune to lose a kind mother when very young, yet it did not cause her to neglect her duty in waiting on her father and her sisters and brothers. She was ever mindful of their comfort, and as she grew up to womanhood her engaging manner and pleasant deportment seemed to endear her to all with whom she became acquainted. Nothing seemed to afford her more pleasure than to render those about her pleasant and agreeable. She always had a kind word for everyone, would often admonish her younger sisters to what she conceived to be their duty, and also her brothers; but all this did not prepare her for heaven and immortal glory. Near five years ago she told me when the news reached her that her dear old grandpa Turner would not live through the night, that she walked out to her flower-stand and turned and looked at the sun as it was sinking behind the western horizon, and thought if that sun never rose upon her dear old grandpa, that he would go to rest, but what would be her case if she were called to die? From that time she felt that the good Lord enabled her to see herself a poor lost, ruined, and helpless sinner without his sovereign mercy, and in this distressed condition she remained until August, 1890, but never let any one know it as she thought, but we that were acquainted with her could see plainly that she was in deep trouble. I suppose I can say more than most of grandmas can say, that my dear granddaughter, the subject of this notice, was twice born in my house, at her natural birth her dear father and mother were living in my house, and as before remarked, on the fourth Sunday in August very early I walked in her room, asked her if she wanted anything, she said no, go back grandma and rest. I went and lay down, it was not long before she called me and told me she had such good news to tell me that she could not wait any longer, said she felt that she was well in both soul and body, that she had found Jesus precious to her in the pardon of sin. She seemed to be so happy and her countenance seemed to glow with expression of love. She wanted to see some of the church members and talk with them about the goodness and mercy of God. She had been for several months very feeble, not willing to stay anytime by herself. I asked her when we were going out to breakfast whom she wished to stay with her, she said nobody. We had not left the house but a short time when we heard her sweet voice commence singing "Tis religion that can give sweetest pleasure while we live, 'Tis religion must supply solid comfort when we die." As soon as her health would admit of it, she joined the church at old Reed Creek, was baptised by her father last June, had the pleasure of communing with the church and joining in with them in washing the saints' feet, which she so much believed in, but the lovely one is gone. O how much we miss her. Her bereaved husband and her afflicted father have our sincere sympathy, and could tears of sympathy or hearts overflowing with grief have turned aside the shaft of death, her dear husband would not have to weep over a loving companion who always sought his comforts and pleasures, regardless of her own. Her sweet little boy would not have lost a kind and affectionate mother, her parents would not have to give up a dutiful daughter whose peculiar pleasure it was to gratify and wait on them and whose almost broken hearted sisters and brothers, would not have to grieve over a precious sister whose advice and counsel they were at all times willing to give heed to, and I and old grandma, the writer of this tribute, whose head is frosted by the winters of nearly seventy-four years, would not be called on to say our dear Ninnia is gone, never no never to return; but vain is the help of man, and I trust I can say as did Job, the Lord gives and the Lord takes away, blessed be the name of the Lord; and may we all be resigned to all of his dispensations for all of his works is done in righteousness. E. C. TURNER.

VINEY M. RUSH.

Viney M. Rush, daughter of David and Nancy Rush was born October 21st, 1822, died August 26th 1892, aged 69 years, 10 months and 2 days, professed faith in Christ January 1st, 1889, joined the Primitive Baptist church and was baptised by Elder George Edens, lived a consistent member and exemplary christian till the Lord called her home. She bore her sickness with great patience, saying she was ready to go; left father and mother and 8 brothers and sisters to mourn her loss. Their loss is her eternal gain. May we all be prepared by the grace of God to meet sister Rush in the Kingdom of God is my prayer. I was well acquainted with the deceased from childhood. She was a good, obedient child. I never heard anything against her. She left an untarnished character.

CATHERINE BERRY.

LAVINIA WYATT.

Sister Lavinia Wyatt was born January 4th, 1810, and departed this life July 7th, 1892, making her stay on earth 82 years, six months and 3 days. She joined the Primitive Baptist church at Deep Creek, now McRays, about the year 1827, and the writer's information is that she was baptised by Elder Landres, and was a faithful member for about 65 years. The writer has been informed that she would often say that she did not want to fall at any time to attend her meetings, and if she did she had rather miss Sunday than Saturday. The writer has been acquainted with her for the last four years of her life, and often visited her at Mrs S. C. Wyatts, and always found her one whose theme was Christ, and often would say how good Christ Jesus had been to her, and how merciful he had been to her a sinner. She was always glad to see the brethren, and faithful to fill her seat up to within a few days of her death. If memory serves me she was at her church in June, and at that meeting the church set the July meeting to commence and wash feet, and she seemed to be overjoyed at the thought the brethren were going to wash feet, but said she would not live to be there, and when the writer and also the pastor returned in July she was gone. She was taken sick soon after the June meeting, and after suffering for about three weeks she fell asleep in Jesus. She bore her suffering with much patience, and often would say how much longer before I can go. Her seat at home is vacant, but she is not forgotten, and we are not left to mourn as those that have no hope; but hope to meet here where there will be no more sorrow and pain. She leaves one brother and one daughter, with a number of kindred and friends behind to whom she has often said in her christian walk and faithfulness that there is no Saviour outside of Jesus. She loved to talk to the brethren, and not about them. May her acts of kindness and good examples make lasting impressions upon those left behind her. May her daughter be prepared to meet her mother in heaven is the prayer of the unworthy writer.

The precious one from earth is gone,
A voice we loved is still;
Her seat is vacant in our home,
Which can never be filled.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

SHALL COME.

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out: For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day."—John 6:37, 38, 39.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LES-TER:—I have had it on my mind for some time to write some thoughts on the above important passages of Scripture, and now make the attempt, which if you think worthy of publication you can publish in ZION'S LANDMARK and if not consign it to the waste basket. I find in the preceding part of this chapter that Jesus our Lord and Saviour was walking on the sea on his way to Capernaum having sent his disciples before in a ship, but the wind was contrary, by which means the ship was hindered in her passage. Now about the fourth watch of the night Jesus came walking on the sea and overtook them, at the sight of whom they were afraid. When providences are black and terrible to God's people the Lord Jesus shows himself to them in a wonderful manner, which sometimes they can as little bear as they can the things that were terrible to them. They were afraid of the wind and water. They were also afraid of their Lord and Saviour when he appeared to them in that state. But by way of consolation he said unto them, be not afraid, it is I. Then they received him into the ship and immediately the ship was at the land whither it went. When Christ is absent from his people they go on but slowly and with great difficulty, but when he joins himself unto them, oh how fast they steer their course, how soon are they at their journey's end. The people among whom he had last preached, when they saw that both Jesus and his disciples were gone, also took shipping, and came to Capernaum seeking for Jesus: and when they had found him they wondering, asked him, saying, Rabbi, when camest thou hither? But the Lord Jesus slighting their compliment answered, Verily, ye seek me not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled. So it is I fear in this day and age of the world that many who are the professed followers of Christ are following after the loaves and hence so many of our professional ministers are hiring themselves out for large annual salaries without which they refuse their services, seeking after the loaves. To all such the Saviour says, Ye seek me not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled. But he did not refuse to give even those good advice, he bid them labor for the meat that endureth to eternal life. But to the text, Jesus is in the text speaking of and about his people to wit, the remnant that his Father had bestowed upon him, and he says they shall come to me, yea in truth and in them will I be satisfied in the fulfilling thereof; he rests himself content after much labor and many sermons spent as it were in vain. As he says by the prophet, "I have laboured in vain and have spent my strength for naught, and in vain. Isaiah 49:4. But as there he saith "My judgment is with the Lord and my work with my God." So in the text he saith, "All that the Father giveth me shall come unto me and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." By these words therefore the Lord Jesus comforted himself under the consideration of the dissimulation of some of his followers. He also thus betook himself to rest under the consideration of the little effect that his ministry had in Capernaum, Chorazin and Bethsaida, and says, "I thank thee O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them to babes; even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." Matt. 11:25 and Luke 10:21.

This text in general consists of two parts and specially refers to the Father and Son, and also their joint management of the salvation of the people. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." The first part of the text, as is evident, respected the Father and his gift. The other part the Son and his reception of that gift. First, For the gift of the Father there is to be considered the gift itself, and that is the gift of certain persons to the Son. The Father giveth and that gift shall come, and him that cometh." The gift then is persons. The Father giveth persons to Jesus Christ. Next, you have the Son's reception of this gift, and that shows itself in these particulars, First, in his hearty acknowledgement of it to be a gift. The "Father giveth me." Second, in his taking notice after a solemn manner of all and every part of the gift, "All that the Father giveth me. Third, in his resolution to bring them to himself, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me." Fourth, and in his determining that not anything shall make him dislike them at their coming, "And him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." These things might be spoken to at large as they are in this method presented to view. But I shall speak the words. First, by way of explication, second, by way of observation, First by way of explication. "All that the Father giveth me." This word all is often used in scripture, and is to be taken more largely, or more strictly, even as the truth or argument for the sake of which it is made use of will bear. Wherefore that we may better understand the mind of Christ in the use of it here we must consider that it is limited and restrained only to those that shall be saved, to wit, to those that shall come to Christ, even to those whom he will "in no wise cast out," thus also the words, all Israel is sometimes to be taken, though sometimes it is taken for the whole family of Jacob, and so "all Israel shall be saved." Romans 11. By all Israel here he intended not all Israel in the largest sense, that is not every person of the Israelites; for it is said, "they are not all Israel which are of Israel." "Neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children; but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." That is, they who are the children of the flesh these are not the children of God, but the children of the promise are counted for the seed:" Rom. 9:6, 7, and 8. This word all therefore must be limited and enlarged as the truth and argument for the sake of which it is used will bear, else we shall abuse scriptures, and readers and ourselves and all. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, said Christ, will draw all men unto me:" John 12:32. Can any one imagine that by all in this place he meant all and every individual man in the world, and not rather that all that is consonant to the scope of the place, and if by being "lifted up from the earth" he meant as he should seem, his being taken up into heaven, and if by drawing all men after him he meant a drawing them into the place of glory, then must he mean by all men those, and only those, that shall in truth be eternally saved from the wrath to come. And again, "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy upon all, but yet a greater disparity between the all made mention of in the first place and that all made mention of in the second. Those intended in this last and the Jews, even all of them, by the first all that we find in the words. The second all does also intend the same people, but yet only so many of them as God will mercy upon. "He hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy upon all." The all also in this text is likewise to be limited to those who are to be saved and them only. But again, the word giveth or hath given must be restrained after the same manner to the same limited number, "all that the Father giveth me," not all that are given, if we take the gift of the Father to the Son in the largest sense, for in that sense there are many given to him that shall never come unto him; for we learn that many were given unto him, or that will be given unto him that will be cast out. I will first show the truth of this, and then in what sense the gift in the text must be taken. First, that all that are given to Christ, if we take the gift of the Father to him in the largest sense, cannot be intended in the text as evident. First, because then all the men, all the things in the world, must be saved. All things said the Saviour are delivered unto me by the Father: Matt. 11:27. This I think no rational man in the world will conclude. Therefore the gift intended in the text must be restrained to some, to a gift that is given by way of specialty by the Father to the Son. Second, it must not be taken for all that in any sense are given by the Son, because the Father hath given some, yes many, to him to be dashed in pieces by him: "Ask of me, said the Father to the Son, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the utmost parts of the earth for thy possession." But what must be done with them, must he save them all? I answer no, "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel: Psalms 2nd. This method he uses not with them that are saved by his grace, but those that himself and saints shall rule over in justice and sincerity: Rev. 2:25, 27: yet they are given to him, therefore the gift in the text must be restrained to some, to a gift that is given by way of specialty by the Father to the Son. In Psalm 11th he says plainly that some are given to him that he might destroy them, "Thou hast given me the necks of mine enemies that I might destroy them that hate me." Psalms 18:40. Those therefore cannot be of the number of those that are said to be given in the text, for those, even all of them, shall come to him, and he will in no wise cast them out.

Third, some are given to Christ that he by them might bring about some of his high and deep designs in the world. Thus Judas was given to Christ that by him, even as it was determined before, he might bring about his death and so the salvation of his elect by his blood. Yes, and Judas must so manage the business that he must lose himself forever in bringing it to pass. Therefore the Lord Jesus, even his losing of Judas applies himself to to the judgment of his Father if he had not in that thing done that which was right, even in suffering Judas so as to bring about his Master's death, as that he might by so doing bring about his own eternal ruin. Those, said the Saviour, that thou gavest me have I kept, and none of them is lost but the son of perdition, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled." John 19: 12. Let us then grant that Judas was given to Christ, but not as those made mention of in the text, for then he should not have failed to have been so received by Christ and kept to eternal life. Indeed he was given to Christ to lose him in the way that I have mentioned before. He was given to Christ that he by him might bring about his own death as was before determined, and that in the overthrow of him that did it, yes he must bring about his death for us in the loss of the person that betrayed him, that he might even fulfill the scripture in his destruction as well as the salvation of the rest, and none of them is lost except the son of perdition, that the scriptures might be fulfilled. The gift therefore in the text must not be taken in the largest sense, but even as the words will bear, to wit, for such a gift as he accepts and promises to be effectual means of salvation. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Mark, they shall come that are specially given unto me, and they shall by no means be rejected, for this is the subject of the text. Those therefore intended as the gift in the text are those that are given by covenant to the son, those that in other places of scripture are called the elect, the chosen, the sheep and the children of the promise. The Saviour says my sheep hear my voice, and I know them and they follow me and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand. My Father which gave them me is greater than all and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." John 10: 27-29. These are they that the Father hath given to Christ to keep them, those that Christ has promised eternal life unto, those to whom he has given his word, and that he will have with him in his kingdom to behold his glory. This is the will of the Father that has sent me, that of all he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day, and I give unto them eternal life. All that the Father giveth. By this word Father Christ describes the person giving, by which all may learn several useful things. First, that the Lord God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is concerned with the Son in the salvation of his people. True his acts to our salvation are diverse from that of the Son. He was not capable of doing that or those things for us as did the Son. He died not, he spilt not his blood for the redemption as the son, but yet had a hand, a great hand, in our salvation too. As Christ said, the Father himself loveth us, and his love is manifest in choosing us, in giving his son also to be a ransom for us: hence he is called the Father of Mercies, and the God of all comfort. For even the Father has himself made way for his grace to come to us through the side and heart blood of his well beloved Son. Col. 1:12. Therefore we ought to give thanks to the Father who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light. "All that the Father giveth me shall come." In these last words there is closely inserted an answer unto the Father's purpose in giving of his elect to Jesus Christ. The Father's purpose was that they should come to him and be saved by him, and that says the Son shall be done. Neither satan, nor flesh, nor world, neither wisdom, nor folly shall hinder their coming to me. "They shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Here the Lord Jesus positively determined to put forth a sufficiency for all grace as shall effectually perform his promise, "They shall come." That is he shall cause them to come by infusing of an effectual blessing into all the means that shall be used to that end. I say he will bless it effectually to the very end. It shall persuade them, and shall prevail also. I have already said the Father's purpose would be frustrated, for his will is that of all that he hath given the Son he should lose nothing, but should resurrect it at the last day. In order next unto himself Christ the first fruits, afterwards those that are his at his coming. 1st Cor. 15 &c. But this could not be done if there should fail to be a work of grace effectually wrought. But to speak more distinctly to the words, "they shall come," two things I will show from these words. First, what it is to come to Christ? Second, what force there is in the promise to make them come to him. First, I will show what it is to come to Christ. This word come must be understood spiritually, not carnally, for many come to him carnally, or bodily, that have no saving advantage by him. Multitudes did thus come unto him in the days of his flesh, yes innumerable companies. There is also at this day a formal, customary coming to his ordinances and way of worship which availeth nothing. But with them I shall not now meddle, for they are not intended in the text. The coming then intended in the text is to be understood of the coming of the mind to him. I say the moving of the heart towards him from a sound sense of the absolute want that a man has of him for his justification and salvation. The description of coming to Christ divides itself into two heads, first that coming to Christ is moving the mind towards him, second, it is a moving the heart towards him from a sound sense of the absolute want that a man has of him for his justification and salvation. To speak of the first that it is a moving of the heart towards him. This is evident because coming hither or thither, if it be voluntary, is by an act of the mind or will, so coming to Christ is through the inclining of the will, hence the Psalmist says, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." Psalm 110:3. God is Love and he manifests his love to his people as he did to Jacob of old. He says to him, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee." He found Jacob in a waste, howling wilderness, and in a desert land. He led him about and instructed him. He kept him as the apple of his eye, and his banner over him was love. This is the way God deals with his people. He manifests his love to them and thus they are drawn to him, and are enabled thereby to repent of their sins and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. The Apostle Paul, in his letter to the Ephesians when speaking on the subject of the love of God says, "But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ: by grace are ye saved." Eph. 2:4, 5. Therefore thus it is said concerning the true comers, "At that day the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts of the land of Egypt: and shall worship the Lord in his holy mountain at Jerusalem." Isa. iah 27:13. They are the outcasts, and those that are ready to perish that indeed have their minds effectually moved to come to Christ. This sense of things was that which made the three thousand come, that made Saul come, that made the jailor come, that indeed makes all others come that come effectually: Acts 11:2-16. And again of the true comers to Christ the three lepers were a famous semblance of whom we read in 2nd Kings 7:3-6. The famine in those days was sore in the land, there was no bread for the people, and of these the lepers had no share, this is of the kind of provisions that was in Samaria, for they were thrust out of the city, and in a starving condition, and being therefore half dead already what did they think of doing? They display the dismal colors of death before each others faces, and then resolve what to do saying, "If we say we will go into the city then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there. If we sit still here we die also. Now therefore let us fall into the host of Syrians: if they save us alive we shall live; if they kill us we shall but die." Here now was necessity at work, and this drove them to go thither for life, whither else they would never have gone. Thus it is with those that in truth come to Christ. Death is before them. They see it and feel it, and therefore they come to Christ of necessity, saying, Lord, I give myself away, it is all that I can do, being forced thereto by that sense they have of their being utterly and everlastingly undone, if they find not safety in him. These are they that will come, these are they that are invited to come. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," says the Saviour: Math. 11:28. It only takes two or three things to make this more plain, to wit, that coming to Christ flows from a sound sense of the absolute need we have of him, and hence in Jeremiah we have this language, "They shall come with weeping and with supplication will I lead them. I will cause them to walk by rivers of waters in a plain way wherein they shall not stumble: Jeremiah 31:9. Thus it is with all those that have been brought from nature to grace, they come from an absolute need of Christ having the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Spirit, and they cry out and say, Lor save me, I perish. Men and brethren, what shall we do? Sirs, what shall I do to be saved? The language sufficiently shows that the truly coming souls are sensible of their need of salvation by Christ, and moreover that there is nothing else that can help them but Christ. His blood cleanses from all sin. I am now in my eighty-first year, and, thanks to the alwise giver of all good gifts, am stout and enjoying good health, and frequently walk seven miles to fill my appointments. I am yours in bonds of love,

P. D. G.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR SIR:— It is with a throbbing heart that I attempt to write to as christian looking man as you are, but for some cause for 12 months it has been bearing on my mind to write to Elder Gold, and many times I have refused, but I now undertake the task, trusting God to guide my pen. In the date 1868 I lost my wife and took it to heart very much, and tried to pray to see her one more time, and in a dream I saw her as I thought in heaven, and I talked with her, and tried to persuade her to come back. The answer was, now as much as I suffered in that world that you should want me to go back. I believe she has gone to rest though was never baptized. Knowing she never could come back I set myself to prepare to meet her in heaven, and I set out to try to pray, and the more I tried to pray the worse I got. About this time I was keeping a mill and when all of the customers were out I would shut up the front doors and try to pray, and if I have ever prayed as I ought I do not know it. So I went on in this way until about the time of the Association at Cross Roads. My trouble left gradually until it wasted away. I went to the association with uncle Henry Peele, and we went to stay one night with a man by the name of Hyman, and in the crowd was a man by the name of Outterbridge. After supper he proposed for all to tell their experience begining at himself. There was the best night's preaching I ever heard. He told his and compared his burden to a sack of wasting sand spilling until all had run out, and he knew not where it had gone, and that was my case. I enjoyed that night wonderfully. I would like to know the man's given name, but do not. After this time I began to pray to the Lord asking what this meant, and one night in a dream I and Elder Henry Peele were by the side of a place of water, and Elder Peele said there were not any miracles performed in this day and time, and he threw a living thing in the water and it turned to bone with joints in it, and some short and some long, and about this time the Lord appeared standing by with us and said that represented the gifts of God, and I asked him for one of the large portions and he said to me that I could have one of the small portions, for where there was little given there was little required, and where much was given much was required. From that day to this I have been trying to pray for more, but have not received any more, and am brought to see there is no more for me; so if it is of grace it is sufficient: but let it be ever so small I would not give it for all this world's goods. I have thought of what you said at Smithwicks Creek church the last time you preached there. You said in your preaching, let one of God's people be ever so low down in doubts and fears he desired more of God's mercies. But not comparing myself to one of God's people, but I can only hope I am. It is my desire to have more of his tender mercies. I desire to walk orderly with a godly conversation, but so far from what I want to be it makes me sigh and mourn and say to myself, Lord have mercy on me please, O Lord please guide me that I may not transgress thy commands so much, for without him I can do nothing. So it is with the Lord, for I have tried an arm of flesh sufficient to know there is nothing good that I can do. No doubt if this goes in print but some body will say that I have done this to show myself, but my friends I can say that I think I have seen myself to my sorrow, but I hope that I have been enabled to see that I am a corrupt and vile sinner, seeing that all power in me was gone, and have been shown the power of man, and what was it? It is nothing but sinful, his ways, his thoughts: but I hope that I have been enabled to see the power of God, and all power is in his hands. I can say that there is nothing good that I can do, or ever have done, and I have been wandering for a long time, and find no city to dwell in; but I have been comforted by talking with one of my neighbors that I think was just in my condition. We have talked together, and I have rejoiced to hear him talk, but the Lord saw proper to take him away from me; and what was his talk in his last hours though never baptized with water: as some say there is no hope for a person that has never been baptized: but I am glad I do not believe that way. He called his only brother that stayed by his bedside, and told his brother that he was going home to glory. O what glorious news, and what shall we say to this? He was a man that was truthful to his neighbors. If he promised you any thing he would perform it if nothing prevented him. Now shall we say in his last dying hours he has told a lie? No, God forbid. O the times I have heard him repeat the hymn,

O for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame;
So purer light shall mark the road,
That leads me to the Lamb,

At times I have thought I would offer to the church, but O how unworthy. The times I have promised at some future time I would offer to the church, but never complied with the promise I have made. What do we see in the scripture? that men are as water spill on the ground which cannot be gathered up again. But the Lord has devised means whereby his banished shall not be expelled from him. O what a glorious Saviour, one that loves and loves to the end. So we learn it is of grace and not of works. I can witness this I think for I have tried and have not found any relief of myself. It is of the Lord, the great Reliever.

Dear brother Gold, after I wrote you the above letter it bore on my mind so hard to offer to the church, so on the fourth Saturday in June at Smithwick's Creek I went before the church and tried to tell them of the little hope I had, was received and baptized, and O, brother Gold, if I am worthy of calling you brother the sweet hours I have seen since I cannot tell. I went to see all the old Baptists and talked with them, and heard them talk. O the love for them. I never have enjoyed myself so well as the day I was baptized, and I have had a good time ever since. My uncle Henry Peele has told that I would be better satisfied, but somehow I could not see it, for my walk was so far from what I would like it to be, that I thought if I was in the church that it would be worse with me than it was like I was. So he couldn't tell me, neither can I tell any one else, but here I will tell a little of my feelings about this thing. I staid out about 20 years after I had a hope, and I feel like it was about as mean a thing as I ever did, to think of the blessed promises the Lord has bestowed upon his people, and to think we will not appreciate it enough to even talk it to the church, and let it be known. This thing has caused me to shed tears since I joined the church. That one thing is on my mind much of my time, but I look back and think was it the Lord's time or not? It is not for me to know. If it was at the Lord's time I want to be satisfied. So it is not for me to know, but to those in my state I say, put aside all of these excuses, and go to the church, and tell them of the hope you have in the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will comply with the duty enjoined upon you. If you wait for a clear promise you will wait until the last according to my feelings, for I tried for 20 years, but did not find any more, and let it be ever so small I don't want to get rid of it at any price. So brother Gold, I reckon I have said enough, but I can't tell neither can I write it. I can only make a sketch of it. If I could talk as it comes into my mind sometimes I think I would be satisfied, but I cannot tell anyone my feelings. There were added to the church the same time I joined at Smithwick's Creek five. We had a good meeting, or it was good to me, and I think it was good to all of the church, and a good share of the outsiders. Everybody looked like they enjoyed themselves, and I can say for myself I did. It has been too good for me ever since. I am sure there is a valley for me, but I hope the Lord will still bless me as I feel to say he has always blessed me with natural blessings. A few more words and I will close. If it is like some say, that we have to have an account with the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, that we have to do a part, and he a part, I am sorry for all of my part. I have nothing to charge the Lord with, but can say that I am in debt to him for all of his blessings, both spiritual and natural, for Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but it is God that gives the increase, and this we know. So it is God that bestows his kind mercies upon all of his people, and delivers them of their troubles, and this we know, for instead of man's delivering himself he gets still deeper in.

I hope the Lord will guide us, instruct us and keep us out of forbidden paths, and that we may walk orderly, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Brethren, pray for me is my desire. Your unworthy brother, KADER LILLY.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—I have been thinking that I would write to you ever since I saw you at our last association, but have put it off until now. My only and greatest objection to writing is my unworthiness, and am afraid that I shall not be able to write anything that will be of any comfort to you or any of the dear people of God. But if you will bear with me, I will endeavor to write some of my feelings concerning the trying scenes of my life, if the Lord will guide me in the attempt. I have had a name with the Baptists a little over two years, and the seasons of rejoicing with me have been many and short. Sometimes I feel like I love the Lord with all my heart, and love all of God's poor and afflicted people. Sometimes I go to preaching and am filled with love that I cannot tell with words or pen. Sometimes I am in darkness and feel like I do not love the Lord as I ought, and do not love his people as a child of grace should, and feel that I am a wanderer in a strange land. I know I often do wrong, and contrary to the Lord's will, and am still a sinner, and it grieves me sorely to see it so. My greatest desire is to live right and do right in all things and on all occasions. But cannot, and have nothing to rejoice in save salvation by grace, and grace alone. Oh! blessed Jesus. Oh! that I could honor and praise his holy name for the many blessings that he has bestowed upon his people, if I am not one myself. I often think if I was one of the chosen ones that I would not be tempted as I am, and would not see so much trouble as I do, but would be able to live nearer in duty than I do, and would praise him more, and love him better, and would have no doubts. But I find that all flesh is as grass, and all of its principles are contrary to the Lord and master, and seek to lead me from him and from his people. Oh! had I the power to say, get thee behind me Satan, and tempt me no more. But I hope the Lord will not suffer me to be tempted beyond that that I am able to bear, but will with the temptation make a way of escape. The great trouble with me is, am I his? 'Tis the point I long to know, but that is a question that many ask, but none are able to answer but those who have tasted the fullness of his love. I will stop here lest I should weary you.

Your sister in the Lord as I hope,

ORA C. WATSON.

Stella, N. C.

P. D. GOLD, VERY DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD, IF I AM WORTHY TO CALL YOU SO:—I have concluded you would like to hear from sister Hardison, and Smithwick's Creek church again. Sister Hardison's health is about the same as when you were there at the Union meeting. She is confined to her bed and chair just as her family place her. The Lord gives her great room to rejoice. When David returned from our last meeting he could tell her that two of her daughters, one of her sons in law, one of her grand-daughters about seventeen years of age, and two others were added to the church that day, and the weather very cold for the season. Sunday morning one of the sisters said to another sister, both candidates for the water, I don't believe I shall mind it: no, the other replied, I don't think I shall. Another Sunday morning when we met at the water I witnessed that I never have seen. I have been a member forty-one years in October, this date. The water was sheeted over in ice about half an inch thick. It was broken in sheets, and slipped under the body of ice, and the water was smooth, no ice in the way. One said would it not be better for one to come out as soon as baptized. One of the sisters said no. They joined hands at the stripping house with Elder Peal, and took the water as cheerfully as twelve did in August at the same place. In August Elder Peal was timed. He was eight minutes baptizing twelve. It was less than half the time in baptizing six in November. They all joined hands and came out of the water rejoicing. We had another Union meeting in November. We had brethren from Morattock, Jamesville, Skewarkey and Bare Grass with us. We commenced on Sunday.

I will tell you how our revival has come along. February, '92 one added, May one, June five, July three, August twelve, September eight, October six, November six, in all 42.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN HOPE:—I have had a desire to have my reason of a hope of eternal life published. I believe there are many of God's dear children with a hope but it is so little they are ashamed of it, and they read all the religious papers they can with the hope of finding some other person that has been along the path they were traveling, and finding none as little as theirs is they come to the conclusion that they need not hope any longer. So dear reader, if you and brother Gold will be patient with me I will write one as little as you desire. I do not remember the time or the beginning of my troubles if I have ever had any, nor do I remember the ending of it. I find troubles all along the path of life. I was born April the 26th, 1860, and lay at death's door for about two years, and often has the time been since that I wished if it had been God's will that I could have died then, but I see that it was not his will. I was raised by old Primitive Baptist parents and tried to believe their doctrine and thought I did, but it was at last proved to me that I did not. I never went to the mourner's bench in my life, no one ever asked me to go. I thought that my arminian friends did not care if I did go to hell. I was from a little child of a restless disposition. I had rather be by myself. I learned to play the fiddle a little and often have been the times I have taken my fiddle and gone off to myself to play the gloom off that had settled o'er me. I did not know the cause of it then, nor do I know it now. I know it not. I thought I was different from other boys. I seemed to be no company for them and did not enjoy theirs. I felt to be one to myself. My kin folks treated me with disdain and some of them when they had a party or sociable said that they would not mind inviting the Hardison family, but George would be stuck up there in the way. I came to the conclusion that I did not have but little sense and was not fit to be in company. I thought the woods was the place for me so there is where I spent the most of my idle hours until the Fall of '80. I thought that I would enjoy life better if I would leave. So I went with three other boys to a place in Mo., and stayed out there three months. I did not know before that my folks cared any thing for me. I saw that I was no better satisfied there than I was at home. I became so dissatisfied that I thought that I would lose what little mind I had if I stayed at home. I thought the reason my folks were so opposed to my going off was that they thought I had no sense and they did not know what would become of me. So I persuaded an older brother to go with me in the Fall of '82 I went back to Mo., with the determination to stay if I was dissatisfied, but my brother in a short time got down sick and came very near dying and when he got so he could travel he wanted me to bring him home. I came home with him. I got to studying about the money I had spent and had gained but little satisfaction of mind by going off and my brother wanted me to go in with him and buy a piece of land that by so doing we could save our money. We bought a piece of land in a Campbellite neighborhood about five miles from my father's adjoining an older brother of ours. The neighbors all knew that we were of the old Primitive Baptist persuasion, and for that reason they would try to cram me full of their Campbelliteism, and abuse the old Baptists, and I had never read the Bible but little and knew but little about it. I thought that a doctrine was not worth believing that was not worth posting myself on. I went to reading the bible and noting the best points on purpose so that I could stand my ground with them. I found in a short time that the bible was the most interesting book I had ever read. I had never enjoyed reading the bible before, and now I could read and it seemed I would never grow weary. My brother had a little Testament, and I would carry that in my pocket and when I would stop to rest in my labor would read in it, but I thought it had allusion to other people, not such as I was. I knew that something was the matter with me but could not tell what. I was sitting in a room alone reading and I discovered a book lying on the mantel and when I noticed it closer I saw that it was old Dr. Watson's Baptist Test—I had heard much said about it but had never read it, so I thought I would read it through. I commenced at the first but had not read far when he took up my case and told my feelings better than I could myself and at the last of the chapter he said dear reader, if this has been your case you are a child of God. I laid the book up, it filled me full. I lay down to think over what I had read. I remembered the scripture I had been reading and thought it was for somebody else, I now felt I had part in it. I thought of my old mother that had died eight years before if I would be permitted to meet her in another world. I would come home and look at my old father whom I had the utmost confidence in, and thought could it be possible that my hope was such a one as his? Then I would go to hear them preach and see the love that they manifested for each other and think could they love me with my little hope as they did each other and I was afraid they could not. I then went to reading all the experiences that I could get to see what kind of a hope they had and all that I read was that the first thing they knew their sins rose up before them like mountains and they were made to weep bitter tears. They saw hell was their doom, but if they went to hell they would go praying. They would seek a lonely spot and there they would pour out their complaints before their God on their knees in prayer and all at once their burden was lifted from them and they then could view Jesus as their Savior and see how he could remain just and be the justifier of their souls. I could not get any satisfaction from such as that, for I had never at any time seen that I would go to hell and hell was my doom, and I had never shed tears over my lost condition. I believe I tried to be contented at God's will. I never had the confidence in myself to bow on my knees or utter a word of prayer, or even bow at church. I could scarcely believe that I had a cause for a hope. I wanted to talk with some good old Baptist. I thought he could tell me and I had a chance before long. Some of our Elders were to preach at a Campbellite house near where I was living and one took a train home next morning, and I got in the buggy and went with him. We soon got into a conversation. I thought as he was a preacher he could tell me whether to hope or not. I told him I wanted to talk with him if he would listen to me, and I wanted his judgment. He told me he would be glad to hear me talk. I told him all I could and when I got through he turned his back on me and commenced to whistle some tune, and never said half a dozen words from there on to the church. I knew then my hope was in vain. I heard others whispering around that they thought I was a changed boy, and now I had wilfully deceived them, that I was a fool to ever think that I had found favor in the Lord's sight. I went to work then to undeceive them. I took up bad company and using profane language and denying having any hope. While I was in this condition I went to N. C. to see my people that I had never seen. I had written some good letters out there, and when I got there I acted very badly and they said that they thought I was a changed boy.

THOUGHTS.

[Editorial Correspondence.]

I am here with my family at brother Gold's pleasant home in Wilson. We started South to find warm weather. Contrary to our expectations, we have found unusually cold weather here for this place, colder than we had experienced at Southampton. We have no control over the elements, and must often be disappointed in finding it too cold or too hot for us. We have no more control over our feelings than we have over the weather, and cannot warm our own hearts, nor remove the clouds from our sky. We can only look to the Lord, who can and does "clear the darkest sky and give us day for night."

Though the atmosphere has been so cold as to make a fire necessary, the atmosphere in this pleasant home has been of the warmest and most genial kind, filled with warmth and fragrance of kind and loving hearts. The blazing fires in the open fire places have shined upon us no more cheerfully, and expressed no more unstinted welcome than the pleasant faces and loving words and kind acts of the dear inmates and their friends.

Nothing is pleasanter in all this world than a home where mutual love and kindness and care abound. But there must be a shade of darkness about this sweet picture, a tincture of sadness and apprehension, because of the certainty that sooner or later its tender, binding cords must be broken, and all this most pure and exalted enjoyment that earth can afford must come to an end.

Therefore I turn with great satisfaction and comfort to contemplate that other Home, which the dear Lord has provided for the poor and desolate and solitary, where all the comforts and joys and blessings that are suggested by the most perfect earthly home are found in infinite perfection, and they shall be enjoyed without failure and without satiety forever. Here the solitary are set in families, and the desolate, the wanderers, the aliens, the slaves to sin, are brought pure and clean and joyful into the house of God, the home of God's elect, and made to feel heavenly warmth and sweet binding power of that love which is the bond of perfectness, which extends to every one of the favored inmates alike. Here no one is loved more than another, although while here in this mortal state there is a great difference in the experience of that love by different ones, and by the same one at different times.

One thing that belongs to the experience of the comfort and gladness of this heavenly home, the church of the living God, is the assurance that is inseparable from it, that it is forever. That is why it is called "everlasting consolation." It the very nature of it is a mysterious conviction or feeling that it is not to fade away like earthly comforts. I felt that, though I did not then understand it, the first time the Lord put gladness in my heart. I knew then that I had never known what true gladness was before. It was "more than the time when their corn and their wine increased;" more than that which the best of earth's bounteous blessings could give.

In this home the ties are never broken, the love never fails, the joy never dies. So far as we are enabled to enter into this secret place of the Most High, and experience the Kingdom, the reigning power of Jesus, and feel the love of God shed abroad in our hearts, and feel the union of soul with all his children, to that extent we realize the perfection and unfading nature of all that belongs to this house.

When I sat down here, to write a little for the LANDMARK, as brother Gold said there is yet place in the next number for something I might write, I thought I would speak about the church, this family of God, the life of Jesus manifested in our mortal flesh, (the way, the truth and the life.) I felt cold and perplexed, and fearful, and weak, as I often do, and more especially so when away from home where they know me, and therefore do not set their expectations too high. But how soon my heart was made glad to see that I was at home among my Father's children. They soon let me know that they had travelled the same rough and thorny way I was trying to talk about, and had reached the same rest, and had the same doubts and fears and the same inward conflicts, and were reaching forth to the same things which are before.

How far apart we live—the members of this family—thousands of miles apart some of them. And yet just as soon as any of us meet and speak together, or read each others sentiments, we find that we are living very near together, neighbors, close neighbors. "Jerusalem is a city which is builded compact together."

It is to be remembered that our fellowship is not in the flesh, but in the spirit. We continue to differ in our natural dispositions, occupations, tastes and judgments. But all these differences but show more clearly the power and beauty of the workmanship of God, as the purity of gold is shown by the heat of the fire, as the force of the wind is shown by the strength of the oak which is broken by it, as the power of life in the tender germ coming up through the hard soil, in the vine or tree that pushes aside the rock, is shown by the obstacles that stand in the way of its development.

Those who are born of God are of one heart and one mind, and ar-exhorted to be of one judgment, to manifest the oneness of life, and "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Their differences in natural things will not prevent this, for the Spirit teaches them to put off the old man, (not let him rule) to lay aside anything that interferes with the working out of this one life or Spirit of Christ. Envy, emulation, strife, anger and the like, are to be put aside. "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." The same things that are written in the New Testament, all the exhortations, the admonitions, the commands of Jesus, as well as the precious promises, are written in your heart and mine, if we are children of God. We can no more slight them without loss and suffering than we can put our finger in the fire without pain, or refrain from eating without losing strength. The life within us struggles for expression. It must and will be expressed through our mortal flesh, if not in pleasant fruit that brings rejoicing then in cries of anguish and humble contrition on account of rebellion. We grow. We cannot help growing. Resistance long continued may make the vine or tree grow in deformed shape, but grow it must. The child of God cannot become permanently deformed, but he will often feel a great deformity, a crookedness, a distress of soul, and an inability to walk in the ways of the Lord because of resistance to the teachings of the Spirit or life within him. When the dear Lord appears again in answer to his cries for mercy, the crooked is made straight again.

When we are graciously enabled to grow up into him in all things, which is the Head, even Christ, then we have joy together in the Lord. And this joy the world cannot take from us. Then we show forth the unity of the Spirit which binds together and controls and guides all the members of this holy and loving family, however widely separated in their earthly lots, and however different from each other in their natural inclinations and occupations.

I want this Spirit to control and guide me and all the family; and I want to meet as many of this dear family in the flesh as I can—as many as the Lord wills. May grace, mercy and peace be to you all.

SILAS H. DURAND.

December 26th, 1892.

Sister O. C. Watson, of N. C. requests my view of Isa. 5:11-21.

1st. Great favor was shown unto Israel when the Lord planted him as a beloved vineyard in a fruitful hill. In every way that fencing it, gathering out stones, planting it with the choicest vine, building a tower and a winepress would conduce to its growth did the Lord bestow upon it these favors. But when he sought fruit thereon, lo it brought wild grapes. The vineyard of the Lord is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant; but when he looked for judgment or justice behold oppression, and when he looked for righteousness behold a cry of distress from those oppressed by the leaders.

2nd. This perversion of the way of truth sets forth the doings and character of man. All flesh has corrupted his way or perverted the right way, and sinned against God. Man has no excuse for any of his sins. The goodness and mercy of God is proclaimed on every hand and everywhere, so that man is without excuse. A wonderful display of God's goodness and man's depravity is shown in the history of the Jews.

3rd. The Jews were all brethren, all descendants of Abraham and Sarah, and were not mixed blooded, for they were not allowed to intermarry with other nations. They should therefore love each other. But did they? How was it in Isaiah's day? They were greedy for wealth, and added house to house and field to field, until they would own all the country and exclude the poor brethren from a home. That is, those Jews that were so greedy after money or property, were getting possession of nearly all the land and houses, and this would of course debar the poor Jews of homes. Was there any love in this towards the poor brethren? There was enough land in the territory of Canaan for every Israelite to have a home of his own, and it was right and for the general good for every man to have a home. This purpose though would be defeated if a few owned all the land and houses.

4th. It is even so now. At this day there is a curse on the man that is greedy of filthy lucre, and it will surely overtake him. We should love our brethren. This is an age of covetousness or love of money, a corrupt age. It is a time when the rich oppress the poor, for the love of money as a canker eats up our love of the truth and of the people of God. People full of wealth are fond of luxurious living—eating and drinking—and they employ musical instruments to amuse them that they may kill time. A poor man who is not too lazy to labor has no need of strong drink, or the harp and viol, fiddle, wine &c. in his feasts. He labors hard all day and sleeps at night. He has no time to kill. It keeps him busy to earn food and raiment for those dependent on him. He is really a happier man than the rich, if he only knew it, provided he has faith. The less a man needs the better off he is. If one cannot get along without owning a whole district, and needs all this to enable him to get along, he is not so well off as one who can get along without all this. It requires much for some. One that can do with less is better off. There is but one thing that is needful. If God give you this he will with him freely give you all things.

5th. Darkness covered the minds of the Israelitish nation at such a time as this. They had no knowledge, therefore they should perish. In this darkened state corruption raged and great distress, or hell enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure, so that such distress as never came on another nation befel the Jews. All the glory and pomp of the Jews should be stained. Their great men and their mean men should all be brought low. The wrath of God should be poured out upon them to the uttermost. When prophets were sent unto them to gather fruit of the vintage some they stoned, and others they killed. Last of all when Jesus the Son and heir came they killed him. Therefore this nation should miserably perish, and these blessings should be given unto others. They knew not the time of their visitation. These things were hid from the wise and prudent. For there is a woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight.

These are such as say, Let God make speed that we may see it. They judge the Lord is such an one as themselves. They call bitter sweet, and call good evil, and put darkness for light. They judge after the sight of their own eyes. That they love they say is right. What is good to them they call sweet. They are cursed children without faith. For he that has faith does not call good evil, nor evil good, nor does he put bitter for sweet, but he judges righteously.

6th. The Lord alone shall be exalted in this day here named. God shall be glorified in Jesus his own son. The field is such as the Lord has blessed. The Lord is the King in Zion. The lambs of his flock and sheep of his pasture shall feed in the holy land. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this. In the gospel day Judah shall be bro't back from captivity and Jacob shall rejoice. Every man shall feed under his own vine and fig tree, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with joy and everlasting songs on their head (Christ,) and sighing and sorrowing shall flee away.

7th. Self righteousness flourishes with wickedness. Where love of gain is supposed to be godliness men use corrupt practices to gather wealth. When Jesus was on earth the temple was filled with a den of thieves. They bought and sold offerings to be used in sacrifice to the Lord. These were the wise in their own eyes. The righteous overmuch. These oppress the poor and would extort all they could to rob the needy. But the Lord searches his little ones out of all countries, and they shall feed in Mt. Zion. They find it better to dwell in a garret, or very small, inconvenient room with a little morsel that a righteous man hath, than to dwell in a large house with a brawling woman and hatred therewith.

The poor lay up treasure in heaven where moth and dust do not corrupt nor thieves break through nor steal.

In proportion as God's people are enriched with worldly goods they are impoverished and strangled, (choked,) with worldly cares, and cease to love one another, and they dwell alone. But when they feed on Jesus they are gathered in troops and dwell together in love.

P. D. G.

Brother James A. Williams requests my view of 2nd. Peter 2:4.

"For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell?" &c.

While Peter has his gift Paul dwells much on the ground work of justification of the ungodly that believe in Jesus, and while John dwells specially on the love of God to his children, Peter dwells much on the judgment of God on the ungodly and the sinner. Each is needful and proper in its place, and there is a necessity for all this teaching in order to declare the whole counsel of God, and set forth the full character of man.

There is a tendency on the part the slack and rebellious to think that God does not bring everything into judgment. Because sentence against a wicked work is not speedily executed therefore the hearts of the sons of men are fully set in them to do evil. While the convicted sinner, trembling under the terrors of the fear of death, feels there is no mercy for him in God, the disobedient think there is no justice in him, or that he will not execute his fierce wrath on the wicked.

Peter's writings as a son of thunder sound a solemn, ominous and faithful warning in the holy mountain and declare that God will surely punish the transgressors. He spares not false teachers. There is a lax sentiment in the minds of many that there are no false teachers in modern times, but that all preachers and teachers are true and pure.

Peter declares that as there were false prophets of old, so there shall be false teachers in latter times. If you read the bible you will see that there were many false prophets in olden time. In Elijah's day how was it? In times of great corruption, when the voice of the true prophet is full of warning and reproof, then false prophets rise up to speak smooth things, and always those that love money use feigned words to gain profit. They also construct theories suitable to make large demands of money. They also have men's persons in admiration supposing that gain is godliness.

Here in Peter's words we see that as there were false prophets also among the people, so there shall be false teachers among you who privily (secretly) shall bring in damnable heresies, denying the Lord that bought them. Many shall follow their pernicious ways. And through covetousness with feigned words shall they make merchandise of you. They preach that which ignores the efficacy of Christ's atonement that bought his people or redeemed them, and they construct a theory founded on the necessity of money to help save souls. Many there are that follow such false teachers, so that they bring the way of truth into disrepute. This calls for swift destruction, for damnation slumbereth not. God will surely bring the guilty into judgment, and punish the ungodly, and deliver the godly out of temptation. In proof of this he adduces examples of each kind, not exempting even angels, or the most noted, renowned and exalted.

He destroyed the old world. He saved Noah. He destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, and saved Lot, declaring that God knows how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment.

He spares none that sin. This was true of Adam, David, Solomon, Nebuchadnezzar, Pharaoh, the Jews, both nations as well as individuals. Even angels that sinned escaped not. There is a mystery in this expression, "For if God spared not the angels that sinned" &c. The devil was never an elect angel. He sins from the beginning. He is a liar and the father of it.

But was he not in heaven? See Ezekiel 28: 1-20. No, this refers to the renowned city of Tyre and her wise king who became puffed up and full of pride. Though his wisdom exceeded Daniel's, yet he should be cast down because he honored not God as the Lord.

In Luke 10: 18 Jesus said, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven. Satan was cast out of the legal or Jewish heavens as the power of Jesus was displayed. The effect of that power is to cast down Satan, and this is the only power that casts him out. The disciples had returned and declared that even the devils were subject to them through his name. Then Jesus said, I beheld Satan fall as lightning from heaven. The Jewish heavens, in which he was yet to perform very important things namely inflame the Jews to crucify Christ, and also presents the church of God, he was then occupying, but Jesus beheld him fall as lightning falls from heaven.

In Rev. 12:1 10 wherein Satan appears as a dragon in heaven from whence he is cast down to the earth, representing the craft and hypocrisy of Satan transforming himself into an angel of light to deceive, and he appears in the church (heaven) to make war with the saints; but he is cast out into the earth. We do not understand his heaven to be the eternal heaven of heavens resumed for the children for the children of God in the resurrection where nothing shall ever enter that loves or makes a lie or ever disturbs.

Why should there be devils and wicked men? One reason is to make manifest who is of the truth. If one never had any enemies about him he never would be tried and afflicted. God commanded the enemies of Jacob to be round about him. While Job did not desire Satan and suffered much under her temptation, yet that was needful for Job. We do not desire to have ungodly men around us, but how much more careful we are when we have them. There would be no need of watchfulness if we had no special trials. How it strengthens a man for him to know he has enemies about him. We must be tried so as by fire. The whole universal world is a chastening to that which is pure. The adulterer hunts the precious life. The slanderer seeks to devour character. The proud scorn the humble. The adversary the devil is the accuser of the brethren. These fires are to test the quality of the metal, and prove whether we are pure or vile. Our God is a consuming fire.

Pride goes before fall and brings on destruction. The devil is the king of all the children of pride. His condemnation is that of pride. God reserves him and all the wicked under chains to punishment. We should remember it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. The Lord knows how to deliver the goodly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust to the day of judgment. If the righteous scarcely be saved where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear.

P. D. G.

Durand's should be used in regular service to lovers of truth.

The church is blessed with several periodicals through which our brethren correspond and communicate with each other. There should be no jealousy among these periodicals, any more than there is among our preachers. One should not attempt to pull down another, but let each in its place seek the glory of God and the good of his people. Let not the love of money or filthy lucre influence any. As ye would that others should do to you so do ye even unto them. Let brotherly love continue.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND.

We take pleasure in presenting the name of brother Durand as Corresponding Editor of the LANDMARK. Feeling that the best gifts of writing among our people are for their service and profit, it has seemed good to us that brother Durand consents to serve the brethren in this way. What is written, being encased in this unchanging form, may be of service much farther than the voice of speech could reach, and much longer than what is heard with the ear.

We feel assured that nothing can supplant the place of preaching from mouth to ear. Yet God used prophets and apostles to write as well as to speak. Writing is still important, and a preacher may write and preach also. One does not conflict with the other. We consider that such gifts as Elder

A new year to us. Its events are wrapped in the curtains of secrecy to man. No human gaze can pierce through these curtains. Are its events less certain (whatever they are) because unknown to man? If they are uncertain how could they be foreknown at all? It is astonishing to think how little man does know seeing he thinks he knows so much. When we are brought face to face with things we feel that what Paul says is true. And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know." 1st. Cor. 8: 2.

How good it is that our God declares the end from the beginning, and that nothing is hid from him. For this reason those who are led by him need not fear for he will guide them safely, and we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

We are sure therefore that all that serve Jesus shall have a good year. It will be good for them whether they outlive it or not, or whether they have tribulation or not. For if the hand of God guides one he cannot go wrong.

It is my desire, if not deceived, to serve the Lord Jesus in his people, and proclaim that name which is above every name. May the readers of the LANDMARK, as well as others, find mercy of the Lord and prosper in the truth.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE.

Attention is called to the Atlantic Coast Line R. R. A shortened route opens January 1st 1893. This is quicker and better than any route from New York to Florida that I know of. It is the safest and pleasantest trunk line R. R. that I travel on anywhere.

UNION MEETING.

The next session of the Staunton River Union is appointed to be held with the church at Malmaison, Va., on Friday, Saturday and 5th Sunday in January, 1893. Ministering brethren, who have a mind to come, are cordially invited to attend. Those visiting by rail will be met on Thursday on Va. Midland R. R. at Fall Creek, or at Ringgold on the R. & D. R. R. by writing to W. H. Giles, at Malmaison, Va., or C. H. Barker, at Kentuck, Va.

OBITUARIES.

LYDIA L. JAMES.

The subject of this notice was the daughter of Solomon and Nancy Whichard, and my sister. She was born Oct. 4th, 1830, and died Oct. 29th, 1892 aged 62 years and 25 days. In Nov. 1847 she was married to Elphelet K. Whichard, who died in Oct. 1850, leaving her at the age of 20 years with an infant daughter 7 months old. The responsibilities of taking care of a family in her helpless, bereaved condition, seeming too great for her, she consented to have the little farm on which they lived sold for the benefit of herself and child and moved back to our house to live, (father being then living.) Soon after she came to live with us father died; but, as the homestead fell to me, she continued to live in the home of her childhood till her own child was grown and married. Then she went to live with her daughter who died in 1879, leaving four small children. Sister continued to live with her son-in-law, and performed the duties of mother for his children, (who always called her mamma) till Sept. 1883, when she was married to Wm. A. James, with whom she lived happily till her death. During most of the time that she lived with the family of her daughter, their home was in Martin county, and on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in Jan. 1881, she united with the church at Spring Green, and was baptized next day by Elder Geo. D. Roberson. Several months after her marriage to brother James, she took a dismission from Spring Green, and united with the church at Great Swamp, in Pitt county, where her husband's membership was, and where she remained a faithful and consistent member till her death, which was caused by paralysis. Brother Gold, it is not my purpose to eulogize the good qualities of my sister because she is dead, in fact I think those writing obituary notices should make them as short as they can, to express all the facts, but those who knew her will pardon me for saying, she was a loving and faithful wife, a devoted mother and grandmother, a good neighbor and a consistent member of society. She left a husband, three grandchildren, two brothers and one sister, and numerous friends and relatives to mourn her loss, but we mourn not as those without hope, for with confidence we trust that she is past the reach of all harm in a land where peace and rest reign.

W. R. WRICHARD.

WM. E. WRIGHT.

I am again called upon to chronicle the death of another precious child of God—brother William B. Wright, of Ruffin, Rockingham co., N. C. He was born Dec. 12th, 1837, was married to Miss Ann E. King Sept. 21, 1865, joined the church at Lick Fork and was baptized the 1st Sunday in Sept. 1877 and died Nov. 3rd, 1892. I feel that we have other good men in our community, but I think it would be difficult to find a better man than brother Wright was. He was sober, truthful, honest kind to the poor, industrious and one that provided things honest in the sight of all men. Indeed, he was as near faultless as men are apt to be while here on earth. He was a successful farmer, who always attended to his own business and let other people's alone. He professed religion in the army in 1864, and though he lingered out of the church a long time, yet his conduct was, during that interim, as good as that of a church member. After joining the church it was a rare thing to see his seat vacant in a church meeting, and he was always ready to do his part in supporting his pastor, or in defraying the expenses of the church. I feel that his exemplary life is worthy of imitation and I would that we who survive him may copy after his good conduct. He leaves sister Wright and several children together with the church, and many friends to mourn his death. Sister Wright has lost a good husband, the children have lost a kind father, the church has lost a worthy member and the community has lost a good citizen. May God give us grace to sustain us in this bereavement and enable us to remember his orderly course.

A BROTHER.

Ruffin, N. C., Dec. 14th, 1892.

AN INFANT.

The infant daughter of I. P. Bean and wife was born May 16th 1891, and died June 21st 1891. It cannot come to me, but hope I can go it, for it is with my blessed Jesus. There was something very remarkable about it, it turned over three times on the bed, looked at its pa and smiled, when it was only 3 days old. It was heart rending to give up my only sweet babe. I feel that our loss is its eternal gain.

Another little lamb has gone To dwell with whom you have Another little darling babe
Is sheltered in the grave,

V. C. BEAN.

R. ANNA GRIFFIN.

This lovely and interesting young lady, the daughter of brother J. H. Griffin, (an old soldier of the Mexican War, and a soldier in a far more glorious warfare) and his wife, sister Martha Ann Griffin, died Nov. 26th, 1892. She was born Jan. the 29th, 1876, and was therefore just entering into the age of womanhood. She was sick of typhoid fever and pneumonia five weeks. During her sickness she was favored with the love of God and blessed reconciliation to depart from this world of sorrow and vanity. She spoke to her people of her hope in Jesus and reconciliation to God's will. It is this blessed hope that enables the family to mourn for her, not as those that have no hope, but while sorrowing, it is mingled with the blessed thought of an eternity of happiness for the dear one that is gone. She was much beloved by her parents and brothers and sisters, and was an affectionate, lovely and noble daughter.

P. D. GOLD.

MARTHA C. LANIER.

Martha C. Lanier fell asleep at Mt. Cross, Va., June 8rd, 1892, after inexpressible suffering for three years caused by a cancer of the breast. She was the daughter of A. M. Harris by his first wife, Rebecca Stubblefield. She was about 55 years of age, leaving as kind and affectionate a husband as any woman ever had, and two grown children, daughter and son, who were very devoted to her, to mourn her loss. No woman that the writer has ever known had more devoted relatives and friends, (and deservedly so) than she had. When a girl our dear sister by the grace of God was brought to a knowledge of her lost and ruined condition, by reason of sin and transgression. God appeared to her by revelation, as he did the child Samuel, and gave her the spiritual powers of perception, to behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world; and at the same time to see herself before a just and holy God, "Who art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity." This gave her a "Godly sorrow that worketh repentance unto salvation, that she never repented of," and not only repentance but faith, hope and love, a three fold cord that cannot be broken. And without conferring with flesh and blood, she went before the church at Lickfork and related some of her exercises, and was received into fellowship. She not only told her experience, but told mine, more satisfactory than I ever have been enabled to do. A month after this she and I were baptized together by the pastor, Elder Wm. Burns in the summer of 1860. Jonathan's love for David was no stronger than mine was for her, not only for Christ's sake, but for her many virtues; for she certainly fought a good fight, and kept the faith, and we believe she has gone to receive her crown of righteousness, not of her own preparation, but that which was prepared for her by her righteous judge. Our church never had a more peaceful member, or one more confirmed in the faith, once delivered to the saints, for she was one that was not tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine. No father ever had a more dutiful daughter, and no brother ever had a more affectionate or kinder sister. She was a wife in its true sense; and as a mother she was all that could be desired. She lived in peace and good will to all mankind and died as she lived, her last words being, peace, peace. We are satisfied that she has entered into that rest that remains to the people of God; and may our last end be as joyful as hers. We hope it has been given us to pray for her much bereaved husband and dear children. I hope they may ever cherish her memory, as well as her Godly counsel. Children you are blessed to have had such a mother, try to follow her precepts and example; for she was not only diligent in business, but fervent in spirit, never eating any idle bread, never was she given to foolish jesting, and was ready to help the poor and comfort the mourner.

Grant O Lord, thou gracious Saviour,
Grant that when life's trials are over,
We all may join with them to praise thee,
On that bright eternal shore, is the prayer of her sorrowing brother,

J. M. HARRIS.

MARTHA A. BRASWELL.

Sister Martha A. Braswell was born Oct. 8th, 1817. She was married to Howell Braswell August 1837, who preceded her to the spirit land. He died Feb. 25th, 1847. Sister Braswell joined the Toisnot Primitive Baptist church June 23rd, 1888, and was baptized by Elder A. J. Moore, and was ever in her seat at meeting unless providentially hindered up to her death, which occurred on the 27th day of Feb. at 2 o'clock a. m. 1892, making her stay on earth 74 years 4 months and 19 days. Sister Braswell retired at 10 o'clock apparently in perfect health. She was taken sick about midnight and lived only about two hours. She had obtained a hope in the Saviour forty years previous to joining the church. She leaves to mourn her loss three children, two sons and one daughter, but they are well assured that her departed spirit is gone to him who gave it and was welcomed into the heavenly kingdom prepared for her from the foundation of the world. Oh that all the Primitive Baptists were such as sister Braswell. What a heaven on earth the meeting of God's people would be. May we all take courage from the christian life she lived and endeavor to meet death as she did without one fear or murmuring word, but stand at the gate of death waiting the welcome message, child your Father calls come home. May God sanctify this deep affliction to the good of the dear bereaved ones, who so dutifully and faithfully administered to all of her wants, and point them by his holy Spirit to the happy home in heaven, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more. Done by order of church conference.

H. D. BARNES, ELDER A. J. MOORE,
Clerk. Moderator.

SAMUEL HOUSTON KISER.

I have been requested by the widow of the late Samuel Houston Kiser, formerly a citizen of Russell Co., Va., who recently died in Missouri, to write his obituary and have it published in the LANDMARK. I had an extensive acquaintance with brother Kiser ever since he joined the Primitive Baptist church of Dumps Creek, some 18 or 20 years since, and according to my observation and judgment, a more faithful friend or devout christian never lived. I never heard an obscene word escape his lips. I often enjoyed the hospitality of his devoted family, and we often met together at meeting during his pilgrimage in old Russell, and he always seemed impressed with the solemnity of the occasion. He was born in Russell Co., Va., March 4th, 1851, was married to Elizabeth Kiser May 16th 1872. He was a devoted husband, father and friend. He moved to Nebraska some eight or ten years ago. During their brief sojourn in Nebraska two infant daughters, one 11, the other 13 months old preceded him to the spirit world. His health becoming bad he gave up his work in a mill and moved to Hartville, Wright Co., Mo., and went to work on a farm, and his health improved for awhile, but it seemed he had a premonition of his departure. He was very fond of fishing and a week before he was taken sick he told his two little boys to bring in their fishing lines, cut off the hooks and put them up, for they were through fishing, but his family did not realize how near he was to his end. On July the 12th at 9 o'clock he came from the cornfield and crawled in at the door and his wife asked him if he was sick. He said yes, and was willing to give up all if it were not for his wife and children. He then took his bed, the next day he told his wife not to grieve after him, but to take care of the little babes. He never spoke more than a dozen words during his sickness. He motioned his two little sons to him but could not speak a word to them. He wanted to talk but could not. He seemed to know everything that occurred around him but never spoke. He had all the attention kind friends and physicians could bestow, but all failed to raise him up, so on the 21st day of July 1892 his spirit returned to God who gave it: his body was consigned to the earth there to await the sound of the trump that will awake all those who die in the Lord. He never moved his membership from Dump Creek church. He dearly loved to read the LANDMARK. He left a widow and eight children to mourn their loss. O may that God who cares for the widow and orphan help and bless them and make them a united family around his throne.

SALLIE MURPHY.

Sallie Murphy was born August 29, 1820, and died July 14, 1892. She was the daughter of Robert and Tabitha Paterson, residents of Hawkins county, Tenn. Sallie professed faith in Christ after which she joined the Primitive Baptist church, Oct. 25th, 1862, in which she lived until the Master called for her to come up higher. Sallie was like the rest of us who try to serve God. She had the world, the flesh and the devil to contend with. She loved to go to meeting and be with the people of God. She went to meeting as long as she could, and after she got so she could not go she would get the preachers to go to her house and preach for her, and sometimes she would get happy, and thus have some good meeting at her home. She has been taking the LANDMARK for some time, and she enjoyed reading them as long as she could read.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

HOW I THINK IT IS.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LES-TER:—I will give you some of my thoughts in connection with the parable of our Lord Jesus Christ recorded in Matthew 13:44:

"Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he hideth and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buy-eth that field."

Christ said at the 38th verse the field is the world. Doubtless he said this by way of preparing his disciples to understand the parable in regard to the hid treasure. Mind you the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field. No doubt but the kingdom of heaven is the church which Jesus Christ gave himself for. "For he loved the church and gave himself for it." See Eph. 5:25. Then if he gave himself for it he could give no more,
for he gave all that he had, himself.
Now I cannot think that the text means that I or any other man who comes into it by experience finds the treasure, for the reason that if I am a child of God by reigning grace, I was a part and parcel of the hid treasure until I was brought forth by the man Christ Jesus as treasure that was hid in the field or world. It could not be that any part of the treasure had had joy in hiding itself, or finding itself, or developing itself. So we must look for some other way to get at the true meaning of the mark, but nevertheless I will aim to tell what I think and have been accustomed to teach in regard to it.

The kingdom of heaven (or church) is like unto treasure hid. That is, it is equal, similar, that which resembles; hid, not seen, concealed.
The church or kingdom of heaven was ever in the mind and purpose of God, was ever his, and it was his will and purpose to suffer or ordain that it should be hid or concealed in that field, not in itself. We have seen that the field is the world.
It does not mean earth or globe, but world or man or mankind. So then all the heirs of God or the treasure was found by Christ the man, yea the man Christ Jesus, and when his eternal purpose was matured he,
the Lord God, formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul: Gen.
2:7. Here in my thoughts is the field in its beginning. Adam, the field, in my opinion is the world in embryo. In his loins were hid the whole human race. And to me at least it seems that the treasure in the natural sense was hid in this field until the time of its development. When Adam began to multiply the field was spread out, and the treasure began to be developed.
We see the first fruits of this development in Abel, the natural child of Adam, the spiritual child of Christ, the trophy of grace which was given in Christ Jesus before parable. I may be far off the world began. Then, if I am right in this, I am certainly right in believing that Christ preserved, spared, or saved the field in the common acceptation of the term, in order that the treasure, the kingdom of heaven, the church, or elect all might be brought forth or developed. It is evident that the church or kingdom of heaven is composed of sinners of Adam's race, and all had fallen or transgressed in him, and had Christ not bought the field the treasure would certainly have been lost, lost, lost. But glory and honor be to him, he sold or gave all he had, his covenant, his oath, his promise, his righteousness, his life, his death, his resurrection, ascension and effectual mediation, that he might save eternally the treasure, the kingdom of heaven. Only look, dearly beloved brethren, how careful Jesus has been to keep the field in order to develop the treasure. When the man Adam was driven out of Eden Almighty God did not slay him outright, though he merited death, yet the whole race was in his loins, and therefore God preserved his natural life that his name might be glorified in saving all of the treasure, (no wheat was rooted up.) And when God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, &c, (see Gen. 6:5) and when he determined to destroy man whom he had created from the face of the earth, (see 7th verse) see how careful he (God) was to hide the treasure, (kingdom of heaven,) in the loins of the eight persons who were safely housed in the ark which Noah had built by God's command. Was there any part of the hid treasure lost by the destruction of the wicked world? No, no. He (Christ) had bought the whole field. To save eternally the treasure it was hid. Neither the transgression of Adam, nor the flood could prevent his purpose to secure the treasure. Taking this view of the subject I can readily see why, and rejoice and praise our Lord Jesus Christ, for the soul comforting words, "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are:" John 17:11, "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world:" 24 verse. I think this embraces all God's saints in every age. And I believe Christ in this chapter plainly sets forth his joy in the full sense of the term that he had secured without a doubt or possibility of a failure the whole of the treasure which he had found, kept and saved. And I feel to join with the Apostle and say, "O, the depth of the riches both of wisdom and knowledge of God: how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out:" Rom. 11:33. What wonderful grace is displayed all through the way God leads his people. How glorious are his ways. He hath shown strength with his arm which has wonderfully ruled for him, and his reward is with him. My pen cannot portray the wonderful goodness, mercy, love and forbearance of the ever glorious Saviour. For if he had not found, hid, and saved the treasure, the kingdom of heaven, none other could have done it. My mind is too weak to frame words to set forth his praise as I desire to do, and so must stop at this point, hoping that if this should find a place in the LANDMARK that all who may read it may be able to throw the mantle of charity over my imperfections, and with me praise our Lord Jesus Christ for his great salvation.

I dragged on in this way until last April and thought if my little hope was anything I would have brighter evidences. The 4th Sunday in April I went to witness the baptism of a man named Taylor. I never had any impression to join the church thinking I would wait for a better hope. Some of the members had named it to me about joining the church. I made sport of the idea of such a thing as to join the church. I joined in singing and the pastor opened the door of the church. I got as cold as if I had a hard chill, and it seemed to me that some one had told him to open the door for me. I had always looked on baptism as a natural burial, and I thought perhaps that was the reason I felt like I did. After baptizing they went to the church and Elder W. H. Thomas preached a good sermon and desired those that had these little hopes to discharge their duty, that they did not want those that were satisfied with themselves, and when he prayed he prayed that God would show these little, trembling, doubtful ones their duty. He opened the door again. I got in the same fix I did at the water, and the preacher looked around at me. I came home and was telling my folks what a fix I got in, and laughed over it. The more I studied over it the more serious it was to me, and on Wednesday night I lay down a miserable wretch. It seemed like there was a ball in my breast as large as my two fists. I rolled from one side of the bed to the other. I could not sleep. I remained in that condition until about twelve o'clock. I there and then uttered a vow that if God would show me my duty that night in a dream I would not hesitate to obey. I dropt off in a sound sleep in a short time, and if I dreamed anything at all I have no recollection. Only a few minutes before I awoke I dreamed that some one stepped up to me and asked me if I was going to preach for them at Mt. Moriah this year? I told them yes, I would have regular appointments there and at our schoolhouse, not to preach either but to talk. I awoke. The dream and the vow were as fresh on my mind as they could be. I was in more trouble ten fold than I was before. A young man by the name of Frank Robertson stayed with us that night, and it seemed that I was bound to talk with some one and get their opinion. As he was a brother Allianceman I thought he would give me the best advice he knew, so I took him out and told him the fix I had been in since Sunday, and the vow I had taken the night before, and the dream I had. He said I was in a bad condition, and advised me to go to the church, and if there was any reality in that dream I would be further impressed. I told him I believed that when a subject was fit for baptism and was baptized he would receive the comforting spirit, and I was afraid that I would not receive it, and that would be an evidence of my unworthiness; and he said he believed I would receive it. That did not satisfy me, for I thought as he had never gone through with it himself he could not tell me anything about it. I could not put it from my mind. In a few nights I dreamed that I was baptized, and when I raised up out of the water I clapped my hands and said, my God what have I done! I do not feel any better than I did before, and I thought some one stepped up to me and said, George I can tell you the reason. You got the wrong man to baptize you. I had that to study about then. There was a

Baptist to preach about twelve miles from where I lived by the name of Kerley. I felt like he could tell me what to do, but I saw no way to go as I was hired to my brother, and he was behind with his crop, but I thought if it was a righteous errand that a way would be opened for me. So Friday night came and I went down there. After service I took him out and had a short talk with him, and told him my fears. He said arise and be baptized, and pay that thou owest, and I would feel better. I told him my dream of being baptized and the effect it had on me. He asked me who I thought baptized me. I told him one of my brothers-in-law. He said, dont you see he would be the wrong man. He said if I would get a minister in good standing to baptize me I would feel better, but I could not realize it. I hate to say I did not believe him, but I could not. Something seemed to say, Oh, ye of little faith, after all the signs you have you will not believe. I then got to studying about faith. I thought I knew I did not have any, and I knew the bible said that faith was the fruit of the Spirit, and he that has not the Spirit of Christ is none of his. I began to believe strongly that I did not have the Spirit of Christ, if I did I would have faith. The days that I was pondering over that I had another dream. Perhaps there will be some that will be sure to make sport of my dreams; but let them sport. Fools must have something to laugh at instead of looking in the glass at themselves. I dreamed that Christ was here in the flesh, as he once was, but he was a good way off, and I had no way to go but to walk, but I did not mind that. I wanted to talk with him, and tell him my ups and downs. I started on foot. I travelled about a week. I thought that in the country where he was each neighborhood was in crowds. I went to the first crowd and they told me he was in the next crowd. While going I thought I would know him when I saw him. So when I got there I would not enquire of any one to show him to me. I walked up to the crowd and commenced to look for him, and while I was looking a man walked around to where I was standing. I thought he was the most pleasant looking man I had ever seen. I knew that must be Christ. I walked up to him and held out my hand to shake hands with him, and said, this is the Lord. He said yes it is I. I then clasped my arms around his neck and began to shed tears of joy. He took me in his arms and knelt down on his knees and wept with me. I pondered over that dream a day or two, and it came in my mind that was faith. I had to have faith alone in Jesus, and I was expecting to have a little faith in myself, and in my dream I wept over him to think that one so pure and holy should notice such a wretch as I felt to be with him. I made up my mind to go to the church and tell them what I could, and let them judge of my worthiness. So on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in May I went up with my sister and one more and told them a part of what I have said and was received, and was baptized by Elder W. H. Thomas the next morning. If I received the comforting spirit it was when I told the church what I had to tell. It was not when I was baptized. I hope that I may ever feel as quiet and as calm as I have felt ever since, and that little dream I had about preaching I hope that may prove a whim of the brain, and I will continue to feel as I do. I have told you as near as I can just how it has been with me, and I this hope does not fill your requirements of smallness in size you will have to go to some one that has none at all. I have lengthened this much more than I thought at first. Brother Gold, I would be glad that you would come through this country and preach some for us, but I guess it would be asking too much. I desire the prayers of all God's dear children everywhere.

DEAR EDITORS OF THE LANDMARK: I send you for publication the experience of a beloved sister, daughter of Elder A. J. Taylor of your state, and wish, if you can, to insert it in your valuable paper. She is a faithful one in the Master's cause. Besides it may give comfort to her aged parents.

ELDER J. H. RING, MY BELOVED BROTHER IN THE LORD:—This Sabbath evening finds me in the bed and so gloomy in my future that I am made to exclaim surely I am deceived in the whole matter. Oh how often do I wonder, is there any one like me. I am very sure if the Lord's people are such as I am that nothing but free, sovereign grace can save them. I hope you are to-day standing at your post proclaiming the unsearchable riches of Christ, and are girt about with truth, having on the whole armor of God, upheld by him in his precious cause. Oh how often does my mind and heart go out to those who stand on Zion's wall as ministers of the manifold wisdom of Christ Jesus, especially when I think of my precious old father already ripe for the harvest. Surely they need the blessing of God to rest on them. You ask me to write my experience, as did also my dear old mother, and if it will be any comfort I am willing to comply with your request: but dear brother, if you knew what small space I have for a hope you would not wonder at my lack of confidence in myself, and the darkness I so often must pass through. As best I can remember it was 20 years ago when in a dream I thought the Lord told me I was not prepared for death, but as I did not believe in dreams I would not give it any thought: until alas I found there was something troubling me. I did not feel as I did before. The sun did not shine as it used to. When evening came oh what a night of guilt was in my breast. I thought I could not wait till dark to go out to the lonely grove to try to pray. This was something I had never felt the need of before. When night came on I went just north of the house that then held my loving parents, and bowed my sinful knees to ask for mercy. Oh can I ever forget that night, a heavy load of debt was hanging over my poor soul, and I had nothing to pay with, and for four years this burden was with me. Sometimes I could stay in the house no longer, and would steal away from my mother and go to that lonely grove where it seemed the birds and leaves of the trees were engaged to Almighty God for me. I would stay till mother would call me, then I must fix up some excuse for my staying away. Then the question, dear child what are you wasting your time for? Why don't you get your work done? Can you imagine my distress? Surely I was wasting my time, for God could not be just and save such a wretch. I tried to be myself, and be a dutiful child, and keep my mother in the dark as to my feelings; for it would grieve her after I was dead and my soul lost forever, yes banished from the peaceful presence of God, and all that love him forever.

But blessed be God, when I could do nothing more, and not in the least expecting it, he spoke peace to my troubled soul, and oh what joy to see in the Saviour's blood a balm for my every wound. I was at my married brother's, and arose to my feet and every breath was praise to my God for his grace. I thought I must tell brother, and went to the door to call him, and what a change, the earth, that had been clothed in mourning for so long, was now praising God for my redemption. The sun shone brighter than ever before, but soon clouds began to gather, unbelief to spread over me, and fear that it was all a delusion. So the warfare began that often brings me low, the flesh lusting against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh ever since. But it seems if I could live as I wish to I would have more confidence. These are some of my feelings, and the way the Lord has led me as I trust; but I will close, hoping the Lord may be with you for his name's sake.

“He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.”—Matt. 28 6.

At the opening of this new year, the desire has risen within me to send a greeting to my brethren, who read the LANDMARK, and with this desire has come the above words and I feel like suggesting a few thoughts which have been very pleasant to me concerning them. It is very needful that we look at the place where the Lord lay and meditate upon it from time to time. A right view of this matter is fitted to minister strength and comfort to the heart of the believer, when he is cast down and greatly troubled by his sins, and his often infirmities, and by the dreadful thought of the penalty of his sins which is death. In this tremendous truth, this most stupendous fact that the universe has ever seen, rests the certainty of the salvation of the poor, the wretched and the sinful. And so at the empty tomb where Jesus once lay the faith, the hope, the love of the believer is fed and he is enabled to rejoice in hope of the glory of God. Let us then if God will, heed the word of the angel, and with the two Marys, Come, see the place where the Lord lay. Let us, as we by faith stand at this conquered grave meditate upon what it all must mean for us, and for all the people of God. May we all be made to feel as did these two devout women, full of joy mingled with fear, seeing that we here witness a display of divine power such as was never made before or since, and which was fraught with such wonderful salvation to his disciples then and we trust to us also. Well may we at this solemn sacred place tremble and rejoice.

It is a common thing with the people of God to contemplate the cross. And it is no wonder, for here the atonement for their sins was made, and here that work was finished, upon which all our salvation, with every spiritual blessing we shall ever enjoy, was based. It is a truth that cannot be too often enforced upon our minds that the atonement is the ground of the whole work of redemption and salvation. To it all the types and all the history of the old world pointed, and to it all the teachings of the Spirit of God in our hearts points now. It is true that unless we hold right views of the atonement we must be wrong in all the rest. And as long as the soul is troubled by its sins and transgressions so long will it need the desire, the hope and the comfort found at the cross. We cannot meditate on the cross, or speak of it to one another too much. But yet, if there were nothing following that dreadful day when Jesus died, if the whole scene ended as they laid him away in Joseph's new tomb, all hope and joy and comfort would go out in the gloom and darkness forever. But thanks be to God, this is not the end. It is our privilege to meditate upon a RISEN Redeemer, upon death overcome, and upon life and immortality brought to light through the gospel.

This first lesson of the resurrection of Jesus is the truth that, not only was Jesus put to death for our sins, but he was raised again for our justification. The justification of the sinful and the condemned, is the crowning glory of the gospel. It means more than simple pardon or forgiveness. These would take away the penalty but do not remove the guilt. We need, not only the forgiveness of sins, but also the putting away of guilt. We must have not only mercy, but also must be able to cry who shall lay anything to my charge. Simple forgiveness cannot bring peace. We must also be justified and reconciled. This we find alone in the completed work of the atonement. It is all summed up in this, "He was put to death for our sins and raised again for our justification." To be justified is the first step in the sinner's salvation. This not only the word of God, but also experience teaches. The great question in the heart of the man convinced of sin must ever be, "how can a man be just with God?" And when the bold challenge is thrown out by the apostle, "who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" at once he answers, "it is God that justifieth." It is not man who justifies himself, but God who justifies him.

But how does the resurrection of Jesus justify his people? The scriptures treat of this matter in different ways, and by various figures of speech. Among these figures there comes up to my mind now that of the "surety." There can be no question that the Holy Ghost in testifying of Christ, used appropriate symbols to set him forth to our minds. And so we may be sure that we have a perfect right to receive as truth all that may be involved in the office of a surety. All who may read this will understand what a surety is. When we say that one man has become security for another we are saying that he is a surety. I, for instance, desire to borrow a hundred dollars from a certain man. He is not satisfied of my ability to pay my note when it shall become due and demands security. Another man becomes my security. He endorses my note. He says by so doing that if I fail to meet my obligation, he will do so for me. When the note matures I cannot pay it. Consequently my surety is compelled to pay it for me. And when he has paid it the law not only gives him a full acquittal for all its demands, but I also fully share in that release. My debt is paid as fully when my surety pays it as if I had paid it my own self. If the law was such that we could be imprisoned for debt, then when it was paid, the prison doors would be open upon me as well as upon my surety. This is the law of suretyship among men. This is in substance the meaning of the word everywhere and in every page of the word. Now, I say we have a right to apply all this to the redemption of sinners, since the Holy Ghost has used this as a symbol or illustration.

We are the debtors. Our sins are the debts. We are under every sacred obligation to keep the whole law of God. Nothing can ever release us from this obligation. The whole law is summed up by our Surety himself in this supreme love to God, and to love our neighbor as we love ourselves. "This law can never be abrogated and neither can its demands ever be lessened." And this law we can never keep. And this law says "the soul that sinneth it shall die." It promises no pardon to the transgressor. The law cannot pardon. It can only kill. We have transgressed the law and we are already condemned, already lost. How can we be saved? How can our debt be paid? This is the question of the heart, as well as of the bible. And what is the cost which we must render? The penalty of sin is death. And death, temporal and eternal, holds the sinner as his lawful prey. From this penalty no future obedience of ours will release us. Even could we render full and spotless obedience for all the remaining days of our mortal life this would not satisfy for past indebtedness. Surely this is plain. Paying promptly all my future indebtedness will not satisfy the indebtedness of the past. Yea though we shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point, we are guilty of all. "How hopeless then is the task of seeking to be saved by our obedience, since even if we could henceforth obey perfectly, it would not blot out one of all our past transgressions. From this penalty also our repentance and faith cannot release us, because these are good gifts from God and therefore can constitute no merit on our part. "Thus are we shut up unto Christ." Our experience shuts us up unto Christ, and so are we prepared to accept and rejoice in his salvation. It is God that justifies through Christ and not we who justify ourselves.

But again the question recurs, how does the resurrection of Christ justify us? How do we learn peace and comfort as we come and see the place where the Lord lay? We cannot pay one of a thousand of all our indebtedness. Our Surety must pay. Has he paid it? Let the scenes around and upon Calvary answer. Has he paid it all? Do no demands remain against our Surety or against us for whom he has undertaken this great redemption? How shall we know that all is paid and that therefore he is free, and we free in him? At this open grave where Jesus lay we have the answer. "He is not here for he is risen." The prison doors of the grave could not hold his precious body of sinless flesh. Death could no longer claim him. The debt was fully paid, were it not so Jesus could not have risen from the dead. And never could it have been said "because I live, ye shall live also." This fact of the resurrection of Jesus Christ shows that nothing is any longer laid to the charge of God's elect. And it shows more than this; nothing ever can be laid to their charge in the future. Hence it could be said "being justified freely by his grace through the redemption, that is in Christ Jesus." Oh then what wonders we can see at this empty tomb! How the redeemed soul can rejoice here and exalt itself in the name of the Lord? Here is proof positive of the fact that the redemption of the soul is precious and that it ceaseth "or is finished" forever. And Jesus once suffered the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God.

Now at this empty grave we learn another truth also. We learn that the redemption was so complete that even the body of our Surety could not be holden of death so that it should see corruption. And the value of this to us is that as the body of Jesus could not be holden of death so also the redemption includes our bodies as well. The resurrection of the body is the final act of redemption and this is one of the glorious lessons that we learn at the grave of the risen Lord. Concerning this also we must say "he is not here for he is risen, come see the place where the Lord lay." While it would be worse than profitless for us to speculate upon the manner of the resurrection, yet it is right and for the glory of God that we meditate upon the fact that there is a resurrection. Some things seem clear to me about this matter. First, redemption is not as broad as the curse if the body be not raised from the dead and conformed to the image of Christ. The curse for sin embraced the body and so must the redemption take in the body, else the curse abides partially at least after all. Second, it seems evident to me that in that world after the resurrection we shall be like Enoch and Elijah after they were translated. Whatever we may affirm concerning them now in the world of glory will then be most blessedly true of our risen bodies. If this be not so then will they be different from the rest. Still further we shall be like Jesus in his resurrected body as well as in all other ways. "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." And this requires the resurrection of our bodies. Another direct proof of the resurrection of the body is found in the declaration recorded in Matthew 27: 52, 53rd, "And the graves were opened and many bodies of saints that slept arose and came out of their graves after his resurrection and went about the holy city and appeared unto many." To this agrees the plain testimony of Jesus in John 5 and 28, and of Paul in 1st Cor. 15: and elsewhere. But I will not multiply proofs further.

The whole matter is summed up in this to deny the resurrection of the body is to deny the efficacy of the atonement and the completeness of the redemption wrought out by the atonement. I have never heard an argument urged against the doctrine of the resurrection of the body that did not involve a denial of the omnipotence and omnipresence and omniscience of God.

I will now close these meditations by the open tomb of Jesus. We may no longer seek the living among the dead. It is our joy that he being raised from the dead dieth no more. And here is the pledge of life for all who believe, and in Jesus live forevermore. I remain your brother in this sure and perfect hope.

F. A. CHICK.

Reisterstown, Md.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Friend N. B. Aillsbrook, Sanford, S. C., requests me to write on Isaiah 50: 1.

"Thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away."

To my mind the prophet Isaiah was one of the most lovely writers of the Bible, yet his rebukes for sin were very sharp seeming to feel the necessity of rebuking them sharply that they might be sound in the faith. The days of his prophecy were days of sin in Israel. Manasseh had just been king of Judah and had worshiped idols very much and caused his subjects to do the same, thus entirely forsaking the worship of God and forgetting his wonderful deliverance of their forefathers out of the land of Egypt, and also the many scourings and deliverances through which Israel had passed since they were established in the land of Canaan.

Israel was God's chosen people. He chose them in Abraham, and yet while in his loins gave them the land of Canaan for an inheritance, and with Abraham he established the sign of circumcision both for himself and all his generations. God's promises should be fulfilled unto Israel until the coming of Shiloh, Gen. 49: 10., for that was as long as God had chosen this people to be his people and as long as their nationality should exist, or that they should be especially protected and preserved by him as a nation. His choice of them was national and not spiritual (though there were many of spiritual Israel among them) and the laws that he gave them were for their national government, while they, their laws and government all typified the spiritually chosen of God, their great spiritual sacrifice and their gospel church government under the new covenant. In a national and legal sense God had espoused this people to himself and revealed himself to them as he had to no other nation on the earth and as he never would to any other nation. Of them he had chosen the prophets and to them he sent the prophets to reprove them for their sins and foretell the things that should befall them and the coming of the Messiah, the manner of his government and the setting up of his kingdom. Also their rejection of him and his government and his blessings to be poured out on the Gentile nation.

For a long time the Lord reigned over this nation, and they had no king, but even then they proved to be a stiff necked and rebellious people, and God slew many of them for their disobedience, and delivered them over into the hands of their enemies to scourge them that they should remember him and his tender mercies to them. In the days of Samuel the prophet, they desired a king and to be like other nations. This caused Samuel to mourn, for he felt rejected by his people, but God assured him that they had not rejected him but God himself, and he gave them a king after their own heart who proved to be a snare to them as Samuel had foretold. Thus Israel continued from time to time and their rebellion against God was why the prophet Isaiah used the language of the text. God never broke his espousal with them, that is never gave them any bill of divorce as being free from him, but Israel had separated themselves from God by their continual sinfulness. God had reasons to have put them away forever, but they had no reason to reject him, yet God had not put them away in the sense of blessing them, but they had refused him without cause. They could show no bill of divorce where-in their mother (Israel) had been set free from her husband (God) therefore they had no excuse for their sins, for he had never neglected them. Therefore when they opened their eyes in captivity (where they were put away) they could not say "Our husband has neglected us and put us away from him, but we have sinned against our God, therefore he has brought all this evil upon us." Thus Israel instead of finding excuse for their sins were reminded of their sins. But God had never finally put them away, had given them no divorce. He hates putting away or divorcing, and he shows his mercies to Israel by forgiving them their sins and restoring them again to the land of promise. "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer," Is. 54: 7, 8. The Lord continued to bless his people, whether in captivity or dwelling in the land of Canaan in peace, even though they were rebellious and did not obey his voice, so that at the time the promise should be fulfilled and the Messiah should make his appearance on the earth they were dwelling at Jerusalem and in other parts of the land of Canaan to witness the fulfilment of all the prophets had said should come to pass. God's mercies to them should have provoked them to good works instead of sin, but there were many among them who were sons of belial and therefore haters of God and all his ways. God was not at all disappointed in Israel, for he knew their hearts and by his holy prophets had foretold all their vileness, and how they would esteem him when he made his appearance on the earth, and all things they fulfilled to the letter.

We are taught that what was written aforetime was written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope. These things were written aforetime and we are to learn something from them. I wish to notice a few of the things that appear to us in the gospel church as spiritual Israel.

As God called Abraham the father of all the faithful, even so does he call the faithful to follow him as Abraham did. As he chose Isaac to be his son and rejected Ishmael, and as he chose Jacob with all his vileness and rejected Esau, even so does he to-day manifest that he hath chosen all his children in Christ, the heirs of promise, and children of the free woman. As he set them apart from the world and put a difference between them and blessed them as he blessed no other nation that ever lived, even so has he sanctified his children and put a difference between them and the world that cannot be removed, for they are to God a peculiar people, a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation that they should show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light. As he gave unto them the old covenant even so hath he given unto us the new covenant in our hearts even the covenant of mercy and peace which he will never take away, and which all the world, heaven nor hell cannot remove nor cause to wax old. As they were a sinful people, often going astray from God, even so we are a sinful people and each true child of God has the witness in himself that he is a rebel against God. As it was not our goodness that caused the Lord to look in pity and compassion on us and have mercy on us. As their sins often sent them away into captivity and scattered them among the nations, so our sins often bring us into darkness and mourning where we have no comfort until God hears our cries and shows us his sure mercies that never fail and makes us living witnesses that his love he will not take from us. As their sins caused them to be put away out of the land of Canaan (but not by divorcement) and to be scattered among the nations, so our sins cause us to be put away into darkness and mourning but not by divorcement or falling from grace, for there is no such thing known of in Israel as that an Israelite can become one of another nation, but must remain an Israelite even though he be a disobedient one, so a child of God cannot become a child of the devil. As the mercies of God should have provoked them to obedience, even so the mercies of God to us, which are much greater than to them, for theirs are mere national and could not be remembered, but ours are spiritual and written in the heart and cannot be forgotten, should provoke us to follow our Lord Jesus with our whole heart. Because we cannot fall from grace or eternal life is but the greater reason why we should follow our Lord and adore him because he has given to us such a great salvation that all enemies combined cannot overturn or upset. So great are his mercies to us that the love of a mother to her sucking child is nothing in comparison to it; "she may forget the child, yet will I not forget thee, saith the Lord." Instead of this being an inducement or license to sin it is the greatest inducement to do good works. For instance, a man claims a field but is not sure the title is good, he fears that some one else may some day come in and take possession and he will lose all the field and his labor together, what inducement has he to improve that field? Common sense says none, but suppose that his title is beyond dispute, can he not go on and work with a good will, and has he not every inducement that is necessary to improve that field? Surely he has. Just so with God's people and the title to their heavenly estate, the title is beyond dispute. The only fear is that they are not fit to be one of the heirs, but they are joint heirs, and all opposition may dispute their title, but it is freely given to the poor in spirit and those of broken hearts and contrite spirits. Therefore we need not fear any loss in following our Lord, for it is all given to us and if we are in darkness it cannot prevail, if tried and perplexed in spirit our Lord will deliver us, if tempted he will with the temptation make a way for our escape, if we suffer losses God is more than all the world to us, if Satan and all the world rise up against us our Lord Jesus has overcome these, and if death itself threaten us he has put that under his feet also. So in conquering the last enemy he has conquered them all and in his mercies to us he reveals all these to us that we might have a strong consolation and a hope that never fail-eth.

In view of these things let us press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Brother Gold, as friend Allbrook did not specify any particular point I may not have written anything to explain what he particularly wanted to know, but have written along as my mind felt directed. Do with this as you shall judge best, hoping that if it is published it may be of benefit to our friend and to the household of faith,

Your brother I hope in Christ,

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I desire to say to my many brethren and friends through the columns of the LANDMARK that my neglect of compliance with their requests of letting them hear from me on my return from a tour through their country has been on account of my health. My sufferings have been very great since I returned home. I have hardly been able to set up a portion of my time and do the writing required in my business, and give my family the proper attention. My family has been very sick. My wife has been prostrated for several days with convulsions. All of this as well as other things have rendered me entirely unable to come up to my obligations. I hope, dear brethren, you will pardon me, and pray God for my deliverance. Your brother, I hope, in Christ Jesus,

DAVID AND SAUL.

David and Saul are noted characters of the bible as emblematic men, each shadowing forth different principles, and coming to very different ends. David means beloved, and was a man after God's own heart, and given to the people. Saul means demanded or asked, and answers to the lustful demand of the people to the Lord for a king to rule them, as the nations surrounding were governed.

The desire of Israel to have a king to rule over them like the nations around them was not approved of God: but it was a rejection of God by them: 1st Sam. 8:7. It looks strange to us that Israel would reject the true and living God (for there can be only one true God,) that has chosen them and delivered them, and seek unto witches and wizards or false gods, in whom there is no deliverance.

God gave them Saul as a king, but it was an answer corresponding to their lustful desire, and brought them no deliverance. God gave them a king in his anger and took him away in his wrath. It is charged upon Israel that he had destroyed himself, but declared to him that in God is his help: "I will be thy king: where is any other that may save thee in all thy cities? And thy judges of whom thou saidst, 'Give me a king and princes! I gave thee a king in mine anger and took him away in my wrath.'" Hosea 13:10, 11. We cannot dictate to the Lord, nor suggest to him. When of a carnal desire we ask, if answered according to that desire, it will be a burning and a plague on us, or unto us. Samuel protested unto his people of their sin against God who had delivered their fathers, and of their desire to have a king, and be like the heathen nations around. Samuel was a prophet too of such integrity and authority that they could not question for a moment that God was with him. All Israel knew this. Added to his solemn protest there came thunder and rain in harvest time, a sure token of God's anger.

Paul tells us that God removed Saul: Yet Saul fell on his sword and slew himself: 1st Samuel 31:1. You would not think of such men as David and Samuel slaying themselves while in distress. It is prohibited in Scripture, and one wrongs himself in doing this. When Paul saw the jailor at Philippi about to kill himself he said, "Do thyself no harm: for we are all here."

Some suppose that if one sins against God in such an act as slaying himself that God has nothing to do with that. Yet Paul said that God removed Saul: Acts 13:22. Many other such things might be cited that prove that there is no such complete exclusion of God's justice, power or wisdom from any event to the intent that he may not make the wrath of man to praise him, or work all things according to the counsel of his own will, even though it appears in such a manner that carnal reason will stoutly say, Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath resisted his will?

Saul answers to the lustful, corrupt desires of the flesh, and his administration of the kingdom of Israel is an illustration of the method and results of carnal policy when applied to control matters pertaining to Israel. Though head and shoulders higher than any other Israelite, and possessed of great mental strength. Yet he is a failure and his life is without deliverance to Israel. He never does what is clean and pure. There is sin mixed with all he does. This represents the flesh. Does he prophesy, or is he found among the prophets? There is some unbecoming conduct that leads the people to say, Is Saul also among the prophets? If God sends him to slay Amalek utterly, and leave him nothing, Saul spares their king and the choicest of their flocks. Is he commanded by Samuel to tarry a certain number of days until he (Samuel) shall come to him, when a distress falls upon him he will not tarry, but thrusts himself into the priesthood to enquire of the Lord, showing that he is not possessed of patience, and therefore will not wait on the Lord in the time of a trouble, but must take the matter in his own hand and manage the case himself. If he meets the enemy in battle he does not obtain a victory, nor can he stand against his adversaries. If Jonathan opens the battle with omens of victory, Saul by rash vow lessons the triumph, and entangles the goodly Jonathan in the meshes of his recklessness. Such things show that the flesh always blunders, and that while one is under the law he stumbles, and that the law makes nothing perfect, for by the deeds of the law no flesh living shall be justified.

In this sense Saul represents the works of the flesh under the law which affords the clearest illustration of the weakness of the law through the flesh.

The first covenant is the covenant of works, or the law that made nothing perfect. Though it is what carnal Israel desired, yet it only demonstrated their failure and sinfulness, for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

While the office of King of Israel is a holy one, the corruptions or lusts of the flesh display their unholiness more grievously when acting in this capacity than they would if cast into some obscure place where nothing is required that is holy. It is manifest that Saul is in no sense equal to the demands and requirements of the solemn and highly important trusts of the sacred office of being king over Israel.

When the commandment comes sin revives and the convicted one dies. Sin by the commandment becomes exceeding sinful. Because the law is holy, just and good the corrupt nature of man is shown and manifested the more clearly as that holy law enters with just demands on the sinner.

Not only is there a failure of Saul to fulfill the high trusts of the kingdom of Israel, but there was the display of the wicked principles of the flesh as anger, wrath, malice, envy and murder against a man better than himself, even David, a man beloved of the Lord, and innocent of all the evil Saul imputed to him. Saul was deeply indebted to David who had delivered him out of the hand of the Philistines slaying Goliath the giant. But when the people sang that Saul had slain his thousands, but David his tens of thousands, envy at once sprang up in Saul and he sought to slay David although he was innocent of wrong, and was his son in law, and had wrought a great deliverance for him. But who can stand before envy? This is one of the foul principles of unclean nature. It is silly, cruel, wicked, murderous. How foolish it is to envy another for his superior gifts or abilities? If God has given them to him and I envy him, am I not finding fault of the Lord who has given him this greater ability, or these gifts? If I were humble I would be glad that another er has greater gifts than I, because they enable him to render greater service to those that I should love, and therefore I should rejoice if another serves them better than I can.

Suppose the people praise another more than they do me, or think more of another than they do of me, what of that? If I am humble I will feel that he is worthy of being more highly esteemed than I, and that God's favors to me are far above my deserts. But is not envy in every heart naturally? I know it is in my heart or nature, and I know it is a sign of weakness and vanity. But envy is hateful to me, and I feel how foolish it is, and that I am far happier when free from it. When I love one there is no envy. It is a joy to me to see one prosperous whom I love. It is far happier to be free from envy, for it not only leads me to be cruel to another, but it harms me also.

Saul sought David's life and meditated and plotted his death. Instead of attending to the duties and calls of his kingdom and people, he devotes himself and employs his army in vigorous endeavors to kill David. It is so much better to be always employed in a good thing. Even the lowly and obscure commend themselves as worthy, if they are constantly engaged in useful business to the extent of their capacity. How much more would it be expected of a king to be occupied, and to employ his servants in useful labor. Especially would it be expected that the king of Israel would lead in the example of highleous living, and command his servants to do likewise, illustrating that the children of Israel should be lovers of each other because they are lovers of God.

Saul's conduct was such that God departed from him, and then his course was one of continued blunders and sins involving Israel in increasing distress and confusion. No one can do that which is right unless God be with him. If one stands in the place where righteousness is required, and the Lord is not with him his conduct is worse, and its effects more disastrous in proportion as the ground is holy and the service required spiritual. Cowardice, cruelty, deceit, vacillation, infidelity, pride, rashness, ingratitude, slander, hatred, malice, murder and every unclean principle or lust of the flesh is shown in Saul. In consequence of his rash and wicked conduct his cause becomes desperate. Samuel deserts him, and worse still God casts him off. No answer in his distress comes to his relief. The priest gives him no comfort. The Urim and Thummim are silent. No answer from God. The clouds of distress thicken, the storm gathers darker. In his distress he cannot wait upon God, but goes to a witch for comfort. Though he had put away the witches, yet he ignores his own work, and seeks counsel from that quarter. As the Philistines uncircumcised and Israel's enemy invade the land, and Saul hears the warnings of evil, and feels the omens that portend his death, he disguises and prostrates himself before the witch of Endor with his wretched, guilty conduct stalking as an apparition before him, as if in the hideous form of a demon coming to torment him the witch calls up a form or appearance of Samuel, who reproves Saul for such a visit, and foretells his doom that shall speedily follow.

Can you picture to yourself a sadder scene than that of poor Saul, an already fallen king, how abject and wretched as the doom he so much dreaded is confirmed to him. Turn where he may evil meets him. Determined to make an effort in battle, for he was war-like, he with his army meets the Philistines in deadly combat, and, defeated on the barren mountains of Gilboa, he implores his armor bearer to slay him, lest the uncircumcised triumph over him. His armor bearer cannot slay his king though sinning. Saul slays himself courting death rather than the anguish of defeat, and the stings of his guilt.

Do you know a character in the Old Testament scripture more opposite to Saul's than is David's? Little of stature, anointed out of a horn, not chosen by any man, not even Samuel himself when sent to anoint, as being the Lord's chosen, coming slowly into the kingdom, deeply tried, patient, enduring, returning good for evil, honoring Saul, sparing his life, and respecting him, never losing a battle, a sweet singer, a type of Jesus, full of gospel matter, reigning in excellent majesty, seldom sinning, and repenting deeply, dying in peace and full of honors, leavin the wisest son that ever lived to rule the most glorious kingdom of earth, and to build the house David's heart was set on. David's character is the opposite of Saul's. For Saul as representing the flesh begins better than he ends. He presents an imposing show in the inauguration of his reign, but difficulties accumulate in which he shows no wisdom necessary for their successful management. While David ascends very slowly through great perplexities, as if on slippery steps, to the kingdom, but he makes haste slowly; yet how safe his course and how wise his conduct. His bitter experience ripens him for the harvest of rich fruit that is so plentifully yielded in the most magnificent earthly reign that has ever crowned a king, or blessed a people. In youth he was called from the gentle avocation of nursing sheep to fight a giant who was defying the armies of the living God. After this signal victory, a type of Jesus alone treading the wine-press of the wrath of God, for of the people none were with him, but he alone dies for all, (for David fought for all Israel, for all of them together had no power to fight Goliath,) he is retained in the service of Saul in the camp, and marries Saul's daughter. But as David's glory is emblazoned Saul's cruel envy burns against him and he meditates the death of this wonderful youth. As Saul's dark and ambitious nature comes forth in guilty efforts to slay his son-in-law, David's character shines brighter and brighter. It is most lovely as shown in his league with Jonathan, in his valor on the field of battle, in his calling on the Lord in the day of distress, in his fertile and wise measures in the moment of peril, in his pity towards Saul in sparing his life, or returning good for evil, and in honoring the office of King even when the incumbent's conduct was degrading and wicked. David always saw the high office, and not the vile man Saul. He was the Lord's anointed. He loved the Lord and that was above all. If you love the church of Jesus Christ, the misconduct of some or many of its members will not lessen your devotion to the truth. However wrong others may be, or however wicked their conduct is, your love to Jesus and the cause of truth should not be abated nor your faithful service at all chilled. If you are rooted and grounded in the truth the declension of even great multitudes will not cause you to swerve from your devotion to truth. In this day we see many untrue to their professions, but should that turn us again to folly? We see some disposed to abolish all distinction between truth and falsehood, making God the author of confusion, but should we do this way? God anointed Saul to be king over Israel, and David feared God, and, while he did not do as Saul yet he acknowledged that God made Saul King, and therefore he would do the Lord's anointed no harm.

When Saul ran him out of the land of Israel and David sought shelter among the Philistines, and proposed to their king to fight against Saul and Israel, it showed the depths of his casting down. It was not that David hated Israel, or would harm Saul. If one is turned out of the church of Christ wrongfully I believe he should respect the church still and honor it for the truth's sake.

What David intended when he went to the king of the Philistines and tendered himself and men to fight Israel is not apparent, but God delivered him, for the lords of the Philistines said to their king this David was a wily man and a great warrior, and that when the battle was joined he would desert to Saul and do then more harm than if he were not among them. The Lord always delivered David out of his distresses, even as to this day the Lord will deliver his heart's delight, or those in whom he takes pleasure. David's life was one of faith in God, and it was most happily illustrated in his serving the Lord and waiting patiently on the Lord, who heard him, and inclined his ear unto unto him, and delivered him out of all his distresses. David was not a selfish, ambitious man, but he loved the God of Israel and therefore he loved Israel, and he served the Lord. He enquired of the Lord and sought to do God's will.

He was too a great sufferer for the truth's sake. Instead of gratifying his fleshly desires when Saul was put to death he sorely lamented his fall. His sad refrain when hearing of Israel's defeat, and the death of Saul and Jonathan, is one of the most exalted utterances of unselfish devotion. His love of Israel and his desire for her glory rise far above the carnal rejoicings of a selfish nature that rejoices at calamities, and exults over a fallen foe whose death opens the way to its own promotion. David saw in the death of Saul that the Lord's people were dishonored, and that the uncircumcised rejoiced over the Lord's anointed fallen in battle. This David could not but mourn. He was not a cowardly man and vile who would rejoice over the calamities of an Israelite disgraced. What principle is that in us that will proclaim among our enemies the faults of our brethren, and seem to do this more than to talk about the things that accompany salvation. It is a vile spirit in us that gloats over the faults and sins of our brethren. You may be sure that where there is love there is no glorying over the calamity of another, nor publishing it in Gath or in the world. Charity hides the multitude of sins.

David, when he had opportunity, sought to appease Saul's wrath instead of provoking him. If thy brother trespass against thee go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone. That is so much better than to be publishing his faults all over the country.

While David's distress was so great and he was saying there was but a step between him and death, when one of the priests escaped the bloody decree of Saul that the Lord's priests should be slain, because one of them had entertained David in the integrity of his heart, thinking that he was doing Saul himself a kindness thereby, and fled to David for protection, how strange was David's language to him, "Abide thou with me, fear not: for he that seeketh my life seeketh thy life: but with me thou shalt be in safeguard." 1st Sam. 22: 2. When a child of God is himself greatly distressed and overwhelmed at the temptation that there is no hope for himself, if another one should come to him with the grief of his own case, how readily he will receive and comfort that one, especially if their cases are similar, or if the enemy that seeks one seeks the other also. We must ourselves be poor in order to enrich others. We must ourselves be in prison to entertain strangers.

When one, thinking to secure a reward, brings to David the news of the death of Saul, supposing of course it would gratify David to know that his enemy was slain, instead of rewarding him by commendation or gifts, he commanded him to be slain. Thus he showed to all Israel he did not seek Saul's death, even under two of the most seductive motives that ever allure the heart of man, namely the gratification of seeing the downfall of one seeking our death, and opening the way to the greatest promotion ourselves. Who could withstand if God is not with him? Not David's implacable foe was slain, but the king and the armies of beloved Israel had fallen down slain before the mocking and uncircumcised Philistines.

After David was enthroned king over all Israel, and his enemies all around him had been brought under fear and tribute to his dreaded power, he remembered poor, dear Jonathan long since slain in battle, and enquired if any of Jonathan's people yet lived that he might show them kindness because of the covenant between him and David. For the Lord was between Jonathan and David in a covenant of peace, and when the Lord is between two thus they are knit together in love.

Mephibosheth, a lame son of Jonathan, survives him. His great loss of power to walk compels him to be far off from Jerusalem, the city of the great king. Then he is of the fallen and polluted house of Saul. But what impediment is that to king David who loved Jonathan and therefore loved what was Jonathan's. His nobility of soul too is proven in remembering Jonathan in his own prosperity, and when Jonathan's son is in adversity.

Does David send down a conditional offer to this lame man, that if he will get up to Jerusalem and behave well, or do a certain thing, that then he may eat bread at the King's expense? No, he makes no propositions, but sends with kingly authority down to Lo-Debar, where the man lame in both his feet (not one with one good foot, or one with a spark of grace, that if he will improve may swell up into a sufficient quantity for all needs,) was living, and he brings him up to Jerusalem, the city of the great king, and there at the king's expense he eats bread at the king's table all his life.

Our Spiritual David brings the halt, lame and blind to his banqueting house, and, though they remain lame all their lives, he still feeds them. For the covenant of peace that was all of David's desire embraces all these vessels of mercy though broken at the fountain, and for the sake of the covenant of peace Jesus remembers all these when exalted a prince and a Savior at the right hand of God to give repentance unto Israel and gifts to the rebellious.

David's love for his people was very active and true. He loved Israel. We prove our love to the church by doing what is right and shunning what is wrong, by seeking the peace of Israel, and doing good, or that which is commanded in the word of God.

David's love to his own family, even to the ambitious and haughty, unprincipled Absalom, who would have slain his own father, and drenched the land in blood to be king, is one of the most touching incidents in the life of David.

The equity and justice of his administration of the law proclaims his fitness for kingship. To rule over men one must be just. His kingdom was the brightest on record. How few were the stains on his conduct. Once Satan stood up and moved him to number the people. In the day of his great prosperity, being flattered it may be by the great multitude of Israel, he desired to count the number. This number was not to be known. For this a plague struck the people and Israel was smitten. The manner of one who has sinned under chastening indicates his true character quite as much as it may be set forth under any circumstances. When God gave David the choice of one of three things as a chastening for his transgression, he chose to fall into the merciful hand of God, knowing that God is compassionate, and that man is not merciful. The cruelty of war, and the waste of the hungry, gnawing tooth of famine are shunned; but the more direct touch of God in sickness is accepted. His unselfishness and love of Israel is manifest in his confession that he had sinned and not Israel, and his prayer that the plague might settle on him and his father's house, and that Israel as innocent sheep might go free. His refusal to accept as a gift the offering for sacrifice of Araunah the Jebusite shows that he would not offer to God that which cost him nothing. The place where the offering was made that stayed the plague is the choice spot where Mount Sion rested, a type of the church of God. Jesus offered himself, not something that cost him nothing, and made atonement for Israel. It is in the hearts of all true Israelites in the worship of God not to be counterfeits, not to profess to have and to offer something which they have not felt or experienced. What would you think of a preacher that would preach a borrowed sermon, or of a child of God that would offer a borrowed or memorized prayer, or come before the church in conference with an experience he had gotten from another man? We speak that we do know. That which we have seen and felt in our own hearts we testify of. It is not becoming in a church member in the matter of church expenses to withhold his part of the contributions. Each member should minister as of the ability that God has given him in spiritual gifts, and also should give of his worldly goods his reasonable part that there be no inequality nor partiality; for the Spirit of our spiritual David is in all Israel, and each one therefore should bear his part and stand in his lot.

While we are redeemed without money and without price, for Jesus redeemed us to himself by his own blood, yet when we are brought into the house of God we all are brethren and should together serve one another in love, and all minister as of the ability that God gives. In the matter of David's other notable transgression there is food for reflection. At the time when kings went forth to battle, David sent Job forth with his army, but he tarried in Jerusalem and walked on the housetop. David or any other is more apt to sin when exalted, or while walking on the housetop than when in the valley or in the field fighting in the Lord's battles. David always behaved wisely while he was oppressed by Saul. It was when he was lifted up he sinned. When Ephraim spake tremblingly in Israel he was safe, but when he offended in Baal he died.

CALL.

The church at Mountain Creek has called upon Elders J. C. Williams and S. C. Little and the Liberty, High Hill and Watson Creek churches the 2d and 3d days of March. It is requested that all the brethren that feel concerned will meet them.

OBITUARIES.

I. J. W. and WILLIAM L. BROOKS.

Please publish the death of the following two brothers, who were removed from time to eternity so near the same time that their bereft friends prefer that their obituaries appear together viz: Iveson J. W. Brooks, born Dec. 26th, 1825, died Nov. 3rd, 1892, in the 67th year of his age; also William L. Brooks, born June 2nd, 1832, and died Nov. 4th, 1892, in the sixty-first year of his age. They were the sons of John L. and Mary B. Brooks deceased, of Rockingham co., N. C. Said Iveson J. W. Brooks was a man of unblemished character, a good husband, kind father and obliging neighbor, who will be greatly missed by his family and neighborhood. He never joined the church but was very attentive to hearing the gospel preached whenever and wherever he had an opportunity. He possessed a remarkable memory of texts and discourses that he had heard many years past, and could call them over with much sincerity. He was an able contender for the faith once delivered to the saints. A few weeks before his death while in usual health he said to his companion in answer to her question regarding his future prospects "Lizzie, I have a hope that I would not take this world for." He was taken with a severe chill about seven days previous to his death, which resulted in Pneumonia. He continued to weaken despite all the aid that could be given him until death relieved his sufferings. His body returned to earth and his Spirit to God who gave it, and may we be enabled to say with Job, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord, and may we all be resigned to his will and sin not with our lips. We hope that all his living children may consider and honor their father and mother and try to follow the example of father, though they can see him no more in this world. May the Lord prepare them and all his friends to meet him where parting will be no more.

The said Wm. L. Brooks of Caswell Co., N. C., was from childhood a steady, pious youth, brought up by religious parents. Father often spoke in public, admonishing both saints and sinner. Both father and mother were members of the Primitive Baptist church at Gihiam's for many years, religion being their daily conversation. Brother Wm. professed a hope in Christ and united with the church at Gilliam's about '69 or '70. He lived an orderly member and acting deacon of the church for many years. He was faithful to his meetings and association unless providentially hindered. He taught the public schools in many neighborhoods, giving general satisfaction. The last few years or his life he spent on his farm, taking care of his family, consisting of an afflicted mother-in-law, sister-in-law and motherless daughter. He left a worthy example for the living, and died apparently in the triumphs of faith, saying to his daughter a short while before his death, if there was not a change soon he could not live, but if it is the Lord's will to take me I feel resigned, though if it could be his will I would love to stay with you longer. He soon sank into a slumbering condition, but aroused by being spoken to, for a short time. He passed away easy as one going to sleep, without a struggle or a frown, was sick only about two and a half days of bilious or cramp colic. Thus a good man has passed away. May the Lord sanctify his departure to the good of the church, his family and friends. The mother of the above bore eight children, all having passed away, leaving good evidence of a saving hope in Christ, but one brother Jonathan, deacon of the church at Mc Gray.

SALLIE A. LUPTON.

It again becomes my painful duty to try to write an obituary notice of another one of our little flock. Sister Sallie A. Lupton daughter of Ambrose and Nancy Jones, born 1843 in Carteret co., near Newport N. C., married James Lupton 1858. There were born unto them 13 children, 9 of whom survive her. She united with the Primitive Baptist church at Goose Creek, on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July 1872, and was baptized on Sunday by Elder Cartright. She was a true, consistent member, always glad to meet with the brethren, and talk of her trials and troubles in this life, which with the rest of God's afflicted poor were many. Her door was ever open to the Baptists, and never failed to fill her seat at meeting times, unless providentially hindered. I have known her to go when she looked too feeble to walk, seemed to try to contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints, ever depending upon Jesus to keep her from falling, and giving him all the honor and glory, for all things both natural and spiritual. I am glad to say she lived to see her husband baptized in the same faith and order of herself, but sorry she never communed with him, which she greatly desired to do. He was baptized the second Sunday in September 1892. She was taken sick Nov. 1st with Pneumonia and congestion of lungs and died Nov. 10th, 1892. I visited her as much as possible during her illness, and was with her when she died, she was resigned to death as long as she was conscious, told them all she must go, told me the first visit I made her, she wanted to see my husband, but he being absent at that time, said she should never see him again. She leaves a good name for well doing, which is far better than the wealth of the world. To her husband and dear ones that are left behind I feel to say, weep not for her, but try as much as lieth within you to follow the example she laid, looking unto Jesus for help in every hour of need, for he is a gracious burden bearer. She has heard the welcome, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," and "has gone from the evil to come."

EMMA J. EVERETT.

Washington, N. C.

MRS. MALINDA K. WOOD.

It being the request of her father and mother I will try for publication a brief biography of my dear wife Mrs. Malinda K. Wood. She was the second daughter of Elder Peter Corn and wife. She was born in Patrick County, Va., on the 13th day of October, 1864, where she spent her earliest childhood days. While she was yet a child her parents moved to Franklin County, Va., where little Ruth grew to be a woman of modesty, taste and beauty. 'Twas here I met, loved and admired her and spent many happy hours at her rural home. We were wed on the 14th day of April, 1881. We went to Floyd county, Va., to reside where we lived happily and prospered for about ten years, when troubles came and crushed our joys into an ebon mass of sorrow. She was afflicted of chronic rheumatism first, then tuberculosis or scrofula set in, settling in the left knee and rendering her a cripple the re-mairder of her days. No tongue can tell nor tongue describe the pain she suffered during the last two years of her life, which she bore with all patience and christian-like fortitude that one could well sum up. She was attended by two of the best physicians in our reach but all to no avail. She died on the 26th day of November, 1892 in the 29th year of her age. She died in this county near her birth place, having been moved back here last April. She leaves four children, ages 11, 8, 5 and 3 with myself to realize the loss of a dear wife and mother. She was a woman of extra deportment and character, possessed a noble mind and heart, and had many woven friends. She was a constant bible reader and a regular attendant of church as long as health would permit. She was concerned I think about her future when quite a child. She seemed to desire brighter manifestations in God's mercy than she had, though she said she was willing and ready to die, wanted to feel happy enough to shout one time before she died. She said it was a cross to leave the little ones and myself behind, though she knew she must go and felt resigned to the will of God. When the morning of her departure came she looked calm and serene, was very weak, said she was not suffering any, but was weakening away, did not talk much. She told her father that she was willing to go, told her sister and myself that she was most gone and begged me not to weep for her, she would be better off. She was conscious to the very last moment, told me she was getting blind, which was the last word she ever uttered and only lived two minutes more, she then threw her hands up several times and tried to speak, but was too weak. Thus died the darling of my heart, almost without a struggle.

Farewell dear wife for this short life
My heart seems rent in twain,
With heavy cross I bear my loss
For Thy eternal gain.

I was God above in his great love,
Who called thee from thy pain,
And caused a dart to pierce my heart
For thy eternal gain.

As thou art one around the throne,
No longer I'll complain,
But cheerfully bear each pain and care
For thy eternal gain.

D. H. Wood.

MARY GENEVA,

Infant daughter of M. K. Piner and Mattie, his wife, was born July 26th, 1891, and died September 4th, 1892 of Cholera Infantum, just one year to a day after the death of its grand-mother our beloved sister Mary E. Piner. We have no doubt that the little babe has gone to rest with our blessed Jesus. Infant salvation is one thing that the scriptures are silent on, yet we fully believe that those dying in infancy are among the redeemed of the Lord. Salvation is of the Lord, whether of infants or adults. We really know nothing of any other salvation but infant salvation, for if a person be old they must be made as a little child, helpless before salvation is manifested to them, and at every manifestation of God to us all through our pilgrimage we are humbled as a little child. We cannot receive Christ in any other way. He is the Saviour of little folks only. David was assured by faith that he should go to his child. He believed in God and of course fully believed he should go to rest after death. This is sufficient to show us that David fully believed that his child was with God in heaven. Job felt that if he had died in infancy he would have been at rest and he was a tried servant of God. Many a child of grace has felt while under conviction that if they had died while infants they would have been at rest in heaven. Jesus our Lord said, "suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." All these and perhaps more are evidences that those dying in infancy are the children of God. The little child as well as the adult must be regenerated, must be born again, born from above. As they are partakers of the Adamic nature by natural generation, so must they be partakers of the divine nature by spiritual generation. God is not confined to age any more than he is to circumstances. He called Samuel for the prophecy at the age of three years. Jeremiah was sanctified in the womb, and John the Baptist leaped in the womb at the salutation of the Virgin Mary three months before he was born. These evidences prove that God does visit some by his quickening Spirit before they are brought forth in natural existence and in early childhood. This is proof also that infants are sinners for if not sinners they would have no need of the quickening and sanctifying Spirit of God. No one is saved but a sinner for Jesus died to save sinners. He came to seek and to save the lost and no one else, and if any are not sinners of course they are not lost and therefore are not among the saved of our Lord. I cannot see that any one is saved, whether infants or adults, unless they are sinners. Christ was a sin bearer and saved those whose sins he bore and nobody else. We fully believe that infants are sinners in their earliest stage of existence, therefore they are the subjects of salvation. Committing sin does not make one a sinner, but is an unmistakable evidence that they are sinners, just as stealing does not make a thief but is the fruit by which he is known, so sinning is the fruit of a sinner and by this we know them. Righteousness is the fruit of the Spirit, and by this we know the child of God. Baptists have been censured for many generations as preaching infants in hell because they say that the infant is a sinner, but I will say that they are the only people in the world who preach any salvation either for infants or adults. They are the only people who preach a Saviour for sinners, and such are we all. May the good Lord give consolation to the bereaved parents in my prayer. Your brother I hope in Christ,

L. H. HARDY.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

WHY AFRAID OF CHRIST.

BROTHER GOLD:—Late in October last a village Post-Master in Comanche county, Texas, said to me, "One hears strange things now-a-days. The other day some men were conversing about the prayers they heard at a meeting that Christ would come and make one in their midst; and one of them said; "Yes, and if he were to come and show himself there, they would every man of them break for the bushes and hide themselves scared half to death." Now," continued my friend, "that sounds mighty queer. I can't see why people should be afraid of Christ and run away from him. When he was on earth great multitudes followed him. Women rushed through throngs if they might touch the hem of his garment. Mothers brought their little ones to him and he took them in his arms and blessed them. Men climbed trees to get a look at him; uncovered the roofs of houses to let down their sick where he was. They laid their sick by the side of the way he was to pass and he healed them. He so far departed from conventionalities that he touched lepers and cleansed them. He accepted invitations to the houses of the wealthy and dined with them; but he mostly consorted with the common people. He was the friend of the poor. He joined in the festivities at a marriage, made wine and drank it sociably with the other guests. He received sinners and ate with them, both men and women. Nobody seems to have been afraid of him then. Has he changed that we should be afraid of him now? Does not the Book say, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever?" I wish he would come. And if I were to hear and know for certain he was personally at Dublin or any other place, I would gladly leave my store and at once go with haste and crouch at his feet and ask the privilege of staying with him. Why should we be afraid of Christ, man's best friend?"

O brother, how my hungry and thirsty soul drank in those words of that quiet, unpretending post-master! It was the biggest sermon I had heard in many a day. Eagerly I said to him, "I'd go too! And now for the second time in my life I feel to say Amen to John's prayer, "Even so, come Lord Jesus!"

That talk did me so much good—it came upon me like a sunburst in a cloudy and dark day. I have told it to many and now offer it to your readers for their comfort. Women, why are you afraid of Christ? Men, why are you dreading the day when Christ shall appear and you appear before him? Sinner, why are you afraid of Christ? Is it not written, "Christ Jesus came into the world to SAVE SINNERS?" and that "this is a saying worthy of all acceptance?"

Brother Gold, give this to your readers. It will do them good.

Yours truly,

WM. S. SPEER.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, BELOVED BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Most gladly I have received yours of yesterday, as an expression of christian love and affection, and you may rest assured that this feeling of affection is fully reciprocated by me, as far as one who is so dull and cold-hearted as I am, can appreciate and reciprocate such unspeakable blessings. It has indeed my brother "been a long while" as you say since we have passed letters of private correspondence, but in all the time there have been but few days, if any, but what I have thought of you and many other fellow-laborers in the gospel of Christ.

I hear you through the LANDMARK and seldom fail to enjoy more or less your articles therein. My wife also enjoys your editorials very much. And in this connection I mention that I never fail to think of your kind liberality in sending LANDMARK gratuitously for so many years, for of all the Old Baptist papers published, none of their proprietors "except you only" have thus done, (of course Gospel Messenger not included in this remark.)

But as I have been broken off twice since I commenced writing I had better try to answer your questions.

As to my health I have been an invalid in some sense for 50 years, suffering more perhaps than any man ever suffered to go about, travelling, preaching and serving churches, as I have done. None but God can ever know the depth of my sufferings and sorrows, and none but He can ever administer supporting grace, strength or comfort. It is useless for me to complain before man, or to man, and this is one reason why, as you say, "I do not know that I have ever heard you speak of this matter" of affliction and death. I regard my preservation so long in the furnace as bding so marvelous that I often feel to be dumb before God and man concerning it. The power and glory of God is clearly seen in the preservation of the three Hebrew children in the furnace and I can the more readily believe it, from the fact that I have been a partaker of the same power and grace in the many fiery trials through which I have been called to pass.

You ask "Am I robust or feeble?" I am always feeble, but exceedingly so for 18 months past, prostrated first with one thing and another. About one year ago I was taken with La Grippe from which I still suffer. I have been only twice eight miles from home by private conveyance in eighteen months. I have attended our monthly meetings at Mt. Olive, four miles from Opelika, tolerably regular, but at my request the church called Eld. J. T. Satterwhite as assistant pastor as I was not able to baptise, and the Lord is bringing some in the church which is in a live, healthy condition, though none of the members live near the church, and I and my wife for five years have been in Opelika with our children, as we could not well stay alone where we were when you were with us.

I have preached monthly here in Opelika for more than three years except when too feeble to get out, and my personal labors in preaching and visiting, though but little, are confined mostly among the Primitive Baptists of this city. Our youngest son and his wife, with infant child, are in the house with us, and have been for twelve months, but business is such we fear he will have to leave us to get employment for a living and then we will be alone.

My last spell seems to have injured my mind and memory more than any afflictions I have ever had, and you see I cannot bring my remarks to the point I wish, without rambling like an old man telling a long story.

You ask if I am as anxious to live on this earth as I was years ago. Well, I don't think I am. Though my afflictions and adversities have made this earth but a bubble to me most of my life. And I have so often felt there was not a hair's breadth between me and death, that it seems one of the most wonderful things that I have been preserved till now I am nearing 74 years. It is wonderful grace and mercy to me, whether it so appears to others or not. I think I feel a greater degree of composure now about death or life than I have formerly done. For many days before receiving your letter I had been thinking of David's prayer, "Cast me not off in time of old age;" Psa. 71, and where he says, "I was cast upon thee from the womb." I had just finished writing an editorial for the Gospel Messenger on this line of thought, "time of old age," when I received your letter. Receive this as a token of continued love and regard.

W. M. MITCHELL.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD, IF ONE SO UNWORTHY AS I FEEL MYSELF TO BE MAY CALL YOU BROTHER:—I am well pleased with the LANDMARK, for it is all the preaching I get in this country, as there are no Primitive Baptist churches in this country. I have belonged to them for 25 years, and never have had any cause to complain, for if they do not preach the truth I never have heard it. I was baptized by old brother Gold, of East Tennessee, in 1867. I have forgotten his initials. He went back to Tennessee and died. Peace to his ashes, and may his spirit ever bask in the sunshine of God's everlasting love; for he did give me, poor and unworthy as I am, the strongest consolation that I have ever received of mortal beings on earth; for when I told my experience he said brethren my heart leaps for joy. Brother Gold, I have thought for a long time I would try to write my experience for publication, but whether I will or not the good Lord only knows; for I do not. I was born in Person county, N. C. in the year 1829, and left that county in 1843. So you see I have been away a long time. But when I see Wheeler's church named in ZION'S LANDMARK my mind runs back to that old church; for there my grand-mother belonged, and there the split took place, and the Missionary Baptists left and went and built at the spring near George Burges, and called their church Mount Clement. I never could see how they could be the Old Baptists, when they went off from us, and we have got plenty of living witnesses yet, though I suppose it was to take away their reproach.

Remarks.

The old brother Gold who baptized brother McKissack was my father's oldest brother I think. He went to Tennessee and became a Primitive Baptist preacher I have heard my father say. His name was Christopher Gold. If any of his relatives see this I request them to write to me, for I have an interest in my kindred, especially when they are Primitive Baptists.

Wheeler's church, in Person Co., N. C., is in a good, prosperous state. Elder David Moore is the pastor, and has been for many years.

Brother McKissack, write out your experience and send it. Primitive Baptists are lovers of such things. A gospel experience will make the heart of an Old Baptist leap for joy. I have often noticed Primitive Baptists sleepy-looking under preaching, but I have never that I remember seen a sleepy one while a child of God was telling his experience of grace before a conference meeting.

CONSTITUTION OF A CHURCH.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, MY VERY DEAR BROTHER IN THE KINGDOM AND PATIENCE OF JESUS:—Please publish the following in ZION'S LANDMARK. I met a large congregation of people in the Primitive Baptist meeting house in the flourishing little town of Ridgeway, in Henry county, Va., on the 29th of November, 1892, and after singing and prayer, I tried to preach to the people. Then according to previous arrangement, Elder J. M. Lewis and myself organized ourselves into a presbytery to organize a Primitive Baptist church at Ridgeway, Va., by brother Lewis agreeing to act as Moderator, and myself agreeing to act as Clerk. Then called for the letters of dismission of those who wished to go into the constitution, when the following named brethren and sisters presented letters of dismission from Matrimony church, in Rockingham county, N. C.: Elder A. L. Moore, J. W. Griggs, J. M. Burgess, J. A. Miles, Sarah Cox, Louisa P. Gilley, Ann F. Boaz and Emma E. Griggs, eight members desiring to be constituted into a gospel church. Then called for articles of faith. We were then presented with the articles of the covenanted Baptist church of Canada. The brethren and sisters received them as their faith, and after reading the articles of faith, we then received the church covenant and rules of decorum, as drawn up by brother J. W. Griggs, and read them. And the brethren and sisters unanimously agreed to adopt the above mentioned articles of faith, rules of decorum and church covenant as theirs, and we believing all to be Biblical and orthodox, and each member subscribing thereto. We, the presbytery therefore declared them to be a Primitive Baptist church in regular order, by giving them the right hand of fellowship. Then signed constitution, WM. R. WELBORN, Clk.

J. M. LEWIS, Mod.

Tuesday, Nov. 29th, 1892.

The church then agreed to be called the church at Ridgeway. Then chose Elder A. L. Moore pastor, and brother J. W. Griggs clerk and deacon of the church. The brethren and sisters would be glad to have the preaching brethren visit them. Their pastor and clerk's address is Ridgeway, Henry Co., Va.

Please dear brother Gold, give this a corner in your paper.

I am as ever your poor little unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,

WM. R. WELBORN.

DEAR SAINTS IN CHRIST:—I have written my experience from nature's darkness to the light and life of Christ, or a sketch of it, and now will try to write my experience from the time I received a hope in Christ until I united with the church. My purpose in doing so is to try to drop a word of encouragement for the little lambs who are too weak to come into the fold, for I have much sympathy for such as these. It is good that fathers teach children the teaching the good Father teaches them. I have always been disobedient, and my Father is so merciful. He is faithful and corrects me, though he makes me to mourn, lament or cry it is for my good, a benefit to my soul which is the most precious thing of all to me. The thoughts of my soul used to pain me when I saw nothing but death, but now it often bids me to sing, since I have light and life. We hope we trust in God whose love cannot cease. The next day after I obtained mercy it came on my mind I ought to be baptised. I felt like I was so blessed I ought to keep the commands of my Saviour, and I thought I would the first opportunity, but by the next meeting, at the old Reedy Prong where I expected to join, I was not in my feelings a christian, and I did not think I ought to be among the christians unless I was one. I thought I loved them, but I did not think they could love me, for I had found in this time I was still a sinner, and I thought it would not do for sinners to be in the church with the christians. What shall I do, said I, for I cannot stay in the world, for I do not love its principles. I cannot go to the church, it is too holy for such a sinner as I am. So it appeared to me I had no home, and seeking one was my great study for about twenty two months.

All this time I was very much dissatisfied. I moved in a strange neighborhood. I and my wife had no child at that time, my wife fell sick with pneumonia, nobody came to assist me at all. I was very poor and the people seemed to take no thought of my trouble. I sent out word for them to help me, or to come and help sit up with my wife; but no one came. I began to be astonished at them. I wondered was it because I was such a sinner. I sat up three weeks by myself, except one night my neighbor's wife that I spoke of in my first letter stayed with us. That night I slept a little, but I had lost sleep till I did not want to sleep. About the end of three weeks I was grieved over the thought of not being cared for by the people. One morning about day-break I lay down across the bed weeping over my sad state. I fell asleep and dreamed I was passing through an old field and saw the people very thick and very busy, and I walked in the midst of them crying and begging them to help me, but none of them noticed me. I passed all of them, and came to a thicket. I was more distressed than ever. I cried out, Lord what shall I do! Instantly my attention was called up in the heavens. I saw two shining ones coming to me with garments white as snow. They seemed to look me in the face. They alighted on the earth near me and came toward me hastily looking me in the face. I took them to be the angels of the Lord and said to them, Lord tell me what is the matter with my wife. They said to me her sickness is the signs of bearing a child. I told them it could not be so. They said it was so, and for me to go home and attend to my business, for they would attend to her this week, so I went home and the sun was rising just as I got home, and when I awoke and went to the door the sun was rising. I began to rejoice in the Lord, and to think that he would help me, for I fully believed in the promise they made to me. But what way they would attend to her I did not know, but soon there came an old lady and brought her daughter, and said she had brought her to stay that week and raise my wife. Then I saw how the Lord could care for me. I began to praise him and think he was my friend when all creature help failed. I went out to bring in some light-wood, and there came some words to my mind saying, in the great day of the feast Jesus stood and cried and said, if any man thirst let him come to me and drink. These words came with sweet influence, so much so my tongue uttered the words as they came to me, and when I uttered them I commenced speaking them again and again. I could not help speaking them. These words ran on my tongue some three weeks, and they burdened me. I did not know the cause of it. Then I dreamed I was in a pondy place of water fearful of snakes. I was afraid to move any way for fear I would be bitten. I cried out to the Lord for help, and there came a man to me and said, come and go with me, and I followed him. He carried me to a large house and carried me up stairs and carried me west a few steps, and told me to look. I saw a burning pit of fire. I began to think I was to be judged there. He went east and bid me follow him, and he showed me a large city. He went in to see how I stood on his books, but bid me to stand at the steps. He came out and stood on the steps and began to cry. I saw that I was not worthy or safe. He began to say, in the great day of the feast Jesus stood and cried and said, if any man thirst let him come to me and drink. I fell at his feet and begged him to spare me. I awoke. It was a dream. I saw it was him whom my soul loveth. Though these words are not just as they read in the testament, but they did my soul good. Dear little lambs of God, if you have evidence of the new birth I ask you to call on Him who is able to keep you. He is good and kind to all his children who call on his name. So let me say to you, pray to him in secret, and he will reward you openly; and think not that it is your duty to love the world, but love him and keep his commandments, or first seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you. If you seek lawfully the things pertaining to God he will give them to you. It seemed to me I was not a christian, but I loved the christians, and oh how I wanted to live with them; but I could not come to the church. I would study nearly all my time saying what shall I do! Shall I join the church next meeting or not? Am I fit to join? This was a hard calculation for me to make. I would go back to my experience. I would say it was the Lord then, but would say I am so vile, so prone to sin I fear that I am not born again. So I studied so hard I could hardly eat, especially about meeting time, and just before. I would go to meeting every time and say to myself, I hope I will join this day, but when the dear old pastor would give the invitation I would sit and tremble over my unworthiness, then would go home and study about it another month. Finally I told my wife one day she might prepare me two suits for the next Sunday, for I expected to be baptized. She prepared them, but it was the same with me. I could not join. There were several meetings. I told her she could get my clothes ready, and I failed in them all. Then I went to see Elder James W. Lee to tell him I desired to come to the church and learn of him how I would get about it, for I had never seen any body join, but when I came in his presence I could not mention it to him. I stayed my time out and went back home making my calculation to never join the church, for I knew I was sinful, and thought it was not for such as I was, and I should have to stay in this lonely condition all the days of my life. Soon after this I dreamed one night there came a man to me and told me I had to go and preach at a certain place, and I went with him, and when we got there, while I was getting ready, the devil appeared at the same place to preach in my place. He tried to preach but could not. He confused the congregation so we all started home. I had not gone far before some one said to me I had not preached yet, pointing to a door that opened from the north-west I saw in at that door-way a host of enemies in angry rage desiring to slay me, and I saw there was no way to overcome them but to do what I was commanded, so I stepped to the door and opened my mouth, and the Lord gave me utterance, and as I preached I saw them all sink down out of my sight, and they troubled me no more. Then something like white bread began to fall from above, and I began to eat and rejoice in the Lord; but I did not know my fears of joining the church were gone. Soon after this I was going to meeting and my thoughts were on the way, will I ever join the church or not? I would be glad if I could to-day, but did not think I would: but when the door was opened it was no task for me to rise and go and tell the church what I thought or hoped the Lord had done for my soul, was received and baptized the next day. When I came up out of the water I felt to rejoice greatly, for it seemed to me I had left the world almost. My spirit rejoiced in being baptized for some time. I will write my call to the ministry soon. Now young converts, it is your duty to join the church. I don't persuade sinners to come to the church, but you, the humble saints that have been brought to know the truth. Some say they would, but they fear they are deceived. Jesus says, come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden. I will give you rest. Is not rest and peace of mind what you want. So come to his word or commandments, and you will obtain it. All the invitations of the gospel are inviting you, but you remain in trouble, or why is it? Because you do not the things he commands you? See Deuteronomy 30th chapter. You see there that you should turn to him and do all he commands you, and if ye do this ye shall live, but if ye will not turn unto me and do whatsoever I, the Lord thy God, command you this day ye shall die. We do not believe sinners are able to come in possession of life by their works, but we believe those he has given life should make it manifest by serving him. We cannot serve him right and not follow him into the water, but says he if ye live after the flesh ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live. Do we love the brethren? If so we love the Lord. Are we at their feet? If so we are at the Lord's feet. Your humble servant,

B. Wood.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Brotherly love is the most important of all the things interesting to the people of the living God, to possess which is the evidence of our acceptance with the Lord. Our Saviour said to his disciples as the Father hath loved me so I have loved you; continue in my love. If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love. Therefore as love is a fulfilling of the law and works no ill to its neighbor it is the highest point of elevation in the christian experience, and their faith is that which works by love and purifies their heart so each one has the victory by the same power for this is the victory that overcomes the world, even their faith which is given of the Lord unto them; so each one feels like Paul in their consciousness of sin to be the chief of sinners and are humbled before God and are at the feet one beneath the other in the knowledge of this great salvation manifest to them, and while thus led and exercised they will esteem others better than themselves and can do nothing through strife or vain glory, but each one will desire to glorify God in his body and spirit which are his; for it is in this they acknowledge they are not their own, but that they have been bought with the greatest of prices even the precious blood of Christ.

This my dear brethren and sisters, has been my stand point I believe in all my way in Zion. Remembering the way the Lord hath led me as one that was blind, utterly blind to a knowledge of his mercy and grace, being brought by a way I knew not, to rejoice in him and to love his name, his word, and his people, and in this a knowledge of his commandments, and to desire to do them, in accord with that greater love which no man hath than this that he laid down his life for his friends, and that they are the friends of Jesus if they do what he commands them, and these things he commands them, that they love one another.

The whole tenor of God's word unto his people is in the remembrance of his love to them, and this love is such in its fullness to them at times they can sweetly sing,

His love in times past forbids me to think That he will leave me at last in trouble to sink;
For, even down to old age all my people shall prove
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love.

It is therefore the strong band, the drawing cord and the fulness of union in the kingdom of our God for his people are knit together in it being one thread from beginning to end, and well could the man of God say, whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not from your lusts? Therefore the lusting to envy makes all the differences by leaving their first principle of interest in God instead of crucifying the old man with his affections and lust, and putting him off and putting on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, and putting away all malice, guile, envy, evil speaking, &c., and as new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word that they may grow thereby, proving the kingdom of God to be not in words but in power, not in meats and drinks, but in joy and peace in the Holy Ghost.

It does seem strange at times that God's people should fall out by the way, but such is apt to be the case. This is the record of truth concerning them that the admonitions and exhortations should be of use to them that have an ear to hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, and participate in the gospel salvation of believers to prove that he that endureth to the end should be saved. May the Lord bless your labors of love.

The following piece of writing put forth by an interesting young son of our dear brother William Golding just before his death is published by request. Ed.

This a copy of C. C. Golding's writing just before his death.

"God is the greatest and wisest of all beings. It is in Him we live, move and have our continual existence. We should never use His holy name in vain, but His glorious name should be exalted and praised by every creature here below."

(His writing about the death of his uncle Thomas and his people.)

"I was very sorry to hear about the death of Uncle Tom's folks. I never heard anything about it until they were all dead and buried. They have gone the way of all the world, and paid the debt we all owe. If they were prepared to die all is well with them now.

The most glorious thing for me to think upon is the little hope and the great probability that my fathers whole house will be prepared to meet King Jesus in midway of the air, and see his shining face in peace when he comes the second time. Oh that our family may compose a little family of angels around God's throne in eternity without one of us being missing. Columbus."

DEAR BROTHER GOLD, please give the following a place in the LANDMARK. The church at Bethlehem, in Tyre Co. N. C., (of which I am the unworthy pastor) have commenced to build them a new House of Worship. They have it ready for the shingles and weather-boarding and are very much in need of means to complete it. They are willing to finish it themselves if able, but they, like the most of us, are poor as to this world's goods and the past year many of them have not even raised bread enough to serve them, therefore they are having a hard struggle and for these reasons the church in Conference Saturday before the third Sunday in Dec. 1892, requested me to say through ZION'S LANDMARK to all brethren and friends that any amount they may feel willing to contribute will be thankfully received. They do not propose to build a fine house, but desire to make it comfortable. They are living christians and much interest is manifested by many outsiders. I hope the Lord may put it in the minds of many to help them.

Any one desiring to send them anything will send it to brother C. H. Davenport Columbia, Tyrrell Co. N. C. Yours in hope,

J. T. ROWE.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, MY DEAR BROTHER, FOR AS SUCH I DO REGARD YOU:—If I could express to you my feelings to-day it would be great pleasure, but neither tongue nor pen can describe my feelings toward the people of God—the household of faith. The very thought of Jesus and his love to a chosen people inspires my heart to love these despised people. Oh for more faith, more humility, more faithful serving Him who is all and in all! I feel so weak. If my brethren only knew how vile, imperfect and worldly-minded I am they could not and I think would not manifest such love for me as they do, but I want to tell them that my trust is not in my own weak self.

If Jesus who has all power is not my Saviour then I am lost. I have read the consoling words of dear brother Chick in June 1st, and feel from my heart that I am not one serving from reward, but rather, if I serve at all it is in love. I hate the ways of sin, yet daily I find myself a sinner by actual transgression. I have no desire to sin, I hate sin, yet I sin wilfully. Brother Gold, why do I do this? Is it because I have not tasted of the heavenly grace, or am I like Paul who said it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwells in me.

But what am I doing? I have forgotten my work. When I took my pen I intended only that I was sending some money and what to apply it for, but my heart was filled with the love of God and with abhorrence of my own vileness and I have wandered thus far in my remarks, but at present will add no more on this subject. Your sister in hope of life.

DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST JESUS:—
How very welcome your letter was! I read it with a good deal of pleasure and hope that I may hear from you again soon. I am glad that you find some comfort and delight in the love and fellowship of the members of the church, which is Christ's body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all. In the companionship of the dear people of God, in the things of the kingdom of Christ there is a sweet retreat from the vexations and tumult and din that we encounter in the world.

In mingling with the dear people of God, whether in the regular Conference meetings of the church or otherwise and hearing them tell one to another of their felt sinfulness and helplessness, and of all their hope being in the blood and righteousness of the Son of God, they tell the daily exercises of my own soul. I may have been thinking that I was journeying in a path altogether alone, "a solitary way" Psalm 107. But when the children of God tell of their wanderings I find that here and there some of them have been in the self-same path. There seems to me a gathering together of these solitary ones when the saints are gathered together in Jesus' name. "God setteth the solitary in families." Psm. 68: 6. He says in Jeremiah 32: 38, 39, "They shall be my people, and I will be their God; and I will give them one heart and one way." This one way is the path in which the footsteps of the flock have been led in all ages. It is the high way in which none but the redeemed are found, Isaiah 35. If any poor sinner is found walking in this one way the evidence is that he is a child of Jehovah, a subject of grace. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God. Let us look dear sister at some of the features peculiar to the new covenant people to whom Jehovah gives "one heart and one way."

There are a few words recorded in the prayer of Jabez, that to my mind are descriptive of the regenerated household of God. "Jabez called on the God of Israel saying, Oh that thou wouldst bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldst keep me from evil, and that it may not grieve me. And God granted him that which he requested." 1st Chron. 4—10. The Lord Jesus Christ came into the world to save his people from their sins. And is it not from sin that every one that is taught of the Lord yearns for relief? The fear of the Lord in our hearts is to hate evil, Prov.

8:13. Yes my dear sister, be assured that where the grace of God is in the heart of a sinner it teacheth him to deny ungodliness and worldly lust, to live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world. Titus 2:18. Our own sinfulness is a grief to us, and this being so shows that God has put the love of righteousness in our hearts. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Matt. 5:6.

Our felt inability to keep from evil constrains us to seek that help and grace from our God that we may be kept from sin: for if not kept sin will overwhelm us and we shall be swallowed up with grief. "'Tis sin that doth my spirit grieve, and Jesus only can relieve." Every one of all the Israel of God knows his own sore, and his own grief, and with prayer and supplication spreads forth his hands unto God. 2nd Chron. 6:29. This was the experience of God's chosen in Solomon's day, and to-day it is the same. Often we become faint and weary and discouraged by the continual warfare against the world, the flesh and the devil. They make so many inroads into our happiness and peace. But the life of conflict with iniquity is the very pathway that the redeemed walk in. Our dear Redeemer as the Captain of our salvation trod this path before us. He went forth against our sins, conquering and to conquer. He traveled in the greatness of his strength, mighty to save his people from their sins. He was wounded and bruised, smitten and put to grief. Yea, he poured out his soul unto death for the redemption of his people from all their transgressions. Isaiah 53. All the flock of God that follow Christ Jesus, the good Shepherd, are manifest as such "striving against sin." Heb. 12:4. Our glorious and previous Saviour resisted unto the shedding of his own precious blood striving against our sins. Blessed be his name he triumphed! Oh, may the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, constrain us continually to be considering the works, and sufferings and triumphs of our Saviour. Seeing that we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, Looking to Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood striving against sin." Heb. 12:1-4. In this quotation is portrayed the people with the "one heart and the one way," and this is the path trodden by them all. By the grace of God they are found "striving against sin," and looking by precious faith unto Jesus as their only hope of righteousness and victory.

We shall be more than conquerors through him that loved us. We shall overcome all by the blood of the Lamb. If we have this one heart and one way then we shall love the Lord our God, we shall love his doctrine and love his people. For "he that loveth is born of God and knoweth God, John 4:7, and we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. John 3:14.

Oh may this be manifest in us in deed and in truth to the praise of our God. May the Lord's mercies crown your pathway is the heart's desire of your brother in Jesus.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—In the LANDMARK for January 15th, 1893, there is a typographical error in the piece over my name which I hope you will correct. In first column on first page, I am made to say, "So we must look for some other way to get at the true meaning of the mark, &c." Now if you will take the whole of the first line on second or 98th page, 1st column, and place it over the word mark in 2nd column, 1st page, it will read right as follows, "So we see we must look for some other way to get at the true meaning of the parable. I may be far off the mark, but nevertheless," &c. Then if we will begin at the bottom line of second column, 1st page, and turn to 2nd line, 98th page, we can read thus, "the trophy of grace which was given in Christ Jesus before the world began," &c. Please make the necessary change and oblige, as what I write is very poor at best, and when the type does me injustice it is perfectly impossible to get at what I aim to say.

Yours truly,

G. C. FARTHING, DURHAM, N. C.,
DEAR BROTHER:—Writing to you has been on my mind for some time, as I have not chanced to see you. I am very much concerned about my debts. I owe just debts that I am not able to pay with my present arrangement at farming. I am very busy the few days I am at home in each week. I am attending five churches as pastor, and some other calls, but my labors do not seem to be blessed much either spiritually or temporally. I often fear that I am deceived in my hope, and also in the call to the ministry. If I was what I profess to be, would it be so with me? I am bereft of my children. We were blessed to raise ten, five boys and five girls, all looked well to us. While they were all with us we could not see what we now see, my wife and myself alone. When I leave home my wife alone, two fine looking young men buried, the others all left us. I would be constrained to feel all the while that my sufferings are on me for my sins, but I see so many that bear fruit of the true servants of God that have to suffer perhaps much more affliction than I do. So I can only hope in the Lord that his purpose is for my good. The difficulties in the church are a trouble to my mind. The question arises, are we the kingdom that John spoke of, and Christ spoke of when they said, repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand! His militant kingdom, the church, the visible kingdom of heaven on earth, where he makes his saints sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. He is not the author of confusion. The question may arise, is confusion a rod of his, or does the church leave his commands and examples by fleshly construction of his word, and confuse each other by the way? I will try to give you my feelings upon the subject of confusion among brethren of the Primitive church, which is the pillar and ground of the truth. It is not in the Spirit of Christ, the only church that the Lord ever built, according to his word, that he gave to her his eternal love. This confusion arises by the imperfect membership of that body. We think if we all could feel our imperfections enough to say with the Apostle, when I would do good evil is present with me, that being the case I do not feel that I can judge my brother and dictate for him what he shall say or do: for I look upon him as being better than I feel. So if he feels to be at a communion meeting and refuses to partake of the elements, or sits and looks on at the brethren and sisters, who may feel that they wish to wash each other's feet, and takes no part with them because his feelings do not point him to do so, should we not say in ourselves that he is accountable to his God, and not to us, and have fellowship for him, hoping that he is honest and is waiting on the Lord. If any of us perform anything outwardly to the Lord without a will to do so are we not acting deceptively? Then we think it best to bear in meekness, temperance, patience, godliness and in brotherly kindness, and long forbearance one toward another. I have not written what I started. I want to sell my land and pay all my debts. Thanks for all favors.

Yours in hope,

EDITORIAL.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I cannot write by my own appointment. I conclude I would not do for an editor, for sometimes I wish to write on some subject because I have been requested to do so, but find that it is all merely mechanical, head work; no power, no life, no feeling in it. Last night I tried to write an article for the LANDMARK. Something had been upon my mind with power the night before, but that I could by no means recall. I finally selected a subject that has often been sweet to me; The Lord is my Shepherd, and wrote a few pages. Upon reading it over I found the words and sentences were very much as though they were made out of wood, no vitality, no heart work. It is about the same with me as in trying to preach. Whenever I try to say what was on my mind or in my heart yesterday, or try to use a subject because I have had liberty in speaking about it before, I have a dry, miserable time, and I conclude the spiritual hearers do too. If there is ever anything for me to write or speak that will be for the benefit and comfort of any of the Lord's people 't is just what he gives me at the time, and I ought to be contented to deliver just that, whether little or much, with the ability he gives. For many years I have not often answered requests to write upon. I am thinking this morning of how the Lord answered Moses' prayer, "Show me thy glory." Ex. 33:18-23.

I will express a few thoughts concerning the words of the Lord, "Thou shalt see my back parts, but my face shall not be seen." Moses was made to stand on a rock, in a place which is by the Lord. This rock was Jesus, and this place an heavenly place. The Lord caused all his goodness to pass before Moses. This was done by proclaiming his name. In that name of the Lord is all his goodness and glory. While his glory thus passed by Moses was hidden in a cleft of that rock, and covered with the Lord's hand. This appears to set forth the gospel truth that the glory of God is seen in the execution of the just sentence of death against the sinner, and that only in the death and resurrection of Jesus is there deliverance from that condemnation and death; that those who are in him, in the cleft of the rock, have answered in his death all the demands of the law, and are secure from condemnation, while they are enabled to behold the glory of God. While he was glorious in the law that condemned them, they see a greater glory in the ministration of righteousness to them through the death and resurrection of Jesus which redeemed them from death, and presents them holy and unblameable before God in love.

But they cannot see this glory beforehand, nor even as it is passing by. But after it is passed then the hand of the Lord is taken away, so far as it hid what he was doing from their sight, so that they can now understand the meaning of his acts that are past. His hand protected them, though they did not know even that. The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation; but not until afterward can they see that it was his power that saved them. They cannot see his face, cannot know what his will is beforehand, cannot know what he is going to do. This knowledge would kill them. Jesus saw his approach, knew what his will was, saw his face, and died. In his death is their salvation from death. They are covered in that death with the power of God. Yet God's way is hidden from them till his glory is passed by, till his goodness has all been performed in their behalf; then he removes his hand, and they see his back parts, see what it all meant, see his glorious purpose of love and mercy fulfilled in their salvation. Then they can praise him with understanding.

We want to see the way before us. We want to know what things mean that are now taking place. When great afflictions are upon us, when circumstances are contrary to our will, we say, "I cannot see how these things can work for my good." But it is not according to God's will that we shall know till afterward. "We walk by faith, not by sight." We cannot see the footsteps of one whose way is in the sea, nor trace the path of one who walketh on the wings of the wind. However dark and mysterious and terrible are our surroundings, we know that the Lord is over all, and that his way is the very whirlwind which seems about to destroy us. It is a wonderful blessing to be enabled to feel and say, as Job did, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

An experience of grace cannot be known by the subject of it to be such until it is past, and is interpreted to us by the dear Saviour. The man that was born blind, and whose eyes Jesus opened, could say "A man that is called Jesus opened mine eyes," and could contend that he must be a good man, and could submit to being forsaken by father and mother and to being cast out of the Synagogue rather than deny what he had experienced; yet he did not know that all this was a revelation of the Son of God to him, until Jesus asked him, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God?" He answered, "Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?" "Jesus answered, thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee." Those who were in the midst of the sea, in the night, toiling with rowing, with the waves boisterous and the winds contrary, and a Spirit, as they supposed, coming towards them on the water, so that they cried out for fear, did not know what it all meant until Jesus spoke to them saying, "It is I," and came into the vessel. Then the storm was over at once, "and immediately they were at the land whither they went." Peter did not know the meaning of his hunger on the housetop, and the vision of the sheet which was shown him there until he was at the door of the house of Cornelius a day or two after. Then the Lord's words to Cornelius made it all plain. It was not until the flood was past, and the ark had rested on Ararat, (Holy Ground) and the cover was taken off the ark, as the hand of God was removed from over Moses, that those in the ark were told by the Lord what it all meant, and saw the rainbow against the storm cloud that had gone by.

Elihu told Job how God works with man, bringing him in hunger and weakness and desolation and terror, to the very gate of the grave and destruction. Then he does not show him what he can do to escape, for man can do nothing, but he speaks of an interpreter, one among a thousand, who will show him what all this experience of trouble and affliction means, that it is the way the Lord brings him away from his righteousness and strength which are vain, to the righteousness of Christ. Job 33:14—26.

Concerning all his ways and works, Jesus says, "I tell you these things before they come to pass, that when they come to pass, ye may know that I told you of them." But not until they are past can the Lord's people see and know them. And all who can see the wonderful works of the Lord have surely been hidden in the cleft of the rock. All who saw the rainbow had been saved in the ark. No one else was in the world then, and they all stood on Ararat, holy ground. So all who see the everlasting covenant have been saved in Jesus, and are standing on holy, gospel ground. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show unto them his covenant.

DAVID AND SAUL.

"Now there was long war between the house of David and the house of Saul; but David waxed stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker."—2d Samuel, 3:1.

David walked on the house-top and saw the wife of Uriah bathing herself. He sinned and thought to cloak his sin, for one bad thing leads to another. How powerless is even such a man as king David in the hands of Satan. He procured the death of an innocent man in battle and consoled himself by the chance reasoning that one man is as liable to die as another in war, and there is no special providence in it. How different from his once bright reasoning as he comes an innocent youth from the sheep-fold to slay Goliath, and said, is there not a cause? How blinding is sin? Does David think he can hide this deed? Yet he reasons well when Nathan comes to him. We know better than we act. It often seems to me that I might do better than I do. We can tell others how to act better than we act ourselves. When Nathan presents a case that embraces the history of his own recent conduct, David passes a righteous judgment against that rich but heartless man that spared not the one little ewe lamb in the bosom of that poor man, but took none of his own sheep for the slaughter.

When the prophet said to him, "Thou art the man," David at once said I have sinned. How much that expression embodies when uttered in its depth and breadth. It is easy to say it from the lips, but to feel the power of that burden of shame and death in the heart, with no plea nor excuse, and also realizing death as the wages of sin is so seldom felt by man. There is in David this blessed trait of humility. Without an apology he confesses and repents of his sin. It is so common to see Baptists stout and stubborn, and when they sin excusing, if not justifying, their conduct, or half way confessing. It looks like that people that are so often speaking of their vileness as some Baptists do, until some charge is justly brought against them, would humbly confess their sins when they transgress.

While God pardons the sin of David, and he is not put to death for this grievous sin, yet he has that sin to burden him as long as he lives, for the sword shall never depart from his house.

Here is an example of the case of a child of God whose sin since he received a hope is pardoned, yet the painful, humbling remembrance of it is to distress him to his grave. He pardons his saints, but let them not turn again to folly.

The conduct of David's own children, first Ammon defiling his own sister, then Absalom slaying Ammon, and finally seeking to steal the kingdom from his father, flattering David's subjects to induce them to think he would make a better king than his father, and then failing in this he seeks to slay his father with the sword, are things that painfully remind David of his conduct.

It is a good sign when our sins do oppress us and we carry a bitter remembrance of them to the grave. Paul never forgave himself because he persecuted the church. This persecution too was done before he was a believer in Jesus, and while he was in unbelief. One of the surest marks that we are subjects of grace is that we feel that we need grace, that is that we abhor ourselves as sinners and repent in dust and ashes and that this repentance continues; for it is a godly sorrow that works this repentance or causes it. Hence those who are the subjects of grace carry an abiding conviction of vileness. Such souls as these are the humble ones knowing they are conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity, and therefore are vile in their nature. Such souls as these justify God and abhor themselves.

As a warrior David is famous. The captains of his tens, the captains of his hundreds and the captains of his thousands struck terror into the hearts of his enemies as they led his armies with weapons supplied from his armory. They girded on buckler and shield for the battle. There is no other king, general or commander I have ever heard or read of that was always victorious in a battle, nor did his men ever flee in battle. He was a man of war, and fought many battles. He gathered much material for the temple which he could not build because he was a man of blood. In this he represents Christ who is the leader and commander of his people, the captain of our salvation made perfect through suffering. The Lord God remembers all his wars and sorrows. Jesus fought the battles of his people alone. He was never defeated. He is more than a conqueror. For every battle of men is with confused or doubtful noise. At times it looks like this will conquer, and then it looks like that will conquer, and then there are garments rolled in blood, or much wounding and many deaths, and much loss, but this battle of Jesus the Conqueror shall be with destruction to every enemy, or with consuming every foe. He shall finish the work, make an end of sin, destroy death, and him that has the power of death, that is the devil.

Jesus in the flesh felt this suffering and did this fighting, and in the flesh he must be put to death. He was verily a man, and was in the likeness of sinful flesh. He must die to enter into his glory. It was in his resurrection that he was declared to be the Son of God, and entered into his glory, or ascended on his throne where God should give him the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. For in the resurrection all power in heaven and earth is given into his hand, and his kingdom is higher than Agag's, (Satan's) and shall destroy all the worldly kingdoms; for he must reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end to order and to establish it forever upon the throne of his father David. For he is this child born unto us, and this Son given who is of David's seed according to the flesh, but who is the mighty God, the everlasting Father, and the prince of peace. As Solomon built the temple of David's material in his reign of peace, so the Holy Ghost builds the church, or Jesus does it by the Spirit. Hence Jesus says he that believeth on me the works that I do he shall do also, and GREATER WORKS than these shall he do also because I go to my Father. The works that Jesus did in his apostles after his resurrection in building his church were more wonderful or greater than what he did in the flesh. For on the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost came as a rushing mighty wind, the displays of that gracious power of God unto salvation in building the church were far greater than any ingathering while Jesus was in the flesh here on earth. It was seed time, sowing time, while he was in the flesh. He went forth bearing precious seed weeping, but after his resurrection was the feast of harvest, or feast of Pentecost, ingathering of the harvest, the time of rejoicing and gladness.

In Saul's wars with David Saul was the aggressor. He sought to kill David. After David ascended the throne through the preparation God had made, and acted so that all Israel knew that David's ascent to the throne was pure and clean, then he slew some opposing and offending members of the house of Saul. These two houses could not both reign at the same time over Israel. While Saul was reigning David could not reign, but he must walk out and prove what are the true principles of the law, loving his enemies, doing good for evil, suffering for the truth's sake. David did this in the type. Jesus did it in glorious fullness and perfection. When Saul is taken away by death, then David rises under that holy anointing of the horn, and reigns in truth and with great blessing to Israel.

After this there was still war between David and the house of Saul. Some of Saul's sons aspired to be king, and made the attempt, and some Israelites leaned to that house and bolstered such pretensions. These pretenders were put to death after or in battle. It matters not how sweetly the kingdom of Jesus is set up in the new heart, and though it seems for the time that all enemies are slain, and we shout long live the Lord Jesus, yet there are the lusts of the flesh still lurking about and ready under any pretense, or on the slightest occasion, to attack David's kingdom, and carry on this old war.

There never was peace between the houses of Saul and David. Though Abner, Saul's captain, came over to David in peace, yet he is slain. Long after Saul's death, and after David had reigned for many years, when David fled before Absalom in deep abasement and sorrow, Shimei, an apparent friend to David in prosperity, but really a friend of the house of Saul, now creeps forth in the bitterest mockery of David as he flees for his life from his own rebellious son Absalom, and charges him with the murder of Saul, and that now these calamities have overtaken him in just retribution for his injustice to the house of Saul. This was very bitter, but what was it compared with the humiliation of Jesus? But how humble was the king? David owned the hand of God in this cursing of Shimei, for he refused to take vengeance, saying, God hath bid him curse me. The humbler we are, the more we see the hand of God in all things and this keeps us from rebelling or murmuring.

The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

There is in our flesh that which is contrary to Jesus. The carnal mind is enmity against God. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. It must be slain, and that is done by the cross of Christ, and in no other way.

The carnal mind embraces and controls the entire body of death, and it makes war against God. As Saul's house after his death sought all manner of occasion to overcome David, and when any pretext occurred, or there was apparent defection in David's conduct, or any act of his that gave offence to any, furnishing the least semblance of an opportunity to attack his kingdom, some member of Saul's house would be up in arms to usurp David's kingdom; so the foes in the fleshly nature of one born of God are his enemies watching for his halting, and ready to seize any pretext for an insurrection. They are as little foxes, or old foxes, full of cunning and always on the alert to spoil our comforts, and they work havoc on these branches if they once get the advantage. This is the warfare typified by Saul and David, and it was a long warfare. Indeed there is no discharge in this warfare except through death when there is an honorable discharge and a glorious pension that lasts forever.

There is one encouraging feature in this conflict, and that is that the house of Saul waxes weaker and weaker, while David waxes stronger and stronger.

Often the child of God becomes very much discouraged by the way, for it seems to him that he becomes weaker and not stronger, worse and not better, viler and not purer, and hence that there is no growth in grace in him. We will suppose that one professing to be a follower of Jesus should feel that he is stronger, better, purer and holier, freer from sin than he was a year ago. We will suppose another one professing to be a child of God is sensible of his decrease, feels and laments more and more the longer he lives his vileness and unprofitableness, and feels that the longer he lives the more need he has of grace, and the more exalted Jesus is to him. The first one we presented prays with himself thanking God he is not like others, he fasts twice a week, he pays tithes of all that he possesses, while the other beats upon his vile breast and says, God be merciful to me, a sinner. The one declares that he is doing just what the scripture says do—go on to perfection—be ye holy as God is holy; while the other says he is not meet to be called a disciple—he is less than the least of all saints, and is the chief of sinners, but in faith can say, "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." Which would you prefer of these two characters?

It is David that waxes stronger and stronger—NOT you. True, you become stronger as you become weaker, and when you are weak you are strong; but you do not think so. All the world could not make you conclude that you are strong when you feel weak, that you are holy when you feel vile. Yet that is true. But all this is to exalt Jesus, in that you feel your need of him, to the utmost. The viler you see yourself to be, the more holy he appears, the weaker you feel yourself to be, the stronger he appears. Jesus, in this sense, waxes greater and dearer to you in your experience.

What a wonderful prophet, priest and king is Jesus. David was a prophet. The Psalms richly set forth this gift in him, and show that Jesus is the subject of all his prophecies. He prophesied much of the time in sackcloth, setting forth the sorrows of Jesus and his sufferings. The spirit of the priest was also in David, for he ate the shewbread and showed forth the praises of Jesus though he was not literally a priest. For no one character or man of bible fame blended in him all three of the chief offices of prophet, priest and king; but Jesus is all of them in perfection.

David was a great king, though only a type of the righteous and everlasting kingdom of Jesus, all of whose ways are justice and judgment, for faithfulness is the girdle of his loins, truth the sword of his excellency, and holiness the crown of his head, while grace makes him the chief among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely. His throne is forever, and his sceptre is righteousness.

While David was a bright and wonderful character, the choice of the Lord, and a man after God's own heart, the sweet singer of Israel, yet he never trusted in his own works, but all his trust was the Lord. The covenant that God made with him ordered in all things and sure was all his desire. Grace, grace was David's theme. He was of gospel spirit. He saw Jesus of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh humbled to death, then exalted to the right hand of God until his enemies be made his footstool, and his kingdom made higher than Agag's, or than all his enemies, for it was an everlasting kingdom, and this filled David with joy. Jesus came from heaven delighting to do his Father's will. He received a kingdom of his Father and reigns in righteousness. He waxes greater and greater, stronger and stronger, and his kingdom endures forever. All his enemies shall be slain. The warfare is long, but the end is sure, the triumph certain and glorious, and blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

Did you ever think of the difference between Saul's death and David's last words and sweet end? See 2nd Sam., 23: 1-7: "Now these be the last words of David. David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet Psalmist of Israel, said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake unto me. He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds: as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain. Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure: for this is all my salvation and all my desire, although he make it not to grow. But the sons of Belial shall be all of them as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands. But the man that shall touch them must be fenced with iron and the staff of a spear: and they shall be utterly burned with fire in the same place." What could more clearly show that David's hope is Jesus and that he died in the Lord and rests in him forever? Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. It is further evident that David knew and felt the war even till death, and felt that there is no handling of these inveterate enemies only by the shield of faith, and that in death all our sins shall be utterly destroyed, and we released forever from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

DISCIPLINE.

A brother requests my impression on this question: Has a church the right of withdrawing fellowship from a member of its body for dealing in spirituous liquors in any way imprudently to the extent of destroying the peace and fellowship of said church, whether that member be dealing according to the laws of the land or not.

My impression is that a church can withdraw from such a member, and that she is wrong if she does not do so, and do it quickly too.

A thing may be lawful, such as running a government distillery according to law. But suppose it destroys the peace and fellowship of a church, is it expedient? Is it wise? Is it good? Is it brotherly? Paul says if eating meat cause my brother to offend I will eat no more meat while the world stands.

We know that drunkenness is condemned in scripture, and that it has caused much distress among our people, and that is a good reason why we should shun this thing which is worse than the appearance of evil, for it is an evil itself.

We know that it is right to keep sober, and to avoid the things that tend to drunkenness.

My advice to a Baptist that is so anxious to distil spirits that he will do so, ever if he sees and knows it will hurt the feelings of the brethren, is that he tell the church to cut him off from them, and not shoulder them with this burden; and my advice to the church would be, if one of their members is determined to do this thing, even if it destroys their peace, that all act together and withdraw from him at once, and let the wrong all fall on him where it belongs.

But suppose a brother says it is not the business of the church to notice this, if he does not still some one else will, and he might as well do this as any one, and that he must support his family, and they ought to let him alone, and allow him to do as he pleases for it is lawful to distil spirits.

Well is it a fact that the members of a church should allow one to do whatever he pleases whether they think it right or not. Are we separate from each other and independent of each other, so that one is not linked to another member at all? If I put my foot in the fire and burn it has my mouth no right to complain! It hurts my whole body if my foot is burnt. So much wrong and scandal grows out of making and drinking liquor that the best members among our people feel it is wrong to encourage it.

I should say a church is falling into great declension and decay if none of its members are troubled by such conduct.

I wish here to make some remarks generally on the duty of Baptists to each other.

If we are God's people we love one another, and cannot live in peace and happiness unless we walk in love. We cannot manifest to others, nor to our own hearts, that we are God's people unless we walk in love and peace.

Why is it we fall out by the way about anything? One member does wrong. His church or part of it defends him. Others oppose him. Two parties get up. The flesh rules all around. Their tongues break out like wild beasts, tempers get high, rough words are used, friends and brethren are parted asunder, correspondence between churches and associations is dropt. Bitter feelings rule. They bite and devour each other. No one is benefited. Everybody is damaged. The comforts of the brethren are gone—their church meetings no joy—their congregations wasted, and we are weakened as a people. What fools we are. How silly! Why, people of the world do not act as foolishly as that. If they quarrel they will make up again and be as though there had been no trouble. But such Baptists confess their faults and forgive! No sir, that will not do. I will not bow to that Baptist. I will die first. Yes and you are about dead now, but do not know it.

Whence come wars and fightings among you? Take heed lest any root of bitterness spring up among you, and many thereby be defiled. If you bite and devour one another you shall be consumed one of another.

You had better suffer a hundred impositions on you, and bear with a Judas than kill yourself by your stubbornness and ambition to have your own way. *

Rebuke them sharply that they may be sound in the faith. A part of this soundness in the faith that is indispensable is that ones conduct be good, that he be peaceable, quiet, returning not railing for railing, but contraywise blessing. But you say you must not fellowship evil. Do you ever see any evil in yourself? If you say you are without sin then go to throwing stones and slay better men than yourself.

PROF. S. E. WARREN'S

Institute at Wilson, N. C., is a deservng School for Young Ladies and girls.

I know of no school that I consider more worthy of patronage, because Mr. Warren is himself a capable Teacher that enforces good discipline and requires thorough work of his pupils, and he employs the best of Teachers. He is himself very diligent and watchful over the interests of the School. He is no man for show and pretense. Send your daughters to him if you wish them well educated.

REQUEST.

If each one of our subscribers, or as many as can, will send me an additional or new subscriber it would very much relieve me. Suppose each one see what he can do in this matter.

Quite a number of subscribers are several years behind. If such will send on all or even a part of what is due it will help me very much.

OBITUARIES.

MRS SMITHEY E. CORDELL.

In loving remembrance of Miss Smithey E. Cordell who departed this life Jan. 6th, 1892, in the 70th year of her age. She had been in feeble health for several months, but able to go about the house. Although a constant sufferer, she was perfectly resigned to her fate. It seemed she tried to provide a living as though she expected to live a long time, but tried to live as if she expected to die to-morrow. Oh what a christian example. She was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist faith, and had been for many years. She expressed a desire to see brother Haywood Honeycut and wife, also brother A. J. Walton and wife. She said she wanted to talk with them in particular, and would be glad to see any of the members of the Baptist Church that felt a willingness to go. A few days before she died she said she felt like God was coming to cure her, for her folks and the doctor had failed. She was perfectly reconciled to death, said she had as good a hope as anybody ought to wish for, all she dreaded in leaving this world was in parting with the breath; and it does seem that God in his infinite wisdom and tender mercies saw fit to make her suffering short when the final summons came; for she sat at her table and ate her dinner, and was dead in two hours. She was perfectly conscious to the last, told them she was dying, and gave directions as to her burial. Her sister who was her constant nurse during her sickness, says she never even saw her frown during her suffering, and she died without a groan, leaving a pleasant look on her face. Wonderful art Thou, oh God in all thy ways.

She leaves three sisters, several nieces and nephews to mourn their loss, yet we cannot grieve as those who have no hope, believing our loss is her eternal gain.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

DAYLIGHT.

When from above, dear God of love,
Thy Spirit Thou dost send,
My foes to quell, my fears dispel,
My spirit to thine bend.

At morning light, 'tis my delight,
My Savior and my King,
Of mercies sweet, with love complete,
And thy free grace to sing.

From morn to noon, with that sweet boon,
My feeble strength's renewed,
'Tis God's pure light that gives me sight,
The darkness then subdued.

From noon till eve, from sin relieved,
I'll praise no God but Thee;
Up to the skies, with streaming eyes,
My songs shall follow Thee.

At eventide, strong faith my guide,
Thy praise I'll still repeat;
Then my frail mind I find inclined
To things divinely sweet.

'Tis not my fate, long in this state
Of happiness to dwell,
But thro' great fears, with sighs and tears,
I roam the lowest cell.

Yet when the night has dimmed my sight,
I still will trust in God;
In Him will hope, while here I grope,
Upon the mould'ring sod.

While I am left this mortal breath,
This still shall be my plea,
That God above for me atoned,
Just by His own decree.

And when by death, my soul's bereft
Of this it's mortal clay,
In Heaven with Thee, I hope to be,
And there forever stay.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have been in the dark for a long time, until last week. Then being enabled to look on the work of God with light and joy, the above lines were presented to my mind, so I have put them in words for all to see that like. Yours in much love, ELIZA C. SMITH.

Walter, N. C.

OUR MEDIATOR.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Having been requested to write on the following subject, I attempt the task. "Now a mediator is not of one, but God is one," Gal. 3:20.

The text sets forth this in the present tense: such a thing as a mediator could not exist without two other parties. I understand an offended God constitutes one of the parties; on the other hand the sinner, or man, is the offending party. The law that was given 430 years after the promise man had violated, yet this did not set aside the promise. There have never been two parties further apart than these. All the wisdom of the world could not suggest a plan that would bring reconciliation. Justice would not be satisfied till the law was satisfied. We were in debt ten thousand talents, and nothing to pay with. So we were not able, could not deliver nor suggest a system by which justice could be satisfied and we justified. Here we have a Mediator with all the means of salvation ordained in him, and yet he is not of one, but God is one. If the Armenian idea is true he would not be a mediator, but an arbitrator. An arbitrator is one that is not interested on either side. In his labors he pays nothing, but labors to get the two parties to meet on half-way grounds, or at some inter-mediate point, most generally getting the creditor to come half way and the debtor to come the other, and effect a peace. But we in this text have one that is equally interested on both sides and is of both parties. If he had been wholly of one party he could never have effected a peace. If he had been of God alone then he could never have died and the law would never have been satisfied, and we would have remained under condemnation. If he had been of man alone then he would have been as man imperfect, and the law is perfect, and thereby he would have been unable to atone for our sins. So he would have been a failure either way. But he is of both parties equally interested. God is his father, humanity his mother, and so he stands as near to one as the other, and is of both parties equally interested. First, he is a perfect God; second, he is a perfect man. He is the Son of God, also he is the Son of man, and is given to us in full payment of that promise, and with him all things that we need. He, when instructed by his father came to this world in obedience to him. When he was born of woman he was manifested to us under the law to redeem them that were under the law. He lived the life of obedience to the law of man and God. He was man; he partook of our life which is a natural or time life, and instead of doing the work of an arbitrator, he performed the work of a mediator, which was to pay all the indebtedness of one party to the satisfaction of the law or other party. He gave us eternal life, and took ours that was a natural or time life, and lived a perfect life of obedience to the law, and of himself he was innocent, and came as our representative, and he himself paid the whole debt of sin for us. Justice was satisfied and he was laid in the heart of the earth three days and came forth from the grave. He as man had died, but as God he had not, and as a proof of that fact he came forth, was seen of men, and last of all about 500 of the brethren, and ascended to his father with all the cheerfulness of an obedient son. So our life had been given up in him, and the first proof that we have been given his life that is eternal is action on our part. We do not pray to get life, but is a proof that we have life. We do not work to get life, but from the fact we have life. As this life was eternal we wanted the blessings of eternity to support it. We do not seek to get life, but because we have life. We then, having eternal life given us, we as an offending party meet God, the offended party, in Jesus, the mediator, in perfect peace through what he has done for us. We cry Abba, Father, and feel that we are children. So he is in the present tense a Mediator, and just at this time we feel he is our Savior because we and God are at peace in him. So we always find peace in him and not in the world. Now, brethren, he is a perfect son of both God and man, he, as a son in obedience to his Father, maketh intercession at the right hand of God for the saints according to the will of the Father for the son to hear his mother's request. So he has never failed to hear and obey his Father, and if he were to fail to hear and grant relief to one of God's little ones that cries to him for mercy, he never could truthfully again say he had obeyed his Father in all things. So while he hears and obeys his Father on one side, he hears and obeys or grants relief to poor suffering sinners. So he does as instructed by his Father, and as requested by his mother. Suffering humanity then learns to ask him according to the will of his Father. Oh! the depth of gratitude we owe to him. We can never pay. He is so lenient and reasonable with us that he forgave us all the debt after he had paid, and all he asks of us is to show that we appreciate it to the world by our works. To do this we are found engaged in every good word and deed. JAS. D. DRAUGHN.

White Plains, N. C., Dec. 21st, 1892.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LES-TER:—I will try to write something of the dealings of the Lord with me, as I hope, though I do not feel myself competent to write anything for the public gaze that would be edifying to God's dear people. I was brought up in Alleghany County, N. C., by strict parents, who were members of the Primitive Baptist church. They did not allow me to go to parties and drinking saloons and many other such places, as many Baptists do now. They allowed me to go to preaching when they thought it prudent, but never tried to teach me religion; but they did endeavor to teach me to be a good, moral boy, and it is the duty of all parents to teach their children good morals, as morals, and not religion. On the 17th day of September, 1867; I went to one of my uncles' to hear old Brother Tommy Carr preach, though I was caring but little about religion. I reckon I went to meeting as careless and unthought that day as I ever did in my life, but was always taught by my parents to sit still and listen to the preaching. While old Brother Carr was preaching, it seemed to me that he was preaching right to me, and told me every thing that I ever did in all my life; and it did seem to me that every word that he spoke sank deep into my poor sinful heart with condemnation. That was the first time that I had ever fully realized that I was a poor, undone sinner in the sight of God, though I had never been a swearer or gambler, or drunkard, and many other outbreking practices that many other youths were engaging in. When I saw myself that day so great a sinner in the sight of God I could not help crying out Lord have mercy on me, a poor undone sinner. I then felt that I surely was the worst of all God's creatures. Oh, that I had been of the brute creation that have no future being, or had I died when I was young. The time has been when I might have repented; but now it is too late. But I do hope that then was the Lord's time, not my time. So I went on in this condition, sometimes seemingly better, and sometimes worse, and the very breathing of my poor soul was, Lord have mercy; and many times would seek some secret place to beg for mercy; and it seems that something would say, it will not do to get down here, some one will see you; go somewhere else; and many times I could not find a place to bow at all, for fear some one would see me. This is a little of my trial up to the 18th of October 1868, when I again was away from home at a night meeting, and my burthen became so heavy that I was prostrated to the floor, and it seems to me that I felt the very pangs of hell get hold on me. I felt that I was already condemned, and in a moment's time that I would be in hell, both soul and body, though strange it may seem to some; but from then there was a space that I was unconscious of anything. The unconscious time I know not how long (but I had thought if I went to hell it was just, and if I had to go, let me go praying); but the first thing that I remember I saw, not with my natural eyes, but I hope by an eye of faith, a great train coming towards me with a great and innumerable company on it, and they were all of one size, and all dressed in one uniform, and were as white as snow; and then Christ, the Captain of the ship, or train, and as it passed by the Captain took me by the hand. Then my burden was gone in an instant, and I was on my feet; everything seemed to be love in and around me, my sorrow and sighing were gone, and I, like the Children of Israel, when they crossed the Red Sea, could sing the song of deliverance, fully believing that I would never see any more trouble; for there was nothing to trouble about, my sins were all gone. I went home, and my mother, who I have no doubt had prayed for me thousands of times, asked me some questions, and I told her what I hoped the good Lord had done for me. Everything seemed to glide on smoothly with me until the third day, and this many times gives me trouble, for I hardly ever hear any of the brethren talk that were three days without troubles; but the third day, while in the field with my father at work, about ten o'clock in the morning, there was a great darkness in and around and about me. In a moment I felt that I was deceived, that I had caught at the substance and only got the shadow. I then for the first time went to a very lonely secret place and tried to ask the Lord if I was deceived, and if I was, that he might undeceive me, for I did not want to be deceived. Here is more than I can can write or tell. While I was bowed with my face towards the ground, light sprang seemingly into me, and I saw, as I do believe, the church in her militant state, and then in her triumphant state. I saw, as I believe, the church and world divide, and if I ever felt a divine impression of any public duty, it was right at the time that I was enabled to discern between the church and world. Then came another trouble that I cannot tell. My cry then was, Lord, I cannot go; send some one else. I viewed the cause so pure, and I so sin-defiled, that I could not speak in his great name. The brethren soon began talking to me about joining the church. I thought my hope so small that it was not worth going to the church with, and the church could not receive such an experience as mine, and I thought that I could not tell my reason of a hope without telling of my other troubles, and that I never intended to tell; so I stayed away from the church for about two years. When I was at church the door was published open. I did not aim to join the church that day, but the first thing I knew I had taken my seat to talk to the church. When I had told them something of my reason of hope I was received and baptized next day into the fellowship of the Piney Creek Church, in Alleghany County, N. C., by Elder Wm. Halsey. I moved the winter after I joined the church. When our first child was about four months old it was taken sick, and was sick forty-one days and then died, and I felt that it was my disobedience that caused that child's sickness, and I felt that if I, the guilty one, could suffer and die, it would be a blessing to me. I tried to ask the good Lord to take my life, and spare the innocent little child; but alas, "the little babe is gone to rest, to reign with God, forever blest." I then thought that I would run away from the impression. I moved to West Virginia, where hardly anybody knew me, and I thought that trouble would leave me, but alas, the same trouble went with me, and grew worse and worse, and I did verily believe that I had a disease seated in my breast that would kill me soon, and I wanted to get back to North Carolina. My wife was soon taken very ill with fever. I at once called the best doctor I could get. This was on Wednesday night. He attended regularly almost every day and night. On the next Sunday evening while I was standing on the porch feeling condemned for disobedience, and that these afflictions were for my sins, the doctor came to me and said that he had done all he could do. I again left the house and tried to make a solemn vow that if the good Lord would restore her, I would go; and when I returned to the house the doctor met me at the door and said he saw a change for the better, for which I felt great relief, and as she got better, I got worse—further in rebellion—not that I believed that the Lord was disappointed with me, but I believe this is the Lord's doing, and I had not tarried in the city of Jerusalem long enough; so I went on this way. It seemed to me that I was desiring to die in peace with God for about seven years and six months from the time I felt the impression of preaching. Now, some of my dear preaching brethren say that I miss them right here; but it is my own feelings that I am trying to write. I had gone just as far as I could, when I was called to a halt in my feelings, and death, as I did believe, was placed before me, and not only death, but condemnation. I fully believed that I would be dead and in torment before morning for my disobedience; and if ever I felt the power of God, I did then. My cry by day and by night was Lord spare, and I will go, not believing that I could live until our next conference, that being two weeks off; but when the time came, and the church was in conference, I told them some of my feelings, believing they could see my imperfection, and they would tell me to wait a little—that perhaps I was deceived; but when the answer came, it was for me to exercise in the bounds of the Mountain Association in exhortation and in prayer. So, next morning I went back and tried to introduce the worship by singing and prayer, and obtained great relief in my feelings. So, I have been trying to discharge my duty as best I could, from then until now, sometimes up and sometimes down. This world is too poor to hire me to preach sometimes, and sometimes I feel like it is too poor to hire me not to preach. Now, Brother Gold, do as you think best with this poor scribble. If you think it would comfort some of God's dear children publish, and if not, throw it by. Your unworthy brother in hope, J. M. WYATT.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST, IF WORTHY TO CLAIM THE RELATIONSHIP: I have had for some time a desire to write something of what I hope the Lord has done for my soul. I will try this evening in my weakness, if the Lord will direct my mind. I became in trouble about the date 1864. I had a dream, and dreamed that I was dead. I viewed myself lying in my coffin, and Mother was standing by me. I thought the world was going to come to an end. It seemed that everywhere looked lonesome and desolate, and I knew that I was not prepared. O, brethren and sisters, I felt awful, for I could do nothing, for I viewed myself dead. I awoke and was afraid, for I believed that I was lost. I tried to beg the Lord for help. I went on in trouble for some time. I thought I would throw this distress away, and it gradually wore off. Finally I thought it had left me. I went on in sin for seven ral years, when I took a very bad cough. The doctors said I had a lung trouble. I seemed to get back in trouble again. I sometimes tried to pray, going to the lonely groves, but was afraid to make the attempt to get on my knees, for it would just be adding sin to sin for such an unworthy being as I was to be taking his precious name in my sinful lips. I would go to see my playmates on Sundays and pass off the time very well until night came on, and then I would have to go home. I have many times parted with them with an aching heart, and cry almost all the way home, and try to beg the Lord to have mercy on me, a sinner. When I arrived at the age of 22 years I was married to Mary F. Stone. She treated me with all the kindness one could wish. I thought that now my troubles would leave me, and it seemed that they did for a time, though I went on in distress at times. My mother was taken with consumption. It seemed to give me great uneasiness again. I think it was the date 1883, it pleased God to take her from this world. She had been a member of the Baptist church many years. I believe she was a good mother, and prayed for me many times, no doubt. I looked at her when she was laid in her coffin, and thought "Farewell, Mother; you are gone to rest, and I shall never hear your kind and gentle voice any more. I shall never be able to meet you." I felt that I did not have a friend on earth, and worse than all, none in heaven. My father came to live with me; that gave me some company at times. He was a member of the Primitive Baptist church. I tried to read the Bible and found many precious promises, but they did not reach me. It seemed to condemn me. I tried to pray, though I could not get on my knees and was afraid it would just be a mockery. I tried one place and it would not do, and would go somewhere else, and it would be the same thing again, until December, 1887, when it pleased God to take my father to himself. He instructed me on many occasions, but now he was gone to meet dear mother, where I never could go, because I had trampled God's mercies under foot, and had done so over and over against a better-informed judgment. Would I could say with Paul, what I did, I did ignorantly; but it was not so with me. I knew to do better. It seemed after father died my troubles grew heavier than ever, and about a week before my burden left me that my very lungs breathed prayer to God to have mercy on me, a sinner, and that my burden was so heavy that I could not live. On the 26th of January, 1888, I went to bed at night, but could not rest, my eyes were swimming in tears, and after all were asleep, thought I would try to pray; so turned my face to the wall, but found nothing to say but Lord have mercy on me, a poor sinner; and then fell asleep and dreamed that I was at my brother-in-law's, and thought he had the prettiest stock of bees, and the whole yard was full of them. Their little wings were as bright as gold. We went in his farm, and it was all in flax as yellow as it could be. He said, Let us go to my cool shade and refresh. We came to a branch which in a bend had an island, and on it was a hill of corn which looked so sweet and good I was in a hurry to get it, and with my knife cut it off about three feet from the top, and when examined it had dried up, and the blades were yellow, and the tassel was as black as it could be, and I told brother that this of mine had blasted and withered away. He said, come and eat with us. I turned, and my brother and his wife were sitting on the ground and a large bundle of ears about three feet long were lying before them. I thought that was the food that God's children had to eat, and turned and went on the other side, and my wife was there; then it seemed that I was at home sitting in a chair, and my wife was standing by me. She seemed all at once to begin to praise the Lord, and she seemed so very happy. My head was bowed down, feeling most miserable. I raised my head to see her. She had her hands raised toward heaven looking upward. She was the happiest and prettiest person I ever saw. O, if I could feel as happy as she was. What a great blessing. Though all hope of being better had been lost by me, then in a moment I saw a white light, or rather a cloud came in at the door, and made the whole house white, and in that cloud or light I saw the Lord, and wanted to embrace him in my arms. I threw out my arms and it seemed like the whole light was right in my soul. I never can describe what a joy it was to me. I rose to my feet and clapped my hands, and shouted glory be to God. I was filled with unspeakable joy. Right there I awoke. I never had such a feeling before. I felt so small and so light that I did not know where I was for a while. When I came to myself I was in the bed, and I could not hold a limb of me still, my burden was gone, and I felt like I loved everybody. I had not slept very much for about a week. I felt so very happy and easy in about one hour I went to sleep, and slept so sweet. Next morning when I awoke I thought I would tell my wife of what I hoped the Lord had done for me, and this seemed to come to me, tell her what? It is nothing but a dream. So I did not tell her, and got in so many doubts I thought that I never would tell anybody. It seemed that I had caught at the substance and caught the shadow. Then I got in trouble about going to the church and could not go, and could not stay satisfied away. So I went to church the 14th of April, and after preaching the church was called together, I thought I would not go. My wife went and was received. It seemed like I would just rise from my seat any how, and the first I knew I was up and going, and told them what the Lord had done for me, as I hoped. I was received and baptised the next day. That was a happy day with me, though in about three days I wished I never had joined the church. I felt so vile and that I was deceived, and had deceived the church; and this is the way I travel on in doubts and fears. I find that in the flesh dwells no good thing. May God bless you all, and save as many as it is his will, is the prayer of your unworthy brother. Amen.

BROTHER GOLD:—I see in the LANDMARK a piece written by Bro. Eli Bryan, Nov. 15th number. As little as I feel and as unworthy as I feel, I feel to let the brethren and sisters know that I endorse what the brother has written. He has expressed my feelings so much better than I can or could. I was made to feel glad and thankful that the brother was made able to write such a piece. For it has done me more good than anything that I have seen in the LANDMARK in a long time Bro. Gold. I think if the LANDMARK was filled with such writing as the brother has written christians would pay up more cheerfully for the LANDMARK, and there would be a good many subscribers added to your list. I feel sure let me be what I may I feel to enjoy what he has written and I hope the brother will be enabled by the power of God to write again. Let me be what I may I think I have enjoyed his writings. Bro. Gold, you can dispose of this as you think best. I remain your unworthy brother as I hope in Christ.

RANSON GULLEY.

Galley's Mill N.C.

DEAR BROTHER HOWELL—:Your most welcome and highly esteemed letter was received last night and came to me in time of trouble as a message bearing good tidings from a far country. You can not imagine how much good it did me, for all day long I had been cast down and groaning in spirit and was troubled as I get so very often, fearing lest I be deceived about the all important matter of the salvation of my soul, and trying to pray inwardly that the Lord would send me some comfort, and I was also meditating upon my unprofitableness as a minister of Jesus Christ, and it seems at the same time the Lord by his Spirit was working his work in your soul also; how marvelously our God does work and none to hinder. The Lord be praised I said when I read your letter that he by his Almighty power did enable me to speak a word of comfort to his people. I hope I rejoice when I have reason to believe that the Lord enables me to serve his people in any way and I do feel that it does often strengthen the feeble knees and hold up the hands that hang down to let His poor servants know that they have ministered comfort to his people, for they know it is the Lord has done it and therefore have no reason for boasting in their own strength or becoming exalted in the flesh. I desire if I know my own heart to be at the feet of Jesus and the brethren and to choose Mary's better part.

I feel very sorry in one sense for Cousin Margaret's death, but I rejoice that her trials and afflictions are over. Glad you are all better. Mine are all well. Your brother in tribulation, but in hope.

M. T. LAWRENCE

Hamilton, N. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD—Dear brother enclosed you will find a letter I received from Elder M. T. Lawrence in reply to one I wrote him. The whole matter has been so much comfort and relief to me I feel a desire to have it published, if you think it not amiss, hoping it may comfort and revive some one else as it did me. My letter to brother Lawrence was to comply with an impression that came to me while he was preaching and one that stayed with me several days. And that was to tell him what a comfort his preaching was to me and how my heart did go out in thanksgiving and adoration to the God of our Salvation for such an unspeakable gift for one of his ministers to preach his Gospel with so much power, and in the demonstration of his Spirit to the edification and comfort of one of his little ones if ones at all. The Sister Staton alluded to was our dear sister and mother in Isreal, Margaret Staton. Oh, how we have missed her, yet we believe our loss is her gain, for I fully believe she has been recieved into that rest that remaineth for the children of God. Yours in hope of a better life.

Lawrence, N. C.

ELDERS GOLD AND LESTER, BELOVED BROTHERS IN THE LORD—:If it was not relieving my mind of a burden that has been resting on my mind for quite a while I should not bother you with my scribble.

I was born in Davidson County, N. C. nearly sixty seven years ago.

Consequently I am feeble both in body and mind.

I emigrated to this Country twenty years ago. The humble writer's name is on the Church book at Pine, in Davidson County, N. C., about thirty years, and I have never heard a Primitive Baptist preach in all that time, twenty four years, save when I was back there in the years 1888-89. Then I heard those eloquent men, Elders, Burch, Jones, Gardner and several other wonderfully gifted men proclaim the way of life and salvation. Can you draw any idea what a feast it was to my poor, hungry, famishing soul! Brother Gold, I have been requested time and again to contribute something for the LANDMARK that my friends in Davidson, who take the LANDMARK, might peruse. But I am too poor a writer and still worse composer to write anything to go before the public. I feel to be the very least in my Father's house, if one at all.

How lonely one feels with none to associate. A Baptist feels solitary often even if his brethren are dwelling near him. There is a religious element in this Country and they are as the world calls smart, calculated to deceive, and do deceive, and their views don't coincide with mine.

I hope and trust in the Lord that there are a few Israelites in Babylon. My wife and all of my children are members of the Missionary Baptist church. So you see what a position I am in. But I told my brethren at Pine, when I was there four years ago, that I thought I could stand it out in the weather nearly as well as in an old leaky cabin. Brother, I hope you may live long to comfort the feeble lambs as I hope you have me. Your very least Old Brother, if one at all. JAMES A. WILLIAMS

GIFTS.

[The first part of the following communication has been mislaid. We publish the last part because of the weighty matter worthy of consideration.

The writer, Elder E. Rittenhouse, is treating upon the various gifts given to the church, and that any gift for the church should be recognized.—Ed.]

It seems like reversing the order of things for a man to take this honor to himself, or claim that he possesses this particular gift. When a man has decided that he possesses this gift, if it has not been recognized as such by the churches, other important questions will come up. Is the man to follow the lead of his own life, or watch for the openings of Providence? Is he to travel and preach in destitute places, or is he to send a string of appointments to churches that are already supplied? If this latter course is proper and there has been no request for these appointments are these churches responsible for the time and expenses of the Evangelist preacher? These are questions that concern all the churches; and they also concern visiting, or travelling preachers. I think there are sections of our country that are quite destitute of opportunities to hear preaching, or if they hear any, it is begging for money rather than preaching. From such sections I think may now and then be heard the Macedonian cry "Come over this way and help us". Obedience to such a call could not meet with objections from any quarter, and as to a man's support, if he is endued with power from on High, that is with a gift to search out the sheep and seek them out from all places, where they have been scattered, I think his temporal wants will be attended to. If not, it might be doubted whether the Lord had spoken by him. If instead of going among the destitute, the other course is pursued, that of arranging trips among churches that are regularly supplied, it certainly ought always to be by invitation of those churches. I do not of course think of setting up myself and my own course as a guide for others; but it can do no harm to offer the suggestions that result from age and experience if they accord with the teachings of inspiration. I have not always been connected with churches as pastor, but for some years after my ordination was without any regular charge. Although my appointments were about as many in a year as now I never went only by invitation. I never neglected appointments on account of my business, nor did I ever neglect business to look up some opening to preach. I felt that if the Lord had a work for me in the ministry it would find me and I should find it. There can be no question if churches request a visit from any gospel preacher, that they should bear his expenses and, if he needs conveyance, find it for him. I would not suppose that any gospel church would need to be instructed or admonished about this. And it has been seldom, indeed, that I have ever known neglect in this matter. The brethren generally are to be commended for promptness and liberality. If on the other hand a minister, not having his time occupied at home, sends out a list of week-day appointments that will require from two to four weeks, when such appointments have not been asked for, serious difficulties are liable to occur. If these brethren so visited are expected to attend all these week-day appointments, and find the man conveyance throughout all this trip, and perhaps make him compensation besides, there will be very likely to be more or less dissatisfaction, probably on both sides. After such a trip has been gone through there have been instances of complaint being made that the brethren had not contributed as liberally as they ought. The question then comes up whether these churches are in fault, or whether or not there was a wrong on the other side. In some places few of the people keep but one horse, and during the working season have all the work for that horse that he is able to do. And it is pretty much the same with themselves.

Another thing; where they have a preacher in charge, they have about all that they are able to do to care properly for him. There is a right and proper course to pursue on the part of ministers as well as churches. The apostle was careful to give no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed.

I don't expect I can possibly touch upon these things so carefully, but what somebody, that ought to be encouraged and that feels the need of encouragement, will feel stumbled by it.

There are those whose edifying and profitable gifts are known, and for whom there is always a cordial welcome. Sometimes those who are most welcome are the most backward, yet where people are anxious to have a visit from a preacher of their acquaintance they generally find a way to say so. Yours to serve in the gospel,

E. RITTENHOUSE.

MY DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:— I hope when these lines reach you that you may be in health, "even as thy soul prospereth in Christ Jesus." John 3: 3.

When we are feeling the infirmities to which we are subjected while in this tabernacle it is good to remember that we are dust, and unto dust we must return. I have found such times profitable to my soul. To-day among the many thoughts crowding in upon me I thought the time will come when I will breathe my last, and bid adieu to the shores of time. I thought upon death, with sacred, solemn feelings. There was no fear that hath torment in my meditations, "For all things are yours," saith the Apostle; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's," I Cor. 3:21-23. Believers in Jesus shall triumph over all things. Nothing shall separate them from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus, our Lord. We be more than conquerors through him that loved us. Death is a vanquished foe! and we may well sing with the Apostle Paul "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory?" The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." I Cor. 15:55-57. Well, dear brother, as I meditated upon the exodus from this stage of mortality I felt how comforting and satisfying is that hope we have in the blood and righteousness of Emmanuel, the Son of God. O, to be looking for that blessed hope, and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. The time of our sojourn in this wilderness, where conflicts abound, and disappointments are often met, and many sorrows are encountered, is but a little while. Though our days were prolonged to a hundred years, yet like old Jacob, we should exclaim, "Few and evil have the days of the years of my life been," Gen. 47:9 While viewing the transient nature of all earthly things, and proving that "vanity and vexation of spirit" is stamped upon all things under the sun, we can feelingly understand the language of Job who said "I would not live always" Job 7:16. The children of God, in distinction from the rest of mankind, are taught of the Holy Spirit to have such a view of things, and of the providences of God that they confess that they are strangers and pilgrims on the earth, Heb. 11:13-14. This world is not our home. Our souls yearn for the better country, that is the heavenly. We have had some foretastes of that country, and enrapturing glimpses of that city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God. When our present frail life is o'er, O, how consoling is the thought of that great salvation brought unto poor sinners by the sovereign grace of God. We shall be with Christ which is far better, Phil. 1:23, than all the happiness the earth affords. And when on the morn of the resurrection we shall be clothed in our immortal, incomparable and glorified bodies, and shall ascend with all the redeemed throng, and be forever with the Lord, I Cor. 15:51-58, 1 Thes. 4:13-18, what tongue can tell the bliss of the glorified? While by faith we are looking upon eternal realities, all temporal things dwindle into utter insignificance, our hearts are comforted and sustained amidst every trial in believing that our inheritance in the Son of God is a far more exceeding, and an eternal weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4:17.

"My sorrows must soon have an end,
The days of my mourning must cease;
And I a blest sabbath shall spend
With Jesus, the author of peace.
My soul is e'en now on the wing,
His glory refugent to see;
Where I shall eternally sing,
He saved a poor sinner like me!"

It is not in this life only that we have hope in Christ. 'Tis true that many precious enjoyments are given us of divine things even now. They are the earnest of the spirit in our hearts. To taste that the Lord is gracious, to know that our sins are forgiven, to be justified by the blood of Christ, to have sweet peace with God, to stand in this grace, rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God is indeed a heaven below.

"If such the sweetness of the stream, what must the fountain be?

Where saints and angels draw their bliss immediately from thee.

If in my soul such joy abounds,

While weeping faith explores his wounds,
How glorious will these scars appear

When perfect bliss forbids a tear."

But while the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, our Lord, is the unspeakable sweetness that sweetens our life, and strews our pathway with flowers, and soothes and smooths the rugged way, yet, sometimes all is overshadowed by sin, temptations and unbelief that we sin in the deeps. If in this life only we have hope then we should sink innumerable fathoms deep. What would there be to hold our heads above water? O, nothing short, nothing less than eternal freedom from our sins will satisfy us. All the tribes of Israel knew every man the plague of his own heart. Sin in its manifold forms is the running sore and grief of heart to all the subjects of the grace of God, 1 Kings 8:38, 2 Chron. 6:29, 1 Chron. 4:10 Our Saviour saves us from our sins. He shall deliver us from the body of this death, Rom. 7:2425. Our old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, is crucified with Christ, Rom. 6:6, all our sins were laid on him, and were destroyed and made an end of in his sufferings and death. The Son of God triumphed over sin, death and hell and reigns on high our Savior God. So when death sets us free, we shall be with Jesus, Luke 23:43. Absent from the body we shall be present with the Lord, 2 Cor. 5:8. Thus shall we "wait till our change come," Job 14:14. We shall all be changed at the last day, John 6:39, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory, 1 Cor. 15. Our vile body shall be changed, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself, Phil. 3:21. Unto this precious hope we desire to come, Acts 26:7. No more sin, no more temptations, no more afflictions, no more bereavements and disappointments, no more conflicts; all will be over. Thus perfectly conformed to the likeness of our beloved Redeemer and glorified together with him we shall be satisfied, Psalm 17:15, 1 John 3:2.

"Lord, I long to be at home,

Where these changes never come!

Where the saints no winter fear,

Where 'tis spring throughout the year.

How unlike this state below!

There the flowers unwithered bloom!

There no chilly blasts annoy!

All is love, and bloom and joy."

Then we well may bear our allotted portion during the time of our sojourning in this world, let us believe that all is well whether the way be rough or smooth, or we are in prosperity or adversity. Our heavenly Father has set the one over against the other, Eccles. 7:14: all shall work together for our good. O, how blessed it is to be reconciled to God in all things. Our blessed Lord Jesus says: "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light," Matt. 11:28-30. You know, dear brother, somewhat the truth of this. It gives me joy of heart to hear you testify of the rest and relief you have experienced in walking in the commandments of Christ, your Savior. It will ever stand true in the life of every saint that "in keeping of his commandments there is great reward," Psalm 19:11. May the Lord graciously be with you, and cause his face to smile upon you is the heart's desire of your brother in Christ Jesus.

BROTHER GOLD:—I much desire to express to the readers of the LANDMARK that I fully agree with brother J. C. Hall as to how he thinks it is in his explanation of the parable recorded in Matthew 13-44, published January the 15th, 1893. This has been my view of that scripture for a long while, yet I have never felt the ability to explain it so perfectly as my beloved brother, as I hope, in Christ has.

SEVEN WOMEN.

Brother M. Liles of Texas, requests my view of Isaiah 4: 1, "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, we will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel, only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach."

This was to come to pass in the great slaughter and destruction at Jerusalem, when all its strength should be broken, and all its pride spoiled, and the men should be slain, and all the showy ornaments should be stripped off of the women. Such should be the shame and reproach of the impoverished and despoiled women, and such slaughter among the men, that seven women, a full number, should take hold of one man, saying, we will support ourselves, feed and clothe ourselves, if you will only allow us to be called by your name, to take away our reproach. It would be a great calamity in any country for the chief men to be slain and a great number of defenceless, helpless women be left to care for themselves, as a body without a head. In such a calamity a man would be very precious and greatly sought after.

In this breaking up of the ancient and honorable estate and order of the Jews, and the disruption of all their former hopes, the greatest consternation and distress fell upon them. They had not hoped in God as their Savior, but had trusted in the law of works, going about to establish their own righteousness, and being deceived by the flattery of their own hearts, supposing that the law of works under which they were glorying would forever exalt them above danger, what must have been their consternation at their utter discomfiture. Full of the spirit of idolatry, they trusted in themselves that they were righteous. Even after they were stripped of all their beautiful attire, representing their supposed good works, still they depend on their own works, and seven of them taking hold of one man, they propose still to eat their own bread and wear their own apparel, if he will allow them to be called by his name to take away their reproach.

At this day—the gospel day—although the legal system of works is abolished, and the glory of the Jewish nation has faded away, and although Jesus, the branch of the Lord, is beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth excellent and he gives himself this bread of heaven, that a man may eat and drink abundantly in his kingdom, eating and drinking bread in the kingdom of God, or eating and drinking at the king's table; yet these women choose to eat their own bread and wear their own apparel, or depend on their own works for salvation, while they desired to make the show or appearance of being called by the name of the Lord.

Why is it there are so many different denominations religiously, all calling themselves christians, or desiring to be so called, yet not eating the flesh or drinking the blood of Jesus, or feeding on Christ crucified? They wish to be called christians in order to be fashionable or have their reproach taken away and to have a good name, yet all the while not depending on Jesus Christ crucified and risen for salvation, but depending on their own works, for food and raiment, or a covering. While the truth is those that forsake all and truly follow Jesus are the ones that bear reproach and are courted the filth and the off scouring of the world. The cross or reproach of Christ is what each one that truly follows Jesus must bear, and not escape or have taken away.

The seven women represent a great number (the number of a man, six hundred sixty and six) or all the denominations that feed and clothe themselves while professing to bear the name of Jesus or they depend on the works of the law through the flesh for salvation: while only here and there a poor, needy, lame one as Jacob is saved by grace, or eats and drinks at the king's table of that which the Lord gives, being justified freely by the grace of God which is in Christ Jesus the Lord.

A CLAMOR.

For a great while the State has been appropriating money to aid the State University at Chapel Hill.

Within the last half-century several denominational colleges have been established, and they have, through their agencies, begged money from the people at large, and thus have so liberally endowed their colleges that they are able to compete in their college courses of study pretty fairly with the University. Now, since they have waxed strong, they clamor against further appropriations to the University, on the plea that the University is opposed to denominational schools.

Wonder if THEY are not OPPOSING the University, and would not like to have the entire thing in their own hands?

But, they say, if the University could be so elevated as to lift it altogether out of the field of the denominational schools, then they would favor its continuance. Yet they oppose any FURTHER STATE aid to it. Question: If further State aid is withheld, how can the University even maintain its present ground, much less so advance as to rise above the claims of these opposing denominational schools?

The University, if I understand it, stands on her old ground, claiming nothing new, while these other colleges, a few years ago, mere stripplings begging for bread, have recently waxed fat through general gifts from the people, and now they are kicking against the University, and while saying that if it could be so amply endowed as to make its curriculum so complete that it would receive none but graduates from their schools, they would like to see this; yet they oppose any further appropriations for it, thereby preventing such a thing altogether. Besides, if it could be such a University as to receive only graduates from other schools, that would open the field fully to these other denominational schools, and their students, on graduation at their own colleges would stop school altogether; and if any of us did not wish to send our sons to these denominational schools, we would have to send them out of the state. Why educate a boy to be a Methodist or Baptist? We do not want such sectarian education.

A RIB.

A bone taken from near Adam's heart is made a woman by Adam's Maker. What a gainer was Adam? That help-meet was the only thing he needed. He was not conscious so far as we know, that he needed a wife. The Lord saw that it was not good for the man to be alone. When he took the rib from Adam's side he closed up the place thereof. Adam suffered no loss by losing this bone, though it was taken from him without his consent or knowledge. The Lord never wrongs any man. What the Lord takes he first gives, and if we give to the Lord we receive ample returns by manifold. If we love him it is because he first loved us. If we serve him it is because he has enabled us to do so..

The Lord God takes a rib, something durable, a bone, and made a woman, and brought her to the man. Adam loves her and she comes near to his heart. There had been no companion before for Adam to talk with, or speak to, none that could commune with him or be his associate, none to whom he could speak of the wonders of creation, or beauties of heaven or earth, nor to talk to about his origin, or how he came, or where he came from. Companionship, what a boon! The feeling of loneliness how oppressive. It does so shorten long, dull hours, and lighten burdens to have a genial companion, such as the Lord gives.

Adam's heart and affection, his intelligence and understanding at once respond with delight to the gift. He perhaps never told a more famous and enduring truth than when he said, The woman is bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife, and the twain shall be one flesh. There is no stronger figure in the bible of Christ and the church than this one.

If the Lord gives me liberty of thought and expression it is my intention to write more on this subject.

P, D. G.

HOW IS IT ?

We sometimes notice a trouble arising in the following way. A misunderstanding arises between a pastor and a church. What is the authority of a pastor over a church? None at all in the worldly sense of the word authority. It is needful for each church to have a pastor, not as an integral part of the church in the sense that there could not be a church without a pastor, as there could not be a complete man who had a body only without a head on that body, nor in the sense that she can do no business without a pastor. But the pastor is to rule well in the word or doctrine. He is to preach the word. Paul said the Lord sent him not to baptize, but to preach the word. He is not to usurp authority, nor to laud it over God's heritage: that is it is God's heritage and he is not to rule over it with his own word, or notions, or desires but he is to preach the word of God and he is to expound that word. A gift of the ministry is the gift of interpreting and expounding the mysteries of the doctrine of God our Saviour. A preacher is not to serve tables, or to attend to worldly or secular matters of the church.

He is especially to shun contentions, new things, hobbies, endless genealogies, old wives' fables, and strife. He is to preach the things that make for peace, whereby there is edification, or building up of the church in the most holy faith, not so much, or only in increasing membership, but in the most holy faith of Jesus, or that there is growth in grace in the members, and this growth is indicated by proper knowledge wisdom and good conduct.

The pastor has authority, but it is altogether in the strength of the word preached. He is to speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all AUTHORITY, Titus 2:15; but it is to be so done that no man will despise him. His authority is altogether in the truth, or word that he preaches, and his own conduct is to be such that no man shall despise him. If he always preaches the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, as a faithful witness, and declares it in the right spirit, he will have authority, and no child of God will despise him. The business of a pastor is a sheep-feeder—not a goat-fighter—not a swine-driller—but a sheep-feeder. He is to be gentle, meek and lowly, at the feet of the brethren, SERVING them, yet preaching the truth as it is in Jesus. He must endure hardships, not be hard on them that oppose; not bitter on the unruly, but gentle, patient, not reviling, not returning evil for evil; but on the contrary, he should be blessing instead of cursing others. There is no man that is required to be meeker, or more humble, patient and forgiving than a pastor of a church or a gospel preacher.

Whenever a pastor seeks to burden the brethren with his own notions, or aims to rule the church because he wants a certain thing done he should at once resign. Whenever a church in the absence of the pastor does something they are afraid to do in his presence there is the wrong feeling between them. There should be the utmost harmony between pastor and church. They should tarry one for the other.

But I do not consider that a church is unable to attend to her ordinary business, or any other business that comes before her properly, in his absence. A church that loves her pastor would desire him highly esteemed as such, and would not want to ignore him; and if he loves her he would not wish to fetter or burden her at all.

For instance, I should not like to baptize members in another church where they have a pastor, without the consent of the church and the pastor too, for me to do such thing. There is a courtesy and brotherly kindness due from one to another. Gentility and proper manners or behavior, prompted by love to each other, and a true desire to glorify the Lord, and benefit or serve his people, is good. Love itself is the greater prompter to good, gracious conduct, and it works no ill to our neighbor.

P. D. G.

“THEY SHALL BE ALL TAUGHT OF GOD.”—John 6:45.

This, the Savior said, was written in the prophets concerning the children of Zion. It was he who caused Isaiah to write it, as recorded in Isa. 54:13, for the Spirit of Christ was in the prophets, and it testified in and through them all things concerning himself, 1 Peter 1:10-11. He referred to this declaration of the prophet when he was in conversation with a large number of those who had found some advantage of being with him, and who therefore sought him with a good deal of trouble, and would have made him King. They were only believers in a natural sense, as were those mentioned in other places, John, 8:30-40. Jesus spoke to them that truth which will always separate the true believer from those who are only natural. It is only the mighty power of God which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead that can cause a sinner to believe. Eph. 1:19-20; and the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to that believer, Rom. 1:16; therefore it is always glad tidings to him, and is that "joyful sound" which draws his soul away from the vain music of the world. But he who has not been taught of God cannot give up the belief in his own power, and will most surely be offended by the consistent and steadfast adherence to the doctrine of the scriptures, that "power belongeth unto God." This is what every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ has heard twice, Ps. 62:11. God tells it to him through the law, when he is made to know that the holy law of God can search out and bring to judgment all his sins, and that nothing can deliver him from its just power. Again, when he finds, to his unspeakable surprise and joy, that his soul is at liberty, his sins blotted out, and the condemnation of the law removed, he hears for the second time that "power belongeth unto God." He felt that power when he was brought into condemnation, and now he realizes a greater power and glory in his deliverance. Jesus died to satisfy the law for his sins, and was raised from that death by the "mighty power of God;" and is called the "power of God." "All power in heaven and in earth is given into his hands," and he "has power on earth to forgive sins," because he has redeemed his people from the curse and condemnation of the law. This power is wrought in them. They cannot learn about it in any other way than by experience. They must feel it, as one feels the wind, which bloweth where it listeth. This power or kingdom of God "cometh not with observation." The kingdom of God is within you," the Savior said. The reigning power of Christ is felt within.

All the teaching concerning the things of the Kingdom of Jesus is within the heart and is by the Spirit of Christ. There is often a misunderstanding on the part of dear children of God concerning the place and extent of teachers, which is one of Christ's gifts to the church. This is a most important gift, of great value in the church, and most beneficial and comforting to the dear children of God, as every gift of the dear Savior must be.

There is no gift of prophecy or teaching that can impart to one of the Lord's children anything new in an absolute sense, although it may be new as having never been brought to their consideration before, and also in the sense that food is new when we hunger, and light is new every morning. John says, "But ye have an unction from the holy one, and ye know all things. I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth." Again he says, "But the anointing that ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him."

This anointing is the same as that by which Jesus was anointed; even the Spirit of the Lord, Isa. 61: 1-3; Luke 4:16-21. No one can be taught that he is a sinner except by this Spirit. This Spirit is life, and this life is the light of men, John 1:4. This is the light that manifests whatever is evil, Eph. 5:13.

When one has natural life he will feel the prick of a thorn. When one has spiritual life, and not before, he will feel and be hurt by the pricking thorns of sins. He who has spiritual life is now manifest as one of those for whose sake the earth was cursed, and unto whom it shall bring forth briars and thorns. The man without life cares nothing for the briars and thorns. No power but that of life can ever make a conscience ever feel the pricking thorn of sin. All other attempts at teaching men that they are sinners are vain. They may say they hate sin, but they do not show that it has ever hurt them. When the Lord has caused one to feel the pangs of a conscience wounded by sin, that one will never find healing for that wound until that same anointing that taught him of the sinfulness of sin brings to him the vital knowledge of that wonderful man, Christ Jesus, the son of man and the Son of God, to whom the sins of his people became a crown of suffering, as his holy brow was pierced with the crown of thorns. Through the bearing of supreme pain and suffering as a crown, he reigns supreme over all the powers that could cause pain or sorrow, and can speak a word in season to them that are weary. Through death he destroyed him that has the power of death, that is the devil, and can in a moment deliver from the fear of death those who are in deepest bondage through that fear.

This inward teaching is the same in the case of every child of God, and where this teaching of the Holy spirit of God is followed there is unity manifested. They who are thus taught are "of one heart and of one soul," Acts 4:32, and where they are careful to walk in the spirit as they live in the spirit, (Gal. 5:25) they will also be of "one mind and of one judgment," as the apostle earnestly and lovingly exhorts them to be.

The scriptures will always be found to accord exactly with inward teaching, but not always with the teachings of men. If we are in haste to study out the meaning of scriptures we are apt to get a meaning without any life, a meaning that feeds the carnal mind but not the new man of grace. We must wait on the Lord for the meaning of his word. When he gives it to us it will feed us, and we shall know what it means, though we may have no learning of a natural kind. There is much value in worldly learning, but it can never advance one in the vital knowledge of divine things. I am glad to see an objector to the truth answered by a learning that reaches further than his own. But after the contest of the learned is over, I see the little, hungry children trying to gather up some crumbs, and wondering why they are not brought out of their soul trouble, and fed and comforted by that which has appeared to be so deep and so powerful. It seems to them that their own dullness is the cause of their not being benefitted by it. But when alone with the Lord, bemoaning their darkness, and crying unto him, he gives them a sweet taste of heavenly manna, through, perhaps, the same words that were in controversy, and they feel the divine power of them, and realize what Jesus said, The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Until he speaks them unto us they are not spirit and life to us. We are to "hold fast the form of sound words, which we have heard of inspired writers," in faith and love which are in Christ Jesus;" and when the Lord's time comes those words will open up to our admiring view the rich trea-tures of the heavenly kingdom. Only the life of the vine can teach the branch what fruit to bear. Only the spirit or life of Jesus within the soul can bring forth the fruit of the spirit in the heart, or cause it to come forth from the lips and be manifested in the life.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—That our brethren may know the location of our new meeting house, please publish the following: We, the original Middle Creek Primitive Baptist Church at our new place of worship at Piney Grove, two miles from the old Middle Creek meeting house, do respectfully invite all Primitive Baptist ministers who are in good standing, and who are willing to take the Scriptures as the man of their counsel, to come to see us and preach for us. Our doors are open to all of our brethren, whether ministers or otherwise, who are willing to fellowship us on such terms. Done by order of conference, Saturday before the first Lord's day in February, 1893.

PASCHAL PARRISH, Clerk.

A REQUEST.

Brother C. O. Hilder, East Fork, Transylvania Co., N. C., writes me that they desire very much for a Primitive Baptist preacher to visit them. They have a few members and are building a meeting house.

I hope some brother will visit them.

Write to either brother C. O. Hilder or brother M. M. Morgan, East Fork, N. C.

OBITUARIES.

PETER AND BARBARA CORNELISON.

By request of the daughters of our dear friends Peter Cornelison, and Barbara, his wife, I will try to give a brief sketch of their lives and deaths. Barbara Cornelison was born August 22d, 1818, and died September 6th, 1892, aged 74 years and 15 days. She was the daughter of Jerry Auman and Mary Auman, his wife. They were Primitive Baptists in sentiment. I think Jerry was a member of the church. Barbara married Peter. She was the mother of ten children, seven girls and three boys—nine of them survive her. She was a precious friend to the Baptists. She was stricken down with paralysis about eighteen years before her death, and was helpless all the time. She received a hope in Christ about the time she was stricken down, which enabled her to bear her afflictions with patience and christian fortitude. She was a woman above reproach—I never heard a word said against her—she gave no occasion. She was hauled to Sugg's Creek to preaching as long as she was able to be hauled. She loved the Baptists, and the doctrine they preached. I have a mind to say I am satisfied her sufferings are all over—that her spirit is resting in peace with God. The husband sent for the writer to attend the funeral. He did so, and tried to preach on the occasion. Peter Cornelison was born April 21st, 1816, and died September 23d, 1892, aged 76 years, 5 months and 2 days. Kidney trouble was the disease that seemed to bring death. Two physicians were called; but all the good nursing that his children and the physicians could do could not stop the summons of death. He was the son of John Cornelison, a Primitive Baptist preacher. Peter professed a hope in Christ when he was about 18 years old. For some cause unknown to the writer, he never united with the church, but was a friend in deed to the Baptists. He gave the lot on which the Sugg's Creek meeting house was built and now stands. His doors always stood wide open for Primitive Baptists to go in. I am sure he bore more of the burden and expense at Sugg's Creek than any one member—probably more than any two of them. When there was meeting at Sugg's Creek, Uncle Peter, as he was generally called, was there unless sickness prevented. Last August was a year ago, he walked to the Association at Rock Hill, a distance of nearly 20 miles. He was well posted in the Scriptures, never wavered from the doctrine of God our Savior. The writer was also called to attend the funeral of friend Peter. Met a large congregation, and tried to preach Jesus and him crucified, the way, the truth and the life. He was a good citizen, and held the office of Justice of the Peace for a number of years. He was a peace maker. Children, take your pa for an example. Grandchildren, you are many in number; try to live as grandpa did, and you will always have plenty of friends. There are but few children who have ever had such a pa—few grandchildren who ever had such a grandpa. He divided his lands and property all among his children while he was well. After the death of his wife, he craved to die and go from this sinful world, to a world of joy and peace. Children, I know you hate to give up pa and ma, yet you cannot mourn as those who have no hope, for their lives and their last words gave you hope that they are sleeping in the blessed arms of Jesus, where none ever wake to weep. You are made to believe that your loss is their eternal gain. Blessed are they who die in the Lord; they rest from their labors, &c.

Thou art gone, dear father and mother,
Gone from a world of trouble.
Dear ones, we miss you sadly;
But we should weep no more,
For we know your tired spirits
Longed to be at rest with Jesus.
A precious father and mother from us have gone;
The voices we loved are stilled,
Their places are vacant in our house
That never can be filled.
Farewell. I. P. BEAN,
Immer, N. C.

PETER J. AND ELIZABETH LEAK.

With solemnity of thought we recall to our minds the memory and esteem of our deceased neighbors and friends who have fallen asleep in death. The subjects of this notice were well known citizens of Stokes County, N. C. Mr. Leak was born in Henry County, Va., March 18th, 1815, and died at his residence, March 1st, 1892. His wife, Mrs. Leak, preceded him in death two and a-half months. She was born in Halifax County, Va., February 17, 1818, and died December 15, 1891. They were married in Patrick County, Va., January 28, 1836, soon after which they removed to Stokes County, N. C., where they resided until their deaths. They were the parents of twelve children, nine of whom survived their devoted father and mother, together with a long line of grandchildren and some great-grandchildren, who are left to mourn their loss. Some of them are in the far-off West, but the most of them lived near, and often visited the old people, meeting with a welcome reception; but this kindness, love and devotion for you, dear children, is over. Their faces you will see no more; but we hope their example and instruction will forever keep a place in your memories, to obey, love and keep, for your good, and to manifest your sacred affection and love for them. Mr. Leak never joined any church, but had been a professor for many years, of which he often spoke with overflowing with tears. He believed in the Primitive Baptist faith, and that salvation was by grace, and the mercy of God. A short time before he died, he desired to join the church, and be baptized, that he might, through obedience, put on the whole armor of God. Although he was deeply concerned about his departed companion, who never made any profession of religion, although she seemed to be distressed, and desired her children to pray for her before she died, he said he had seen a light where she lay when sick, and heard a voice which reconciled his mind in regard to her condition, and his mind was now upon the Church, and the joys of salvation. He loved to hear the songs of Zion, and the gospel preached in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. They were industrious, hard-working people, highly respected by their neighbors and acquaintance. Before their deaths they made choice of Elder Isaac Jones and myself to attend their funeral, which was done on the 18th of July, 1892, in the midst of a large concourse of people, at State Line Church. That day will be long remembered. And in conclusion we will say, peace to their ashes, until God shall raise them again as it doth please Him, in His likeness, to rest in his most glorious habitation. Written by request.

DEACON GEORGE D. CARAWAN.

Deacon George D. Carawan departed this life August 7th, 1891, at his home on the south side of Mattamuskeet Lake, Hyde County, N. C. He was raised up in the same neighborhood to manhood, and was an honest, hard-laboring man all his life. He was married three times, and by his first wife had eight children born to him, of whom five survive him—four sons and one daughter—all grown and married. Brother Carawan joined the South Mattamuskeet church, and was baptized the first Sunday in June, 1886, and from his christian walk and godly conversation after joining the church, the brethren called upon him to serve them as Deacon, the first Sunday in March, 1873, and the dear brother faithfully discharged the duties of the office as long as he lived. A few years before he died he had an eating cancer just under one of his eyes, and Dr. Gore treated and cured it, though he suffered tortures untold in the treatment, and though it seemed to be well, yet he told me the place from which it was removed always hurt him, and from then he seemed to get weaker and weaker, until the Lord, whom he served and loved, took his faithful and suffering servant home, where there will be for him no more suffering, pain and sorrow, but all will be joy and peace in the Lord forever. The church looks upon the loss of the dear brother as irreparable; but then they are sure that their loss is his gain; so they sorrow not as those who have no hope, and I would say to his children who were raised up by his tender and fatherly care, to remember his godly walk, and to follow his footsteps as he followed Christ; and may the Lord enable all of us to follow his good christian life. Our dear brother was nearly seventy years old; but of his exact age I have not been informed. He was buried in the family graveyard, on South Lake, where he will remain undisturbed until the resurrection morn, when the body, which was sown in weakness and dishonor, shall be raised in power and glory, which shall be to the praise, honor and glory of the Lord, forever. May the blessed Lord enable us all to meet our dear brother in heaven above, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake.

ABNER F. LESTER.

Abner F. Lester, only son of Mr. W. C. and sister Texas Lester of Falcon, Floyd Co. Virginia, was born Nov. 5th, 1876, and died August 18th, 1892.

It is often said that "the good die young," and that good boys and girls are only found in books. It is true that some good children die young and we read of many good ones who are dead, but to prove the rule that all who die when children are good, some must live at least long enough to prove that any are good. It is also true that when we speak of the dead, we are inclined to speak more particularly of their virtues. When we can say nothing good of one it is better to say nothing. If evil predominates it is frequently better to say nothing.

If the general rule is that boys are not good, young Abner Lester proved by his life that all are not bad, and that he was one exception so clearly and forcibly defined as to make the exception peculiarly rare.

He was sixteen years of age and well grown. He possessed a bright mind and was well advanced for his years. If he ever used profane language or told a falsehood it never came to the knowledge of his parents, nor has any one else ever charged such to him. He was never known to disobey his parents, but was pleased to do their bidding. His temper was even, pleasant and attractive, and adorned with a pleasing smile when approached by, or approaching any one.

He was industrious up to a few months before he was suddenly taken from this to that life beyond. He was killed by the overturning of a wagon, loaded with slabs, caused by the team, from some cause, taking fright and becoming unmanageable. He fell from the wagon across the road and the slabs fell upon him crushing his body and head so that death must have been produced immediately.

About the first of last July he told his mother "he had such a dread upon his mind." Again, the last of that month he told her the same. During this time, and to his death he was not willing to work, saying, he did not feel like working. His father asked him several times if he was sick, and he said "no."

The night preceding the day on which he was killed he came down to his parents' room about 2 o'clock and said he wanted to stay in their room. These things are familiar to me. They are a part of my experience. If I have a gospel experience, I must and do believe this dear boy was being led in the same way, and is in heaven today.

Abner had great respect for his parents and only sister. He stayed at home on Sundays or went to preaching. He sought the company of old people and was glad when members of the church came about, and listened with marked attention to what they would say. He was often seen reading the scriptures.

Six teachers to whom he went gave him excellent reports in relation to his studies, to them and to his schoolmates. During his last days he seemed deeply meditative and had but little to say.

A large assembly attended the preaching, by Elder Amos Dickerson and myself, at the time of his burial. The aged and the young were present, and all were in deep sympathy with the bereaved parents and little sister, and in many ways gave evidence of their high regard of the deceased son, brother, friend and loved one.

I would to God that all boys and girls possessed the good name which adorns the life and memory of Abner Lester.

P. G. LESTER.

ANDREW H. PLEASANT.

Andrew H. Pleasant, son of John and Frances Pleasant, was born September 8th, 1861, and departed this life May 22d, 1892, aged 30 years, 8 months and 14 days. He was married to Sarah M. Oakley, daughter of F. L. Oakley and wife, January 13th, 1892, at which time he was, apparently, in good health. Some time after he had an attack of la grippe, from which he partially recovered; then going to market with a load of tobacco he was exposed, took fresh cold, had heart trouble, and went into pneumonia, suffered very much, and died May 22d, 1892. Before he died he said he had a hope in Christ and was willing to die, though he hated to leave his wife and mother. He was without a father to raise him, as his parent died in the army with measles, but was cared for by his mother and kindred, and was raised a moral boy, and after he was able, he remained with his mother until he was taken from her by death. He was patient in his affliction, and we hope, from evidences left by him, that he has been taken from this world of sin and trouble to enjoy eternal life. He leaves a mother and a wife, with a child one month old to mourn their loss.

LUTHER SEXTON.

Also by request of brother Elsberry Sexton I write a notice of the death of his father, brother Luther Sexton. He was born March the 7th, 1812, was married to Rhoda West 1836, joined the church at Bethlehem Dec. 1876. There were twelve children born unto him. He raised eleven of them, and raised seven orphans. At the time of his death there were nine of his own children living, fifty four grandchildren and nine great grand-children. I was not much acquainted with brother Sexton, having met him only at church; but have heard those that did know, say that in his young days he was quite rude, but when he received a hope in Jesus the change was very marked. I know that at church he seemed eager to hear the word preached. His widow, two sons and two daughters were members of the same church where his membership was. May the Lord bless his widow in her declining years, bless his children and bring more of them to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

Brother Sexton departed this life March 9th, 1892. May the Lord bless all of the bereaved is my prayer.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getting up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper, by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

INVITATIONS—COMMANDMENTS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD,—Owing to the conditions of our roads because of the present snow I have not been able to reach my appointment-day, and I wish to say a word to the household of faith on the subjects at the head of this article.

An invitation is from an equal to an equal; a commandment from a superior to an inferior. A person says to a neighbor, "come," it is an invitation, for they are equals. If he says, "let such a thing be," it only shows his desire, he has no power to force unless the thing belongs to him. In such a case he is the superior, but if he is not the owner they are equals, and the speaker by saying, "let it remain," only shows his mind which may not be the mind of the other party, therefore his words may have no force.

A father says to his son, "Come," it is a commandment, for he is the superior. A man says to his servant do this or that, it is a commandment, for he is master and his words have force. The Centurion said to one of his servants, "come," and he came; to another, "go," and he went; to another, "do this," and he did it. Abraham said to his servant, "go seek a wife for my son Isaac," and he went. These I recognize as commandments, for they were from superiors to inferiors.

God has spoken. He is the superior of all things, and His voice must be obeyed by all things, for all things are inferiors. He said, "Let there be light, and there was light." The word "let" was not simply God's permission for light to exist, but an absolute commandment for it to exist, and it existed according to his commandment. There was no power that could hinder it for God had commanded it and there is no power but of God. By that commandment we have day and night until this day. In His preaching Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls," Matt. 11:28, 29.

This is the voice of God to his children, the Father to the son, the superior to the inferior, the everlasting arm that is reached down into their necessitous condition and underneath them to lift them up by His great strength and set them on the good solid foundation from which they cannot slip nor fall, the words of everlasting mercy forever reaching down into our helpless state and lifting us up into everlasting joy and rest. There is no invitation here but an absolute commandment, the voice of God, the King of kings and Lord of lords. Where the word of a king is there is power. Here there is more than the voice of an ordinary king. If the voice of an earthly king has power, how much more the God of the whole earth. When God speaks to one of His subjects there is an impelling power that forces one to obey. I have no confidence in any religion but a compulsory religion. No one ever came to Jesus only those who were absolutely compelled to come. To these, and these only, Jesus spake the words quoted, and there is power in that word. The weary must have rest, his weary condition demands it and Jesus has said, "Come unto me," thus pointing out the only place of rest. His word and the necessity of the weary one compels him to come, he cannot stay away, must come even though he expects nothing than to be cast off. But Jesus has promised and will give rest, for no such weary soul was ever cast off. Such hungry soul does not object to this compelling power that works in him, for it is compelling him to go just where wants to go. He wants to go to Jesus but he does not know the way, and it seems all the while that he is going away, further and further away from the place of rest and peace, but an unseen, unerring hand, the power of God, has hold of him. He knows the way and never failed to bring every one safe to Jesus to whom he has spoken. When he reaches there he finds just what Jesus has said "Rest, sweet rest, joy and rejoicing, in heart, the presence of Jesus, our Beloved for whom he has longed and mourned." It is the very place that we have wanted so much to find, but we knew not the way. No, it is not contrary to the will of any such weary person to be compelled to come to such a sweet haven of rest. It is not their privilege to stay away. If there was any invitation in these words the person to whom they are addressed would be at liberty to come or to stay away, therefore they would be privileged characters. If this is the case the many will surely be lost, for they know not the way to come to God, and at every step they will go further from Him. I rejoice very much that there are no invitations in the gospel, but that it is all commandments, for if it was by invitation such poor, ignorant, deaf, blind, wayworn sinners as I am would surely be lost. But it being by commandment, I have hope.

Not only in coming to Jesus at the first, but in following him at every step of christian life, all is by commandment. However loving the words may be which are spoken to us, they are commandments. Therefore at every point when God says, "Take my yoke," &c., it is a commandment, an unbounded duty, a glorious privilege to follow him. Jesus has said "If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink." "The Spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." All these together with all passages like them are gospel commandments, the words of king Jesus, and the persons addressed do obey, for he has said "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." We may become hasty in our feelings towards God's people who mourn, and try to persuade them to hasty action, but they will not be willing until made so by God's power, then they will make all speed to do the bidding of God, for his power is upon them and necessity is so laid upon them that they must do his word. Let every christian go back over his or her experience and see if this was not the time that they were made willing to follow Jesus. It was not when they CHOSE, but when GOD COMMANDED. How many have gone to church meetings to tell the brethren of their love for them, and have gone away, unable to go before the church. Why did they not go and do as they thought to do? They say "something was in the way, something hindered me." But they go again, it may be not thinking of going before the church, and that something that hindered is so laid upon them that they go and tell their love to the church. Why is this? Is it not because it is the day of the Lord's power? What else can it be? Moses had no mind to go before Pharaoh to intercede for Israel; but the word of God was upon him and he had to go. He knew before he left Pharaoh's court and went to the land of Midian that the Lord would deliver Israel by his hand, Acts 7:27, and thought that his brethren would have understood it, but when the time came for him to go he had a mind to draw back, so that if it had been left to his will he would have remained with the flock of his father-in-law; but he was compelled to go because the day of God's appointment and power had come. Brethren, why do you preach? The word of God came to you with power and it is a burning fire shut up in your bones, and you are weary with forbearing and cannot stay. God has not invited you to preach, but commanded you. Why preach gospel invitations to the people when God works in us by commandments? A Methodist minister once told me his experience, and told me how low down he was brought by his sins; how utterly helpless he was and how he was made to lose confidence in everything and give up all for loss, and while in this condition the Lord came to him in his mercy and saved him. Only a week after this (so I was informed), he said in one of his sermons that MANY souls were now going down to hell for whom Jesus had died, because such men as himself and other influential members of his brethren and sisters were not doing their duty. If he had told me the truth about his own case, he surely was denying it in his preaching. This is the way I feel when I hear a brother preach that he felt COMPELLED to preach by a power that he could not resist, and then preaches "GOSPEL INVITATIONS." If these are true I am yet in the dark on both points, for I have not so learned Christ. Your brother, I trust, in the Lord,

L. H. HARDY.

Newport, N. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, VERY DEAR BROTHER:—I feel that I must write to you and say that I have enjoyed, and still continue to feast upon your last editorial, War Between Saul and David. I can't tell you how much I have enjoyed it, it is inexpressible. Oh, it is a rich feast to me—food and drink, rest and peace. How sweet, how comforting and strengthening it is to my poor soul. I do hope that I thank God that he put it into your mind and heart to write it, for I know you could not of yourself write such beautiful sentiments, such sweet truths. I know you did not receive it of man, but by the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ. Did you not feel while writing it that you were moved by the Holy Spirit? Surely you did, and I do hope that I felt the same Spirit moving me when reading it. Bless the Lord for such a servant as you are. O, may he keep you ever so many years to feed the little blood-purchased flock. I would be glad if I could write as you do; but as I can't, I hope I feel thankful to my dear Lord that I can read and rejoice in what he grants to you to write. How clear and comforting you made it to my understanding about a regenerated person remembering and repenting of sins committed before regeneration. I do to this day, remember with shame, and repent too, sins committed long before I knew Christ as my Savior, or even thought of him as such. I have heard it preached from the sacred desk that one never went back behind their regeneration in remembrance of sins, and felt sorry for them. What a mystery, that when one is weak then is he strong; when vile and covered in sin, then are they pure and clean. Last is the best, the sweetest to me. I love all your writings, but this Bless the Lord, Oh my soul, that I have been permitted to read it, and to see and feel the beauty and truth of it. I am truly glad that you have Brother Durand as corresponding editor, for I have loved his writings many years. I hope, dear brother, that you will feel to excuse all that seems amiss to you in this scribble. I believe it is our duty to tell to each other of the special comforts and pleasures that we receive from each other, whether from written or spoken mediums; therefore I feel to write you of mine, although I know it is expressed in an awkward and bungling manner. God bless you and yours with every thing that you have need of, and keep you from all harm, is the wish of your most unworthy, though loy-friend, and sister too, I hope, in Christ,

SUE LAWLER.

Brownstoro, M. & C. R. R., Ala.

Remark.

MY DEAR SISTER LAWLER:—I felt an uncommon impression to write during all the month of January. It was during this time of snow that I felt a desire to write of Saul and David. Whence is this that I am counted meet to feed the dear saints of the Lord? It is all of grace. What a wonder. P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—By your permission, I will write a few lines and submit it for publication, and leave it at your disposal, and when you have read it and decided it would be of benefit to the readers of the LANDMARK you can publish it; if not, cast it aside.

Some time ago the subject of predestination was agitated and much has been written both for and against it, and it seems that the brethren differ in their views upon this subject; but I have been inclined to believe it was more a contention about words than a real issue on doctrine, and no doubt but some expressions, perhaps prompted by the flesh, on both sides, have caused some alienation on the subject; but we do know that it ill becomes the family of God to fall out by the way, and to do anything that would tend to harden hearts and cause mourning. Some who oppose the doctrine of unlimited predestination make, or try to make those who believe it, to say and embrace in their faith that God inspires men to do crimes, and acts directly on them by his Spirit, and makes them kill and steal and do all such. Now I wish to speak for myself, and say I do not hold it in that sense nor in that light, nor have I ever heard any one set forth that doctrine. So, such arguments to refute that are vain, as none, so far as I know, claim that. I can say that my faith embraces God as sovereign over heaven, earth and hell. He is God, and beside him there is none else. He created "all things that are in heaven and earth, and without him was not anything made that was made." "He created the waster to destroy." He made "all things for himself, yea, even the wicked for the day of evil." "His hand hath formed the crooked serpent." In that day the Lord with his sore, and great and strong sword shall punish leviathan that crooked serpent, and he shall slay the dragon that is in the sea. Isaiah XXVII: 1. Canst thou draw out leviathan with a hook? or his tongue with a cord which thou lettest down? he beholdeth all high things: he is a king over all the children of pride. Job XLI: 1-34. God is sovereign, and all that he has made is for a purpose, and are needed in the economy of his grace, and in the development of the heirs of promise which are manifested in time. He shall send them strong delusions that they all might believe a lie and be damned who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness. He sent a lying spirit in the mouths of Ahab's prophets that Ahab should fall at Gilead. The point of the arrow drawn at a venture found its destined place in the joints of Ahab's harness, and the dog's tongue that licked up the blood was also ordained of God; and all the hairs of our heads are numbered. These are the evidences that lead me to believe the doctrine and I find it written in the word of God, and therefore I believe it. And yet, at the same time, I read passages that are quoted to set aside these. I cannot believe that God's word is yea-nay, but yea and amen to the glory of God the Father. And as to having all these things explained away, that is what is the matter in Zion, and faith seems to be understood as though it could be explained by the reason of men; and if it were that way we would not need faith at all. But we need faith to accept what God has said, and believe his word, although we can't understand how it is; and it is truly asked who can understand the thunder of his power? Better be still and know that he is God. This is all I contend for in the doctrine, all I have ever advocated, and I do most sincerely believe from my heart that God in his wisdom has fixed all things in harmony with his eternal will in the most wise and gracious manner, in perfect accord with justice and righteousness, and I truly believe that "clouds and darkness are round about him, judgment and righteousness are the habitation of his throne." XCVII Psa. "He spreadeth his cloud upon his throne." This is all I have contended for, and I do believe it is the faith of every true believer in God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. If I am to be set at nought and to suffer persecution for it I shall patiently bear it and hope I may be able and willing always to suffer for the truth's sake. I hope that peace and love may be manifest in all the holy courts of Zion, and that Zion may rejoice and the daughters of Judah may rejoice. The prosperity of God's dear children and the glory of God and my own conformity to the will of Jesus my savior is my humble and sincere desire.

Yours in hope, W. LIVELY.
Opelika, Ala.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER:—Having written several letters to brother Cacey, at Martin Tenn., and finding a number of the old and true in heart are pleased to read some of my writing, being a new man in the ranks of Christ, a converted Jew, one who worshipped God only under the Mosaic law, but within the last three years I received new light and am a happy man. Also I had a great deal of trouble and many days of sorrow and affliction, and yet, knowing what I gained, I would not exchange for my former way of living. I have lost much of earthly joy and pleasure as they have little or no interest. I hope and pray that I gained a home in heaven not made by men but of God. Heavenly pleasures are for the life to come after death. True christianity, a brilliant jewel, its light shines on the road to an eternal life. Men who were born, raised and instructed in the christian faith often lose sight of the Great Jewel, Jesus, Jesus, the one who was sent by God to bring an unbelieving people to love God—who was to die on the cross as a proof to all men that by and through trials and tribulations which we have to endure on earth he prepares us for an eternal home. What devotion Jesus displayed for his own people, Israel! He came to seek and to save the lost in Israel, to bring them to God, so they would worship the one and only living God in truth. The Israelites received him not—they insulted Jesus and did everything they possibly could to prevent the people from believing his teachings. Why? Israel was a corrupt and heady people. By all they saw and experienced they lost sight of God and of the teachings they received of Moses and the prophets; as the Lord said they are a heady and a sinful people. They rejected Jesus, and they became so blind in their earthly sins that they thought by killing Jesus they would save their kingdom. It is better for one man to die than for the kingdom of Israel to be destroyed. Contrariwise, their actions were the cause of the destruction of the temple, Jerusalem and the kingdom, and the Children of Israel were not wanted anywhere. The old hard-hearted sinners thought to save themselves by their damnable work. It was no doubt the cause of their destruction. The time had not come when Israel was to expect Jesus as the Messiah. The time is not far distant when such is to take place. New Israel, spiritual Israel, the chosen one of God, a new people, a new covenant, a new life, new men saved by grace through mercy through the Holy Ghost are drawing near to enter the kingdom of God—all who received the blessing. Israel of old acknowledged God as the one and only living God, that they were an erring people, only in trouble they knew God the Father. As soon as the trouble had passed they again lost sight of the great God—Jehovah—Jesus was sent to form a new covenant and was to teach love and truth. He formed new, spiritual Israel. As Jesus said, no one shall enter the kingdom of God unless he is born again of the Spirit. Flesh is earthly, the renewed spirit of man is in the image of God, and belongs to the heavenly home. He is not a Jew who is one outside—he is not a christian who is one in show or by pretence. But he is a Jew who is one within, and is circumcised in heart. He is a christian who lives and leads a Christ-like life. All people shall and must come into the kingdom of God through the Holy Ghost. The spirit of transformation shall prepare men so they may be saved. The outward Jew and christian must become new men by the spirit, as spoken of by Jesus the Son of God. The will of God must be obeyed whether it pleases men or not, whether mortal men will consent or reject, God is king and ruler. Jesus, born in a manger, of poor people, at the age of twelve years the Holy Spirit filled him and he went into the temple at Jerusalem and answered and confuted the old and learned men of Israel—God's will be done. Mortal men see with a mortal eye and hear with a mortal ear. The work of God is done by the Spirit, and we poor unworthy sinners do not understand, and because we do not understand the spiritual sentence we reject it as out of place and declare it not possible. Jesus was true to the cause for which he was sent by our Father. Knowing all things that would take place, even the men who would betray him and the death he would die, if Jesus had been a mortal man he would have courted those in power of whom he could expect favors. But nay; he was sent by God, and he feared no man. Moses, Elijah, Jesus—three of God's loved ones—all had to suffer for the sake of men—to bring the sinner back to God, as our Father does not will the sinner to die; but nay, he wills them to return and live. The time was almost come, the time is almost here, when the second coming of Christ is promised, this time the Messiah expected by Jew and Gentile, thanks be to God. Thousands are believing who worship God in truth to-day, and are joint-heirs with Jesus the Son of God. Men who pass through a christian experience know not why it is or how it came, but they all know that a great change has taken place within themselves. God's work is wonderful; as Paul said things that once I hated now I love, and such as I loved I now hate. Earthly lost its charm, heavenly thoughts take its place. A new man, new thoughts, a new life appears; godly takes the place of ungodly; what a change for good! I hope and pray that all men may be blessed with such a change. We then can say with safety, death, where is thy sting? grave, where is thy victory? Happy is the man who puts his trust in God, and leads a life that pleases God; his reward is bound to follow him in this life and in the one to come. Jesus speaks to his disciples in parables so they should understand him and know the spiritual meaning. Poor unconverted sinners who find fault with the Holy Bible, the book of all books, because they do not exactly understand the spiritual meaning. You may be too great a sinner—you may be unfit for its use—it is a holy writing and a spiritual reading. You are an earthly man only; you have nothing to expect in heaven. You are not known to the Holy Ghost. At the time Jesus was on earth and spoke to the Israelites, they did not understand him, and some who did, pretended they did not. Worldly men are loved and accepted by the world. If Jesus approved the sins committed by Israel he could have had them as his friends. As soon as he disapproved of their evil—their sins—they became mad and rose up against Jesus and denounced him. So it is at this present day. Some christians claim that they love Jesus but they do contrariwise to his teachings. How can you expect good when you do evil? Our Lord is a strict judge and he forgets none of our sins. We are responsible; we received the commandments, the Bible; we had good teachers and preachers, and yet we permit ourselves to be led astray by worldly influence—we deserve punishment, and no doubt we receive it. Many think that Jesus will forgive them their sins because he died on the cross and came to save us from sin. We are bound to live up to his teachings if we expect to escape by him. If we do contrariwise to what he taught us in his noble lessons, we are responsible. A people who should know God and love him with all our hearts and our neighbor as ourself; a people for whom Jesus died on the cross to give us a great lesson—to love and obey God, as he came for our good, to deliver us from bondage, evil and sin. But nay; we are as bad if not worse as when Jesus was on earth. I am positive there is more murder committed to-day than when Jesus was on earth. There is surely not a proof of us getting better. Drunkenness and other vices I am also sure are much in excess of what they have been. I was present one day in a church where at least four hundred people were, when the preacher said "I believe if Jesus should come here he would have hard work to find twenty sincere christians." Oh! what a pity; what can we expect at the end of our days but the curse of our God and the displeasure of the one who died for our sake on the cross. All we can hope for and all we should pray for is for mercy that our good Lord will not punish us according to our works. Poor mortal, helpless sinner! return, repent, and pray for forgiveness so you may yet be saved from this evil, is the wish of one who found the truth. M. N.Y.E.

Remark.

The above communication is from a Jew by nature that has recently obtained mercy of the Lord, and confessed the name of Jesus.

His exhortations and warnings are stirring. All the writers of the Bible are Jews by nature. God links this one in the faith of the fathers. The thread is not broken. A three-fold cord is not easily broken. God turns the hearts of the fathers (the prophets) to the children, lest he smite the earth with a curse.

ELDER GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I had hoped to be able to send you some message in return for the excellent and comforting letter you sent me previous to your visit, and also desired to write an imperfect letter to all the dear ones who have so highly honored me with their correspondence, for you to publish in the LANDMARK, as I cannot, in my present condition, hope ever to respond to each one separately.

I have passed some days of excruciating sufferings, and been brought very near death's cold stream, since you saw me. But for some wise purpose the frail life cord was not broken to free the weary, longing soul from its tenement of suffering clay. The "Lord's ways" are indeed "past finding out," but "just and true." Besides increased sufferings and physical weakness, I have a bad case of sore eyes, which will prevent me from writing even to those who have endeared themselves unto me by frequent pen visits, with soothing tender expressions of christian fellowship and esteem.

How I miss the "glorious news from Zion's Holy Hill," and the delicious clusters of heavenly fruit sent me by the heavenly labors. Yet amid all my bereavements, solitude and loneliness, the compassionate Father sends the blessed Comforter with fresh supplies from his exhaustless bounty. Then I am neither lonely, destitute nor sad. Praise such matchless grace! Come or write when so disposed. With fervent love,

RUTH.

"His anger endureth but a moment; in his favor is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Ps. 39:5.

DEAR BROTHERS:—When we recount the nights of sorrow and weeping and the succeeding mornings of joy and sweet surprise, realizing in our hearts that the anger of the good Lord endures but a moment and that we are favored in and by his life, thus preserving us through all the ills and besetments of times passed, it would seem that we had been sufficiently wrought, exercised, led, rebuked, chastened, humbled and preserved; kept from the snare, delivered from the destroyer and saved by his mighty power from our enemies. O, it does seem, with all the evidences, that we would be more and more reconciled to our Father's will. But alas, alas! I find that I am so rebellious, so filled with unbelief, wandering away from the footsteps of the flock, that many, very many dark and long nights of weeping and anguish befall me. Some, perhaps, would tell me that these seasons are necessary, and ordered of the Lord for my good, to which I could subscribe a hearty amen; but when I examine the cause of my complaint I find that I have sinned—have done those things I should not have done, and left undone the commandment of the Lord, and the weeping is brought on us and in us for our sins. Every transgression receives a just recompense of reward. The light that is in us giving us a knowledge of our corruption and deformity, is to us darkness of the blackest night, and we are filled with contempt and unutterable weeping, and could we but feel that Jesus is near to guard us against approaching danger, and turn aside the shaft of the adversary, the darkness would be overpast, and we should have the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. We do not feel that we have made any progress, but rather we have retrograded. We get lower and lower in the dregs of sin and misery and more we feel the need of the saving strength of our Redeemer. From day to day our strength fails us, and were it not for the little trust that our great and merciful God works all things after the counsel of his own will, we would sink under the intolerable load to rise no more. Upon the base of God's immutable and eternal purpose which he proposed in (not out of) Christ

Jesus our Lord, we can only rest, trusting in his precious blood to cleanse us from sin and all its pollutions. Sometimes amid the severest storms and darkest nights, being overwhelmed in bitter weeping and self condemnation, all, all on a sudden, the clouds break and disappear, the wind and the storm is gone, the sky is clear, and the glorious sunlight of heaven comes with warmth, life and sweetness into our souls, inasmuch that we are filled with unspeakable joy; and again we see our triumph over all our imperfection and woe, through him who loved us and gave himself for us to redeem us from all iniquity. Joy cometh in the morning. His anger endureth but for a moment. It is turned away and our hearts are filled with food and gladness. Bread of heaven! how sweet to the hungry soul, how life-giving and precious to him who has passed through a long, dark night of bitter weeping. He feels that all is well. Now in sweet fellowship and union with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ, we love the brotherhood with a pure heart, fervently. The spirit of forgiveness pervades our breasts, and we pray for those who speak evil of us. It is good for us to be made acquainted with our sinful souls. Our nature is so corrupt and in enmity against God, that were it not for such lessons as we learn in nights of sorrow and weeping, we would be found turning the grace of God into a lie and serving the creature. We do not feel that our sins are ordered of the Lord, for he tempts no man to evil; but the dispensations of his providences to us are such that we are chastised for our rebellion and wickedness, until we are humiliated and made to acknowledge no power but his, in our salvation. And it is a gracious mercy to us that we are thus dealt with. He chastens us in love, corrects us in his mercy, and saves us by his grace, giving us an inheritance among the sanctified. The nights of weeping will soon be over, and we shall wake in the morning of everlasting day; and God himself shall wipe all our tears away, and our joy will be complete in Him.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have a letter from sister Ruth. It is so comforting, please publish it, if you think best. From your little sister, MAGGIE A. STATON.

Bethel, N. C.

MY DEAR SISTER IN THE FELLOWSHIP AND SUFFERINGS OF OUR LORD AND REDEEMER:—I have earnestly desired, and at various times endeavored to pen you a few lines in compliance with your farewell request, but my physical condition has been so painful for more than two months, so great a bodily exertion as writing would soon throw me into violent pain, nausea, and great nervousness, forcing me to desist without completing a very brief note. Many precious letters from dear spiritual kindred have accumulated before me, and it grieves me that I cannot make some response to them, for when I cannot write I get but few letters, and the precious soul-comfort, encouragement and consolation these "white-winged angels" bring me, fresh from the chosen vessels of mercy, many of whom have been purified in the furnace of refinement, are worth more to me than all the wealth of this great earth. Never before did I realize the rest, benefit, the rich merits and inestimable value there is in the writings of God's peculiar people so deeply as I have during these years of my sore bereavements and long-continued afflictions. Isolated as I now am from the society of the blessed people who know and love the joyful sound of salvation as it is in Christ Jesus, cut off from assembling with the saints in the spiritual sanctuary to worship in the beauty of holiness, to join them in anthems of praise and adoration to the King of Zion, and to drink in the old wine, eat the precious manna and feast upon the broken bread of life as the dear under shepherd gives it out in due season, and since placed so near the river of Babylon, where its turbulent, roaring waters wash in upon the soul, there seems to be a sweeter savor and richer coloring in our religious periodicals and private correspondence whose influence upon my grief-stricken spirits is as oil poured forth upon troubled waters. Besides all this, one's mind becomes more enlightened in spiritual things, and the soul more steadfastly confirmed in the precious doctrine of God our Savior, by reading the deep and bold contentions for the faith of God's elect, by those whom God hath sent forth upon Zion's walls to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation to poor, perishing man, and of others whom he hath so sweetly gifted to write for the comfort and encouragement of the poor, afflicted, trembling little lambs of the Savior's precious blood-bought flock. Among the tidings of the last LANDMARK was a letter from you, which was a rich treat to my soul, and the perusal of which has constrained me to no longer refrain sending you an imperfect letter. I do not feel worthy to address you, nor any of the Lord's humble poor, who are so far my superiors in all spiritual attainments, but if my heart does not deceive me very greatly, they are my people, their God my God, and with them I want to live, die, and be buried. Then, indeed, shall I dwell with them in the mansions of the Father's house above, where no sickness and sorrows, no afflictions and sufferings will ever separate one from another, as is too frequently the case here in this wilderness. I spend a greater portion of my long, wearisome days, and painful, restless nights, in meditating upon the rest, blisa, joy, and effulgence of immortal glory, and earnestly long for the blessed angel to come with my final discharge from the toilsome march. How long the time does seem when the poor, tired, pain-racked body, upon which complicated disease has preyed so long, seems too frail and weak to stand the furious, pelting storms of advancing midwinter, and is crushed beneath the awful weight of worldly sorrow and care; yet until the purpose of the Master in our existence is accomplished, the cup of mixtures of pleasures and pain be drained, and the appointed time for our change is fulfilled, we must wait and endure with all the fortitude and patience the Spirit works in us, whatever the unerring, wise hand of a most tender Parent sees needful to appoint, or suffer us to experience. He that endures to the end shall be saved, and in due time we shall reap if we faint not, says the beloved apostle, who was himself sometimes overwhelmed with grief; who experienced largely the common afflictions, persecutions, reproaches, scourgings and imprisonments of the gospel defenders, and who counted it joy to suffer all things for the excellency of the knowledge of the Lord and Savior, whose grace and power rendered him a willing martyr to the precious cause, rejoicingly yielded himself to the executioners, that they might, as it were, hasten the time for his soul to appear with his beloved master in everlasting glory. How strong and gloriously was the saving faith of Jesus manifested in the lives of all the apostles, and in all of the Old and New Testament patriarchs and saints who lived in ages of great persecution and suffering, and when the true gospel with its worshippers was opposed so bitterly that many suffered martyrdom for steadfast adherence to its divine principles. How encouraging it is to us, dear sister, amid all our persecutions, sufferings and bitter trials, to reflect upon the lives of God's peculiar people in the ages of the past, what they endured for the cause of religion, how sorely oppressed, afflicted and evilly treated, what deprivations and destitution they experienced in earthly things. Verily, the almighty arm of Jehovah alone did sustain, protect and deliver them from all their enemies, their perils and dangers, their sorrows and distresses, and the power, grace and strength of the Lord is the very same now, as in those days, for the mighty One who formed the earth and moves all worlds is immutable. Time makes no change in him, for "yesterday, to-day and forever, he is the same" omnipotent, omniscient, infinite, almighty, eternal, unchanging God, who "inhabiteth earth and eternity," who "knoweth all things from the beginning," declaring that he will "work all things after the counsel of his own good pleasure." With such a God to lean upon, to trust, love, honor and serve, what have we (who as we trust, have, through the sufferings, death and resurrection of the Savior and Redeemer, and by the operations of the Holy Spirit in our hearts, been reconciled and redeemed unto God,) to fear while passing through the fiery trials and common afflictions marked out for every one who follows in the blood-stained footprints of the blessed Lamb. Verily, nothing can befall us that the dear Father is not cognizant of. The trials and tribulations, sorrows and woes under which we so often groan, and from which we strive so hard to flee, are not accidents or misfortunes that have overtaken us; they are the badge of discipleship with which the Lord marks his blood-bought sheep, and one criterion by which the world can judge the household of faith. All are sent to us by him who knoweth our needs infinitely better than we do, and whose love for us is infinitely more deep, more tender, more faithful and more durable than that of the tenderest earthly parent. He knoweth how much to put on each one, for "he remembereth our frame, that we are but dust in his sight," and in just and even weights does he deal to each their portion, which, like the manna that fed the murmuring Israelites in the wilderness, always come to us in due season to overthrow our own plans and show us how depraved, vile and deceitful our nature is, that we may realize the only source whence all help and blessings flow. If the Lord spared not his only Son from the deepest depths of human suffering when he was pure, holy, harmless, and separate from sin, but made him who knew no sin a curse for us, that he might redeem us unto God by his righteousness, should we who are nothing but sin, whose souls are as "black as the tents of Kedar," whose righteousness is as filthy rags, who are full of wounds and bruises and putrifying sores, expect to escape great suffering of both soul and body? If the captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering, can such polluted worms as we are attain "unto the perfection of the saints," be made "perfect even as he is perfect" in any other way. Nay, verily, we must endure all manner of sufferings, be thoroughly cleansed in the heated furnace of intense sufferings, ere we are prepared for the realms of perfect holiness. As the Head passed through all the suffering of time, so must the body. Therefore, dear sister, let us take courage and rejoice that we have been counted worthy to endure these things, and to suffer with him who is with us in all trials, able and ready to deliver our souls in every time of need. The way is indeed straight and narrow, the path steep and rugged, with briars and thorns to pierce the tender feet; but Jesus, our unerring gracious shepherd, goes before to lead our feet aright. Every thorn that pierces us strikes him too. Every pain we feel has wounded him also; for, having dwelt here in the flesh, he knows how to feel for us. "In all our afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel (spirit) of his presence saves us." O, blessed Jesus! what a rich, almighty friend thou art; ever ready to help the poor, trembling saint. What condescension! for him whose power is unlimited, whose wisdom, holiness, love and majesty are infinite, whose throne is in heaven above. How wonderful it all seems to us finite mortals. Verily, his ways are past finding out, his works incomprehensible; but his love and pity he reveals to us again and again, when by the hand of his grace he rescues our falling feet and sheds abroad in our troubled souls the peace and love of God that passeth understanding. How tender and full of compassion is that love to poor, unworthy sinners. What a bed of down to the weary, tempest-tossed soul, when heavy burdened, seeking rest and finding none, to hear the small still voice whispering "Peace, be still." Infinitely sweeter to the believer's ear, is the soft, sweet voice of our heavenly lover, than the most delicate and exquisite strains of the softest instruments of earth, even though its cords be touched by the most skillful performer. Like sweetest carols from the thoroughly sanctified, filling the soul with enrapturing peace, with holy and majestic awe, does the influence of this charming music distil upon the weary mind. 'Tis this divine power that reaches out to earth's remotest bounds to embrace and bring together in spirit the whole family of redeeming Grace, so that however far asunder their bodies are, by the electricity of the Holy Spirit, they often "sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus," and feed alike upon the same precious milk and honey of Canaan's happy land, where they are permitted to lie down in the green pastures of redeeming love, beside the still waters of salvation, and under the shadow of the ever green tree of life, to rest and bask in the refreshing fragrance. Is not such grace, such mercy and such unchanging love too great and glorious for such sinners as we to receive and enjoy? we who are so poor and vile, and unworthy of such rich blessings. None have ever merited such esteem, or proved worthy to receive, but all are more deserving, more worthy and grateful than myself, who am possessed of such a cold, narrow, vile, deceitful, and unthankful heart, and who have been so slothful and negligent to learn wisdom's ways, and the many precious lessons over which the heavenly Father so patiently lingers with his little ones. All my hope, all my merit and worthiness lie alone in Jesus, who is my life, my way, my strength, and my eternal all, for "there was nothing in me to merit esteem, or to give the Creator delight; 'twas even so, Father, I ever must sing, for so it seemed good in thy sight." Yes, dear sister, 'twas love beyond degree, matchless, holy love, that caused the Father to elect and predestinate you and I (if, indeed, he has so blessed us), with all who are to enter the pearly gates, to be conformed to the image of his Son, and give us the peace and rest of soul through the imputed righteousness of Christ. What debtors to sovereign grace we are, yet unable to pay the least farthing; but when we fall humbly at the feet of Jesus with honest confessions, in deep, fervent contrition, and tell him how poor and destitute, how grieved and depraved we are, full, free forgiveness will cancel the enormous debt, and the garments of praise will clothe our naked souls and Jesus will speak comfortably unto our contrite hearts. What a merciful friend, a precious and faithful High Priest is our Savior to "him that hath no help, whose hope the Lord God is." I have scribbled over much paper and used many superfluous words, besides making so many blunders and mistakes; but with such a mind as disease has rendered my always weak intellect, and in such an awkward, painful position as I am bound to occupy, how can I, who am at best but a lump of imperfection, do better? I have to write just as the mind leads, and cannot revise and copy, even when willing, for publication. So you, like others who favor me with their soul-cheering correspondence, must bear with my weakness, errors and imperfections in every way. I trust you will write me as soon as you can, tell me all about yourself, and how your mind is exercised in spiritual things. I am ashamed that I have not written you sooner, yet the Lord's will must be done in all things, and he has withheld from me that degree of his Spirit that would enable me to write comfortingly to the afflicted. Commending you unto the tender, all-wise watch-care of Him who is an ever present help, I am your humble little sister in Christ, Old Sparta, N. C. RUTH TAYLOR.

EDITORS ZION'S LANDMARK, DEAR BRETHREN:—The LANDMARK for Jan. 15th, 1893 has come to hand, and I have enjoyed its contents. The first article, written by Eld. J. C. Hall, I have read with interest. No doubt Eld. Hall has given the proper exposition of the parable which he writes: Although the "treasure," the church chosen in Christ before the world began, are born of God, and in that sense are not of this world, yet they are evidently sinners of Adam's race. If this was not the case then indeed we would have no part nor lot in salvation, and would be devoid of comfort. The "elect" of God were and are hid from the eye of man, but were known of God in his purpose and covenant before the world began, and are known of him now, and are all remembered and developed in nature and at the set time are brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus; for "the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his". He knows them by choice, by atonement, and by a holy calling. Jesus, in the spirit of prophesy, addressing his Father, says in the Psalms "My substance was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest part of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned when as yet there was none of them". Psalms 139: 15—16. No doubt the "substance" here spoken of has reference to the body of Christ, the church, and surely they were not hid from God when they were made in secret. Here is the treasure of which Eld. Hall writes so plainly and comfortingly. The eyes of the Lord saw this "substance," the church, when it was unperfect; that is when it was not yet made or created; when it was not yet in actual existence, but was in the purpose and love of God seen and known. In the book of God, the purpose of God in salvation, all the members of Christ, all the individual sinners chosen in Christ, were written, were known and provided for, and in the continuance or pursuance of God's purpose were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them; that is they were written or known in God's purpose when there was none of them in actual existence. Eternal life, which the heirs of salvation receive in the new birth, has ever existed, for it is the life of Christ and the life of God, for Christ is God. Hence, God says to objects of his wonderful and everlasting love, the partakers of his own divine nature, "Because I live, ye shall live also," as much as to say, ye have my life, and shall live as long as I do, which is forever. So we see poor sinners of Adam's race are raised up to the high position of being the children of God and heirs of heaven and eternal bliss. Surely such a great work is all of God, both as to the plan and its execution, and does not depend at all upon the puny efforts of poor mortals, either in their own behalf or for others. How blind are the zealous religionists of the world, who are making such a cry and using such efforts to save sinners, to evangelize the world, when they themselves do not know the truth; do not know that they themselves are utterly helpless! My only hope is in God; it is the purpose and grace of God, given me in Christ before the world began, and in the pursuance and development of that purpose and grace. Knowing how sinful and helpless I am, I can but trust in the Lord. I have no where else to go. I sometimes find myself looking to myself, or at myself; but am compelled soon to look away from self.

I have read with interest the editorial headed "David and Saul". How searching are such truths as those presented in this editorial! The reader, if he is hungering for the bread of life, and seeking after more evidence as to his christianity, can but ask himself, as he reads such truths, "Am I a 'David?' or am I a 'Saul?'" For the comfort of such as I am, I will here state that the christian, in a figure, is both David and Saul. He is David in his relation to Christ, and Saul in his relation to Adam. The spirit that prompted and enabled David to act in such a lovely way, evidently was the spirit of Christ, and answers to the christian when he is prompted by the same spirit. The spirit that moved Saul to act in such an ugly way was evidently the spirit of the flesh, which all of Adam's race have in their fallen nature. But if one should manifest only the spirit of Saul we would conclude that he was not a christian. But, if a christian can not be prompted by, and does not act under the direction of the spirit of Saul, or of the flesh, at times, then I am not a christian. Discriminating grace makes the difference between one man and another, and between their acts. It does the work in the one that does right. Paul said that it was the grace of God that was with him that produced greater labors in him than others. Yours in love and fellowship.

WELCOME

I am pleased at the thought of having the columns of the LANDMARK more enriched by the able productions which we may reasonably anticipate from the mind and pen of our dear brother and fellow laborer, ELDER SILAS H. DURAND, as CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

I do most heartily congratulate our readers for this addition to the Editorial Staff of the LANDMARK, feeling assured that the writings of Elder Durand will give a pleasing and profitable variety of matter to its Editorial columns.

As a man's gift makes room for him, I bespeak for brother Durand an open door of entrance into the hearts and experience of all lovers of truth, as one for whose writings they look with fond anticipations and an abiding expectation. Not that he is by any means a stranger to the great body of Primitive Baptists, but as a regular Contributing Editor to ZION'S LANDMARK its readers will doubtless hold him in stronger and more endearing bonds, as such.

While editorials do not differ from general communications when the doctrine is faithfully and clearly set forth, yet for some cause the editor bears very much the same relation to the reader as a pastor does to the churches he serves.

We naturally look for editorials in a periodical if nothing else, so also we look for the pastor to be with us and preach to us if no one else, while at the same time we like to read after and hear others preach as well.

The LANDMARK for over twenty six years has maintained the even tenor of its way continually asking for the old paths where is the good way.

By the help of the Lord it has contended for the simplicity of the gospel of truth, and for the ancient LANDMARK which our fathers have set.

It depends upon the giver of every good and perfect gift for its guidance and continuation.

Its columns are open to all lovers of truth who have a mind to write or read.

Its sphere and usefulness are equal to its circulation and appreciation. It endeavors to seek peace and pursue it.

To the end designed may the Lord prosper its way and his name have the praise. P. G. L.

BORN AGAIN.

Friend J. W. Partin, of Tennessee, requests my view of Isaiah 66: 7-9:

"Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child. Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children. Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God."

Isaiah, the prophet of God, was shown the coming of that great and wonderful Prophet, the Branch that should produce all the fruit of Lebanon, the Nail on which all vessels of mercy should be hung and supported, the Everlasting Father, of whom all his children should be born, the Arm of the Lord revealed that should bear all the government of the house of David, the Prince of Peace that should speak peace to the heathen.

Isaiah is shown the guilty failure of the national Israel to work any righteousness or deliverance in the earth. So corrupt were their offerings, so did they profane the temple and pollute the service, that he that killed an ox was as defiled as if he had slain a man, and he that sacrificed a lamb was as if he had cut off a dog's neck, and he that offered an oblation as if he had offered swine's blood, and he that burned incense as if he had blessed an idol. This could not only never bring deliverance, but, on the contrary, the more of it was done, the greater was the wickedness and misery following.

God's own arm would bring salvation, and his holy Son would bring deliverance, and before Zion travailed she should bring forth, before her pain came she should be delivered of a man child. There could be no credit given to man, or to Israel, or to Zion, in such a birth as this. It is altogether above and beyond nature. It refers to the birth of the Lord Jesus, and salvation by grace as above all works of the flesh, and in no sense according to the works of the flesh.

There never was such a thing known in nature as a virgin bringing forth a son, or that before a woman travailed she should bring forth a child, or that salvation should be before works, and precede them, for the law or natural notion is that we must work to be saved, work to become good, or that salvation is according to works. Salvation by grace is such that one is always surprised at what was done before he knew it, and that it is not according to our works.

In the birth of Jesus the man child all was accomplished, not only independent of human agency, but before any knew of it. It is by revelation that it is known to any. It is the Lord's work and it is marvelous in our eyes. In all the history of the life of Jesus as manifest in the flesh he went before. None could anticipate what he was, or what he could do. His birth, manner of life, crucifixion, resurrection, all was before any understood it. Before her pain came she was delivered of a man child. None of the princes of this world (princes are chief or leaders in knowledge,) knew Jesus, or the meaning of the prophets. Always it was by revelation that any knew any thing truly of Jesus.

How is it in our experience? Is not the Lord in the place before we knew it? Surely the Lord was in this place and I knew it not. He found Jacob. He begins this work. The light shines in darkness and the darkness comprehends it not. It is a strange work to the soul in whom the Lord works. He leads by a way they knew not. The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? No, we never knew such a thing as this. You never saw such a thing. Not only is there no insect or animal that brings forth the young from the first conception in one day, but not even the smallest plant of vegetation germinates and comes forth in one day. Never has a nation been born at once or in a day. This is unheard of and contrary to nature.

But as soon as Zion travailed she brought forth her children.

This is the Lord's work. None but the Lord can cause a nation to be born in a day.

Our friend requests my view of other scriptures bearing on the question of being born again, therefore I will quote them and continue this subject, endeavoring as the Lord may enable me to express my view of this gracious matter.

Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. John 3:3.

Verily, verily I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice. John 5:25-28.

The language used by Jesus in answer to Nicodemus, that is the word in the Greek tongue for born again, and the word he used for regeneration, where he declares that ye that have followed me in the regeneration, &c., also the word that Paul used for regeneration in his Epistle to Titus, "By the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost," &c., also the word that Peter used in his Epistle, That hath begotten us again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and his language, Being born again, used in the same Epistle, are all the same, or from the same word, showing that to be begotten again, born again, regenerated, all comprehend in that expression the same thing. As the Holy Ghost employs the language, the whole matter is comprehended in the Greek word GENNAO, which includes begotten, regeneration, born again. It is therefore not wise for man to go to hair-splitting in this matter in order to explain a mystery. Christ did not explain it to Nicodemus, but used language that contains in its meaning the entire matter from beginning to end. When we say one is the child of another, or born of such a woman, we mean by the expression, born, to declare the entire conception, travail and bringing forth of that child. Too much effort at explaining mysteries has drenched the land with a flood of confusion. If we hear the sound of wind we know it is blowing, but we cannot trace it to its origin. If we love God we know that we are born of God, but how we cannot tell. If we love the brethren, we know we are born again, or have had another birth besides the natural one, though it is wrapped in mystery.

But must we not speculate on these things? We speculate most on those things we know least about. Jesus said to Nicodemus, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. This means, if language means anything, that it is the man, the son of Adam by nature, who is corrupt, or flesh, or he would not need another birth; that is intended; and it means that the MAN, not some part of him, must be born again, and that the second birth is not at all like the first birth; for the first one is of the flesh, and remains so even though there should be a different birth, and that the second birth, or being born again, confers blessings that the first, or natural birth could not bestow. For when one is born again he can see the kingdom of God; but he cannot see that until he is born again.

Peter, in the language, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever," plainly contrasts this new birth, or being born again, with the first, or natural birth, and shows them to be wholly different. The natural, or first birth is of corruptible seed, the second birth, or born again, is of incorruptible seed; the first is as grass—to-day is, and to-morrow is not—fading away; the second is of that incorruptible word that liveth and abideth forever. James also says, Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth. Then the first, or natural birth, including begetting, conception, and everything connected therewith, is of the flesh; while the second birth (including begetting, travail and birth, or all connected therewith) is of God. Hence one born again is born of God, or born from above. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthly, such are they also that are earthly; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

We are told that Christ was made (born) of the seed of David according to the flesh (as born of woman), but declared (proven) to be the son of God according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Again, we are told that in raising Christ from the dead he was begotten: "God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again: as it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee;" Acts 13:33. Also the writer to the Hebrews thus treats it, considering Christ as the first begotten as declared in his resurrection. See Heb. 1:3-7.

Now how are we begotten again? Peter says, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." 1 Pet. 1:3. Then it is by the resurrection of Jesus Christ that the Father of Jesus Christ hath begotten us again unto a lively hope. The phrase begotten again does not mean that He had begotten us once before; but that we, who by nature or in Adam were begotten to an inheritance of corruption (the same we) are begotten again of the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, by his resurrection, to an inheritance that is incorruptible.

Again, it is said that we, who by nature are dead in trespasses and in sins, are quickened together with Christ. Eph. 2:1-6. The quickening, or making alive that which was dead (meaning creating, connecting or joining with Christ, so that it lives of him and with him, for a Christ—a head without a body—is not the Christ of the Bible,) is always WITH Christ. In this sense a nation is born in a day, or as soon as Zion travailed she brought forth her children. In this sense Zion is not anything separate from Christ—QUICKENED TOGETHER WITH HIM. One dies for all. They are connected with him in death, they are joined with him in the resurrection, in the sense that he was delivered for our offences (none of his own), and he was raised for our justification (he needed none for himself).

But in point of experience, or manifestation of these things in the application and bringing salvation to the heirs of promise, each one, as Saul of Tarsus (afterward Paul, the little one), hears for himself, or receives a quickening, has a travail, feels a deliverance from sin, comes into the gospel world in proper time. For the hour is coming (it has now begun) when the dead (dead in trespasses and in sins) shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. The consummation, or full completion of this glorious regeneration will be in the resurrection of the bodies of the saints, or those that have part in the first resurrection, at the last day. Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise, is true in its connection in the resurrection of Jesus in person, and also in the resurrection of the bodies of the dead saints, for it is already together with Christ the quickening is.

Jesus shall also raise all the ungodly that are in their graves, or all that have done evil, to the resurrection of damnation. John 5:28, 29. Quite a number deny this. They seem to think the Lord cannot do this. Jesus knew it would be denied. He says to his disciples, MARVEL not at this. It will surely come. ALL THAT are in the GRAVES shall hear his voice and come forth, whether they have done good or evil. Paul understood that there would be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. Acts, 24:15.

WHO CAN STAND BEFORE HIS COLD?

(Psalm 147:17.)

This question might appear to have little significance. But now and then in one's lifetime it does appear pertinent. Ordinarily people living in warm climates are insensible to the power of cold weather. But we are to be reminded that the God of heaven is the God of nature, and the God of the weather, the God of the hills and the God of the valleys, the God that sees in the darkness, and that dwells in the light, the God of all deep places, as well as of all high places, the God of rough weather and of calm weather, who makes his sun to shine upon the just and the unjust, who sends rain and storms, and makes stormy winds and tempest his servants; who rides upon the storm, and walks upon the wings of the wind.

Some people say that God has nothing to do with the weather. To my mind there is a most wonderful display of power and wisdom in the control of the weather. That power that suddenly chills the entire atmosphere, or as suddenly heats it, that withholds or sends the refreshing breeze, the storm or calm, that hides the heavens with lowering clouds, or brightens them with sunshine, that wraps the earth and fringes the forest in a mantle of snow, or paints it with flowers of summer, that congeals it with frost or softens it with heat, shows a wisdom and power unknown to man.

A few days ago God wrapped this earth in a covering of snow several inches deep. For days it scarcely thawed at all, and the cold held a solid grip on it. Suddenly, almost, the Lord sent a warm rain, and the earth sent up through the snow a mist resembling smoke, as though he had kindled a fire under the snow. Then the drenching rain acted as a great broom to sweep away the snow, and in a few hours it had nearly all melted away. In a few hours another storm of cold flew all over America. Now these things occur before our eyes. Are not heat and cold, frost and hail, snow and ice, rain and sunshine God's treasures?

So intense has been His COLD of late that the question becomes pertinent, who can stand before his cold?

Cold is the enemy of life. Nearly all forms of disease come through this channel, causing congestion, or stoppage of action of the bodily functions. In death there is coldness in the extreme. Heat is an accident or quality of life. Where there is life there is heat. Where cold becomes unbearable death sets in.

We are reminded by these rigorous winters of the latent, or hidden power of cold the Lord keeps back in his untold arsenals of power. How merciful that he withholds it. But now and then to remind us of our nothingness, he lets these treasures and missiles fly forth to remind us of his power and our nothingness.

As one walks over a pond of deep water frozen so hard that a team of horses with a loaded wagon makes no impression visible upon it, how strange it seems. What a wonderful power it is that welds the particles of water as tough as bars of iron, almost, so that the silent, unseen power that packs together particles of water thus is amazing. Where once no man could walk there is a shining, solid pavement, capable of bearing ponderous loads. Then the Lord sends his heat and melts these shields of ice, and they become the flowing stream.

How little labor man performs at such times. How powerless he is to resist this cold. It is then he feels the value of fire, and the comfort of warmth. Cold cometh from the north. When cold becomes too intense it kills. The law is the ministration of death coming from the north, in this sense. There is no life in the law; but when the commandment comes, sin revives, and I die. We must know the killing power here showing us that there is no life in us, no power to produce any good fruit, and that it is only when the Lord sends out his word and melts the cold, or when he causes the south wind to blow, that his garden sends forth her pleasant fruits. When the life-giving power of the Sun of Righteousness shines with the light and heat thereof, then the earth yields her increase.

Who of his children can stand before his cold when he withholds the sun of righteousness, with the heat and comfort, the fruitfulness thereof, and leaves us in the winter of darkness and barrenness to lament our unfruitfulness. We often say, I am so cold. There is no life in me, no feeling, no ray of sunshine, no pleasant fruit. Alas, who can stand before his cold?

The garden of the Lord is in the joyous and healthy, genial climate of his love, and the beams of joy from the sun of righteousness shine on the garden of the Lord.

But now and then winter comes on, for the Lord sends winter and summer, cold and heat, day and night. In winter we tarry at home, look into our state, feel our coldness, and barrenness. But cold weather cometh from the north, and so does fair weather. Winter thins out insects and vermin. It is needful to the christian to let him see where his supplies must come from, and to show him that much of the apparently good growth of summer is sappy and worthless, and that he must be toughened to endure hardness as a good soldier.

This clearing, cold weather removes the rubbish, stubble and old stalks and dead matter of our poor lives, and sets to work again the power of grace, and the earth again yields her increase. Winter does not last always. The voice of the turtle will again be heard in the land. The time of singing of birds will come again, and the garden of the Lord will again blossom and bear fruit. It is now winter. Who can stand before his cold? But the sun will again shine with power, the south winds will again blow. Zion will again be revived, and bear her pleasant fruits, when the south winds shall again blow on the spices, causing them to send forth their goodly smell and pleasant fruits.

CAUTION.

Baptists, when they love one another, do not see the faults of their brethren, but each sees his own faults then. But when they do not love one another, then each sees his brother's faults, but does not see his own. When we hate ourselves we love the brethren; but when we hate the brethren we are exalting ourselves. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES.

C. W. HOLADIA.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—By request of Victoria Holidia, the church at Sandy Grove and the church at Bethlehem, Tyrrel County, N. C. will attempt to write a notice of the life and death of our loved Deacon C. W. Holidia. The subject of this notice was born the 7th of Dec. 1350. When he became a man he was a very useful one, and much beloved and quite a friend to the Baptists. He obtained a hope in Christ and after some years united with the church at Bethlehem, Tyrrel Co., N. C. on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in Sept. 1885, and ever afterwards manifested great interest in the cause of his Lord and Master. In June 1887 he was chosen and set apart to the office of Deacon which office he filled with perfect satisfaction to the church until Feb. 19, 1891, when he was granted a letter of dismission to join the church at Sandy Grove, Beaufort Co. N. C. having moved into its bounds. He was gladly received as such on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in March 1891, and we hoped to be blessed with his fellowship and service for many years to come. But alas our hopes were blighted. For on his return from a visit to his old home he was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs which continued for several days, until he was brought very low, and his life despaired of; but he recovered so he was able to get about the neighborhood, and render some little service to the church. But in despite of all that a loving wife, sympathizing brethren and kind friends could do he began to go back, and he grew worse until his disease developed into consumption, which ended his mortal life at half past 3 o'clock A. M., July 30th 1892. It was my privilege to know brother Holadia from 1880 until his death, and I am sure I never knew a better man. He bore afflictions with christian fortitude and patience, thought they were so great.

He leaves a widow and six sons to mourn their loss, which is his eternal gain. Though brother Holadia was a stranger in this section, he had the confidence and esteem of all who knew him, and all regretted very much to give him up. Surely a good man has gone from the evil to come. May the grace of that God who supported him be with our dear sister

Holadia, and enable her to bear her troubles with patience, and raise her children in such a way that they may be honored as their father was. I do not feel that I have done justice to his memory, but will close. Yours in hope,

J. T. ROWE.

HARRIET SLED.

Sister Sled was born December 5th, 1822, and died November 12th, 1892, making her stay on earth nearly seventy years. The cause of her death was asthma from which she had been a great sufferer for many years. Sister Sled's maiden name was Bird, daughter of John and Elizabeth Bird, and was married to Ethelbert Sled at the age of 23. She was a dutiful daughter, a kind and affectionate wife and a loving mother. Near the close of the cruel war between the states, sister Sled as many others, had to bid farewell to her companion forever in this life. He was last heard of in the Valley of Virginia, and perhaps fell in battle as did many of his comrades; but sister Sled never knew what befell her husband, so she went a mourner all her days, mourning for her absent one. But Jesus who came to bind up the broken hearted, and to comfort the distressed, in his tender mercy poured the oil of his grace into her heart, giving her a sweet hope beyond this world of sorrow, to that bright land where living waters gently pass and full salvation flows, and on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September 1873, she related that hope to the church at Indian Creek, Floyd Co., Va., and was received into the fellowship of the church and was baptized by Elder Thomas Dickens. She was a faithful sister, always filling her seat in the church until the God of mercy laid the hand of affliction upon her. Her house was a home for Baptists, and a pleasant home it was. One was always delighted to sit and listen to her conversation, as her theme was salvation by grace. Sister Sled leaves three sons and one daughter, with many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. But we believe their loss is her eternal gain. It has been the privilege of the unworthy writer to be acquainted with sister Sled from her early youth, and I can truthfully say I never met a more worthy sister in every respect. Just two weeks before her death I tried to preach near her house. She was able to attend, and while I felt to be blest in the attempt, it seemed to be a feast of good things to her. I stayed all night with her, and was impressed to inquire if her hope remained the same. To which she answered that it was stronger all the time. So I would say to the bereaved children and relatives weep not for her as for one who has no hope, remembering that she is now in the paradise of God.

EDNEY COATS.

Please publish in ZION'S LANDMARK the death of sister Edney Coats, the beloved wife of Elder Josiah Coats, who departed this life December 29th, 1892, after a lingering illness of several months. Sister Coats united with the Baptist church at Hannah's Creek, Johnston County, N. C., on Saturday before the first Sunday in December, 1832, in her nineteenth year, making her stay amongst the Baptists something over sixty years. Her beloved husband preceded her to the grave several years, leaving her to the cares of this sinful world, and to care for their children, two of whom survive her. She was a woman of pure and spotless character, and tenderly beloved by all the brethren and sisters who knew her—we may truly say a mother in Israel has gone. In her latter days she frequently got in such a condition that she did not know her nearest and best acquaintances; but even then, if any of them misquoted scripture, she would correct them, a knowledge of which she retained almost to her death. This was remarkable, yet in accordance with the promise of God, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." The life of sister Coats was one much to be admired. During the troubles of the Baptists she seemed to be firm and undaunted, never forgetting her first love, and if there was ever a stain against her, it is unknown to the writer. I visited her often in her last days, and always found her strong in the faith. She seemed to enjoy the preaching of the Primitive Baptist ministers above her chief joy, and I, with others, often tried to preach for her by special request, and it was a great comfort to her. The brethren and sisters were kind in visiting her and administering to her comfort, all of which she seemed to appreciate in an humble and christianlike spirit, and with us, the memory of such a sister is pleasant, and we can truly say that she has left behind her a name that is in keeping with the cause of Christ, and one to be imitated by her brethren and sisters,

May, God sanctify this bereavement of ours to the good of relatives, brethren and sisters, and may we meet her in a better land, is the prayer of the mourning writer,

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

MAMMON OF UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Many times for the last few years have I been asked what our Lord meant by the mammon of unrighteousness; but the thing was a mystery to me, and I could give no answer. A few weeks ago I felt troubled over the matter, and in my troubles I tried to ask the Lord to make the matter plain to me. These petitions of my desires continued for several days, and yet no answer came. At last my mind left the subject, and I had no particular trouble about it, but felt that it was not God's will to reveal the matter to me, and so I tried to be contented. One morning as I sat down to read (but not in that place), all at once, and very unexpectedly, the thing was opened to me in such a way that I was made to rejoice, and in my heart to praise the Lord. Since that time there has not been a waver in my mind on the subject, but I have been made able to rest in the belief that the matter was from the Lord. To-day, as the ground is covered with snow, and the north winds blow fiercely, and I am mostly in doors, I feel that I want to give to you and the readers of the LANDMARK the benefit of what I believe to be a revelation from the Lord on this subject.

The Lord did not commend the CONDUCT, but the WISDOM, of the unjust steward. In his wisdom he made friends of his master's customers, so that when he was discharged from his stewardship he could find friends of those who had formerly traded with him. The Lord told the disciples to make unto themselves friends of the MAMMON OF UNRIGHTEOUSNESS that when they failed they, (the mammon of unrighteousness) might receive them into everlasting habitations. The disciples were Jews, of which tribe our Lord came. He first preached the gospel of the kingdom to the Jews, for it must begin at Jerusalem. By the Jews he was rejected. He was the green tree. He knew that they would reject his disciples after him, and he here foretells them of the failure they would meet with among their own nation, the Jews. It was decreed of God that the gospel should be preached unto the Gentiles, and that they, as well as the believing Jews, should be made partakers of the blood of the atonement. He therefore tells the disciples whom he had chosen, to make to themselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness (Gentiles), so that when they failed, or were cast off by the Jews, the gentiles should receive them into everlasting habitations. Previous to the coming of our Lord, the Gentiles had been traders with the Jews, yet were esteemed by them to be as dogs, or an unclean nation, with whom they would neither eat nor drink lest they should be defiled thereby. Their actions said "We are clean, you are unclean; we are righteous, you are sinners; therefore we will have no friendship with you." The Lord Jesus had come to put away this difference, to break down this middle wall of partition that had separated the Gentiles from the worship of God, and to make the way for his name to be preached to the Gentiles even by those who in former times held the Gentiles in low esteem, for the disciples were strictly Jews, and would no more associate with the Gentiles than the self-righteous Pharisees. But the Lord had a people even among the unrighteous Gentiles, and by his obedience had fulfilled, and thereby abolished the old covenant contained in ordinances, they being in him and nailed to the cross with him that the new covenant by him should be established in the hearts of all his people, whether they were formerly Jews or Gentiles. Thus he of the two nations has made one holy nation unto the Lord, and they are brethren in the Lord however lightly they might have formerly esteemed each other. Now of those offcast Gentiles who are without God and without hope in the world make to yourselves friends; for when ye fall here they shall receive you into everlasting habitations. Then after the ascension of our Lord the disciples saw this thing fully verified, for the Jews rose up in persecution and killed some of them and imprisoned others, so that they were scattered abroad preaching Jesus. Thus the name of Jesus, instead of being blotted out as the Jews intended, was preached among all nations, languages and kindreds, and those who were formerly the mammon of unrighteousness had their hearts and ears opened by the power of God, and they attended the word preached, and it was so mixed with the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ that they with gladness received both it and those who preached it into everlasting habitations. Even unto this day the Jews reject the Lord Jesus and his disciples, not admitting the New Testament to be a part of holy writ, while the Gentiles receive both the Old and the New as the scriptures of divine truth. The words "everlasting habitations" does not refer to eternity, but so long as the gospel shall be preached here by the servants of God, and so long as the princes shall rule here in judgment, which shall be as long as time remains. All this time shall the words of the apostles and all the disciples of our Lord find a resting place among those who were the enemies of God, but have been made his friends by his divine grace. With them the scriptures find a place in their hearts, and they rejoice in them as holy companions given by the Lord. These "habitations" are like the "mansions" spoken of by our Lord in John 14:2. They are in the church here, called by him "My Father's House." There are no mansions in eternity, but a PLACE that our Jesus has gone to prepare for us. Brother Gold, I hope that our God may so bless these remarks to those who read them that they may be made to rejoice in them as I was made to rejoice when they were opened up to me. Your little brother, I trust, in the Lord,

L. H. HARDY,
Newport, N. C.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—If you will allow, I take this manner of expressing my gratitude, first to God, then to the brethren, sisters and friends in contributing to my aid in building a dwelling house. May God reward you many fold with the blessings of this life, and in the world to come everlasting life. In my present financial condition I cannot undertake to build a house so costly as the one we lost, which would be about $1,500 00. My brethren and friends in volunteering their aid, and knowing the pressure of the times peculiarly, propose to build a house for about $600 00, of which we have $375 00. Of course, every little mite will be thankfully received. While we live, it is consoling in a fleshly sense to have houses in which to repose, and shelter us from the snow, rain, &c. Those who possess them should not despise those who have none; neither should we idolize or worship our houses, or lands, or any other false god; but some Baptists may conclude it is best that the gospel minister should be kept humble and poor, thus being better qualified to preach, or because they cannot occupy or possess such a house, they do not feel to aid others. Do you remember the individual who asked the Saviour to speak to his brother that he divide the inheritance with him? His answer to the young man was 'Take heed, and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. In proof, he then refers them to this parable: The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully. The rich man says, what shall I do; because I have no room where to bestow my goods; then concluded to pull down and build greater barns in which to bestow his goods, and said to his soul, Thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. God said unto him, Thou fool; this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.' I mention this to show that whether poor or rich in worldly goods we may be covetous, and the apostle Paul says covetousness is idolatry. So boasting should be excluded, and not simply live for ourselves, and look upon our own things, but on those of others. Now some may think I write thus in the way of asking aid, but not so; for I can truly say, though it seems that I may be brought to utter poverty (as was the case with Job, though I am not such a man), it has not changed my relation as to swerve, but to strengthen, if possible, my affection for the glory of God and the welfare of his people. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. I desire neither poverty nor riches. I would not be so rich as to forget God, nor so poor as to steal. I regret the idea of being or becoming burdensome to the brethren, therefore do not beg. On the other hand, I feel it my duty to receive when given in love, whether I am needy or otherwise. If the will of God be so, I had rather suffer for well doing than for evil doing. In conclusion, I will quote "We know that if this earthly house of our tabernacle were dissolved, we have (not simply will have) a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Fire can never consume, nor any power ever destroy this building. In this earthly tabernacle we groan, being burdened; not desiring to be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Again, I say the Lord bless thee. B. C. PITT.

Old Sparta, N. C.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I feel somewhat impressed to write to you, but I am so weak, and it seems to me that I get weaker. So I feel to say like Paul, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death." Just now my eyes fell on this passage of scripture, and I feel like saying a little something about it: "And it came to pass that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the wayside begging." I feel like I was found by the wayside blind and begging; yea, worse than that, for I was maimed, deaf, lame and full of sores, and trying to beg this same Jesus to have mercy on me, but could find no relief until he came along when I did not expect him, just as this man, for I do not believe he expected Jesus to pass that way at that time. Just so with me. I feel that Jesus found me—not that I found him, as the world has it—for he says he came to seek and to save that which was lost; and I am so glad that he did, for I know that I never would have found him: for the scripture teaches me that all sinners in a state of nature are like this man, blind, and my own experience teaches the same, and what can a blind man find, or what can a dead man do? It is not only contrary to the word of God, but also the laws of nature for a dead tree to bring forth fruit. Now Paul says to the Romans that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. The Lord calls, and then he grants the gift of repentance, or the poor dead sinner would die in his sins without Christ or hope. But thanks be to his holy name, he has reserved unto himself a people that have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. The people that Jesus came here from the courts of glory to seek along the highways, poor and blind, deaf and lame; but such are the characters he came to seek, so no wonder John says there appeared a great wonder in heaven. That Jesus, the holy Child of God should have to come into this world, suffer and die for such a people as this, the poor, despised, blind beggars. But let us see what he says he will do with them: He will present his bride

(which is the Church of the most high God—this same people) holy before God, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing. Here is our consolation, though we be poor and blind. Jesus says he will do this, not that we have it to do at all, as the world has it. See what God says by Isaiah: "Cry unto Jerusalem that her warfare is accomplished, that she has received of the Lord's hands double for all her sins." David says blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin, whose iniquities are covered, &c. Such are the ones that compose the heavenly family that Jesus redeemed out of the world, the ones that he sought out when he was here. Peter speaks of them as being a holy nation, a peculiar people, a chosen generation, chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. What a blessed thought, what a glorious hope, that God, who is rich in mercy, has called us to sit in heavenly places in Christ, not according to our works, but according to the good pleasure of his will, though they have been wayside beggars, they shall go to the holy city of God when Christ shall come the second time, without sin, unto salvation, to make up his jewels, to gather his elect from the four corners of the earth; then shall we (if we are his) appear with him and be like him. I feel to say with the poet

The Lord has promised good to me,
His word my hope secures;
He will my shield and portion be,
As long as life endures.

From the weakest, if one at all,

P. D. GOLD, BELOVED IN THE LORD:—I have just returned from my tour up the country in company with Elder G. Bryan, to Philadelphia and Ebenezer churches. From there he returned for home, and I went over in South Carolina, to Cool Spring and to the other churches, down to Mount Pleasant, where I met Elder Dameron. He preached there on Friday. I reached there at night and found brother Dameron at old brother John Brown's. Elder Dameron left next morning for Sumpter, and then on to Georgia. We had snow and ice in abundance and extremely cold weather, but we were blessed to fill all the appointments but four. I enjoyed the trip well, especially in South Carolina. I feel like we had the presence of the Lord with us. When I can feel that, I don't mind cold or anything else. The brethren and sisters at Cool Spring and through South Carolina greatly desire that you would visit them. A friend at Greenville, Mr. John* Rieves and wife, with whom I stopped over a night, wish you to visit that town and preach there. They have a name among the Missionaries, but they are as good Primitive Baptists as I have met. Well, I will say no more of my trip.

JOSEPH E. ADAMS.

Bacclaysville, N. C.

DEAR ELDER GOLD:—I am glad to see you still zealously wielding the sword of Gideon for the truth as it is in Jesus. In its issue of the 28th of December last, the Signs of the Times published the obituary of Elder John Stipp, of Oregon, my venerable, beloved, and only surviving uncle at the time of his death. The writer of his obituary requested "Primitive Baptist papers to please copy." As I have not yet noticed its publication in ZION'S LANDMARK, and as I was writing on business, I thought I would speak of it. This obituary was not as full as it might have been in some respects. In respect to his religious life and character

Elder Stipp was a remarkable man. This expression from his nephew may be thought to be prompted by family pride; but its truth can be attested by all who knew him long and well. He was not at all contentious or aggressive, but in discussing the unlimited sovereignty of God, and salvation by free and unconditional grace with some of the ablest and most learned enemies of this fundamental doctrine the truth never suffered in his hands. In the prime of his wonderful manhood he had a remarkable memory, and no one could misquote scripture in his presence without immediate correction. If one quoted only a part of a passage of scripture, he could easily quote it all, and tell you the book, chapter and verse, without referring to the Bible. He held a great many friendly debates unsought by himself, with eminent ministers of other denominations, publicly and by the fireside. I will refer to one instance, while he lived in Illinois. About 1845 he was visited by two young Methodist ministers, highly educated and very able, and wonderfully eloquent, who were holding a protracted meeting in the neighborhood, and had created what they called "a great revival." For an entire day they sat by his fireside and discussed the sublime subject of salvation by grace. As the evening shadows appeared they arose to go, and one of them as he took my uncle by the hand, said: "Mr. Stipp, we must confess that we have not been able to overcome your able arguments." He replied pleasantly, "The reason is easily explained. The contest has been with you two gentlemen on the one side, and the Bible and myself on the other." He was born in Berkeley County, Virginia, now West Virginia. At the time of his death he had just reached and passed the 88th milestone on the journey of life. He emigrated from Virginia to Illinois in 1839 or 1840, and soon thereafter joined the Primitive Baptist church, known as the "Danville Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church," and was baptized by Elder R. M. Newport. In 1848 he crossed the plains with his family to Oregon. He at once joined the Baptist church there known as the Siloam, then in its infancy, in which he lived happily until called to join the millions of the Church Triumphant. I think it can be truly said that he "fought a good fight; that he kept the faith." And may it not be fondly hoped that he has received the crown laid up for all those who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. "Blessed in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." He never wavered in his belief in the truth. Trusting that this will find you in the full enjoyment of health, peace and spiritual growth, I remain, as ever, a mourner and a pilgrim, HENRY S. STIPP.

Los Gatos, California.

ELDER B. GREENWOOD AND WIFE,
MY DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER:—
As you are at home and sick, and no doubt lonely in feeling, I will again trouble you with some of the wandering thoughts of my mind today. I have thought a great deal about you both since I learned of your afflictions, which are only momentary, compared with the long, pleasant, happy home that you are looking forward to, and which you will surely enter when you are done with time. For, ever since first we met you have known nothing but Jesus, you loved nothing but the Savior and his followers. It is very evident that you are one of his chosen in him before the world began. Therefore he calls them as a shepherd doth his sheep, and they answer as Samuel did, saying Lord, here am I. A stranger they cannot follow, because he speaks in an unknown tongue, having not the faith, feeding on and giving tainted meat and stale bread, sour wine, and poor oil that darkens the way, so that christians cannot go; but when the great shepherd, having his rod and staff, speaks, his followers know the sound—no uncertainty about the matter—they hearken unto his voice as one crying in the wilderness, saying Lord, here am I; what wilt thou have me to do? To some he says, go feed my sheep, looking after the little ones, yea, even the little lambs, regardless of money and without price; for the Lord has bought them with his blood, and inserted into their souls the everlasting germ that never dies. Then why, Oh why, cannot we trust him and be reconciled? But for the flesh, it never is satisfied until death is swallowed up in victory. So the flesh is full of sin, and as the grass it must wither and come to nought. So the sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be unto God who gives us the victory. Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin. Then go feed my sheep. Take my yoke upon you, listen, and learn of me. I am the Rock. I am your salvation. In my Father's house are many mansions, yea, plenty of bread for you to scatter around to the poor and needy who are this day crying and scattered, having no tents (for the flock has been scattered) to dwell in, having no meat to eat, feeding upon the crumbs that fall by the wayside, no water to cool the parching soul, no balm to heal the broken heart, no voice to raise the drooping head, no hand to wipe the falling tear. How I long for the dark clouds to pass over; when,

Oh when, will the good shepherd appear? He will, and is sure to come again. Yes; he will not leave them comfortless. Well might the Psalmist say that he had never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread. Yet it is good for us at times to feel in that beggarly way (or at least, it is for me), lest we might become exalted. How often at our own door have I met the very poor, begging for something to eat, and when I would fill their hands, I could realize their feelings, in, as I hope, a spiritual sense. So you see it is good to beg; for it is the poor and needy that seek water that flows from the everlasting fountain that never runs dry. May the Lord remember and restore you again, is my prayer, and send you forth to feed the little flock that is bleating around the fold. But his will, not ours, be done. Sometimes perplexed and in the valley, sometimes in darkness, sometimes in weakness and leanness of soul, sometimes in groanings and sorrow, sometimes one way, and sometimes another; but when Christ appears we can then sing, let our songs abound and every tear be dry, we are marching through Immanuel's ground to fairer worlds on high. Lord be praised and bless you both.

Elder B. Greenwood is prostrated with asthma. His soul is full of love and peace, and he abounds in thanksgiving.

P. D. G.

ELIZABETH COCK, MEADOWS OF DAN, VA., DEAR SISTER:—I received your christian-like letter several days ago, but I have had no time to reply until now. I cannot express how much comfort a letter of this kind affords me, since so few, of late, seem to be concerned about the good of Zion. I rejoice to know that in this evil day there are some who are not at ease in Zion. I am made daily to mourn for Zion in her languishing condition, and moreover, to sigh because of my own infirmities. The church is never chastened without a cause. She never suffers for well-doing; but she is chastened for her sins. Jesus said "Because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold." This, then, is surely the cause of Zion's coldness and distress. Oh, how I should rejoice with joy unspeakable, if I could once more behold the church in her beauty, walking in the light of God's countenance. Among the many sins which have caused, and are now causing our woe and lamentations, envy, strife, slackness in every duty, and (to use an expression that will include the whole catalogue of sins which envelop us in darkness) is living after the flesh and we shall of the flesh reap corruption. The more we sin, and the more we live after the flesh, the weaker we become. Then how true is the scripture which says "He that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger." We seem to grow upon what we feed on. Therefore, if our minds are stayed upon the Lord, and our affection set upon things above, we will be kept in perfect peace; but if we live after the flesh we shall die. If we devote all of our time to the things of this life, we become more and more worldly-minded, and so we have less strength with which to resist the influence and cunning craftiness of the adversary. We should shun every appearance of evil, and so be an example to the flock; and if we should see any brother or sister walking unadvisedly, we should, in humble faithfulness, tell them of their faults and persuade them to turn and repent. James said "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." James 5:19-20. We greatly err when we see a brother departing from the truth, and we fail to even warn him. Then let us watch and pray lest we should enter into temptation. If we pray to be delivered from evil, and then walk heedlessly into sin, we may feel sure that our prayer is not of the Lord. WATCH is first, and then PRAY. Therefore, let us humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt us in due time, casting all our care upon him, for he careth for us. May the Lord bless you with health and peace. We want to hear from you again. Yours in Jesus, I hope,

F. P. BRANSCOME,

Laurel Fork, Carroll Co., Va.

ELD. P. D. GOLD; DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—It is with a feeling sense of unworthiness that I attempt to address you and the many dear readers of the LANDMARK. Oh! that the dear Lord may guide my mind and pen to write something that may be of comfort to the household of faith, "for without him we can do nothing." I have felt so cold and barren of late, yes! in a destitute condition, and if a servant, surely the most unprofitable of all, but "the Lord will regard the prayer of the destitute, and will not despise their prayer." The destitute cry unto the Lord for their daily bread, "I cried unto the Lord and he heard me, says the psalmist David," but do we ever cry only when in distress? Yes, sometimes we shed tears of joy in praise to God for his many mercies and blessings, by which we are daily, yes! hourly surrounded. We are overwhelmed by his great kindness to us, who are so unworthy; but I am outside now. I am in a destitute condition. Oh! Lord hear me, visit me again, give me a shining crumb, I am so weary, so forlorn, so hungry, I look up, look down, look all around for a word of comfort, but alas, there is none; my heart is as hard as stone. "Oh! where are thy former loving kindnesses?" "I am as a sparrow upon the housetop, I watch and am alone." Oh! where is my beloved? He is gone from me. "Can some one tell me where I may find him?" What am I without him? "Nothing, less than nothing and vanity;" but when he speaks to Mary, Oh! what joy. Jesus was with her, but she didn't know him, supposed him to be the gardener when he spake and made himself known (how sweet,) then he bade her go and tell his disciples that he had risen, and she had seen him, with what assurance and joy unspeakable she went to deliver the message that she had received directly from the Master. How sweet to my poor soul to think that though the world, the flesh, and Satan all unite against the Son of God's delight, He says, fear not little flock for 'tis your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Yet he tells us to watch and pray, and pray without ceasing, watch as well as pray. Teach me how to watch and pray, Oh! Saviour, is the language of my soul lest I enter into temptation. Sometime ago I was thinking over my life and musing how different it had been, to what I desired it should have been, and feeling myself to be the least in my Father's kingdom, if one of that blessed number at all, and thinking so constantly of these things, my dreams became troubled and I felt as though a great trouble was about to settle on my heart, and one morning just as I was waking these words came to me, "I have a rich almighty friend, and one that loves me to the end." Oh! what joy there is in believing; the world, the flesh and Satan, were all put under my feet then and I could with all my heart praise the God who had taken my feet out of the miry clay, out of an horrible pit, put a new song into my mouth, even praises to Isreal's God. He is as good as his word and he will never leave nor forsake them that trust in him. He is with them at all times, yet they do not feel his presence, and why? Because he must let them know that they are nothing without him, teaches them to feel their need of him. I feel and know I am a great sinner, and where sin did abound grace did much more abound. I often think if there is one little thing for me to do to inherit eternal life, I am lost; for I feel I have offended in every point. But "how sweet the name of Jesus sounds in a believer's ear; it soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds and drives away his fears." Brother Gold, I felt this morning like I wanted to write; but feeling so destitute and void of everything, I trembled to begin. I penned it down as it came to me. Do with it as you see fit. Yours unworthily, BETTIE Z. WHITLEY.

EXPERIENCE.

I was born in the year 1865, and brought up by-pious parents, both members of the Primitive Baptist church. I thought that I was about as good as anybody, and that when I saw fit I would get religion, thinking like all Arminians I had the power but not the will. So I went on in this way until the year 1886, and in July and the first of August I had a severe spell of sickness, and like everybody else became interested about my soul. Well, I could not see much harm I had ever done, yet I could see that I was a sinner, so I resolved if the Lord would spare my life, that I would do better. I would leave off some of my evil habits and get to be a good man, as the Lord would be under some obligation to help me. Well, I quit swearing after I got up, and thought I was doing well. That was just before the earthquake. It came on and I thought I was going to be destroyed, so I tried to get alarmed about my soul again; but I can see now that I was more alarmed about my body than my soul, but could not see it then. After that I went to work to get better. I prayed a few times and it seemed that I was somewhat relieved. There was a big meeting going on at a Missionary church and I joined and was baptized. I got along very well a while, for I thought on account of my reforming that God had pardoned my sins; but thanks be to God I did not go on this way long before it pleased Him, as I hope, to show me that I was a sinner still, and I felt this time that I was a lost sinner; that I had tried to deceive God, and had lied to the people in saying that God had pardoned me of sin, and to the law I flew again, but could get no relief this time; for the more I tried to pray and do, the worse I got. I do not know how long I went on in this way, but I know I went on until it pleased God to show me that if I ever was saved it would be by grace through His mercy, and I could not see how that could ever be. No, I knew it could not, it seemed to me; and so I gave up and said, now, Lord, do whatsoever thou seest fit with me, and if I am lost thou art just. I remember the evening I gave up. I was in the woods at work alone, and I thought I could never be saved at all, and I would try to ask God to have mercy on me once more, and give up. I knelt down at the root of a tree and said something, I do not know what; but when I arose my burden was gone, and the tears of joy were streaming down my face. I felt that I could never praise God half enough for what he had done for me, for I could see then that he did it all, and his name deserved the praise. It was not long after this that Satan began to tell me that I was deceived, that it was all a mistake, for I still stayed with the Missionaries, and he would tell me that I did not love the church I belonged to, and that I was fooled, for the ones I loved best were the Primitive Baptists, and they were the offscouring of the world. So I stayed on where I was about a year, oppressed, as the poet says "by wars without and fears within;" but I began to try to find out if I was deceived, and right here I think if ever I prayed in my life, it was at this time. I asked the Lord to bring some passage of scripture to my mind, and let me know if I was deceived or not; and immediately this passage came in my mind: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee." Then I could praise his name again. I do not remember how long I stayed away from the church I loved then, but in October, 1889, I offered myself to the church at Mount Pleasant, Sumter Co., S. C., and was received, and baptized by brother Thomas Bell in November following. Then, for a while, I enjoyed religion; but now it seems that I cannot enjoy it as I did then. I cannot tell why it is. There are times of refreshing, but it seems they come so seldom. I know the scripture says that whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. It may be that I am not obedient. I cannot say; but I hope it will please him to show me in his own time and appointed way, for where he begins a good work he will perform it to the day of Jesus Christ. And I know he never begins any other kind of work but a good one, and he leads his people gently by the cord of his love out of Egypt into the promised land; and when we can go neither forward nor backward, to the right nor to the left, then we can stand still and see the salvation of God. Yes, it is all of God; for Jonah said I will pay that I vowed; salvation is of the Lord. Paul says again, Not of works, lest any man should boast: by grace ye are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, It is the gift of God. And again he says the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. I could write a great deal more but will stop. Hoping that the Lord will save all Israel with an everlasting salvation, world without end, amen.

BROTHER GOLD:—I do pray that you may live long to defend the pure gospel and its few devoted followers that are scattered abroad on the earth. I would part with all other reading matter, except the Bible, rather than the LANDMARK. I was feeling very low and discouraged about the time I received the first February No., and the first piece I saw was headed, "Why afraid of Christ?" Well Brother Gold, when I read and got the idea my poor heart began to sweeten up with joy, and I have wanted to see Jesus ever since, when the subject comes upon my mind. That piece put Jesus before me in a light that I had not thought of, and I feel now like I would travel through the cold many miles to see him, and it brought fresh to my mind a dream I had 45 years back when I saw the Saviour Jesus coming in Judgment on a bright cloud from the East, accompanied with thousands of angels, and my first thought was awful for some poor sinners that I knew, but in a second an angel had me flying up to Jesus on the cloud, and I was as an angel, and commenced shouting and opening my arms to embrace Jesus. I woke up and found it was a dream, and was grieved because it was not true; but I refreshed my soul on the strength of that feast for many years, and now whilst I write I feel like I would be run over with joy to see Jesus come, although I might have some trouble about some poor sinners around, and I never have looked on the judgment with any terror or fear since I had that vision, or dream; but I had in part forgotten it until I read the question, Why afraid of Christ. Brother Gold, pray for me when it is well with you. I have been led to love many brethren and sisters that I have never seen by reading the LANDMARK, many that have gone to Jesus.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Religious excitements have been common in this country during the winter but now they are about over, for the season. Like the pool of Bethesda there are only certain seasons when people can go into the pool to receive any benefit. And then when the season comes round they have to step in again. Among many incidents that I call to mind that have occurred sitting at the bedside of a dying saint I will relate one that I think is worthy of a place on record. An amiable and spiritual minded young sister in one of our churches was prostrated on a bed of affliction which proved to be her death sickness. A Methodist preacher whose location at the time was near, called one day to see her. Whether it was through sympathy or with thought of speaking words of comfort I need not say, only, that with those who believe like Job's pretended friends that all afflictions are judgments for some sins that they have committed can hardly be supposed to feel any sympathy, or to have any words to speak but words of reproach. In this case our dying friend was entertained with an account of what a wonderful man John Wesley was in his day. So many hundreds and perhaps thousands had been saved that but for his preaching would otherwise have been lost. And it was not only those that he converted, but the multitude of others that they converted. In fact, it was not known and never could be known until the end. The Lord himself could not know until the end the vast number of converts that would be saved as the result of the labors of that man. When he got through our sister says quietly, "Well what is going to become of them?" He looked inquiringly at her as if in doubt as to her meaning. She then said "The Lord has a place for his people, but what is going to become of John Wesley's?" The minister did not answer, but found excuse to leave somewhat abruptly, remarking to some one "What a strange woman that was, he did not know what to make of her." In the hour of dissolving nature we often see the greatest strength manifested. When people are weak in themselves they are strong in the Lord. "Because thou hast made the Lord even the Most High thy habitation, thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder, the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet." It is strange, passing strange that the eternal salvation of fallen sinners should be ascribed to men. But their rock is not as our Rock, they themselves being judges. Yours to serve,

THE BIBLE AND ITS MEN.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I desire to express my thanks for copies of the LANDMARK, and my appreciation of your editorial upon David and Saul, also of Elder Durand's in Feb. 1, upon the prayer of Moses; "Show me thy glory." What a wonderful volume is the Bible! Take the feature that you have both written upon, THE MEN OF THE BIBLE, and what an unparalleled group stands out before men and angels for the pencil of the artist and the pen of the biographer. Behold the long line of the great patriarchs from Adam to Abraham, from Abraham to David and from David to Jesus, the antitype of Adam, the perfection of every type, and the hope and glory of all the patriarchs. In this great and mighty company we see Noah, the "preacher of righteousness," Abraham, "the friend of God," Isaac, the symbol of God's Lamb offering and figure of the released church, Israel, the prince and prevailer, Joseph, the lovely representation of Jesus, Moses, the meek, the prophet-like unto Jesus, and Israel's great lawgiver, Joshua, the captain of the Lord's hosts, Samuel, the sanctified prophet and just Judge, Elijah, who slew the false prophets and established the true worship, shut heaven, sent rain, and went to God in a chariot of fire (a wonderful type of the Son of God,) David, the "man after God's own heart," Solomon, the wise, Israel's peaceful king, who built the house of the Lord, and who pointed to the "Greater than Solomon". Following these, behold Israel's kings and prophets, with the other inspired historians, who wrote the oracles of God; prominent among them we recognize Isaiah, who "in the year that king Uzziah died, saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple." Isaiah was preeminently the prophet of the Lord Jesus, whom he saw sitting upon his mediatorial throne—the gospel prophet, who made the thrilling announcement of the gospel's crowning glory that, "He will swallow up death in victory!" Hundreds of years later, when standing in the glorious light of the resurrection, Paul caught up this glad acclamation of Isaiah and shouted, "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" The LANDMARK of Feb. 15 has just been handed to me, and I stopped writing long enough to read in it the heart-cheering letter of our brother Keene, presenting the certainty of our resurrection from the dead, and the glory that shall follow. I read also brother Lester's touching relation of the sweetly sad life and death of the lovely boy Abner. He has gone to enjoy the deathless life beyond, and to be with Jesus and the apostles, prophets and patriarchs, with the general assembly and church of the first born, and with the everlasting Father. O what an innumerable, happy and glorified company shall be there! John the Baptist will stand among them, and with him they may all turn their eyes to Him whom Isaiah saw sitting upon the throne, and say "Behold the Lamb of God, who took away the sin of the world!" Then with the blessed Isaiah, they may lift high the glad chorus, "He hath swallowed up death in victory!" And with faithful Paul, they may joyfully exclaim, "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory?", then with him sound aloft the sweetly transporting refrain, "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" The "great multitude in heaven," with the transported John, in one united voice of joyful thanksgiving, will shout, "Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

"When that illustrious day shall rise
And all thy armies shine,
In robes of vict'ry through the skies
The glory shall be thine"

O how I long for that day of the Lord! For now I am so sinful and sorrowful, afflicted and poor, painfully experiencing that all here is in part, and hoping for that which is perfect to come. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Love to all whose hope the Lord is.

LOSS.

ELDER GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:— I wish to state that on the 22d of February 1893, at 3 o'clock in the morning, brother Alfred James lost his dwelling house, kitchen, smoke-house, and two or three other buildings by fire, with nearly all their contents.

If any brother or friend feels a willingness to help him, it will be gladly received. Every little will help. He told me his loss was about a thousand dollars. His address is Alfred James, Grindoll, Pitt Co., N. C. J. A. ROBERTSON.

A man met a tallow-faced boy near here, and said to him, what do you eat? He replied, we skin strangers. But what do you eat when you have no strangers? The boy said, then we skin each other. When Baptists get to skinning each other you may see tallow-faces.

EDITORIAL.

A CONTENTION, AN EXPLANATION—EXHORTATION.

For some time there has been a distress in the bounds of the Little River Association, of N. C. The subject matter of the contention causing the distress and division is feet-washing. It has been the custom of the Little River Association for fifty years or more—indeed, so far as I know, from its organization, to wash feet once a year in connection with the Lord's Supper, but to commune four times a year. We all have customs of some sort. Christ had a custom (see Luke 4:16). A custom may be good or bad; so a tradition may be good or bad. See 2d Thess. 2:15.

Some of the brethren formerly of that Association raised an objection to this custom, and desired feet-washing observed every time they communed. On this the contention sprang up. They have divided. Those that departed from their original custom now claim (see their late notices of this in the LANDMARK,) that they are the original churches of this Association. This is an unjust claim. The Little River Association stands on their original ground. Several publications have been suffered to appear in the LAND-MARK, that the brethren generally may see where each party stands: for I have endeavored to be fair, and publish both sides, though sometimes I am betwixt two contending parties thus, and both parties say I am undecided. Well, if I am right I can bear all this, through Christ.

Now, in truth and justice to all parties I make the above statement, being an eye-witness in some sense, of these things.

I have this to state now by way of request TO ALL CONCERNED: Brethren, lay down your prejudices. For there appears to be some prejudice and bitter feeling on both sides, while there are good brethren on each side that believe salvation is by grace, and love the truth. It is common, when brethren get to striving, for them to get wrong on both sides. If a root of bitterness spring up many are defiled thereby. If these brethren loved each other they could live together. Charity hides the multitude of sins. Why not bear with each other? Not only in that section is there trouble, but it is here also. Would that we could have a general meeting where each of us could come to confess his own faults, and bring no railing or accusation against any one. We will gain nothing by a course of strife.

If you cannot dwell together do as Abraham and Lot—separate. But remember, no good came to Lot.

He chose the well watered plain of Jordan, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

You must dwell by faith and in peace if you rest in Abraham's bosom.

A man is first in his own cause until his neighbor comes along and searches him out. When strange visiting preachers come along do NOT TELL THEM ANYTHING ABOUT YOUR TROUBLES. Let them go as they are impressed, and preach the preaching that God bids them. Do not add fuel to this trouble. Do not try to get any one on your side. If God is for you, or if you are on the Lord's side, all is well with you.

Let not any of our preachers on either side in this matter aggravate this trouble. Do not go among these churches, or anywhere else in your travels, to stir up this strife by making parties. Preach Jesus and the resurrection as the apostles did. The Lord washed Peter's feet, and told them they ought to wash one another's feet. He told Peter that what he did then Peter did not know, but should know hereafter. Yet Peter, after that, so far as his preaching or writing is reported to us by the Holy Ghost, never a single time even hinted at feet washing. Now a preacher that is going around all the time preaching feet washing and giving it more prominence than other things so many more times taught in the Bible, and dividing the brethren in that way, is wrong.

Do not, any of you, make the breach any worse. Try to stop it.

Pray for peace. But if preachers persist in bringing in strife and confusion, the remedy is to close your doors. But show much long-suffering and reproof before you do this. Remember that the wise receive the reproofs of wisdom, while fools go on rebellious and are punished.

I have hoped that Baptists would not be so blind as to destroy themselves. We are brethren. Why should we fall out by the way? What will we gain by it? Can we not forgive one another? If one is not impressed to wash feet why not tarry for him? I serve a church that washes feet, and some that do not. Some of our brethren here at Wilson wash feet, while some do not. Have we no forbearance towards each other? If the scripture connected feet washing with the Lord's Supper it would be different. I am so full of faults myself that if I am not forgiven I have no hope of salvation.

It is sweet to be at the brethren's feet, and wash each others' feet. If you know these things happy are you if you do them. This week one night we had feet washing without the Lord's Supper, and it was as sweet to me as when I observe it at the Lord's Supper. There were members present that did not wash feet, but I did not feel like condemning them at all.

But where is there any spirit of feet washing in this contention?

Let every brother be fully persuaded in his own mind. To not wash feet in Scripture is not made a bar to communion or fellowship.

We entreat our brethren to con-less their faults one to another, and pray one for another.

When Baptists get to dropping correspondence and having no dealings one with another, their peace is marred. There is no joy in their lives after. But when we forgive one another and pray for one another we have peace and love.

I have written the above in sorrow because I love these brethren generally, and desire their prosperity in Israel. P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I send you an article written while traveling. I hope you can make it out.

I don't feel comfortable to see my name on the LANDMARK editorially. It makes me feel a responsibility which I cannot bear. I think you had better leave it off. It will make no difference about my writing, for I will write as often as I can. But it will make me feel easier. I write as often as I can for the Signs, and Gospel Messenger. All send love.

Affectionately,

THE RESURRECTION.

A brother in a western state has asked my views through the LANDMARK upon certain portions of the Scriptures which refer to the resurrection. He says that there are some members of his church "who teach no resurrection of our mortal body; but that there is a heavenly or celestial body that now is in heaven, or above, which the parting spirits of the saints will assume, and will ascend to heaven in, and leave our mortal bodies in the dust forever."

I am now writing in a car while going to visit a church in Florida. I cannot readily refer to the scriptures to which he has called my attention; and it is not in my mind either to write particularly upon them at this time. I wish to present some reflections upon the subject with reference to its sometimes being a matter of speculation, controversy and trouble among brethren.

Upon those things in the scriptures which are fulfilled in the experience of the saints in this mortal state, there is no disagreement among those whose experience has gone that far. There is no scriptural truth concerning salvation that can be understood in any other way than by revelation in our experience. This anointing which they have received of God teaches them all the things that they know of a spiritual kind. 1 John 2:27. One may believe with the carnal mind that the Bible teaches that all men are totally depraved; but he can have no vital knowledge of that truth till he has been made to feel himself a totally depraved and justly condemned sinner in the sight of God. He may then be familiar with what the scriptures of truth teach concerning salvation by grace through our Lord Jesus Christ; but he cannot truly know anything beyond the letter of the word upon that subject until he is made to rejoice in the Savior as his own. Nor can he, up to that time, understand the preaching of the gospel farther than the showing man to be a sinner vile. When the Lord brings his people into the knowledge of salvation it is always "by a way that they knew not."

Concerning things that have not yet been experienced by us we have "the form of sound words," which we have heard of the apostles, and also the teaching of faithful brethren who have had more experience of the divine life. This longer travail and deeper experience causes the aged, or elders, to be of such value as counselors to the younger in the church. All that they have learned more than we is in accordance with the word of truth, and with such measure of experience as we have had; and they know that each one must receive the knowledge as they did; therefore the aged feel no authority or dominion over the others on account of this further knowledge, but a tender anxiety and desire that the young may profit by their experience as far as possible. On the day I was baptized I was ready to admonish some of the aged ministers for expressing a doubt about their hope. I was sure I was done with trouble on account of sin. I was in the enjoyment of a peace that passed my understanding; and I said "Is it right for one who has received such a wonderful hope to doubt the love and power of God? They looked at me tenderly, and said, "You will know more some time than you do now." How true I have found that. But it would have been useless for them to have tried to teach me what they had learned, through long and bitter experience, of the deceitfulness of the heart, and the deadness of the body

"because of sin." I look back at myself at that time as a child in the knowledge that is only obtained through suffering. I felt that I could sing the praises of God, but how little I knew of that abiding love and ever-enduring mercy which have kept me to this day.

There are other things belonging to "our common salvation," belonging to the doctrine of God our Savior which are not to be experienced by the saints in this mortal state, but are "the earnest expectation of the creature;" are hoped for and "waited patiently for," and which are to be "revealed in the last time." Of such is the resurrection. These things are "delivered to the saints" as a part of their faith, in a "form of sound words" by the inspired apostles. The doctrine was not delivered to them by the apostles, but by our glorious King; but the apostles have taught it as they were commanded to, and bound it upon the gospel church.

The doctrine of the resurrection, therefore, with all the wonderful experience of glory that will follow this redemption of our body, cannot be treated by us as we can treat subjects in the scriptures which refer to what we have already experienced or are passing through. We cannot confer about them in the same way, telling our experience of them. We have the scriptures that teach all that we are to know about the resurrection while we are in the flesh. No one who has not been experimentally raised up together with Christ from under the law, and from under the power and dominion of death, is capable of receiving the teachings of the inspired scriptures concerning "the resurrection of the dead," or which is the same thing, the changing of our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ. The more one is favored to know Christ in the sense that Paul desired to, "and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death," the more will he be enabled to "attain unto the resurrection of the dead." There can be no attainment unto this resurrection except as led by the Holy Spirit of our God. Such attainment as Paul desired is not an ability to unfold the mystery of this glorious consummation of the hope of the saints, but such a full experience of the power of it as will lift one above the power of worldly things. The resurrection is a mystery that is received and entered into only by the faith of God's elect. That faith never seeks to explain anything. It is the fruit of the Spirit of God in us, and it easily, quietly and confidently receives without question, whatever God says. It knows when it is spoken to. What it receives is just what the Lord says, no more, no less; and whatever the Spirit directs one to speak or write of what has been revealed to his faith on this or any other subject, will be in perfect accordance with all that is written in the scriptures upon it.

Therefore I take no interest in any attempt to explain how the resurrection is to take place, unless such attempted explanation appears to be causing trouble among the saints. Then, sometimes, I want to show from the scriptures that such explanation is erroneous. There will always be found some scripture that will clearly show any explanation of "how the dead are raised up, or with what body they come" (that is, how the body will look), to be wrong. Nobody knows or can know until he has gone through it himself; therefore no one can tell. It is not for the comfort of the saints that they should know. "We know not what we shall be." It is enough to know that we shall be like Jesus when he shall appear, and that "we shall appear with him in glory."

Why should brethren fall out on this subject? It would seem as though all must be willing to take just what the scriptures say, and drop any theory that requires even a word that is not in the scriptures to either name or explain it. I have written some upon the subject in former years. Brethren may remember that I have been careful to keep the form of scriptural declarations; and that even this fact has, at least once, been made the point of objection to what I said. It may also have been observed that in writing upon this subject I have written negatively rather than affirmatively; that I have endeavored to show the incorrectness of theories advanced by others, rather than to present any of my own. I feel content to wait.

I have never heard one express the belief mentioned by the brother, and quoted in the first of this letter.

I will merely say that the very form of it is absurd. That a spiritual or celestial body should be waiting in heaven, or anywhere else, untenanted, and that the spirit of the saint is to leave this vile body and enter that! It is only one of the many ways of trying to work out the mystery so that we can understand it. One might as well try to tell how God made the world out of nothing.

But suppose this theory was capable of being understood (which it is not), yet it will not answer to the plain declarations of the Bible. The redemption of our body is what we long for, and I hope for. It is what the saints are waiting for. Rom. 8:23. A celestial body has no death, no corruption, no grave to be redeemed from. It is 'our vile body' that is to be changed, not exchanged for another, but changed that it may be fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ. Then it will be a "celestial body." That house is "from above" in the same sense that the Church is. It is the workmanship of God. It comes from his power and wisdom. Any theory that leaves "our vile body" out, as the subject of the resurrection, is wrong.

So, also, is any attempted explanation of how the work is done, or how the body will look. It is astonishing how many of the accepted explanations, and how many of the common phrases, with reference to the resurrection, have no scriptural authority, no form of words in the Bible to support them. They have been brought forward and accepted as necessary to explain how the body is raised, and how the ascension takes place, as though it was something to be seen by our natural eye, and understood by our natural minds. But it is not. Our mortal powers follow the body to the grave, but there they must stop. Imagination cannot go beyond. Whatever that sees is within the bounds of mortality. Faith only reaches into the spiritual world, and what faith sees cannot be told to our natural understanding. Therefore how useless it is to fall out about theories which are all alike natural and wrong. We not only wait for the redemption of our body, but we must wait also for the knowledge of how it will be done, and how it will appear. When that knowledge shall be ours there will never be any more uncertainty about it, nor the least shade of difference on the glorious subject among all the redeemed family of our God.

But let us be very careful how we attribute any erroneous belief to a brother. Perhaps, after all, he does not believe so terribly wrong, if he could only express what the Lord has taught him, and stop at that; and if we could too. It may be that we have both been taught of the Lord, and that our only fault is in trying to explain the mystery at all. SILAS H. DURAND.

The Bear Creek Association is appointed to be held with the church at Watson's, Saturday and 1st Sunday in May. J. F. MILLS.

OBITUARIES.

LETHA L. SMITH.

Sister Letha L. Smith was born in Russell county, Va., October 3d, 1832, and departed this life at her home in Russell Co., Va., on January 26th, 1893, aged 60 years, 3 months, and 23 days. She was married to brother G. J. Smith, February 9th, 1854. She, with her husband, joined the Primitive Baptist church at New Garden, Russell Co., Va., on Saturday before the 2d Sunday in November 1859, and were baptized the following day, by Elder Louis Edwards. Notwithstanding her health was then delicate, and had been for some time, and the ice was one inch thick over the water, she did not hesitate to discharge her duty, although many advised her that it would kill her to go in the water; but she believed as the poet, who says:

Christians, if your hearts be warm,

Ice and snow will do no harm.

She was a Baptist in faith and practice. I don't think two people were ever united in marriage who were better agreed than brother G. J. Smith and sister Letha were. They walked together in wisdom's ways, united hand and heart, until separated by death. When they united with the church they lived in Buchanan Co., Va. They soon organized a church there known as The Primitive Baptist Church of Christ at Johnston's Bottom. It was organized in brother Smith's house, and they kept the church meetings at their house for two years, often entertaining forty or sixty people at their church meetings. Brother Smith was ordained deacon of this church, and it is now a prosperous, strong church. They began to build a church house, and the Missionaries commenced one near by about the same time. They predicted our brethren's failure, but by the untiring energy of brother Smith they persevered until they completed a large, commodious house. Sister Smith, with the aid of another sister whose name I have not, cooked the dinner for the hands that raised that meeting house. They moved back to Russell County a few years ago, and had their membership with Mount Pleasant church until it dissolved its constitution. They got letters, but had not laid them into any church at the time of her death, which she regretted very much. Brother Smith asked me to have an appointment for preaching at his house last fall for that purpose, but I did not get the time to do so. The last time I saw sister Smith was at our church meeting last summer. She came for me to go home with her, as brother Smith could not be there that day. She was then hardly able to ride to meeting. Their house has always been a home for Baptist ministers and the brethren generally. I attended the burial. The children, eight in number, were all present. When sister Smith died the change was so quiet and peaceful that the family were unaware of it until she was gone. I have never seen a family seem more deeply to feel their loss. But we should not sorrow as those who have no hope, for while the church has lost a worthy and useful member, brother Smith a loving companion, their children a kind and affectionate mother, and the community a kind and charitable neighbor, our loss is her eternal gain. May God comfort the bereaved husband and children in the prayer of your unworthy brother, HANNAH HIGGINS AND ELIZABETH SMITH.

ELDER P. D. GOLD:—My mother-in-law and my dear aunt were both born in 1818. My mother-in-law, Hannah Higgins, di-

July 30, 1892, after suffering a severe sickness. Her disease was dysentery. She bore her sufferings with much patience—told us she could not stay with us longer; not to grieve for her, but sing sweet songs of praise. She sang herself the song "Why do we mourn departing friends," which was sung at her grave. She had been a widow some sixteen years. Both she and her husband belonged to the Disciple church. She leaves three sons, three daughters-in-law, twelve grandchildren, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss, as she was loved by all who knew her, and will be badly missed by them all.

My aunt, Elizabeth Smith, died November 16th, 1891, after many years of affliction. She had been an invalid for years, and did not go out of the house during the last seven years of her life, though she was good company to the last. She married my father's brother when quite young, and was left a widow at my early recollection. She was an old member of the Primitives—I do not know the date of her baptism. She leaves two children, several grandchildren, besides numerous others to mourn her loss. But why should we mourn those dear, loved mothers

That have left this world of grief and sorrow?
While I and many others are waiting grief to borrow.

MARY BURCH.

Sister Mary Burch, an aged colored sister, well behaved, was between 80 and 90 years of age. She lived before she died in Caswell County, N. C., near Prospect Hill. She was a member of the Primitive Baptist church at Lynch's Creek before I could remember. She was a dutiful and faithful sister. She leaves many grandchildren to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. She had a great many friends who ministered to her necessities in her declining age.

JESSE G. J. SUMMERS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I will write you a few lines in memory of our dear little grandchild. Little Jesse was born April 24, 1891, died August 17th, 1892, aged 1 year, 4 months, and 15 days. She was a precious child to all the family, and I can truthfully say that I loved her, and often spoke of her being so lovely and interesting. She was also remarkably fond of me, which increased my love for her. I had fears that she would not be raised, and spoke of it several times. It seemed that she held a place near my heart and was often on my mind during her short stay on earth. I went to see her the last evening that she lived. The little darling heard me speak to her elder sister who was sitting by her, and though she was almost in the jaws of death, she knew my voice and tried to turn her head, and reached out her little bony hand, and said "Bye," which was the last word she ever spoke to me. I told her father and mother that I wanted her in my arms one more time, for I felt confident that she could not live. After taking her up I told her parents to give her anything she wanted, for I saw the shadow of death on her face then. So the dear little babe sweetly fell asleep in the arms of her blessed Jesus that night.

Little Jesse's gone, and left us
Here a while on earth to stay;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
In his own appointed way.

Now she's free from pain and care,
And lives in heav'n above;
There to rest and ever bear
The angels sing of love.

RACHEL J. JOYCE.

Rachel J. Joyce was born in Patrick County Va., the 7th of October, 1838, and moved to Surry County, N. C., in the winter of 1856-57. Her parents (Moses and Rebecca Pilson,) were highly respected members of the Primitive Baptist church. On the 14th of December, 1854, she was married to John W. Joyce, by whom she had ten children, seven sons and three daughters, two of whom died when quite young. She received a hope, and for several years did not realize her duty to the cause of her heavenly master, but from heartfelt impressions became dissatisfied and joined the Primitive Baptist church at the arm of Ararat, at Liberty meeting house, on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in October, 1883, and was baptized by Elder G. Denny, and continued a faithful member till her death. For several years she was troubled with hemorrhage of the lungs. The writer of this notice visited her several times during her sickness, and had many interesting conversations with her in which she manifested a strong faith in Christ. Her sufferings during sickness were very great, which she bore with christian fortitude and resignation. Notwithstanding the kindness of her husband and attentive children and neighbors and the medical treatment of nearly all the doctors near, death claimed its own and on the 6th day of September 1892 she fell asleep in the arms of a faithful Saviour, in the full trumps of faith, leaving her husband, children and many other friends to mourn their loss. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother. Her advice to her children manifested that deep concern for their welfare that was more than common. The Church Militant has lost a jewel. She was a true mother in Israel, she has filled her course in time, her usefulness is over, her joys and sorrows, her sufferings and connection with this world are at an end. We should not grieve for her as for those who have no hope, for she is done suffering in this world. The Spirit is still living, and has joined the redeemed number around the throne of God in everlasting glory, there to praise the Father, Son and Holy Spirit in a world that shall never end.

Let friends no more my sufferings mourn,
Nor view my relics with concern;
Oh! cease to drop the pitying tear,
I've passed beyond the reach of fear.

JAMES A. BARNES.

Sad it is to me to-day, to sit down and try to write something of the sickness and death of my dear husband, James A. Barnes. His death occurred on the 9th of Dec. last of Typhoid Pneumonia. Oh! for strength from on high, to help me to bear up, in these, my saddest trials of life. But while I thus try to write, some still voice seems to whisper cheer up, be not discouraged, for the Lord that gave, hath the power to take away, blessed be his name. In the year 1876 we were united together in holy bonds, and lived together near 16 years. Ah! but what is my home now without him, his voice is no longer heard in our little home circle, we can no longer welcome him around the fireside. Sometimes I hear one of the children lip the name of Papa; and as usual on going to retire at night, say goodnight Papa, goodnight Mama, but Alas! mama has to answer in grief, goodnight, for the dear still voice is hushed. We are bereft now of him, and I believe he has gone to dwell with Jesus eternally. This is indeed a balm to my poor heart, for when in such pain, he seemed to bear it most patiently, and would say, "Oh! you don't know how much I am suffering," and would say, if it could be the will of the good Lord to raise him up again, and if not he hoped he would be better off after death. I often told him when in health, when he would speak about parting from me and little ones, and even on his death-bed, not to speak of leaving me, for I felt like I could never, no never bear it. He said to me, Ida, you ought to be more resigned; but no I wanted to cling to him, and would try to pray if it was the Lord's will to spare him to me for a good long time to come, and even on the morning he died I was in such hope of his recovery, for I thought there was nothing impossible with the Lord, and while I was in such hope of him the Doctor said he was in a very bad condition. Dear brethren and sisters, if I have any, but sometimes I feel forsaken by all, I earnestly entreat you all to pray for me, in my sad afflictions, and that when all my timely toils are ended here that I may meet those that have gone before. Think of it even here, when we meet, is it not with much happiness to behold each other, and speak comforting words to cheer us in our sorrows? Then if the Bible be true, if after death we are so fortunate as to be Christ's, Oh! how much more happiness 'twill be to us to meet each other. I cannot tell all my trials. My pen would fail to write. But I feel like when I have drifted out of all the cares and toils of this life, I hope I shall enjoy the blessed and sweet privileges that will follow, and I believe those blessings are for those that have been sorely tried; as it were in the fiery furnace.

By his wife,

M. IDA BARNES.

JAMES OLEEV DIX.

Death has visited the home of a happy family and called therefrom one of earth's brightest jewels, James O. Dix, eldest child and only son of H. F., and Bettie A. Dix. He was born January 15th, 1870, and died at the home of his parents, June 8d, 1891, aged 21 years, 4 months and 19 days. Jimmie was a bright, intelligent boy, and very dear to his family, was always a steady, honest and obedient child, quiet and peaceable, and made friends wherever he went.

Jimmie's death has cast a gloom over the community in which he lived; but in his own home where he was loved as few are loved, there is a vacancy which no one else can fill. He was the joy and pride of a father, and the idol of a doting mother's heart, who loved him with tenderest affection. To use her own words, she loved him as dearly as she did her own life, and now that he is sweetly sleeping beneath earth's green sod, her heart is torn and filled with deepest grief for that absent loved one. How deeply do I sympathize with the fond parents and devoted sisters in this sad bereavement. To him his father and mother were looking for help and comfort in their declining years. He was so good and kind and so young, just in the bloom of youth, just when it seemed hardest to give him up, God called him home, he claimed him for his own. Jimmie had an attack of la grippe from which he never recovered. He lingered a long while and then went into the typhoid fever and a lung trouble which ended his existence. He suffered intensely, though he bore it with meekness and humbleness, not a murmur escaping his lips. All was done that loving hands, physicians, relatives and kind friends could do, though of no avail. Jimmie must die; yes, surrounded by loved ones that watched his fleeting breath, his spirit took its flight, and Jimmie was no more. Perhaps it was better for him to die in innocent youth than to have lived and felt the deep sorrows of a sinful world. He prayed and made a full surrender unto the Lord, and said he was willing to submit to the Lord's will. He laughed, and said he was satisfied, and said he believed the Lord would save him. He prayed that the Lord would spare him a few days to comfort his parents and sisters. He prayed for and asked God to bless his parents and sisters, and all that were present. There were a good many present, and all in tears. A few days after he had talked and prayed so, he told his mother that he had tried to pray before, but said he didn't know how to pray until that night. His father and mother and one sister are members of the church. He quietly, and calmly passed away from this world of sin, sorrow and pain, into a peaceful rest, with a smile on his face.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in the grave so low.

Dear parents, let this thought console you in your deep afflictions, that it is well with Jimmie. Pray that it may be well with you. May we all be submissive to the will of God, and may his peace sustain the bereaved family and relatives, that they may be prepared to meet their loved ones gone before, where sorrow, sighing and parting will be no more.

B. W. JENKINS.

B. W. Jenkins was born October 29th, 1819, and died November 18th, 1892. When he united with the church I cannot tell. He was one of the first preachers I ever heard preach. He was a sound Baptist at heart, though he was like a good many others, worst to himself, sowing to the flesh, and of the same reaping corruption. But he has often told me before and after he was taken, the Lord had forgiven all his sins. He was taken about the first of October with severe fever, of which he suffered intensely, then with dropsy at the heart, so it was about forty days he sat on his chair, but the most patient man I ever saw. I visited him frequently, and above all people he had the most fortitude. It seemed that all his talk was about heavenly things; really his mind was altogether on these things, telling what the good Lord had done for him, a poor, vile sinner, often telling his wife and son he was going to leave them, just as cheerfully as if he was going to church. Just before our Association this fall I went to see him. He said he should go all the way with me. I understood him, not expecting to see him again. A few days before he died I was there. Said he, I want you to come out to-morrow night; I am going to lie down. Accordingly I went. When I went in he said, Well, I have been looking for you. To-night at 9 o'clock I want you to help me to the bed; I'm going to lie down and rest. First, I want you to pray with me, and lay your hands on me in the name of the Lord. It may be, said he, that he will hear us. I said, Mr. Jenkins, he has already heard us and resigned you to his will. What more can you ask? Nothing; said he, it is enough. I want to live just as long as it is his will for me to live, and I am ready to go any time. Accordingly, after I had tried in a very weak way to comply with his request, I helped him to his bed. He sat down on the side of his bed and said, The Lord took me away from here forty days ago. Now he has brought me back. Blessed be his holy name. What shall we do to show forth his praise? He then lay down and seemed to rest as well or better than usual, until next day about 11 o'clock, when the breath left him seemingly like one going to sleep, in his perfect senses, without a struggle or groan. He told me a few days before that he did not know it was possible for one to enjoy what he had since he was taken sick. Really, said he, death has no terror. I told him that was what I had been telling him, that death had no terror to a christian. He leaves a wife and two sons to mourn their loss, and a host of friends to miss him. He has gone to be with Jesus, and to enjoy what he has been hoping for.

MARY UNDERWOOD.

It has been on my mind for some time to write a short notice of the death of my sister, Mary Underwood. In the latter part of the year 1891 she was taken with a deep influenza cold, and died January 5th, 1892. She was nearly 72 years old, was never married, but lived with, and kept house for her father until his death, in the year 1861. Since that time she made her home in the family of the unworthy writer. She was a very industrious woman attending to her household duties, endeavoring to keep everything nice and in place. She was as honest and truthful a person as it is common to find in this age. She made a profession of religion years ago, but never united with the Church on earth, but was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist faith and doctrine. Her only hope was in the finished righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ. She had her faults like all of Adam's fallen race, was a plain woman in all her ways, never could endure extreme pride or anything bordering on pretence. She believed that salvation is by the grace of God, having no confidence in the flesh; for vain is the help of puny man.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

THE MODEL CHURCH.

Well, wife, I've found the model church. I worshipped there to-day;
It made me think of good old times before my hairs were gray.
The meeting-house was finer built than they were years ago;
But then I found when I went in, it wasn't built for show.
The sexton didn't seat me away back by the door,
He knew that I was old and deaf, as well as old and poor.
He must have been a christian, for he took me boldly through
The long aisle of that pleasant house to find a pleasant pew.
I wish you'd heard the singing, it had the old-time ring;
The preacher said with trumpet voice, let all the people sing.
The tune was Coronation, and the music upward rolled,
'Till I thought I heard the angels striking all their harps of gold.
My deafness seemed to melt away, my spirit caught the fire,
I joined my feeble, trembling voice with that melodious choir.
And sang as in my youthful days, let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem, and crown him Lord of all.
I tell you, wife, it did me good to sing that hymn once more;
I felt like some wrecked mariner who gets a glimpse of shore;
I almost want to lay aside this weather-beaten form,
And anchor in the blessed port forever, from the storm.
The preaching? well, I can't just tell you what the preacher said,
I know it wasn't written—I know it wasn't read;
He hadn't time to read, for the lightning from his eye Went passing on from pew to pew, nor passed a sinner by.
The sermon wasn't flow'ry, 'twas simple gospel truth;
It fitted poor old men like me, it fitted gospel youth.

'Twas full of consolation for weary hearts that bleed,
'Twas full of consolation, of Christ, and not of creed.
The preacher made sin hideous in Gentiles and in Jews;
He shot the golden sentences straight to the finest pews.
And tho' I can't see very well, I felt the flowing tear
That told me hell was some way off, and heaven very near.

How swift the golden moments fled within that holy place;
How brightly gleamed the light of heaven from every happy face;
Again I longed for that sweet time when friend shall meet with friend,
Where congregations ne'er break up, and sabbaths never end
I hope to meet the minister, the congregation too,
In the dear home beyond the skies, which shines from heaven's blue;
I doubt not I'll remember beyond the evening gray,
The face of God's dear servant who preached his word to-day.

Dear wife, the fight will soon be fought, the victory soon be won,
The shining goal is just ahead, the race is nearly run;
O'er the river we are nearing, they are thronging to the shore
To shout our safe arrival where the weary weep no more.

THE GOSPEL TREASURE.

BRETHREN, EDITORS OF ZION'S LANDMARK, BELOVED IN THE LORD:
—My age and failing constitution admonish me that I shall soon have to leave this earthly house of my tabernacle and appear in the presence of that God who reared the wonderful structure. Whether I have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, or not, causes me much anxious thought. Last night, just before my little daughter read a chapter before we retired for the night, the following text of scripture came forcibly to my mind with an inclination to write something in connection with it. Whether this impression was of the Lord or not, he only knoweth. See 2 Cor., 4:7: "But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us." That this treasure relates to the gospel of Christ, given or sent to us, the Church, by the eternal God, I have no doubt. That this treasure is quite different from the treasure that the kingdom of heaven was like unto (see Matt. 13:14), and to blend the two together mystifies the subject and makes a misnomer of both. The apostle in the introductory verse of this chapter says, "Therefore, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy we faint not." Again (3d verse), "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost (not will be lost, but are lost), in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believed not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ who is the image of God, should shine unto them. For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake. For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Then I think when God for Christ's sake pardons a sinner, and then calls him by his grace to preach the gospel of the grace of God, that one receives the treasure in himself, and then woe is me if I preach not the gospel. The prophet Jeremiah was so wrought upon while under the great weight of prophesy, that when he would have rid himself of the burden, he declares, "But his word was in my heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and could not stay." Jer. 20:9. I believe every one of God's ministers is in fellowship with the prophet in this; having passed through a similar scene: "But no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron." Heb. 5:4. The apostle Paul spoke of our being put in trust with the gospel—see 1 Thess. 2:4; and he declared that he preached among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ. The apostle Peter refused to be worshipped, saying, "Stand up; I myself am also a man." Acts 10:26. But probably it may be asked, why go on in this strain? Answer: that it may be clearly seen that the gospel is something that is committed to, or given through the earthen vessel, man; though it is not of man, but of God. One man cannot commit the gospel to another, though he may try never so hard. God alone puts this treasure in the hearts of his called servants, and in so doing prepares them to declare it to the comfort of all his adult children to whom he is pleased to send it. When the earthen vessel has a dispensation of the gospel committed unto it, he has no rest or ease of mind until he declares its richness to others. It is like fire shut up in his bones. There is no peace until it finds an outlet. Shall I call it a fiery treasure? Yes; for the poor earthen vessel is filled with the impression to preach the gospel. But how can I, who am so poor, and weak, and halt, and lame, and blind, go? Surely the Lord does not require this at my hands; I fear it is all a delusion of my own. But hark! we have this treasure in earthen vessels. He that put this treasure into the vessel will not be said nay. Go, preach the preaching that I bid thee, is as imperative as he that spoke it. The vessel is made sensible of the burthen, but cannot rid himself of it; neither can he or they impart it to another so that he may be a substitute for him, but he himself must bear it; and when compelled to go, they go beseeching the Lord that he will give it the excellency of power, for they are taught of God that the power is not in them, but that the excellency of the power is of God. I cannot think that any gospel minister can claim that he found the treasure of the gospel in the church. I mean that he will not claim that he received his call to the ministry from the church. I never heard one claim it. If one is burdened with the weight of the gospel the church will find it out, and it is my impression she, the church, will have a travail for such an one. I have my doubts whether one burdened with the gospel treasure ever had to beg the church to send them out. I often fear that I know nothing about these things; but be that as it may, it does seem to me that if I had to ask the church for ordination, that I should have been without credentials to this day. But where am I straying? If I am correct about the treasure that I wished to speak of being the gospel, then Paul tells how he came to be in possession of it: "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man neither was I taught it; but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Gal. 1:11-12. I must say here, what nonsense for men to talk of human institutions to prepare men to preach the gospel, Paul being right. But let the apostle speak: "But when it pleased God (not men, either in or out of the church), who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, to reveal his Son in me that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood; neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again to Damascus. Then after three years I went to Jerusalem to see Peter and abode with him fifteen days. But other of the apostles saw I none, save James, the Lord's brother. Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not." See 15th to 20th verses inclusive. Paul, in 13-14 verses of this chapter, tells what he was before his call, and then tells exactly how he came in possession of the gospel, which I think is the treasure in the earthen vessel; and to my mind his words are a scathing rebuke to all those who are abusing and mocking the old Primitive Apostolic Baptists because they do not favor schools for the purpose of educating men to preach the gospel, and they will slanderously denounce us and say we are opposed to education and to schools. When I hear of their making such charges against Primitive Baptists, I seldom fail to think of the man who said he sold the land for so much. See Acts, 5. Well, although the apostles were, and all good ministers now are in possession of the treasure and have to bear it and declare it, yet they cannot give it power. The excellency of the power is of God and not of us. Paul calls the Corinthians carnal for saying one is of Paul and another of Apollos, and asks the question, "Who, then, is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers (earthen vessels) by whom ye believed, even as the Lord (not the apostles) gave to every man. I have planted, Apollos watered: but God gave the increase. So, then, neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth: but God that giveth

the increase. Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: (earthen vessels) and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor. For we are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." 1 Cor., 3. The apostle is very diligent to show where the power comes from, and is so honest that he does not claim that any of the increase, or power, or honor belongs to him, but gives it all to God. Yet in this day of error and delusion, surprising as it may seem, men are trying to make it appear that they are co-laborers with God, and they torture the apostle's words into a consent to this error as though the apostle taught that he was a co-laborer with God, notwithstanding the apostle has most plainly, positively and emphatically declared that all the increase is of God, and that he himself was nothing. How strange! Can a man of God be so puffed up that he can believe that he is a co-laborer with God? If this was so, and is the true meaning of the apostle, the way of salvation would be better explained thus, Man & Co., "For we labor together with God." Jesus said, Without me ye can do nothing. Paul is showing that he is not a co-laborer,*but that God is all and in all, and that he is nothing. Now it seems to me, brethren, that if A and B are co-laborers in a piece of work, that if A does one-third of the work that he would be justly entitled to one-third of the pay; and B, being an honest man, will not refuse to give it to him. God is honest; and if he has a co-laborer he will surely divide the profits. But the apostle shows that it is all God's; hence he styles himself and his brother apostles nothing. These folk are wrong in contending thus, may the Lord open the eyes of the blind for Christ's sake, if it is his will. But God's earthen vessel must preach. Preach what? Paul said him. Who? Answer, Christ. How must I preach Christ? Preach him the way, and the truth, and the life; and that there is no other name given under heaven among men whereby ye must be saved; "For," said the apostle, "I determined to know nothing among you but Jesus and him crucified." But are you not coming in as a co-laborer with him? No, verily, "for there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time. Whereunto I am ordained a preacher and an apostle (I speak the truth and lie not)." 1 Tim. 2:5-7. "Be not thou, therefore, ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner (not co-laborer): but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God: who hath saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." 2 Tim. 1:8-9. May I not ask all the advocates for co-works, and means, and instrumentalities to tell where they were and what part of the labor any man living or dead, in heaven or on earth, performed in this saving which took place before the world began; and what part did any man, or does any man or set of men have in this holy calling, since the world began? Does not Christ do all the quickening, holy calling and regenerating that is now done and that has been done in all time? And is not he, and he alone, entitled to all the honor and all the glory of man's salvation from first to last? And ought not every earthen vessel who contains the treasure of the gospel to declare it? And was not the apostle right when he so faithfully, feelingly, earnestly and comfortingly proclaimed the glorious truth when he said, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Eph. 2:8-9. All true believers will say amen to this, for it is the experience of God's people. And now, beloved brethren, let us ever earnestly contend for this glorious and soul-comforting doctrine. Let us ever preach Jesus and him crucified, for if we do this there can be no strife; for when Jesus is preached the gospel is preached, and when the gospel is preached the saints are comforted and made to rejoice with great joy, and the God of all grace is lifted up and glorified. I am now in the sixty-sixth year of my age and forty-second of my ministry. My time is short; but it is my great desire to live in peace and enjoy the fellowship of the dear old Baptists while my gracious master permits me to stay in this militant state. If I have ever envied any brother because his talents were greater than mine, I am ignorant of the fact. O! how it makes my heart rejoice when I can hear God's dear ministers come forth with power, when they are enabled by and through the Holy Spirit to exalt Christ. Then I am made to praise God that we have this treasure in earthen vessels. Dearly beloved, keep yourselves from idols; love each other as becometh saints. Let your light shine, live in peace, bear each other's burdens, and thus fulfill the law of God. Confess your faults one to another and forgive each other's trespasses. Pray for the prosperity of Zion, and for your humble brother, that his faith fail not.

J. C. HALL.

EXPERIENCE.

I was born the 8th day of October 1862, in Henry County, Va. My parents were Baptists, but that is not the reason I am a Baptist, for as I grew up I was an Arminian in principle. I thought the Baptists were selfish, did not want to give anybody else a chance to be saved, and I wanted to give all a chance. I wanted to have my fun and past-time with other young people, and I thought that when I had seen as much fun as I wanted to I would do better, get religion, join some church, and lead a better life. So I cannot say I am a Baptist because my parents were, for the Arminian principle was in me, and I sometimes fear it is in me yet; but I hope it pleased the Lord to take me in hand and show me what a great sinner I was; for in my wild career, when about twenty-three years old, I began to realize what a great sinner I was. Sometimes my sins would rise up before me and my troubles would come on me when engaged in some worldly amusement. I would try to drown my troubles in revelry. I did not want any one to see there was anything the matter with me. Sometimes my troubles would leave me for a while, but would return stronger than before. I commenced trying to mend my ways, trying to do better. I would form good resolutions only to break them. I began to search the Scriptures to see if I could find any promise there to such as I. I could find blessings for the righteous, but for such sinners as I felt myself to be I could find nothing but curses: for it is written, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them:" and it seemed to me the more I tried to keep the law the more I failed, and the worse I got. I would take up the bible and search for some promise, some word of consolation to me, but could find none. I could not hide my trouble, the tears would gush out and roll down my cheeks. I wanted to be alone. I would go to some lonesome place and try to beg the Lord to have mercy on me, but my prayer seemed to sink down and condemn me. My burden got so great it seemed to me I could not bear it. I would go from day to day with my head bowed down mourning on account of my sins, and trying to beg the Lord to have mercy on me. I finally concluded I was going to die and if I died in my sins without the mercy of God woe was me, eternal misery was my doom. While in this condition I was one evening in the summer of 1885, lying down on my bed, the sun was nearly setting, and I felt like I should never see it rise again. I wanted my companion to come in, so I could tell her good bye, I felt like I was going to die and eternal misery was my doom. I could only cry for mercy, for I felt that if I sank down into eternal woe it was just. Mercy was my cry, and while in this condition I hope it pleased the Lord to speak peace to my soul, for all at once a crown of gold pure and glittering suspended in front of the door. From whence it came I could not tell, and whether or not I saw it with the natural eye I could not tell. The moment I saw it my burden of sin was gone, and my heart was filled with love and peace, every thing was changed and seemed to be praising God for his mercy and goodness. I felt like I should never see any more trouble, but I was soon to find out the spoil was divided, for it was not long before the tempter came and whispered to me I was deceived, it was nothing but imagination. I would try to get my burden back again. I thought maybe I would know better how it left, but I could not get that one back, but another one soon came on me. I soon had a desire to join the church. I would go to hear different denominations preach, but the Old School Baptists were the only ones I could find that suited my case. They preached salvation by grace, and I had found out that was the only doctrine that would do me any good. Their preaching was food to me, but I could not feed on the husks the others gave out. They could tell my feelings and travels better it seems to me than I can. I would go to hear them preach, and feast on what they would say, could see their love one for another, and how much they seemed to enjoy meeting together. I wanted to be with them, but oh how unworthy I felt. I feared I had grasped at the substance and caught the shadow, that I was deceived and would deceive the church; but the desire to be with them grew stronger and stronger, till it got to be heavy to carry. While in this condition I was one day reading the bible when I saw two forms as of men pass the window, and a voice said, go to Elder Dameron, he will tell thee what thou shalt do; but I felt like he knew what a great sinner I had been, and would only think I was trying to deceive him. I finally concluded I would go and try to tell what little I had. So I went before the church at Dan River on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July 1887, if I mistake not, and was received and baptized the next day by Elder Y. J. Chandler. For a while after I was baptized all was joy and peace. I was blessed with the answer of a good conscience, but it was not always to be thus, for I soon got into doubt again. I feared I was deceived and had deceived the church. Sometimes I would grope about in darkness and trouble, and then again the blessed Savior would give me some sweet word of consolation, and I would feel that all was well, and thus it was with me until another trouble came on me. I began to feel there was another duty laid on me, that I was called to the ministry. What trouble it gave me I shall never be able tell. Why should the Lord choose one so weak and unworthy as I felt to be. I thought surely I was deceived. Surely it could not be that an al-wise God would choose one so weak and sinful to the ministry. Then again the thought would come to me that I was doubting the goodness and mercy of the Lord, that while I was weak and sinful his strength was made perfect in weakness. With him nothing is impossible. Then I would go between doubts and fears, until finally I made known my impression to the brethren, when they gave me liberty to exercise a gift at home, if there be any gift, and on the next day, in the absence of the pastor, tried to speak to the people and tell them that salvation is of the Lord, and afterwards for a while had some relief of mind. After this I would occasionally try to speak to the people in my own neighborhood, and sometimes I would experience a relief of mind, and sometimes not. Sometimes I would get up and could say but little, and after I would take my seat I would feel like if I could get up again I could tell it all. In the fall of 1890 my father was taken down with cancer, and I stayed with him day and night for seven weeks. On the 9th of January, 1891, he got relief from his sufferings in death, and we hope is now free from pain and trouble. After this I was impressed to try again to preach the doctrine of salvation by grace, but felt so little and unworthy I would not often try. I would very often be requested by Elder Chandler, who to me is a very dear brother, at our regular meeting, to take some part, and would often feel condemned for refusing. In the spring of 1891 I began to get in darkness, and worldly minded; to go back to my fishing nets. O! the horror of this black darkness, those only who have felt it can tell. I went thus in darkness with scarcely a single ray of light for 18 or 20 months. In the spring of 1892 I began to see how carnal and worldly minded I had grown, and to abhor myself; but I received no light, no comfort, until one night in the latter part of the summer I lay down feeling tired and distressed. While asleep I thought I was standing before a congregation, preaching to them Christ Jesus the way, the truth and the life. When I awoke, blessed be God, he had again visited me, driven away the darkness, and poured a flood of light and love into my heart, and I felt again that all was well. Soon after this, on the second Saturday in September, my companion went before the church at Wolf Island, told the dealings of the Lord with her, was received and baptized Sunday morning by dear brother Dameron. Wolf Island being nearer me than Dan River, the brethren granted me a letter which I gave in at Wolf Island the second Saturday in October, when the brethren received me kindly, and soon after extended my privilege, and by the goodness of a merciful God I continue to this present time, and sometimes try to preach Christ Jesus and him crucified; but I feel so unworthy and little, my nature is so prone to sin, and I so often find myself out of the way, it is such a cross to me I think sometimes I will try to lay it down. I think surely I am mistaken. Paul says no man taketh unto himself this office except he be called of God, as was Aaron. What a fearful thing it would be if I was mistaken in the matter; and then I have a family that is dependent on my labor for a support, and it is hard for me to get the consent of my mind to leave them to go out in the world. Then, again, I fear it is unbelief and rebellion on my part, and the Lord will punish me for it, for he is able to watch over, protect and comfort the loved ones at home in my absence; so I am often between two straits, knowing not which way to turn; but I hope the Lord will direct my steps, and make me able and willing to do his will. Though I feel weak, and unworthy to have a name among them, I hope a few words to the brethren will not be despised. We profess to put our trust in Christ, to look to him as our all and in all, and to have no confidence in the flesh. Now, brethren, let us prove this by what we do, and keep away from all worldly society. If it was according to his will that we should be rich, he is able to make us so without the aid of a secret, oath-bound organization; for the earth and the fullness thereof is his, and while we do not fellowship them in the church, let us be careful and not endorse them. For what is the difference! A little brother in tribulation.

THE TEETH OF THE CHURCH.

I have been requested by sister N. J. Mayberry, of Tennessee, to give my views through ZION'S LANDMARK on the 2d, 3d and 4th verses of chapter IV of the Song of Solomon, which reads: "Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing, whereof every one bear twins, and none is barren among them. Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet, and thy speech is comely: thy temples are like a piece of pomegranate within thy locks. Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armory, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men." My views on the foregoing scripture are not as bright as they have been; consequently I shall have to write under the disadvantage of a cloudy sky, as my mind is becoming somewhat cloudy on the subject; but I will do the very best I can, praying God to clear away the mists as I write, that my feeble efforts be not in vain in trying to give sister Mayberry the desired comfort of having my views in print on this wonderful and delightful subject. Oh! how deep and glorious is the wisdom of God, in the great plan of salvation. Just think how charming his designs in all his purposes of grace, and how grandly and infinitely arranged to fo one great end, "The praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made his love accepted in the beloved." How completely the system of salvation is set forth in this spiritual dialogue (Song of Solomon) of Christ and his Bride! We are delightfully captivated in the meditation of the wonderful endowment of God Almighty, in the gift of the full measure of wisdom to his servant, Solomon, inasmuch that Solomon is said to have been the wisest man that ever lived, before him or since; and in his (Solomon's) dialogue (Song of Songs) we have a complete display of this heavenly wisdom. How minutely, magnificently and vividly has King Solomon in his Song portrayed the divine unity and spiritual union of Christ and his Bride. In it we behold the admirable coercion of God's love, and the glorious condescension of our compassionate Redeemer in all of his acts of divine favor. We are not only taught his pity and compassion in leaving the singing of that heavenly and spiritual host and coming into this low-ground of sin and sorrow and living an active life of divine obedience to God's holy law, in the room and stead of his Bride, but we are also taught the glorious triumphs of his love over death, hell and the grave, for his Bride. And we are taught in Solomon's dialogue of Christ and his Bride that the Church is the object of his love, and the only object. And in this spiritual dialogue we find the Church complete in all her parts and members, inasmuch that she appears in our consideration the beauty of the whole earth, and altogether lovely. We behold the absolute necessity of every member in the whole body, in order to the crowning of God's wonderful display of his grace in presenting the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, without spot or wrinkle, in working order before himself. (Jesus recognizes the Church as his Love, and the Church, or Bride recognizes Jesus as her Beloved, all the way through Solomon's Song.) Then in all the movings of that spiritual life, in every part of the body of Christ (the Church), God beholds his pleasure in the hands of his Son, and is well pleased, and his glory is displayed. So, in all the workings of God's Holy Spirit in any and all of his children we behold, as it were, a complete body, perfect in all its parts, being moved and actuated by one life; hence the unity and peace in all the churches of the saints when actuated and led by the Holy Spirit alone. We see in a perfect, healthy body, activity, harmony and peace, that is, there is no confusion, pain nor trouble, because pure, healthy blood courses, sound and unimpaired, through their veins, and stimulates and vitalizes the sound parts and limbs. But if the body is crippled, or any member of it diseased, or the blood poisoned, there is no peace nor pleasure, but instead thereof, pain, sorrow and trouble, because there is no agreement with blood and poison, nor bruises and sound flesh; so there is none with light and darkness, God and the devil; for the one is contrary to the other; hence we can account for all the trouble that is now in all the churches of the saints. It is not the work of the Holy Spirit, but the work of that vile and poisonous spirit. Unsound teeth (preachers) have caused as much trouble in our beloved Zion as any other one thing. O! that God would pour into all the bodies and wounds of this beautiful Bride the healing balm and soothing oil of his divine grace, and cause a mighty electrifying flow of his life-giving Spirit into the veins (soul) of every member of the body of this beautiful woman, and purge out all the impurities of her blood (poisonous heresies), that we might behold in America's land, one more time, the purity of her life and the soundness of her body; that all sighing and sorrow should flee away from us, and joy and gladness fill our hearts and cover our heads. "Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing." Whoever feared of just such a set of teeth as this lady has? No one; for there is none other. This is the only set of teeth we have any account of, either in heaven or earth, that is like a flock of sheep; and not only are they like a flock of sheep, but they are like a specified flock—yes, like an even-shorn flock of sheep, and one that has been washed. What is more characteristic of a true minister of the gospel than these teeth? Teeth are those members of the body necessary to masticate the food for the support and preservation of the body; so the preachers are those necessary members of the body of the Bride, the Church, in divine arrangement, to masticate, or prepare that spiritual food for the nourishment and support of that spiritual body, the Church of Jesus Christ. Hence the command "Feed my sheep;" "Feed my lambs." And now I want to impress the fact upon my readers' minds that the teeth are always fixed in the head, and that the head is connected with the body by the neck. So the neck in the body prefigures God's everlasting love, which inseparably connects Christ with his Church; and not only so, but makes him both head and a member of his glorious body. And mark this, another indisputable truth, that the neck is the channel through which life flows from the head to the body, and from the body to the head. Take away the neck and the head and the body would be lifeless, and the body would not only be dead, but it would cease to be a whole body. So with Christ and his Church: take away the love of God, and the Church would be dead, and Christ as God-man would be dead; for in the absence of this love which was, and is stronger than death, where would the resurrection of Jesus have come from? But God had loved his people from everlasting, and therefore loved them to the end, and had treasured his everlasting love in his darling Son for his people, hence he brought his well-beloved Son again from the dead; so this everlasting love is truly said to be stronger than death. O! how I love the glorious doctrine of the life-unity of Christ and his Church; for where would be my hope of everlasting life if the life-unity of Christ and his Church was not a Bible reality? Then, as the natural body must have life or else the head cannot dictate, neither can the body act, so this spiritual body must have life; and so it does have life, and that life is eternal, and in the fore-knowledge of God this life has always, from all eternity, been the life of the body of Jesus (the Church); and now in these last days with us, it is actually manifest. And as life gives power and activity that the head or mind is put into action, and thus thinks and dictates, and the members of the body being quickened by the same life, they act accordingly, so is our blessed Jesus actuated in all of his dictations to his people by that glorious and heavenly life by which all his children are quickened and made alive; and they act out this heavenly life only as they are moved by the coercive power of the dictation of the spiritual mind of their spiritual head, which is Christ. Then well might Paul say "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do," etc. "And thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." See how God works his will in his children by a display of his mighty power in the revelation of Jesus in their hearts. Then as God works by Christ and all the graces of Jesus in his people, they are moved to work outwardly by Jesus and his graces: then well might all christian work be regarded by inspiration as the fruit of the Spirit; for no other spirit but the Spirit of God could be the source or cause of such works. So humility and contrition of heart, with a deep-felt sense of the total depravity of human nature, are fruits of the Spirit, and the evidences of redemption in Christ is a fruit of the Holy Spirit. Prayer, praises, preaching, and every christian exercise are fruits of the life of Christ in his people, and as the teeth move only by the dictation of the head; so the preacher does move in a preaching way only by the dictation of the Holy Spirit. I only speak from my own personal experience, which is that the Spirit dictates to and exercises all God's ministers to study to show themselves approved unto God—workmen that need not to be ashamed; rightly dividing the word of truth. If preachers are thus exercised by the Holy Spirit their whole study will be to that end, and they will not only read the holy scriptures, but they will study them with prayer, ever desiring to rightly divide the word of truth, rightly distribute it to the hearer, and thus feed the flock of God on wholesome food so as not to cause any to choke or strangle, nor cause indigestion. It is said that perfect mastication of food is in order to good health, and perfect digestion, which is in order to the health of the stomach. A true minister does not only study himself, to be a sound gospel preacher, but he also studies himself to show himself approved unto God in his walk and daily conversation, strictly adhering to gospel discipline, both in public and private life, that he be a private, as well as a public workman, not to be ashamed of. The uttermost study and desire of a truly called minister of Christ is to live in every respect an exemplary life of christianity, that his flock or flocks be not ashamed of him as a worthy example of their holy religion, and that the churches of his care feed upon his exemplary, consistent life as well as upon his consistent gospel preaching. I find in my very extensive travels among the churches that peace, love, life or activity, prosperity, soundness and oneness in religion and sentiment is much in consequence of the faithful, active and arduous labors of a sound ministry. If the Lord will, I will continue an exegesis of this subject. Your little brother,

W. M. R. WELBORN.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

It is not a multitude of flowery words, not a display of language, not words to suit different people on different occasions, not flattery or vain words used by man to please the fancy of man. True prayer cannot be expressed by mortal lips. It is the sincere desire of the heart with unwavering faith the Spirit making intercession for us with groanings unutterable. Then it is a spiritual work instead of a fleshly work. We may learn prayers by heart, or write them off and read them to be heard by men; yet there is no prayer in it. True prayer is only supplied by the Spirit, which furnishes the word suitable to utter on all occasions. Then we cannot pray aright only through the groanings of the Holy Spirit. There is more prayer in the groans of the poor pilgrim without a word uttered, as he battles through life, than there is in all the flowery words of mortals that have ever been uttered. The true praying person is a poor, helpless beggar, imploring the mercies of God. Then who wants to be a poor, helpless beggar? Poverty alone will drive a true man to be a beggar; for a man don't see the need of true prayer until he becomes poor and helpless, surrounded with trouble on every side, and he sees that man cannot and will not help him. Then he, instead of looking out for a large congregation to cry out before, looks for a place to secrete himself from mortal sight or hearing: there he trembles like a guilty criminal on the trap-door of death. He falls upon the earth, crying and weeping he pours out his soul to the Lord in prayer with groanings unutterable. Then the over-flowing river of trouble must be forded before we can get to Christ. So the school of trouble is the only school that the child of God can learn of spiritual things in. Remember that tribulation worketh patience. We know not how to pray as we ought. I fear we are too apt to speak forth proudly and unthoughtedly vain words to suit the hearing of vain man, asking for something to consume in the lust of the flesh; not even dreaming of what things we truly need, but go blind for fashion's sake. If God were to answer our prayers as we naturally feel to ask him to do, we would be so arrayed in vain glory we would not be prepared to enjoy this present life, much less heaven and immortal glory. We often ask for things that would prove a curse to us and to all others that surround us. But through the good mercies of God he blesses us with better blessings than we are able to ask for or worthy to receive. Fleshly children, as they see the beautiful poisoned berries, cry after them, and think their parents cruel because they will not let them have them, notwithstanding they would prove death to them. So as their parents are wiser than they are, they withhold these poison fruits from them regardless of all their crying for them. The kind parent reasons with them to make them understand it would not do for them to have this poison, as beautiful as it may appear. The parent sometimes has to chastise them before they can make them understand. So God withholds the poison fruits from his children regardless of all their crying after them. The child of God often gets so low in spirit he regrets he has even attempted to serve the Lord. He tries to pray but cannot see that he is benefited. He cannot feed on the praise of God as he has done before. He feels that all things are against him, that he will not try to pray again. After that he revives and then he can see that all things are for good to him. Then he can shout praises with a thankful heart to God. Then he sorrows and weeps and feels condemned because of his doubts and fears. Christ said, "When you pray enter in your closet, and shut the door, and pray to the Father that seeth in secret, and he will reward thee openly." It is common among the professed worshippers to have at the opening of services singing whether by saint or sinner, whether to the praise of God or not. I fear they are not very choice sometimes. They go through the form of prayer whether they have the spirit of prayer or not. If a man fails to follow after this custom it is thought he has committed a great crime, though his heart may be filled with praise and prayer. They seem to be very particular not to violate their customs. So were the Pharisees whose doctrine Christ fore-warned us to beware of. We may deceive man, but we can not deceive God. Then how will we stand the test in that great trying time, if we are guilty of going through the form of prayer and praise, when our hearts are far from God, and are fixed on the vain glories of this world. The only way that we can praise God is in spirit and in truth. We are taught to pray without ceasing. Men ought always to pray and not faint. Do we that are born of the Spirit cease to pray to take a fill of sin? Do we pray from our hearts for our enemies, as commanded in Scripture, or do we pray for our favorites with ill feeling toward our enemies. Do we pray for something to strengthen and build up the inward man, or ~~do we~~ pray for something to build us up above our fellow man that we may be honored and called master. The devils have prayed and Christ has answered their prayer in suffering them to enter into the herd of swine. The devil is subject to Christ, and fears and trembles before God. He is transformed into an angel of light. True prayer of the right spirit is as certain to be answered as the sun is to shine. The Lord says if you ask anything in his name it shall be done. He cannot lie. I am an eye witness to the fact that prayer has often been answered. Then the question might be asked, why then is the Lord's people a poor and afflicted people? Why not pray their troubles off and pray for better things? There would be as much reason in asking the sick why they take quinine when candy would be so much more palatable. The true child of God sees a blessing in being poor and afflicted, for by these afflictions we are brought to a sense of our duty. They are the remedy administered to heal the leprosy of sin. The true child of God prays for such things as will best fit and prepare them for God's glory and service, and everlasting kingdom, let it be as bitter to the flesh as it may. For they are comforted at the thought that some men's sins are open going before them to the judgment. They desire that the evil that is to come upon them may come in this life, that they may have their good times after earthly things are done away. They know their sufferings in this life are just, as the thief confessed upon the cross that he was justly condemned. To him though condemned Christ promised to answer. It is the prayers of the righteous that holds the world together.

Remember that for the sake of ten righteous persons a city would have been spared with all her wicked inhabitants. Though as but one could be found, the angels sent by God to destroy that city could do nothing while the one righteous remained in danger. Remember the prayers of Elijah, who was a man of like passions with us, when contending against the four hundred and fifty false prophets with all the wicked inhabitants of that land. Also of Daniel and the three Hebrew children, and the innumerable number of the righteous that have lived before us, and see how certain God was to answer all their prayers. Then we may begin to see the value of prayer, and what prayer is. It is the only weapon the child of God wants to fight his battles with.

David would not accept of Saul's equipments of war, neither will God's people to-day. The only equipments they want are the shepherd's bag and the smooth stones of truth. Him that the Lord loveth he chasteneth. Then we can see a blessing in afflictions. Our light afflictions that are for a moment work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Then can we not ask him to keep us under by the rod of affliction rather than to ask for the vain glories of life; for they fit us not for his service, and his glory, and everlasting kingdom. It makes us obedient with patience, and understand that our sufferings are not worthy to compare to his glory. It makes the thought of the pangs of death easy to us. Then surely the child of God feels to pray for these bitter medicines to heal his sin-sick soul. We feel as Paul did, that so far as we alone are concerned, it would be far better for us to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. Then we cry daily from our heart O! wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death. I know that the Lord has answered prayer at different times in as miraculous a way as he did in the days of the apostles. The reason the Lord's people are not more successful in their battles and prayers is they have left the ark of God and have locked arms with the ark of pride. I don't know how to pray, though I have prayerfully tried it and studied it from childhood. I don't condemn public prayer if it comes of the right spirit, though I am fearful of it. I fear the flesh would prompt me to use some unnecessary words. When the Holy Spirit takes possession of a man it heaps his sinful acts of life before his eyes so he cannot look any way but what he sees that black mountain of sin. Then there is no need to tell him in that condition to pray; for the powers of earth and hell combined cannot hinder him from praying; for his very breathing is pouring out prayer to God. Nothing ascendeth to heaven, only that which first came down from heaven. Then the emotion of prayer must be put in us by the heavenly messenger, the Holy Spirit, or it don't reach higher than our voices. When Christ comes the second time, without sin, unto salvation, to make up his jewels, he will take nothing but the pure gold that has been tried by fire—he will not take any galvanized jewels. Dear loving brethren, remember your unworthy brother at the throne of grace. I live in hope of receiving benefits from the prayers of some brother or sister as I have requested that they should so remember me. I am as ever yours, JAMES R. DALL.

WATCH FOR GOOD.

DEAR EDITORS ZION'S LANDMARK:—I have been thinking for some time of writing something in way of giving testimony to the doctrine of God our Creator, who alone can give peace to the troubled heart; and while I write, I wish his Spirit to guide my thoughts and pen, so that a poor, imperfect creature will not say anything that will be a stumbling-block. If I have any knowledge of the true plan of salvation, it has been given me by the giver of all good. I have nothing to claim for anything that I have done to merit favor. I will say that in the year 1852, as the poet says, "when I was sinking down," I was snatched from the eternal burning, if not deceived in the matter, a poor, helpless sinner, and dared not say a word against my just condemnation; but was made to cry from the depths of my heart, God be merciful to me, a sinner; and then to be blessed with the ability of praising God for rich, free grace, and made to call for more grace to love him more. I could say more of the dark scenes that I passed through, but this will be enough at present, and if this is a work of the Lord it will be enough for me in eternity. I will say as I am now past three-score years, that I see more imperfection in the flesh than I did in years past, and I feel more like impressing on the minds of Baptists to watch. First, I will say, watch for good, and not to take advantage of one another by taking up every false rumor that the enemies of the doctrine we claim as truth may say of us, but be faithful one to another in reproving every fault, and defending each other when imposed upon. Let me say, be faithful to one another and to strangers. This brings me to say something about a new class of men that are making their way through this country—new to us in this section, calling themselves Mormons, or Latter-Day Saints. I came in on Saturday evening and found two fine looking men at my home. I very soon ^{and} them where they were from. One said he was from Idaho, the other said he was from Utah, handing me cards with their Articles of Faith and their names. They claimed to be sent as the Disciples were. When I read their Articles of Faith I found their belief, and asked them if they believed the king James translation. They said they did. I handed one of them the Bible and told him to read the ninth chapter of Romans. He said, "I will read the two verses you want me to read." I told him to read all the chapter, that we did not take broken sentences to mislead. He read it, and after looking awhile said that they believed that. I told him that his articles did not give that sound. All that I will say on this subject is watch for yourselves and see if they are bringing the true gospel. If not, the Apostle passes sentence on such as preach any other gospel than that they preach. They also give us this charge, see that no man deceive you. If any one shall say, "lo here and lo there, believe him not." This is the language of our blessed Saviour; Matt. 24 chap. It will be well for us to read and study this subject, and see if we are saying, "lo here, or lo there." I think I can see some restlessness in the people of this day in a political sense, and as individuals also in religion. Some for Paul and some for Apollos, &c. We trust there are yet a few for Christ and the Apostles' doctrine. We need not be surprised if a good many follow after new things; but hope that the Baptists will stand firm in the doctrine of God's being Alpha and Omega, the Supreme ruler of the universe, and that he blesses his children as seems good to him, chains the devil when he pleases and asks no man for advice. Dear brethren, sisters and friends let us try to find our duty in obeying the commands of a wise, powerful and merciful God, who has given us his dear son to suffer for our sins and made a way for poor, helpless sinners to escape a burning hell. We cannot see where he made a way for such as claim good works as a part of their Eternal Salvation. He says to such as claimed doing many works, depart I never knew you. Good works should be kept in its place and faith in its place. I must close this letter by saying this is my first attempt in the way of a letter to any of our papers that I have been reading so long. I feel in closing this that it may be the last. God knows. If I am not deceived in myself it has been written with kind feeling to all of God's creatures in the flesh, hoping and trusting the dear children of God may look to Jesus for advice, and search for truth, so that they may shun error, let it come from whatever source it may. If the professed religious world does brush the dust off of their clothes and shoes, as those two latter day Saints did, when they were about to leave my house. May the Lord give us a knowledge of truth, so that we may live in peace, and that brotherly love may continue is the desire of the writer.

Articles of Faith of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

1. We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in His Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.
2. We believe that men will be punished for their own sins, and not for Adam's transgressions.
3. We believe that, through the atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel.
4. We believe that these ordinances are: First, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of Hands for the Gift of the Holy Ghost.
5. We believe that a man must be called of God, by "prophecy, and by the laying on of hands," by those who are in authority, to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.
6. We believe in the same organization that existed in the primitive church, namely, apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, etc.
7. We believe in the gift of tongues, prophecy, revelation, visions, healing, interpretation of tongues, etc.
8. We believe the Bible to be the word of God, as far as it is translated correctly; we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God.

9. We believe all that God has revealed, all that He does now reveal, and we believe that he will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

10. We believe in the literal gathering of Israel and in the restoration of the Ten Tribes. That Zion will be built upon this continent. That Christ will reign personally upon the earth, and that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisaical glory.

11. We claim the privilege of worshipping Almighty God according to the dictates of our conscience, and allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where or what they may.

12. We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers and magistrates, in obeying, honoring and sustaining the law.

13. We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men; indeed, we may say that we follow the admonition of Paul, 'We believe all things, we hope all things,' we have endured many things, and hope to be able to endure all things. If there is anything virtuous, lovely or of good report or praise-worthy, we seek after these things. JOSEPH SMITH.

Remarks on the Mormon Creed.

That creed in its best parts is no better than Arminian-creature works. In its worst parts nothing could be worse, as it claims the words of a mere vile man as inspired and as good as the bible.

These pestiferous fellows are scouring the country to deceive and lead captive silly women literally, by inducing them to join the Mormons when they have a chance to become a sort of concubine to some man having a plurality of women called wives. They could literally illustrate that scripture that states seven women shall take hold of one man, though we do not consider that it takes away their reproach.

In the true church of Jesus Christ it is ONE wife for the man—one true church, and the husband, the Lord Jesus, hates putting away.

Nature holds up her types of the true God and true worship. She proclaims one Creator, the sun emblazons the truth that the Lord God is the true light, the moon that there is but one body the church that reflects the light of the Sun, one husband and one bride of Adam the figure of him that was to come, one speckled bird hated by all others, one life and that the life of Jesus Christ, one hope of your calling.

Indeed UNITY expresses the truth of the church of Jesus Christ.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Will you be so kind as to publish the following dream of my little brother, which he dreamed sometime in August 1891. He was just in his fourteenth year. And oblige,

ANNIE ROBERTSON.

Mount Cross, Va.

THE DREAM.

I dreamed that I saw a terrible cloud in the South, and my little brother and myself knelt down by the smoke house, and Job came along and put crowns on our heads, and told us to go in the house, and we went and saw Christ writing in a book of gold. And he looked up and saw us and said, I will write your names on this side, and he wrote our names and went out and said, this is the judgment day. And the people came gathering around him, and brought him bread and meat and said, Master eat. But he told them that his bread was not ^{of} this world. And I saw a stair ^{to} heaven, and the people began to go up. And I saw you the first one to start up with your head bent down. And my father the next, and my brothers and sisters and mother. Then I thought Job gave my brother and I crowns and told us to crown the people. And Christ wrote their names in heaven. Then I saw God sitting on the throne preaching from the 20th chapter and 21st verse of John. I then awoke and behold, it was a dream.

FLOYD ROBERTSON.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER:—Will you please give your views through the LANDMARK on the following questions: Is it right for brethren of the same faith and order that will not go to hear the brethren preach (or certain ones), even if they have an appointment at their own church where they have the pastoral care, but treat them with silent contempt on every occasion; but make appointments and preach at the churches of which the above said brother is pastor, when he is absent, but will not go if he is there, even if he is requested by the members to join them on certain occasions; but seem to disregard what is recorded in Mathew 18th chapter. Also, is it right for members of churches not to attend their regular church meetings for a year or years, and not to tell their reason—or, in other words, never to go to their church only when visiting brethren have appointments there? Please answer soon, and satisfy an anxious inquirer. Pray for us.

ENQUIRER.

(Answer to Enquirer on page 238.)

The Pig River Association will be held at Fair View Church, Bedford County, Va., commencing on Friday before the first Sunday in May. As there is not an evangelist minister in the county we would like to have some of you to come and preach for us. We seldom hear preaching unless we go to the Association, then only two or three preachers there. May the good Lord put in your hearts to come. I think much good will be done. You can come on the Va. Midland R. R., and get off at Leesville, Campbell County, Va. It is eight miles from there.

COMING OF CHRIST.

For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us:

Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others:

For then must he often have suffered: since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment:

So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.—Heb. 9:24-28.

It is insisted that the literal, actual words of scripture should be regarded. For if words have no literal meaning what is the use of employing them? The words of scripture, too, are always true in the sense used. They are not employed to deceive. While scripture words have a literal signification that must not be ignored, they also have a deeper spiritual signification, as apples of gold in pictures of silver. The pictures of silver represent the actual, literal words. The apples of gold contain the deeper, richer food, marrow and fatness, of the spiritual word. We do not eat the pictures: we eat the apples.

Thy word was found and I did eat it. Again, the word of God is as the honey and the honey-comb. The comb, representing the letter, holds the sweet honey, which is different from the comb; yet the bees have MADE BOTH. While eating dry honey-comb would be a choking, strangling task, yet when filled with honey, how sweet: but yet sweeter is the word of God when it is given by the Spirit in both its literal expression and spiritual fullness, going down sweetly, causing the lips of them that sleep to speak. For when we are thus feeding we are not doing self-works any more than those who are asleep are laboring. It is resting. He giveth his beloved this sleep.

The spiritual signification of scripture, which is always the deeper, more important, hidden part, until in some measure revealed by interpretation, is symbolized, hinted at, suggested and typified in the use of emblems or figures of speech and things in nature. For instance, a sheep is used to represent God's chosen ones; a lamb to represent Jesus as an offering. Every figurative, allegorical form of speech is used to shadow forth the unsearchable things of scripture, because simpler and more direct language is unable to so well set forth these matters.

In the interpretation of Scripture due regard should always be paid to the literal meaning of scripture, and allegory and spiritualizing is also indispensable; but none can truly spiritualize the scriptures save those whose understandings the Lord has opened so that the mind understands the scriptures, and all those to whom God has given this understanding will properly respect and regard the literal meaning of scripture; for the literal meaning being the less important, though needful, is also included in the greater spiritual meaning, as the greater always contains the less.

Types and figures, tropes, similes, parables and riddles are freely used in scripture. There is no book that contains such a variety and profusion of them, because no other book sets forth such deep matter that can be set forth in no way so well as by types and figures. A figure or type contains the form, skeleton, or exact likeness or outline of the reality, YET NO PART OF THE REALITY. For instance, a figure of a sheep exactly represents a sheep, and no other animal; still, there is not a particle of sheep in it as a living animal. This sign, $5, exactly represents five dollars—no more, no less—yet there is not a cent of money in it. Patterns of clothing furnish styles that fit the body in a particular manner; yet they are not the clothes themselves. If the clothes are cut and made according to the pattern, they will suit or fit. Patterns of materials of any sort are models by which goods are manufactured, and they answer. We would not, however, build a fire in the wooden frame. On a stove, yet manufacturers save the pattern to make stoves by. Patterns of heavenly things, or of good things to come, are not the very things themselves. The law having a shadow of good things to come, but not being the substance, could never make the comers thereunto perfect. But the law as a pattern remains, and Moses, as a servant, being commanded to make all things according to the pattern shown him in the mount, for a testimony or witness of the things to come—the gospel—was faithful. These patterns remain, as patterns, to this day, and must remain in that sense. For we look to these patterns, not to find salvation, but to see if our salvation is according to the pattern, or to see if the law is a witness testifying of this, and acknowledging it as true. Christ is become the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. To the law and to the testimony. If they speak not according to these, it is because there is no light in them. The patterns are the sentinels at the ford of Jordan. None can cross over except those that have the true marks. Hence all scripture is profitable to the man of God.

Now the figures or patterns of heavenly things in the priesthood and its worship are referred to in the text on which I am writing. In the literal worship of the Jews under the priesthood of Levi, which is the pattern of the heavenly, or figure of the true priesthood, the high priest went every year, not without blood, into the holy of holies, to make atonement for the people who were represented by him, for he bore their judgment in the breastplate on his priestly robe. The people he represented stood without, not being able to enter into the holy of holies, waiting or watching for the appearance or coming out of their high priest. Their standing was in him. If he lived then they were accepted. If he died, they were not accepted. Then they were much interested and looked for his appearing to them again.

While he was hid, or gone from their sight in the holy of holies, they were not left without a witness if he lived. But it was those watching, looking or listening that received the evidence. The proof to them whereby they knew he lived, was in the arrangement on the robe he must wear. There was a golden bell and a pomegranate alternating on the skirt of that robe, or the hem, and as he ministered in the most holy place the goodly sound of the golden bells, and the odor of fragrant pomegranates would tell those without that their high priest lived, and therefore they should live.

His return to them, or appearance was hailed, therefore, with joy, because it testified of their acceptance, and the benefits they should receive through him.

Now this pattern or type is fulfilled alone in Jesus, our high priest forever after the order of Melchisedek. Let us look at the pattern here of Levi.

Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands: which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, of which the most holy place was a type. Christ is entered into heaven itself now to appear in the presence of God for us.

He offered himself once. That was all that was needful. He perfected forever them that are sanctified by the one offering of himself once. Now once in the end of the (legal) world he hath appeared to put away sin (the business of a true priestly sacrifice), by the sacrifice of himself.

The man Christ Jesus is the lamb of God without spot. The divine nature is typified by the priestly garments and holy anointing oil. He bears the judgment (including all their sins) in his own body. He offers himself to God without spot. He is the priest and the lamb. He enters into heaven itself there to appear for us.

AND AS IT IS APPOINTED UNTO MEN ONCE TO DIE. Is there a relationship here expressed or suggested? The terms AS and SO are correlatives, and one is a sequence of the other. For instance: AS by the disobedience of one many are made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. AS is the one, so is the other. One follows the other. One could not be without the other. Adam is the figure of him that was to come. But the figure does not produce the reality or substance. You would not say that the shadow or figure of a tree produced or caused the tree. Because Christ was to come the figure Adam foreshadows it.

It is appointed unto men ONCE to die, so Christ must die once, the just for the unjust. His death as surety, as the consequence of relationship, for the guilty, the just dying for the unjust, is the wondrous theme of grace.

AFTER DEATH THE JUDGMENT. It might be said that after Adam's death the judgment at once followed. In the day that he ate that fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, he died. It is recorded that he lived until he was 930 years old; yet he died the day he transgressed, in the sense declared by the Lord. As a proof of this see his conduct in attempting to hide from God. Then God called to him after this death, Adam, where art thou? He is brought into JUDGMENT AT ONCE. He receives according to his works. In the righteous judgment of God the truth is manifested, and all things are properly adjusted. Adam is driven out of the garden to till the earth which is cursed for his sake, and in sorrow he is to pass his days. A man's death is not the end of him at all. AFTER DEATH THE JUDGMENT.

PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA.

This address of Paul before Agrippa is considered the most perfect model of speech ever delivered by man, whether its matter or spirit is considered. Its matter is the most weighty, its manner the most faultless and perfect in style and expression, in tone and intent, in scope and utterance. Surely the Lord was made manifest in Paul's heart and manner of tongue.

If we could always be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves our speech could not often be gainsaid. But some think that roughness is firmness, and snap-pishness is wisdom. Dogs snap. False prophets wore a rough garment to deceive—wolves in sheepskins, and serpents hiss.

Flattery is different from faithfulness or firmness. A flatterer is a constitutional liar. I mean his nature is to deceive and lie. Paul was free from all this. He knew how to accord honor to whom honor is due, without being a sycophant or compromising truth.

In speaking to a King in his own behalf concerning the accusations against him he simply states his own experience, or declares how, while he was persecuting the church under a natural conviction that he ought to do so, the Lord Jesus appeared in a miraculous manner to him, and commanded him what to do and that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision; but he preached Jesus and the resurrection; and that for these causes he was accused by the Jews.

He makes no charge against them. He makes no threat to the king of calling down wrath on him, but perceiving that King Agrippa himself believed the prophets who testified beforehand these same things, he addresses the King in the tender question of the words, King Agrippa believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

Paul spoke this from knowledge or revelation. The answer of the king to Paul, "Alas, thou persuadest me to be a christian," shows that he was a believer in what the prophets testified. To be a christian is for a believer to OWN JESUS PUBLICLY BY BAPTISM, or to deny self, take up the cross and suffer persecution for Jesus' sake, as Paul was doing. No doubt there are many believers in what the prophets wrote concerning Jesus who do not bear the reproach of Christ without the gate. They love to be popular with men—love worldly honors—do not forsake all for Christ—are not christians. One must forsake all to follow Jesus or to be a christian.

If Agrippa had been an unbeliever in the prophets, or had no interest in this matter, he could not have almost been persuaded to be a christian. We cannot be almost persuaded to be that which we have no faith in, or love for. Nor do I think one in the condition of Agrippa is lost or dead in sin.

Paul's love shows itself as most wonderful in his reply, I would that not only thou, but also all that hear me were not only ALMOST, but ALTOGETHER such as I am, save these bonds. He did not want them to have the chains or bonds he bore, or be prisoners as he was, but he desired that they should be christians. We need not say I wish you were a christian if it is God's will. We should have such good will to men that our happiness would be much increased if we could see the fruits of christianity in our hearers. How happy is such a character as Paul. Such a character could say I could wish myself accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh, but that would not be as dying for his enemies. Such an one could become all things to all men that he might thereby save some.

Such a christian can sympathize with the widow and the orphan. Who can be nearer like Jesus than this?

P. D. G.

ANSWER TO ENQUIRER.

1st. It does not seem to me that I could serve a church if I knew a single member did not desire my labor. My mind, for years, has been that if I knew that a single member of a church I am serving should make it known to me, or I should have reason to think did not desire me to serve as pastor, it at once would become my duty to resign. Because I could not profit or serve that member that did not desire to hear me. It would be a burden and a wrong to that one. If I love the body of Christ how could I oppress one of his members that way?

2d. It is the rule among Baptists that in the matter of choosing officers or servants for a church such as pastor or deacons, the call should be unanimous. If the Lord is with his people they are of one and the same mind, and it is manifested in all of them desiring the same things. Hence, in calling a pastor they all desire the same preacher to serve them. Therefore, if in calling a pastor one member should object, that ought to be a bar to the call.

3d. The relation of church and pastor is a solemn and endearing one. There should be love and fellowship, and the church should esteem their pastor very highly in love, for the work's sake; Heb. 13: 7 and 17. He should also love them, taking the oversight of the flock of God, not for filthy lucre, but of a willing mind.

4th. In the case supposed there is a wrong somewhere. Why should a member of a church stay away from the regular preaching when the pastor preaches. If he objects to the pastor let him make it known by going to that pastor and letting him know his difficulty. Perhaps it could be removed.

Why should a member of a church seek to have other preachers go there and preach, and go to hear them when he will not hear the pastor? There is a fault in this matter.

5th. Brethren should not neglect the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some is; but each one, if he is able, should be at every meeting.

6th. No member should do any thing to lessen the respect or standing of the pastor of his church, but each should pray for him, and seek to hold up his hands, and encourage him that the word of God be not hindered.

7th. Nor should any other preacher do any thing to weaken the respect and love that each member should have for their pastor; but each preacher that visits said church should be a help to the pastor, and should honor the relation of pastor and flock. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES.

ELDER E. P. HUDSON.

At about 9 o'clock, Saturday morning, February 18th, 1893, passed away, as we believe, from earth to heaven, Elder E. P. Hudson, in the seventy-first year of his age. Brother Hudson was born June 27th, 1822, in the neighborhood of Juniper Bay, at which place he was reared and continued to live till a few years past, when he moved to the north side of Mattamuskeet Lake. He was said to be a very wild, bad boy, and remained so during the early part of manhood, desecrating the Sabbath by fishing, and hunting with gun and dogs, paying no respect to religious worship, until the Lord in his mercy killed in him the love of the sports of the world by his Spirit, and caused him to cry unto him for mercy, which he was pleased to grant him by clothing him with his imputed righteousness, which caused him ever afterwards to have no confidence in the works of the flesh, but to give all honor and glory to the works of the Spirit. Brother Hudson was married three times; and by his three wives were born to him thirteen children, of whom only four survive him. He joined the church of Christ at North Lake the first Sunday in August, 1876, and was baptized the following Sunday by Elder Albert Cartwright, some time after which he felt to be called by his divine master to preach the unsearchable riches of the gospel of Christ, which I believe he did many times to the edifying of the brethren. Thus we see that the Lord is able to tame the wildest and most profane of his people by the inward working of his Holy Spirit. For the last year or so brother Hudson was troubled with something like unto colic, or neuralgia in his breast, and was so afflicted with it that he could not labor much, and was often confined to his house for a day or so at a time. Coming up to Swan Quarter on Saturday before the second Sunday in February to preach, no doubt he contracted a deep cold, the weather being very inclement. On Sunday, however, on Sunday, and on Monday with brother Farrow, and after owing, he was taken very sick with his old complaint, the colic. The neighbors nursed him as best they could, but he seemed to mend slowly, and in a day or two Dr. Hooten was sent for, who came and did all he could, and he seemed to improve, and on Friday night he conversed freely on the scriptures greatly to the comfort of the brethren present. He then retired and rested well, and next morning being asked how he was, answered that he felt better. Breakfast was carried to him, when he sat up in bed and ate heartily, and set the dishes aside, and soon remarked to his wife that he was going to die, and was dead in a few minutes. The dear brother was carried to his old home at Juniper Bay for sepulture, and there will likely remain undisturbed until the resurrection morn, when the refined body will be reunited with the spirit and received up into glory where he will enjoy the peaceful presence of the Lord forever. May the Lord in his mercy bless and take care of his widow and children, both in time and eternity, is the prayer of

I. S. ROSS.

PENINA BATTIS.

Mrs. Penina Batts, the wife of brother David W. Batts, died March 17th, 1893, after a brief illness. She was the mother of six children, and leaves a husband and four children to mourn her loss.

She was not a member of any denomination, but her preference was the Primitive Baptists, and her affection was we hope on things above, and Jesus was her hope. For blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

To be born unto sorrow, to stumble through a transient, vain life, to die and be sown in corruption is the way of mortal man. Our footprints are traced in mourning, and the best thing about us is our death the thing we mourn over, for better is the day of ones death than the day of his birth.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

TO ELDER RICHARD SNIDER.

Elder Richard Snider, beloved:
This new year, ninety-three,
I thought I would write a few lines
And address them to thee,
I will try to tell a few things
Of what I've seen and felt—
Or in other words, how it is
The Lord with me has dealt.
I do not know the cause nor time
When I became concerned
About my eternal welfare,
And of the world to come;
But I can remember a time
When I couldn't understand How some people their sins could see,
And of them were ashamed.
But time passed on, and I began To see how it could be.
I felt of sinners I was chief,
And from sin I couldn't flee.
I sometimes, of a truth, did wish
I never had been born;
And at other times I did wish
I could have died when young.
Sometimes so great was my distress
I couldn't rest day nor night;
I thought I would die, and be turned From everlasting light.
I felt that I would rather be Anything else on earth
That had no soul. Oh, yes! could I Have been a beast by birth.
It did not continue the same—
It ceased at times, of course;
But then when it returned again,
It was with greater force.
From human detection I thought
I would keep it concealed;
But ere I was aware, I found
I could not keep it sealed;
For I found that some were so wise
They could by some means tell
That my mind was so uneasy,
And that all was not well.
This was a mystery to me
(I oft thought about it),
How they could know of these things,
When I had not told it.
I went on in that condition—
Sometimes better, then worse—
Until the spring of ninety-one
It seemed my heart would burst.
I was troubled on every hand;
No object I could find

To relieve me of my burden,
Or give me peace of mind.
I might look any way I could,
But everything was gloom;
And I felt assured of the fact That torment was my doom.
But at a time—when, I know not—
This great burden was moved.
It was then (though I felt little),
That the christians I loved;
And these words "The Lord will provide"
Were daily on my mind.
Although I was not overcome,
Yet felt sweetly resigned.
There were about six months of time
That doubts didn't cross my mind
Only like shadows that soon passed,
Or chaff before the wind.
I heard Mr. Bean preach two days
As he journeyed along,
And of those that felt to enjoy
The news, I felt I'm one.
I hope to hear Messrs. Adams
And Bryan, to-morrow,
And if I'm disappointed
It'll be to my sorrow
And now I believe I will close
This badly written letter,
And if I ever write again,
I'll try to do better.
Now if this is not worth reading,
Throw it in the basket;
Or else, for my part, I'd rather
In the flames you'd cast it.
And now, as I have written this,
And that to send to thee,
I feel that I desire that you Will still remember me.

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, BELOVED BROTHER IN CHRIST:—If I may be permitted thus to address you. This stormy, snowy day brings to my mind your beautiful article in the last LANDMARK, which I read and re-read with great interest. "Who can stand before His cold?" Truly He is a great God, and worthy of the praise and adoration of all His creatures. And should not his people worship and adore him with constant adoration? Dear brother Gold, why my mind should be especially driven toward you when I am depressed and cast down, I cannot tell, unless it is that you can sympathize with the little ones, and feel to give them a word of cheer to encourage the weary pilgrim on the way. My mind for some time has been somewhat depressed and in gloom, depression of spirit would seize hold on me. Age and infirmities are reminding me strongly that I am reaching the eternal shore. This is not a sad thought if we can only see Jesus, who alone can shine away all darkness and gloom. I often feel like a homesick child. I long for home. I am weary of self and sin. As a professed follower of Jesus so many years, how far I have lived from him who I trust has called me with a holy calling. My life seems so much a blank. So I sink very low in my own esteem and wonder if it can be possible that I know any thing of the grace of God which bringeth Salvation. I desire to see our glorious King even if he comes in his "Cloudy Chariot." I long to behold his glorious presence and hear his excellent voice in his Kingly power and love. Sometimes when the cloud seems very dark and heavy, a little ray of light darts through and inspires a hope that Jesus lives in my behalf. And I daily enquire what to do. I truly desire but Jesus. To know that I am in him by faith, and he in me is the hope of glory. If I am not greatly deceived I desire this true knowledge above all things else. Jesus is a precious, glorious, almighty Saviour; and just suited to my lost and helpless condition. So I would desire to exalt him alone. I believe that God, my dear brother, has placed you as one of his faithful witnesses upon the walls of Zion. May you be strengthened with might contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. The Lord has given you a gift to express much in a few words: words in tongue and writing, words seasoned with salt are good for edifying. When our natural food is well seasoned with salt it is more palatable and refreshing. If it is not well seasoned it is insipid. When the heavenly influence of the Holy Spirit is manifest in those that preach and those that write it has a telling influence on the hearts of God's dear children. The savory influence of grace falls and revives, instructs and comforts the dear tried and afflicted people of God, amid all their trials and vicissitudes they are called in through their pilgrimage state before they reach their heavenly home to dwell forever with Jesus. I am glad to know that Elder Durand is with you as an Editorial Correspondent. I love to read his writings. I trust your labors will be greatly blest of the Lord. I trust all of our dear brethren who are engaged in publishing the truth will be harmoniously united in declaring the whole counsel of God. Not fearing the reproaches of men, but go without the camp bearing the cross of Jesus. How delightful to Zion's children to see God's ministers pulling together in glorious harmony in the Gospel yoke seeking to instruct and feed the flock of God which he hath purchased with his own blood, teaching and rebuking with all long suffering, in love avoiding all vain wranglings and vain philosophy. Error and delusion are sweeping over our world like a mighty torrent. The power of the flood is so great that many times the church of God is threatened with its baneful influence. God alone can and will save his church. He can save his people from the entangling power of error and all the wiles of the devil. According to the promise God will raise up a standard by his Spirit, when error comes in like a mighty flood. He will save his people as by fire. May the God of Israel strengthen you, dear brother Gold, and all his servants to stand firm on the Rock Christ Jesus, with sword in hand girt about with truth and love. The trials of the servants of God are manifold, they are but earthen vessels, and unless the Spirit is with them to uphold and sustain them they will fall and err, but all the promise of Jesus and all his glory is on their side, for his promises are sure. I have often thought that the ministers of Christ have great use to have deep feeling and fellowship for each other in their labors and trials. They are all of them exposed to the shafts of the enemy, his fiery darts and the frowns of the ungodly world, if they follow their Master faithfully and preach his doctrine, and sometimes like Paul they may find themselves in peril among false brethren. So great grace they need and that grace will be given them like a pure stream of gold which will be sufficient for all times, seasons, every tribulation and trial. You know dear brethren that a sound, well balanced mind in regard to the things that pertain to this life, is a great blessing and a good gift to those to whom God has given it. All do not possess this mind and judgment as it has not been given, but how much greater the gift and blessing to have a sound, spiritual mind in regard to spiritual things, being acquainted with God by an experimental knowledge, a sound clear mind in regard to the things of the kingdom.

The gospel of the Son of God is a wonderful gift and blessing and no one but God can bestow it. Dear brother Gold, if your mind should be led to do this, would you please give your views on the 12th chapter and the first verse of Romans, "I beseech you therefore brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service." In what way are God's people to do it. In this one chapter there seems to be every instruction. What a wonderful book is God's word. How deep and unfathomable is the mine of God's word. He alone can reveal and make known the treasures therein and he does reveal them to his servants and children as it seemeth to him good, even to a wayfaring man though a fool he need not err therein if God reveals and makes known to him by his Spirit.

Now, my dear brother, I stop and feel ashamed that I should presume on your time to read this scribble of a letter. I trust your mantle of charity will cover my weakness and imperfections. I only thought to write you a page or two when I took my pen in hand. In humble hope. Your aged sister in Christ.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD, I shrink down when I call you brother, for I feel so unworthy, for I think you are a man of God. I feel to be one of the least, if one at all. I have been impressed for some time to write some of the dealings of the Lord with me, if it ever has been the case. I want all to know that read this scribble that I was a poor girl. I had no father and mother to send me to school, so I learned what little I know at home. I never went to school more than two months in my life. Now I hope the good Lord will guide my pen, for it seems that I am bound to write or live the rest of my life in darkness. I have put it off from time to time, thinking there would be a better time; but now I think I will look away from self, and write it the best I can. Last May my little boy was very low with the fever. I did not think he would ever get well. I thought he was going to be taken for my sins, and I promised the good Lord if he would spare my little boy that I would try to write this scribble for the LANDMARK. He did spare my little boy, but I have failed to do what I promised until worse troubles and darkness have come upon me. I tried to write this little scribble ten years ago; but I felt so unworthy and mean that I burned it up, and thought I would never try it again; but finding that I am not my keeper, have thought that I would be like the one that hid his talent in the earth. Brother Blalock made that part of the scripture plain to me. He said that we hid it in ourselves. When about fourteen years of age I made a profession of religion, as I thought, and joined the Methodists, and lived with them four or five years, not thinking about who was right, nor who was wrong, until I found myself asking the Lord to lead me in the right way. Then I commenced thinking about being in the church and I did not feel fit to be in the church; so I told the lady who raised me that I wanted to come out of the church. She told me to get fit and stay in the church. I did not know how to get fit, so I commenced praying to the Lord to lead me in the right way, and I hope he did lead me in the right way. I felt that there was a burden on me and I could not get it off; so I tried to pray to the Lord for help, not knowing what was the matter with me, and tried to get rid of my troubles by singing and being merry, but could not. I grew worse every day until one day in July, 1877, I went off to a lonely place to pray, but I never uttered a word, and came back to the house, not feeling like living in that condition. My desire was to go off by myself somewhere to pray to the Lord to have mercy on me. So we went to getting dinner, and we did not have enough meal for dinner, and I begged the family to let me go; for my desire was to get away from the house to pray to the Lord to save me, for it seemed like I was sinking lower every moment. On leaving the house I commenced praying to the Lord to save me, a poor lost sinner, and a poor sinful worm of the dust. I had never thought of being a worm of the dust before, but went on after the meal, and coming in the door of the place where I went to borrow the meal, I stopped. It came to me, you are going to die. Oh, my soul! words can never tell my feelings at this time. I started back home begging the Lord to save my soul. On coming home I sat down in the door and gave up. Some of the family came to me and asked what was the matter. I told them I was bound to die. So they carried me in the house and put me on the bed, and told me I was not going to die; but still I felt like I was going to die, and asked the family to pray for me. I commenced praying to the Lord to have mercy on me, a poor lost sinner; save me, Lord, or I perish! speak peace to my soul, Oh Lord! Tongue can never express my feelings at this time. Some of the family got some warm water to bathe my feet. They said it was a sun-stroke; but no, my soul, it was a sin-stroke. I told the family that I was not suffering with pain, it was my soul that was suffering. So I lay down on the bed for the last time, as I thought, expecting nothing but death; but Oh, my soul! in a few minutes I was up on my feet praising God with all my heart. If I had ten thousand tongues I never could tell how happy I was at that time. Everything seemed to be praising God. This was the happiest day that I ever saw. I commenced thinking about what great things the Lord had done for me, and that he had taken that heavy burden off of me, and I wanted to pour my whole heart out in praises to my God. I told some of the family that the devil and all his angels could not make me doubt my religion; but my dear brethren and friends, it was not long before I was off in the old-field praying to the Lord to undeceive me if I was deceived in this great matter. So I have been traveling along in this way for fifteen years, sometimes feeling that I have no hope, and sometimes reposing in God my Savior. Now, brother Gold, I have written this to satisfy my mind; do as you think best with it. I have wished that the LANDMARK continue to be published as long as time lasts, but I did not think that I would have to help write for it—as poor a scribe as I am, and as little education as I have—but I have put off writing this little scribble until it has caused me untold trouble. I have not written anything about joining the church, but I may write more in the future, if it is the will of the Lord for me to write. Your unworthy sister, if one at all,

THE PRODIGAL SON.—THE ELDER BROTHER.

Luke 15-11-32.

DEAR BROTHER:—I have it in mind to pen a few thoughts for the LANDMARK in connection with the parable contained in the above scripture. Such reflections as I desire to present have been my settled conclusions concerning this parable for a long time. I am aware that many dear brethren have written and spoken concerning it. Probably no single portion of the word of God has ever engaged the attention of the people of God more than has this parable. The narration of the parable itself is very touching, and many who have erred from the way have doubtless been encouraged by this parable to return and seek once more unto God for forgiveness and peace. As a picture of the everlasting faithfulness, and pity, and love of God toward his wayward and wandering children, it must ever attract the attention and arouse the wonder of all his people. Nothing that the most eloquent pen could ever write could in any way make the pity and forbearance of our God more clear and full than they are made to shine out in the parable itself. But while this is one of the wonderful lessons of this parable, yet the first design of it was not to set forth this, but to reprove and rebuke a class of people that neither knew nor loved Jesus nor his salvation, and who, clad in the robe of self-righteousness, despised all who did not measure up to their mark. The whole of this fifteenth chapter of Luke is a discourse of our Savior, setting forth in various parables, the same truth. The text from which the Master spoke these parables is found in the first two verses of the chapter: "Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, this man receiveth sinners and eateth with them." This is the theme of all the parables which follow. It is concerning these opposite characters that Jesus proceeds to speak. In the third verse we are expressly told that his discourse was directly addressed to these Pharisees and scribes. No doubt all who were gathered around him heard, and in a measure at least, understood the substance of what he said; but still he was directly addressing the Pharisees and scribes, as he also did upon some other occasions. Thus, the original design of these parables, that which gave rise to them, I mean, was to rebuke these Pharisees and scribes. These parables were not intended to set forth the dealings of God with Jew and Gentile, nor the feelings of the Jews toward the Gentiles, but simply the pharisaic pride of those who were great sticklers for the outward forms of the law, which led them to despise others. Especially does this closing parable of the chapter, that of the two brothers, show forth this spirit of self-righteousness which is so abhorrent to God, and so cruel and overbearing to others. It is not a picture of a conflict between Jew and Gentile, but of that irreconcilable enmity of pharisaic religion toward anything that looks like grace abounding to even the chief of sinners, that we see in this and the preceding parables. At the top of your Bibles, and at the head of chapters, this is called the Parable of the Prodigal Son. Let it be remembered that this is man's work. Our Savior gave it no such designation, and I have for years felt more like calling it the Parable of the Elder Brother, than of the prodigal son, because the design was rather to rebuke the murmuring of the Pharisees and scribes than anything else. Let us now turn to the two parables preceding the parable of the two brothers for a moment. They all three stand in unison, and set forth the same general truth. After reading the first and second verses, we see in the third verse this language: "And he spake this parable unto them, saying." It is evident that he spoke to those who found fault with him for eating with these publicans and sinners, and receiving them. Then follows the parable of the lost sheep. Upon another occasion also, Jesus used the parable of a lost sheep (in Matt. 18:12-14). In this last named place it was addressed directly to his disciples, in connection with the warning that they should not despise one of the little ones which believed in him; and the plain design there is to say that as a shepherd should deal with a straying sheep, so should these little ones be regarded and dealt with. And in this fifteenth chapter of Luke, the same parable is used to rebuke the unfeeling and selfish self-righteousness of those Pharisees who found fault with him for showing mercy and compassion toward the publicans and sinners. They themselves would not deal with regard to a lost sheep as they wanted him to deal with men whom they looked upon as having sinned. And Jesus himself upon another occasion had said, "a man is of more value, or better than a sheep." How terrible was his condemnation of this pharisaic spirit in this parable! Then follows immediately the parable of the lost piece of silver. This also was a plain and simple illustration. Every one would do, under the circumstances, just as the woman in the parable is represented as doing. In fact it would be a wholly unnatural thing to suppose that the contrary could be the case. As it would be inhuman in a shepherd not to seek after a lost sheep, until he should find it, and bring it home again, so it would argue carelessness and foolishness not to light a candle and sweep the house after the lost piece of silver. These Pharisees themselves, "who were covetous," would not neglect to search carefully if they had lost part of their wealth. Why, then, should they chide the Master because he was intent upon seeking and saving his lost ones? Were they not infinitely more valuable than any amount of gold and silver? But now he proceeds to bring the matter closer home still. It is not a sheep or a piece of money which has strayed or is lost, but a brother. The good shepherd will give his life for his sheep, but how much nearer and dearer a brother must be. It might be essential for many reasons to find the lost piece of money, but how much more needful for our joy should a brother be. Each preceding parable presents some new phase of the same one truth, and each successive one seems to grow stronger and stronger in the condemnation of the whole temper and tone of the scribes and Pharisees. This last parable of the two brothers has a special force in our minds when we remember that the publicans and sinners were not Gentiles necessarily. Some may have been, but we know that many were Jews, as well as the scribes and Pharisees. They were all, indeed, kindred, or brothers, being alike the children of Abraham. But self-righteousness, anywhere that it may appear, always provokes emulation, pride and vain glory, and leads those who are under its evil influence to despise others. It puts in an unblushing claim upon all that God has to bestow, and regards others as dogs which have reason to thank their masters for even the crumbs that fall from their tables. And so these Pharisees acknowledged no relationship to publicans and sinners, and were surprised that Jesus should associate with them. One more thought I would here suggest before considering the language of the parable itself. I have no doubt that Jesus spoke these three parables in immediate succession, and in the same discourse to the Pharisees and scribes. But even should this not have been the case, Luke, inspired by the Holy Ghost, has placed them together, thus showing that they were intended to set forth the same general truth, and were alike fitted to rebuke the evil spirit set forth in the second verse of this chapter. Therefore the narration of the first two verses gave rise to the parable of the two brothers, the elder and the younger, as truly as the parable of the lost sheep which follows these two verses immediately. And still another thing should be remembered in connection with this parable and, in fact, is true of all the parables, and that is that one prominent truth is always intended to be set forth, and if we do not wish to pervert the true design of the parable THIS ONE TRUTH must always be kept in view. There may be many things in a parable from which great and consoling lessons may be drawn, but after all, these must be seen and handled in complete harmony with the ONE great truth intended to be set forth. So in this parable of the two brothers, the one truth clearly presented by the Savior is to rebuke a pharisaic spirit as being absolutely foreign to the whole spirit of Christ, and contrary to the whole design of his coming into the world, and therefore as having no place in his kingdom. All else that we may see in this parable, however true, good and spiritual it may be, is to be looked at in subordination to this. Now, coming to the parable itself, we are struck first with the opening statement, "a certain man had two sons." This is not a type, but an illustration. The types all belong to the old covenant, and were fulfilled when the kingdom of Christ was set up. Under the new covenant, Jesus, by his own words, and afterwards by the mouths and pens of his disciples set forth his present and living truth in parables and illustrations. When Christ came, types and shadows are done away, because the substance—the body, which is Christ—is here. I do not understand that there can be any type or likeness of God the Father in the scriptures. The types all pointed to the work of Jesus Christ in the redemption of his people. But while it seems to me there can be no type of him whose name is "Jehovah" and "I am," yet our God has been pleased to set forth his dealings of mercy, love and grace toward us by illustrations drawn from natural things and natural relationships. This I will not stop to prove, for I presume all will recognize the truth of it. So, in this parable we have no type of God the Father, but simply an illustration of the dealings of God with men under the picture of a father and his two sons. And so in the former two parables, illustrations of the same thing are set forth under the parable of a shepherd and his flock, and of a woman and ten pieces of money. We must not forget that it is through the person of Jesus Christ that our God has been pleased to set forth his name and his work in the most glorious manner.

Now Jesus in this parable shows that his dealings with men are just like the way in which this father treated his two sons. The publican and sinner are received just as this father received the returning prodigal, and the Pharisee and Scribe are rebuked just as the father rebuked the elder brother. God sees not as man sees; and God's ways are not as man's ways, with regard to the things of his kingdom. Man would make his boasted righteousness a passport to that kingdom; and he would have it that the more righteousness he has the higher should be his rest there. So, of course, in that kingdom he would provide no place for the publican sinner; but this is not the mind of God. In his view the whole needed not a physician, but the sick. Those in the fold needed no seeking after, but the lost. He knew the proud afar off, but He dwells with the lowly and contrite. The publican who cries for mercy because he can plead nothing else before God, goes down justified rather than the Pharisee who had done many good things. They who cannot see that they have ever honored the Lord have a place upon the right hand rather than those who cannot see where they failed. The man who thinks that he has left all and followed the Master is not so near to his heart as the man who has never followed Jesus aright. And even his disciples, except they were converted out of their self seeking disposition, should in no case enter his kingdom.

Now here are the two sons, one of them has always abided at home, he has been careful of his father's interests, and especially of his own; he has been steady, industrious, frugal and mindful of every proper thing. No scandal has attached itself to his name, and he has served his father for many years, and at no time has he transgressed his father's commandment. Yet, how completely was he out of touch with his father in the whole spirit of his mind. He is selfish, he is not compassionate, he can have no pity or forgiveness for the unwary and the erring. He is almost infinitely removed from his father in the whole spirit of his mind. Outwardly he is with his father, but in spirit an ocean divides them. He has a formal godliness, but very little vital union to the father. The life of the father is in him, but it is crusted over and buried out of sight by his selfish worldly mindedness. This is the one son; outwardly right but inwardly wrong. Now let us look at the other. He has left his father's house and gone into a far country, he has lived riotously and wasted his substance, he has disgraced his name and brought shame upon himself and sorrow upon the head of his father, he has had in his madness no thought but to gratify every evil passion, and has associated with the evil. But he comes to himself in his dire poverty and distress. He is humbled. He remembers his father's home, its plenty and its peace. He recalls his father's kindness, and he sees clearly his sin. And he says, I will arise and return to my father, and I will say to my father, "I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight and am not worthy to be called thy son, make me as one of thy hired servants." Here is the outward life, all evil and wrong, but here is manifest an inward life altogether right. Outwardly he has been far off from his father, but now inwardly he is near to him. Oh it was well and it was wise that he did not say I will arise and go to my brother, but to my father. The Pharisaic righteousness of man knows no pity, no mercy, no forgiveness. It asks none for itself and it grants none to others. And so as the erring son comes back, he can claim nothing of right from his father, he can plead nothing but mercy. He only remembers that no such tokens of favor have ever been extended to his faithfulness and obedience, as are now being shown to this brother who has done evil and not good. This looks unreasonable and not right to selfish human nature. It is contrary to every principle of worldly or Pharisaic religion. But this is God's way. He receives sinners and eats with them. He is not at home with the Pharisee.

Now these, it seems to me, are some of the general thoughts taught in this parable. One question more seems now to me worth our consideration. Is there in this any lesson of warning or rebuke for ourselves; we who hope in the mercy of God in Christ for salvation? If I did not think so I could see but little use in writing or speaking about this parable at all. It seems to me that there are lessons of comfort, hope and encouragement, and lessons of reproof and warning also in this parable. But they are the same lessons that can be gained also from the two first verses of the chapter. The Lord does receive every poor penitent returning sinner, and he has nothing but words of warning and reproof for the spirit of self-righteousness. The father sees the poor, the needy, the penitent while they are yet far off, and in their experience they come to him before they could anticipate any comfort or health or strength. Perhaps every believer can say amen to this. But the question may arise, is it possible for the child of God to possess and exhibit the spirit of the elder brother, the spirit of a Pharisee? Perhaps it is enough to ask what spirit is it that desires to be greatest in the kingdom of heaven? What spirit is it that could lead a disciple to say, "we have left all and followed thee, what shall we have therefore?"

It has for years seemed to me that self-righteousness is the most dangerous foe in the heart of every believer. The spirit to say in our thoughts, I would not do such and such things, or I would have done better than some one else, is essentially a spirit of self-righteousness. Who of us can plead innocent to the uprising within us of this spirit? It is the spirit that gives rise to envy and jealousy, and ambition and a desire to be held in higher esteem than their brethren? If an brethren can truly say that they have never felt the workings in their hearts of such a nature as this, then they are blessed more than I have been. I see the spirit in myself, and therefore I am constrained to abhor myself. The spirit of Christ leads a man to feel unworthy to be blest, but the spirit of Pharisaic religion is always boastful of self and always seeks to disparage others. If we feel bad when great love and joy are shown toward our brethren rather than to ourselves, then we need the reproof ministered to the elder brother in the parable. Oh what a lovely spirit it is to be glad when our brethren are esteemed and praised, and how abominable is the spirit which is grieved and angered when such is the case.

I will leave these remarks to those who may read them. Many have written about this parable. I mean no contradiction of others, but merely suggest these as thou'ts which I have had for a long time. It is but a partial view of the parable I know. May God add his blessing.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ. F. A. GIBCK.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have been thinking for some time I would write my little experience but I feel so small it is a task.

When I was about seventeen years old I became troubled about my soul, I thought there was a chance for every one except me. I tried to pray for the Lord to have mercy on me, for that was all I could say. I would go to dances sometimes but would not enjoy them. I promised the Lord I would never dance any more, but was persuaded and carried out on the floor and danced again, but, Oh, you don't know how much trouble it caused me. I felt like I had committed an unpardonable sin.

I went on in trouble about eight years. I thought I would be a Methodist, and attended their protracted meetings. I thought there were some good people among them but did not like their way of worship.

We moved near a Missionary meeting house, they held a protracted meeting and I attended. I tried to be a Missionary: they looked like they got religion so easily. I kept trying to pray but my trouble did not get any better. I told my husband I would like them better if they did not beg for money so much. The last day of the meeting they begged for money as usual, and after taking up collection while one preacher lead in prayer, the other one sat behind him and counted the money. That satisfied me that money was all they wanted. They cared nothing for the flock. I never wanted to go any more to hear them.

A short time after that I went to Fairfield to hear old Brother Martin who I thought was such a good man. When I went home I said to my husband, I feel so much better than I did the day I went to Green Pond. He asked me, why? I told him I felt like I had heard preaching. In a few days I was taken sick and thought I was going to die, my burden was so heavy I could not carry it any longer. The doctor and some of the neighbors were called in and sat up with me that night. About day the next morning I felt that my burden was taken from me, I shouted and shouted and felt like I loved every body and wanted every body to praise the Lord. My husband was at my bedside, he told me not to do so, he was afraid it would hurt me. I told him to let me shout as much as I wanted to.

The doctor said it was my mind that ailed me. In a short time my sister came to see me. I told her not to say any thing about it. I was afraid I was mistaken. I wanted more evidence. She told my step-mother who I thought was a christian woman. I wanted to see her and talk with her but did not think I would tell her what I thou't the Lord had done for me, but as soon as I was with her she asked me to tell my experience. She said I need not wait for any more evidence; she thought I was a fit subject for the church.

About six months after that I got into deep trouble about joining the church, and could not sleep or work with any satisfaction. I had not done what the Lord commands his children to do. I went to the Mt. the 4th Saturday in April 1875. Brother Dameron preached and opened the doors of the church and was singing,

I can but perish if I go,
I am resolved to try,
For if I stay away I know
I must forever die.

I went and told my experience, was received, and baptized the next day. I have never been sorry I joined, and if I am no advantage to the church I never intend to do anything to disgrace it, for I love them and want to live and die with them.

For fear I weary you, I will close by saying, Oh that Baptists would attend their church meetings and love each other as they are commanded to do. Pray for me and my family.

Your Sister in hope,

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I have been thinking of writing you ever since I had the pleasure of meeting you at the eastern Associations. I shall ever hold in grateful remembrance your dear christian wife, who is indeed a faithful helpmate to you. I always feel glad to meet the wives and the children of the ministers of Christ, for I greatly sympathize with them, having to be left so often in their lonely condition.

The gift of the ministry is a precious and wonderful gift to Zion, and God has dispensed the ministry as seems good in his Blessed sight.

He stands in the midst of the golden candle-sticks, holding the seven stars (ministers or angels) in his right hand. The hand of God carries the ministry wheresoever it pleases and enables them to comfort the poor and afflicted ones.

Habakuk says, "His brightness was as the light, he had horns coming out of his hands, and in them were the hiding his power." These "horns" I think are the ministry. David was anointed out of a horn, and Saul out of a vial. The horn is not manufactured, and all the skill of the world cannot make one, but they can manufacture a vial. There are factories for making one kind of preachers, but they cannot make a minister of the gospel. The horn comes out of the hand or power of God. These "horns" are "coming" out of his hand. The word coming denotes the continuance of an act, that they are continuing to come. Amid the sore trials of life and the chequered scenes through which the church has past God has never left himself without a witness, notwithstanding many have been put to death and suffered martyrdom for their faith, yet God in His Almighty power is raising up men to preach His everlasting gospel. These horns have come to the church in all the past and yet they come and will continue to come, not out of theological schools, but out of the hand of God. That is why the ministry have been enabled to bear the many sore conflicts that have come upon them, for they are in the hand of God and his Almighty hand sustains them and upholds them. Methinks I hear the enemy saying, "They will soon die out and in fifteen years there will not be a single one living." Ah, I have heard this prophecy for fifteen years. But the horns have continued to come all the same, and will continue to come and when they cease to come God will have no more use for time.

Woe! be unto you false prophets! John calls these horns stars or angels of the churches. An angel is a messenger. A messenger is one who bears a message. Suppose a father sends his son to bear a message, the son says, father to whom must I deliver the message and what message must I deliver? The father replies, "son, you study up the message and deliver it to everybody." Would not the son be as apt to prepare a lie as the truth if not more so? A father when he sends his son to bear a message, sends him to a particular person or persons and delivers the message to him. Hence when our Heavenly Father sends a man he gives him a message to deliver and directs his mind to a certain people. "Go to Ninevah and preach the preaching that I bid thee."

Isaiah says, "Comfort ye my people, &c," and was told what message to deliver and to whom to deliver it.

There is a use for all the ministers or all the horns and all the stars. Every minister fills his place and the Lord prepares him to comfort so many and the hearts of God's children are opened for the reception of the word or truths he delivers.

Oh my soul! I have had so much darkness and gloom and feel my unworthiness so greatly that many times have I concluded that I was deceived and was not a child of God, much less a minister of the blessed Saviour. I have made so many failures and feel so timid to speak in the presence of able gifts that I have many times gone home and resolved to never open my sinful lips to address another audience in the way of preaching, for the bible is a sealed book, I can see no beauty in it. Oh! the anguish of soul! No rest can I find. My mind runs after the dear children of God. I want to be with them. It is indeed like fire shut up in the bones. The scriptures begin to open with the same sweetness and the desire is so great I am made willing to go forth in fear and much trembling and in weakness speak to God's humble poor. How thankful I feel to have the assurance that I have been enabled to comfort one poor feeble saint. All my resolutions amount to nothing, I am a failure at best. The safest place I have found is at the feet of Jesus resigned to his gracious will, but I can't get there of myself. I can't come to Jesus until I am drawn to him and as we are drawn away from the flesh we are drawn to Jesus.

We have had some glorious meetings in this part of the country this year. I have had the privilege of baptizing 30 since last spring and I think there is much more material that will soon come to us and find rest to their wearied souls. Remember me kindly to dear sister Gold. Desiring an interest in your prayers, I remain your poor little brother and companion in tribulation.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—With a feeling sense of my unworthiness and declining weakness I desire to pen a few thoughts to the household of faith, if you should feel that it is worthy of a space in your columns.

I am fully aware that there are many, many more talented writers than myself, yet it is not I, others cannot pay my obligations to my Lord and Master.

Now I am before you, what shall I write? I am once more delivered out of the furnace of affliction. I will ask the Lord to guide me, and enable me to write such things as will be for the glory and the comfort of His children.

Allow me to feel like one released from prison, having had my arm in bandage last spring about fifty days and lay on my left shoulder; and last fall had my shoulder of the same arm broken and had to lie and sit propt on the same shoulder, and bandaged about fifty days more. Now I am relieved of all my bandages, but not free from pain. I am permitted to walk out and enjoy the beauties of nature and it looks like all nature bespeaks the praises of God. The heavens declare the glory of God. Should not I praise him? I feel it is good for me. The afflictions and changes I have passed through I believe are all for my good; I cannot see the path that is marked out for me ahead, so I am all the time on the lookout to see which is my path so I may not wound my feelings any more, nor the feelings of others.

I cannot write experimentally my feelings as well as I can tell them to others. They are better felt than told. When I can meet and commune with one that I believe has traveled the road I hope I have like Elder J. M. Wyatt's experience in the LANDMARK Feb. 15th, 1893: when I read to the place where all hope and works were stripped from him, and nothing but a gaping tomb, and awful hell was before his eyes, and no way to escape the wrath of God, when I read that far I exclaimed, my Lord and my God! I shall never forget that time while I have memory.

After all this I have travelled on in so many paths, ups and downs, doubts and fears, and a lack of faithfulness in bridling my tongue, and keeping my body in subjection, I fear after all I shall one day fall; it does seem to me if I ever had any good fruit it is cast out and bad placed in its stead, the hidden treasure is hard to find. There is a wrestling and a conflict on hand, or about to come, nearly all the time. If I could always look to Jesus who is able to make me wise unto salvation: under his teaching there is no guile.

It seems the present day is one in which the people taught of the Lord should be on the look out as there are lords many and gods many, and most of them it seems to me are looking after wealth and fame. Peter said to the impotent man "silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee". There was no craving of this world's goods with him, it was give him Jesus.

Perhaps I have written more than is profitable. I will close, praying God to keep us and direct us in the right way, and his name have all the praise.

A. REED.

The Pig River Association will be held at Fair View Church, Bedford County, Va., commencing on Friday before the first Sunday in May. As there is not an Old Baptist minister in the county we would be delighted to have some of you to come and preach for us. We seldom hear preaching unless we go to the Association, then only two or three preachers there. May the good Lord put in your hearts to come. I think much good will be done. You can come on the Va. Midland R. R., and get off at Leesville, Campbell County, Va. It is eight miles from there.

TO THE PERSECUTED.

"Hear the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word; Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified: but he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed."

"A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the city, a voice of the Lord that rendereth recompense to his enemies." Isa. 66:5, 6.

Friend W. R. Willis requests my view on the above scripture.

There is a sign by which God's people are known, yet none but the wise in heart perceive it. It is not those that most loudly profess by word of mouth, let the Lord be glorified, as an amen to their own conduct, or that are active in steps of oppression to the down trodden, yet say, "Let the Lord be glorified." It is not those quickest and readiest to announce their own holiness and faithfulness that are the Lord's afflicted poor, nor is it those most confident they are right and sustain their own courage by avowals of their righteousness. What have they to fear? They know they are right. Their eyes stick out with fatness.

It is not those highly esteemed among men, that receive the praise of men that are on the Lord's side.

1st. The people who are followers of Jesus are a persecuted people for righteousness. They are a people hated of all men, a sect everywhere spoken against—cast out in the street, trodden under foot by the proud and self righteous. The doctrine they hold is despised, and hence they that hold it are despised, and not only by the profane and those that make no pretense to religion, but the multitudes of the professors of religion that make a gain of their profession hate the doctrine of Jesus more than non-professors, and hence they are more bitter against the Lord's people, and cast out their names as evil, and say, let the Lord be glorified. They do this in the name of religion. They are hated for Jesus's sake because he was hated while on earth for what he was, and what he taught. He was righteous and so was his doctrine, and they were evil and so were their deeds, and hence they hated him. The doctrine of Jesus condemns man's righteousness, and exalts the Lord. This the pride of man which is of the devil condemns and hates. Hence they persecuted Jesus without a cause, and if they persecute Jesus the green tree, what will they do to the dry tree?

The common notion that mankind are purer now than when Jesus was on earth, and hence now love what was then hated, is all false. Jesus is no more loved now by the carnal heart of man than he was then, nor is his doctrine any more acceptable to men naturally now than it was then..

2nd. The people of God tremble at God's word for two reasons. One is they know the terror and the power of the Lord, having been searched by the Lord which tries the reins of man's heart. The word of the Lord with which we have to do is quick and powerful, sharper than a two edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

All things are therefore naked and open before that word. What could we do to escape or elude that word? How sore and sure its punishment upon wrong, being sharper than a two edged sword. How can one walk where that word pierces to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, joints and marrow. Would not this so disjoint one that he could not walk or stand?

Then God's people know that they are sinners. The light of God shining in them reveals their sinful state so that they tremble as sinners and abhor themselves. They are a poor and needy people. They do not know that they are right, nor do they feel that they are right. Their very sense of vileness will prevent and preserve them from persecuting and oppressing others. The most pitiful people to others and the ones most considerate of the rights of others are those who feel their own unworthiness and vileness. So that God's people are never persecutors, nor are they very quick and hasty to accuse and revile others, or to defend themselves. Feeling poor and fearing they are wrong they suffer wrong and are imposed on by others.

Hence when you see people under difficulties very quick and hasty to proclaim their own innocence and accuse others, you may know they are not right. Vengeance is not man's. That belongs to the Lord, and he will render recompense to his enemies.

If you are wronged and oppressed and tremble at the word of the Lord, and are cast out by your professed brethren, or by your enemies, do not take vengeance in your own hand, but by prayer and fasting commit your case to God who will judge his own people, and will avenge his own elect which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them, and this voice of deliverance to you, and condemnation of his enemies, will come from the city of God. For if you are on the Lord's side, and God be for you, your enemies are enemies of the Lord, and if God be for you who can be against you. P. D. G.

COMING OF CHRIST.

AFTER DEATH THE JUDGMENT.

When a man dies corporeally the judgment of the law is executed on his estate or worldly goods. If he left a valid will his estate is settled according to that in justice to all interested, or if he left no will the law takes the matter in hand and disposes of his estate according to principles of right or judgment. His body goes back to the dust and the spirit to God who gave it.

In the dispensation under the law there was sin, and death followed as the wages, then there was after the death or sacrifices of the offerings, a judgment, or the guilty were pardoned at least typically, and the benefits of the judgment were enjoyed by all interested. The judgment proceeded in favor of the sinner for whom blood was shed which gave him the benefit of the shedding of the blood for him.

So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many. What a gracious and efficacious offering, and it was to bear the sins of many—not a few—not all, but many. A number that no man can number, out of every nation, kindred, language and tongue under heaven is redeemed unto God by the blood of Jesus.

Now the judgment follows the death of Jesus who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification. He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied. All that the Father giveth to him shall come to him. God gives him the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession. He shall bring judgment unto victory, and in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

The Holy Ghost, the comforter, who knows the will of God, and is a witness of the covenant of Grace, and the executor to fulfill all the will of God in Christ Jesus, knows who the heirs are, and brings the things of Jesus, to their minds and hearts, or to their understandings.

The judgment of truth is that Jesus must reign until all enemies are destroyed, and all the heirs of God shall be presented before the throne of God with exceeding joy.

Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. It is Christ that died, yea rather is risen again, who ever lives and makes intercession for us at the right hand of God. In the sight of Jesus the heirs of promise enter into the glorious estate or inheritance in light by virtue of the death and resurrection of Jesus.

While in the flesh these heirs differ nothing from a servant in mortality. They are by nature corrupt. It does not yet appear what they shall be. Christ is their hope, and when he appears, or when we see him we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

Now let us remember the pattern. Jesus is our High Priest. He has gone into heaven itself there to appear in the presence of God for us. Then will he come again? Will he appear to those people who are looking for him? Did the high priest under the law of Moses, when he went into the holy of holies, appear again? Yes, the people waited until he appeared. So Jesus our High Priest according to the pattern, and the express word of scripture, shall come again. He shall come the second time without sin unto salvation. Many scriptures prove this. The text we are considering is one of them, "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." He put away sin by the sacrifice of himself when he came the first time and was put to death in the flesh. Therefore the righteous judgment of God is that those for whom he died shall receive of his fulness and grace for grace. Accordingly when one is convicted for sin and dies to the law, or experiences his death to works of the law, he receives mercy. That is the judgment that follows this death. "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness." Isai. 1: 27.

They enter into the benefits of the death and resurrection of Jesus. "For the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification." Rom. 5: 16. While after the death of the ungodly their judgment is to everlasting destruction from the presence and glorious power of the Lord, and the wicked are turned into hell, and receive the due reward of their deeds after death. For they never receive this reward before death. For the judgment is after death, and it is righteous. But the righteous hath hope in his death, for after death he rests in Jesus and in the resurrection or judgment shall be like him.

Now how do we know we are the people thus redeemed, and those for whom Christ died? The text answers. Unto them that look for him, or love his appearing, he shall come the second time without sin unto salvation.

All the Jews, that is all heirs of promise quickened by the Spirit of God, are interested in the death and resurrection of Jesus. They know he has gone into the Holy of Holies or heaven itself, there to appear in the presence of God for them. They believe he will come again and receive them to himself. They look for his appearing. This is written in their hearts. They love his appearing. His first appearing to them was so good and glorious they long to see him again, and say with John, even so come Lord Jesus, come quickly. They wait as well as pray. They wait by serving him. They are also burdened with trials and afflictions, and they long for release from this captivity and bondage.

Their hope is not in this life. They have hope in the resurrection of Jesus, and look for that appearing. "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." John 14: 2, 3. Here is a declaration of what just before his death Jesus said he would do, that he would leave them, would go to prepare a place for them, and that he would come again and receive them to himself, that where he is they should also be. His coming again is as clearly stated as that he would go to heaven.

See Acts 3:17—21. Here it is stated that after Christ was crucified, risen and exalted, that God should send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto them: "Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." That is that he would remain in heaven until all things should be accomplished which God had spoken by the prophets since the world began. When this should all be accomplished then Christ shall come again. He must reign until all enemies be put under his feet. He is head over all things to the church which is his body. He rules all nations with a rod of iron. He appears in heaven to John after his crucifixion as worthy to open the book of seals, and to execute all the glorious counsel of God, and rule all nations, and he shall reign until all enemies are destroyed, and all things that offend are gathered out of his kingdom.

Paul tells us (1st Thess. 4:14, 18) of the coming of the Lord Jesus from heaven, in language as plain as words could utter a truth. Also see 2nd Thess. 1; 6—11, his coming is declared again, as in many other places.

Peter also refers to this notable event. He says, "There shall be scoffers in the last days walking after their own lusts and saying, where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation:"

He calls the coming again of Jesus the day of the Lord, and declares that the heaven and the earth are reserved unto fire against that day and shall be burned up.

Jude (14, 16) refers to a prophecy of Enoch of this coming of the Lord with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all &c.

These writings of the apostles were since the resurrection of Jesus, and therefore could not refer to his coming in the flesh, nor to his coming on the day of Pentecost.

He came to them in the flesh the first time bearing their sins. But he put away their sins by the sacrifice of himself, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, not to reign here a thousand years on earth, but to take them to himself, to be ever with the Lord. They reign with him now in the sense that he by his Spirit is in them, though they still bear the image of the earthy; but in the resurrection our vile body shall be changed, and fashioned like unto his glorious body, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. He is with his people until the end of the world. In the resurrection they shall be with him forever and ever.

How do we know our High Priest lives? Answer, by the golden bells and the pomegranates or the hem or skirt of his priestly robe. That represents the preaching of the gospel, and the goodly, fragrant, sweet fruit of the spiced pomegranate that is with it. Every time you hear a gospel sermon you know your redeemer, your High Priest, lives. You have the witness in yourself. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. That is not some sermon or mere words however sound in form, but it is to them that are saved the wisdom and power of God, the joyful sound, the good news in your soul that your Redeemer lives. The love, fellowship, joy and peace is the goodly sweet smell of the pomegranate that is never separated from the gospel as you hear it. Instantly that fruit is found and eaten.

None can ring or sound these bells save Jesus, for they are on his robe. That is no man can preach the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven unless Jesus sends him. When you hear one preach the gospel you know the Lord sent him to preach it. The bells and pomegranates are on the hem or skirt of the robe which reaches down to the feet. The goodly anointing that was poured on Aaron's head ran down to the skirts of his garment or robe. The anointing of Jesus reaches to all the members of his body, or down to his feet. The bells and pomegranates on the hem show that they reach down to his people. The woman diseased could touch the hem of Jesus' garment, and his power was as much there as anywhere.

The gospel reaches the poor and lowly and needy. How beautiful are the feet of him that publisheth peace. Preaching the gospel then is that joyful sound of Jesus. It is the voice of my beloved coming into his garden, and the pomegranates give a goodly smell. How important then is the gospel. Blessed are they that hear it and know the joyful sound. Such look for and love the appearing of Jesus. They lift up their heads for their redemption draweth nigh. They know Jesus shall come again. These are the ones interested in his glorious salvation.

If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. For ye are dead, (crucified with Christ and risen with him,) and your life is hid with Christ in God, in the Holy of Holies—heaven itself, where Jesus our High Priest is gone. When Christ who is our life shall appear (or come again) then shall ye also appear with him in glory. What a wonderful salvation. How sweet and glorious. Hence we should seek those things which are above, and mortify our members which are on the earth; putting off the old man with his deeds, and putting on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him in righteousness or the judgment that comes after death; hence we are the partakers of the benefits of his death, and glory even in tribulations, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and we have the witness of the blessing, living High Priest who is in heaven being able to save unto the uttermost them that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

There was no power in the priesthood of Levi under the law of Moses to thus save the worshippers while the high Priest was gone into the most holy place. But in Jesus the priesthood is the power of an endless life, and while he is in heaven on the right hand of God we live because he lives, and we live by the faith of him, being dead to the law by the body of Christ, and being dead we enter into the benefits of his atonement.

How humble was his first coming in the flesh alone. How glorious will be his second coming with his saints and angels to be glorified in all them that love his appearing, and his train shall fill the temple, and his people shall enter forever into the joys of their Lord.

P. D. G.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I am often made to lament my weakness, fearing I am without living faith, knowing not what I am. My mind is much on the resurrection of the dead, and the eternal heavens, believing the time is not far distant when Christ will come again. Please write an article on these subjects, especially the resurrection and heaven, and oblige a little one, if one at all.

LYDIA A. PENDLETON,
Hylton, Virginia.

REMARKS.

The believer has a witness in himself of the resurrection.

Christ is the resurrection and the life. Without Christ there is no life nor salvation; but if we have him we have everlasting life, and shall never come into condemnation.

How shall I know that I have Christ? Where my treasure is there my heart will be also. If my thoughts are much on Jesus and things above this proves that my treasure is there also.

One of the blessed things of heaven is freedom from strife and hate, contention and confusion. Here we have contention and ill-will. Even brethren often do not dwell together in love. The perfect deliverance from all that offends, and from every one that loves and makes a lie will be wonderful, and be much admired. The deliverance from self, that foe that gives us more trouble than all others, will be glorious.

In this present state we see through a glass darkly. This is not pleasant. We wish to know more and understand more. Then shall we know as we are known.

It doth not yet appear to us what we shall be, but we know that, when we see him we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is, with no veil between.

The quickened soul longs for perfection. Hence David says, when I awake with thy likeness I shall be satisfied.

The groaning and travailling together in pain of all the church from the creation, waiting, hoping for the adoption, something far more glorious, bespeaks the truth that this is not the complete, finished state of the child of God; but that he hopes for the better resurrection. It is the resurrection in the child of God that has awakened in him this desire for glory and immortality.

So that the very fact that our sister thinks much upon heaven shows it is to her near; and that she longs for that perfect state proclaims that she groans in this imperfect one; and the fact that she does not know that she is a christian proves that she sees through a glass darkly, and that therefore she is a child of God away from home,

ORDINATION.

In compliance with a request of the Primitive Baptist Church at Smithfield, N. C., the following elders met with said church on the 1st Sunday in April 1893, for the purpose of setting apart. Bro. W. J. Stephenson to the full functions of the gospel ministry. Viz: Elders Isaac Jones, J. A. T. Jones, H. F. Peedin, J. T. Coats and Wm. Woodard. Said Elders organized a presbytery by choosing Elder Wm. Woodard, Moderator, and Elder J. A. T. Jones, Clerk. The Deacons of said church presented Bro. W. J. Stephenson and he being found to possess the gift of the ministry, the charge was given by Elder Wm. Woodard, and after prayer by Elders J. A. T. Jones and Isaac Jones, the said Bro. W. J. Stephenson was set apart to the full work of the ministry by the laying on of the hands of said presbytery.

WM. WOODARD, Mod.
J. A. T. JONES, Clerk.

Some object to praying in public before or after preaching. But would you like to hear a man preach that had no mind to pray?

Note change in last of Elder Hall's appointments.

OBITUARIES.

JOSHUA WORRELL.

I write to you brother Gold by request of the bereaved wife and children for publication in the LANDMARK the notice of

The death of our dear brother in the Lord, Joshua Worrell, the son of Joshua Worrell^d and Cynthia his wife. He was born July the 19th 1810 and died the 28th of December 1891, making his stay on earth 51 yrs. 3 months and 9 days. Joshua Worrell was married to Polly G. Smith, March the 22d 1866. Their union was blessed with 13 children, 8 boys and 5 girls, all of whom are living. Joshua Worrell was a farmer and cabinet maker by trade, by which he earned a living for himself and family until the three or four last years of his life when he was Postmaster at Hillsville. He was kind and generous in his family, a devoted husband and an affectionate father and provided well for his family, a good neighbor, firm and solid in his principles and in his religious belief. He was an Arminian until five or six months before his death when his belief was changed and he saw himself a great sinner in the sight of God and feared that he could not be saved, and seemed to be in great trouble in regard to his condition and sent for Isaac Webb to come and see him, and he went and conversed with him on the subject of religion, stayed with him all night and sang and prayed with him. I also went to see him and talked with him, and a few days before his death he became more reconciled in his mind in regard to his salvation and sent for the members of the Little Vine church, and several of us met at his house on the 24th of December 1891 held a church meeting and he related his experience, was received, but was then too weak too be baptized. But we believe that he was saved, for the scriptures say, "where the Lord begins a good work he will carry it on to the day of Jesus Christ, and that he was quickened into life, for without life no man can repent of his sins and when Jesus gives life it is eternal life. He said he loved everybody in the world, and to his wife he said "what a happy tho't it would be to me if I knew I would meet you and the children around the throne of God if I am so fortunate as to get there. Speaking to some of his children he told them to seek Jesus while they were young, then on the 28th he passed away being afflicted with that fatal disease, consumption, leaving his wife and children together with friends and relatives to mourn their loss. But we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we believe our loss is his eternal gain, that he is received into the paradise of God.

JAMES M. ALLEN.

R. I. WHITE.

Departed this life March 25th 1893 Mr. R. I. White, son of W. S. and Isabella White. He was born October 25th 1862, making his stay on earth 30 years and 5 months bking two days, teaching us that in the midst of life we are in death. He was from childhood a steady and quiet youth which grew with his age to manhood. Devoted to his parents, kind and affectionate to his brothers and sisters, and beloved by all who knew him, was of an amiable and mild disposition, and found friends wherever he went. On October 26th 1887 he was united in marriage with Miss Temple A. Pittman with whom he lived happily though of short duration, as she died in August 1888, for whom she mourned in sadness and grief. He never married again but was a quiet and sober man attentive to his business, and although he never united with the visible church he was a firm believer in the doctrine of salvation by grace and had a hope of entering into that rest that remains to the people of God, and though in the prime of life and health he expressed himself to the writer that he would not live to old age and that the griefs and trials of this world would soon end in a blissful immortality beyond the grave, and though lost to sight he is to memory dear, and it will not be long before we who mourn will meet him again in that blest world above where no farewell tear is shed and parting is no more. He has left behind a devoted father, two brothers and three sisters to mourn his loss, and may God in his mercy give us of his grace in this our time of sorrow is the prayer of the writer for Christ's sake.

A. FRIEND.

CHRISTIAN E. SAMMONS.

Please publish the death of my beloved wife, Christian E. Sammons, who died March 24th, 1893. She was born Oct. 4, 1846, making her stay on earth 46 years, 5 months and 20 days, of which time she spent nearly 20 yrs. with me, though the time seemed very short.

She was the mother of eight children; five of whom survive yer. She never knew what it was to enjoy good health from childhood. Up to the time of her death she suffered very much from neuralgia, but she bore her afflictions with great fortitude, and now she has gone to that brighter world to wear the crown of glory, where sorrow and afflictions are unknown. She told me two days before she died that her time was near at hand, and that death would bring her such sweet relief. She united with the Primitive Baptist Church nearly seventeen years ago, at Ward's Mill on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in Feb. 1886, and was baptized the following day by Elder Job Smith, and remained a consistent member of that church up to the time of her death.

There was nothing she seemed to enjoy better than the company of her brethren and sisters. She never tired or complained though suffering with afflictions, to provide for her meetings. But it hath pleased Almighty God to call her to that great association that will never break up, nor Sabb th ever end; there to sing the praises of her great Redeemer while eternity rolls its endless rounds

She was a great lover of vocal music. While on earth she would often ask me to sing some hymn for her. She said the following lines were precious to her.

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise,
Than when we first begun."

and many others, but she made special mention of these. I will close with these lines.

"Jesus lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A LETTER.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—The enclosed private letter from our esteemed sister in Christ, Mrs. Ruth Taylor, is too good and comforting to cast it in the fire, as she tells me to do; therefore I submit it to you for publication in the LANDMARK, that your many spiritual readers may share with us in its rich treasures of truth and love; trusting that the dear sister will kindly pardon this use of her precious letter. And while she thus ministers to her Father's family in blessed spiritual comfort out of her deep poverty, may the same loving Lord put it in the heart of each one to as freely minister out of the abundance of temporal good to her pinching necessities, in her many afflictions, "as good stewards of the manifold grace of God;" that her heart may be comforted in the house of her spiritual kindred, and that she may like the lovely Ruth of old, be blessed of the Lord in her work of faith, and a full recompense be given her of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings she is come to trust. And as Boaz bade the reapers of his harvest to "let some handfuls of purpose" fall for the impoverished Ruth. So let us do likewise for our Ruth, remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." He said also, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Yours in the love of Christ.

D. BARTLEY.

Crawfordsville, Ind.

ELD. D. BARTLEY, BELOVED BROTHER IN THE LORD, (if one so unworthy may claim such relationship with the chosen ministers and royal priesthood of Zion's King):—I have greatly desired to send you some word by way of answer to your last most timely, most welcome dear letter, so richly perfumed with the delicious fragrance of the Redeemer's merits, to tell you how thankful I felt to both you and the compassionate Father for those soothing expressions of christian fellowship and esteem, which acted like oil cast forth upon troubled waters, and for the many excellent and soul refreshing things you were enabled to send me from the bountiful table of the dear Father. But I have been very cold and barren, so dead to all living sense of the Redeemer's love, and all spiritual feelings, save an intense yearning, longing and reaching out of the soul for the joys and benefits of the Masters rich pasture, that, aside from my severe sufferings and physical inability, I could not write a word in due season to any of the faithful, time-worn laborers of the Lord's rich harvest field, whose weary hands and feeble knees, so much need to be lifted up and strengthened by those who reap the precious fruits of their laborious toil. Even now, I have no particular items of interest, nor words to express what my heart feels for the Lord's dear people; but feel that I must write you a few lines, lest you should cast me off your list as an ungrateful, slothful servant, if indeed you really can see any marks of a called servant of Christ in my poor miserable writings.

O! dear brother I have passed through a long, dark, cold night, when neither moon or stars appeared to light up the indescribable gloom that hung over my spiritual sky, since I last wrote to you. I felt not only the utter loneliness and desolations of a poor, helpless widow, and forsaken by the last human friend, but I feel that Jesus had left me entirely alone, upon the deep, black, stormy sea, without anchor to stay the frail, tottering life-bark, while the waves and billows rolled over my defenseless head. How fiery were the darts from the enemy, and how cunning were the devices he used to cast me in the yawning abyss of unbelief. Long did I toil endeavoring to row against contrary winds, eagerly watching for the shore, hoping to soon catch a beam from the rising sun, praying with all my might for the Captain to come to my relief. But not until the coming of your precious letter did the morning star appear, and the still small voice speak peace to the furious storm. Oh how sweet and delightful and enjoyable was the tranquil peace, the heavenly calm that pervaded my whole being, as my soul drinks in the sweet fragrance of Jesus' dear name, the refreshing drops from His cloud, and bathed in the mellow, warm light of the reconciled countenance of a tender Father. Such a season of refreshing from the Lord afforded me such a blessed peace and perfect rest of soul, mind and body as I had not realized in several weeks.

Not one word did you utter that did not sink deep down into my heart, where its fragrance distilled upon the thirsty plant, and every sentence seemed to be full of the very cordial most suited to my case. O how wonderful and precious is the power and love of God, when felt in the soul of a poor, vile, helpless sinner, and when it is so vividly displayed in the hearts of God's chosen in Christ Jesus, uniting and binding them together by its indissoluble cords, through the righteousness and blood of Jesus, their ever living Head.

Often am I made to wonder why the Almighty Father should have chosen such a poor sinful worm as myself to be a sharer of his saving grace, to feel the power and sweetness of redeeming love shed abroad in my vile heart by the Holy Ghost, which is given, yes given free, without money and without price or works, unto us, who were predestinated unto the adoption of sons and ordained unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ in whom alone is salvation; that I should be given an ear to hear and heart to understand the certain joyful sound of the glorious gospel of God the Saviour and Redeemer of Israel. Verily there was nothing in me to merit esteem, or give the Creator delight: for I was so drenched in the filth of sin, so deep in the pit and miry clay, so full of wounds and bruised, and putrifying from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, with a vile and deceitful heart, as unclean as a cage of birds. I could hardly bear the obnoxious odors myself, and had no power to cleanse my sin-dyed soul, no strength to extricate my sinking feet; nothing did I possess to recommend me to God's favor; no righteousness to plead. O how thankful I am that 'twas just such polluted, helpless sinners, instead of the righteous Pharisees, that Jesus came to seek and to save. That it was those dead in trespasses and sins that Christ died for, in due time to raise them up into newness of life in himself by the Holy Spirit, whose office it is to search out and bring the lost sheep to the heavenly Shepherd, who has bought them with his own blood, and by giving his life to redeem their souls from destruction. O, my brother! was ever there such love as this manifested to mortals? Well may the poet sing,

"O for such love let rocks and hills
Their lasting silence break,
And all harmonious human tongues
The Savior's praises speak."

How I do wish I could love and serve, praise and adore him as I ought; that my whole life could have been spent to the praise of the glory of his grace, which has, I humbly trust, enshrined his name and love upon the highest throne of my heart. No other name to my ear is half so sweet as Jesus. What depths of meaning lie buried in that one word, Jesus; signifying that he is not only a Savior for them that believe, but that all whom God hath chosen in him "shall come unto" him, in the day when the Father is pleased to manifest his omnipotent power unto them, and they shall be saved from their sins. "For He shall," (not may, will or can, if sinners will let him) save his people from their sins." How glad I am that salvation is certain to all the elect heirs of promise; for if left to the sinners' choice they would never be saved. They are enemies to God, and being carnal, sold under sin, have neither will nor power to come unto God. Ye will not come unto me that ye might have eternal life. And it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God who sheweth mercy, says, He who "spake as never man spake," who knew the hearts and minds of all men. Then, if we are believers in Christ, and have been translated out of nature's darkness unto the glorious gospel light of God's dear Son, it is all by the unmerited sovereign mercy and grace of God, who has by his Holy Spirit "worked in us to will and to do," making us believe on him through his son; for it is the work of God that ye believe on the son, whom he hath sent, to be a propitiation for the sins of his people, Israel in whom he is glorified. Then if we have been redeemed and reconciled by his son, and have received the earnest of our inheritance—the Holy Spirit, which the Redeemer said he would send to his disciples, when he left them in these low grounds of sorrow, to comfort their hearts, to abide with and teach them all things He had commanded them. What more can we want to prove that we are the chosen generation, whom God hath taken from the degenerate fallen posterity of Adam, to be a separate people, unto himself a peculiar people, who worship God in spirit and in truth, rejoice in Christ Jesus and have no confidence in the flesh. Why should we care for the reproaches, persecutions and revilings of the world, who, as the Redeemer said, as they were nailing His Holy hands and feet to the dreadful cross, "know not what they do." Their eyes are blinded, they cannot believe or know the things which God has revealed unto us by his Spirit. Yet we do not dread their slanderous tongues, and will strive to show them their errors when they begin their arguments.

All the people in this immediate vicinity are warm, zealous Missionaries. They are come now and then and try to show me how far in the wrong path I have strayed, and endeavor their best to reclaim me to their fold; but the old proverb says, "a burnt child dreads the fire." I was enticed by their flattering words at the tender age of fifteen years, and fell into the trap they set, through perfect ignorance of their doctrines. Indeed a babe cannot relish strong meat, but must have the sincere milk of the full breast, to thrive and grow until it attains a few years. I was one of the most ignorant in spiritual things that ever lived to be reared in a christian land. I never knew that there was a Christ made like unto sinful man (sin excepted) that was born in Bethlehem and lived here in this world, suffered, bled and died to prepare the way from earth to heaven. I never heard a family prayer around the fireside 'til after I was 14 years old. I was not bro't up by any one save the hand of the Almighty, which I can now look back to and see how tenderly it guarded and shielded my orphan feet. Truly did the dear Lord take me under his gracious guardianship 'when my father and mother forsook me,' and was pleased to lead and instruct me in paths and ways I had not known. My precious mother and three of her children were taken from our home when I was a very small child, not quite three years old. Father broke up housekeeping at the advice of his mother and sister who agreed to take the youngest two; and the other two could stay with them during their vacation. By the charitable loving hands of my dear Aunt, (now resting in the Father's eternal home of peace as we hope and believe) I was trained and cared for, with as much care and love as could be shown for a motherless child, until I was nearly eight years old when my father married again. He was and had been sheriff of his county for several years, all during the war which, of course necessitated his absence from home a great deal. Not until he had been married nearly one year did he take me home to live with his new wife, and I never saw her once during that time which was the first time I had ever seen her. When I was taken away from my precious Aunt's comfortable and pleasant home, within whose walls an angry, unkind word was seldom heard, my feelings were unutterable, and like a whipped child did I weep, when she took me in her lap, telling me to love my new mamma and be a good girl and come back to stay with her a month every summer and winter, then kissed and caressed me good-bye. O, how my heart-strings did break as I turned my face from the dearest spot on earth. I had seen so little of my father that he was almost as entire a stranger as his wife; but with my sister, who was sixteen years old, and my brother, 14 years of age I went to live with my parents. I was a very timid child, very tender hearted and would cry in spite of all efforts to refrain when an unkind word was spoken to me, and was afflicted from my birth, having a deformed foot. For a week I was so sad and lonely and so craved the love and sympathy that my aunt had always shown me. I almost wept myself sick, and for which I was scolded and threatened with punishment. Only six weeks had elapsed from the time we children went there when one morning sister told father he must take her away, she could not and would not live in such continued confusion, and further to let her take me back to my Aunt's, but I was not allowed to go and in a few more weeks my brother also left. Thus I was left alone to bear and endure as best as I could for nearly three years, when father emphatically declared I should not be treated with such cruelty. But he does not know until this day what I suffered at the merciless hands of his wife. So I was taken to my childhood home until I was sent about two hundred miles away to school where I remained four years and during which time I hope the Lord was pleased to reveal himself unto me as my Father and gave me a good hope through grace. The unspeakable joy, glory and love that filled my whole being, when Jesus appeared the end of the law, my righteousness, my Lord, my Redeemer and my everlasting crown of rejoicing was more than a recompense for all the trials I had encountered by the wayside, and was more than an adequate compensation for the losses, crosses and deprivations I had suffered. But Oh what a most miserable, undone, helpless, despised and forsaken wretch I had felt myself to be, how desolate, sad and friendless when I was sent off from every near and dear earthly friend and the pangs and anguish of a convicted soul almost bereft me of reason. Oh my brother, language nor tongue can express what my heart suffered during that time until the pitiful, compassionate Father was pleased to take me under his fostering care and speak peace through the blood of his dear Son to my poor troubled soul, and fondly pressed me to his bosom of infinite love. When I came home from school I went to live with father and his wife, but did not stay long. It had been seven years since I had spent a single night with my father, and never had, since my recollection spent more than three years with him. So you see how utterly in the hands of the Lord I was—how entirely deprived of the careful training nurture and instruction of kind parents, and the sacred influence, comforts and pleasures of a godly home where love and kindness ought to dwell. Yet I have been shown the good these afflictions and deprivations worked for me. Being cast so early upon my own judgment and dependence I was made to feel the need of superhuman strength, was taught my own insufficiency and helplessness, and my desires and longings were drawn out towards God. So I knew nothing of the God-head dwelling bodily in the Son, nor of the Holy Spirit, nothing of the triune God. My Aunt, though not a member of any church endeavored to bring her children up in the fear of the Lord and would tell us to try to please him, tell the truth and do right, fear Him as the Judge, who would one day call every one to account for the deeds done in the body. After leaving her I never heard anything more about the Lord, until I went to school. There they taught Arminianism, which I thought bible doctrine, but, after uniting with them, I soon found their preaching was different from my experience. I had not so learned Christ as he was held up in their pulpits. To me he appeared as a complete Savior, extending mercy, when justice seemed to demand death and eternal banishment from God. I talked with their pastor on the subject, and told him I was deceived—take my name off, for if salvation came as a reward for good works, I have not merited such great holiness and grace. He told me I was not deceived, but had taken up some queer ideas, that extended among a certain class of superstitious, fanatical people, card Hard Shells. I was perfectly astounded at such a title, as well as at their superstitious notions, he said I had imbibed, and was really ignorant of their meaning. However I could not feel that all was well, so great was the aching void, yearning and longing of heart and soul for something not within my reach or knowledge to determine. I remained with them (but never communed at their table) for two years and a half. After I had been home a few weeks I decided to go hear the Old Baptists whos' doctrine I knew nothing about, and had heard them preach only a few times while with my Aunt. I knew they were unpopular and thought but little of by the world and other denominations. So I went, more out of curiosity than anything else. Their Pastor was a very ignorant man, but when he took his text, "And because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts crying, Abba, Father," an indescribable feeling came over me and I wept like a child and felt like it was the first time I had heard a gospel sermon and prayer rendered in scriptural manner. I was in deep trouble until next meeting, when I was forced to go and fall at their feet and confess my love for them, and ask of them a home to rest my weary soul; for like the blessed Master, I had not a place to lay my head in this great beautiful world.

They gave me a hearty welcome to their fellowship, and my peace and rest were delightful indeed for a few weeks. Since then Satan, the flesh and the world have kept up a continued warfare. I have fallen far short of my duty in everything not serving the Lord as I ought; but while I have never felt worthy, I have never regretted joining the church. Their members have always treated me with more kindness and consideration than I deserve. But the Lord is the giver of all mercies and to him belongs all the praise. My dear brother I have written altogether different from what I had intended and have not finished the subject, but must not intrude further on your time with such imperfect thoughts. If you could only know through what floods and flames of sorrow and trials my path has been, and daily what I have to contend with; how I have been oppressed, defrauded out of my natural rights, by those who owed me money that was accumulated by the laborious years of toiling of my precious husband, who have taken advantage of my helplessness to strip myself and child of every earthly support, and how sad, lonely, destitute, poor and needy I am, you would not wonder at my writings being so barren and disconnected. On account of my weakness it is almost impossible for me to do any work except mending my little boys clothes. But the Lord will provide, he will open the hearts of his people to minister to my necessities. 'Tis quite humiliating to one's feelings to be so circumstanced as to become an object of charity; but "the Lord gives and the Lord takes away, and blessed be his Holy name." I do hope, if the Lord wills, to meet you face to face. Pray for me dear brother. Yours in sorrow, but sweet hope,

RUTH TAYLOR.

Old Sparta, N. C.

I think in the closing remarks of my article written upon this subject a few days past, I said that my observations in traveling among the churches are that peace, love, activity, spiritual prosperity and oneness and soundness in religious sentiment, are much in consequence of the active labours of a sound and truly called ministry. And now I would state that on the other hand, that confusions, animosities, hatred, backbitings, lifelessness, carelessness, lukewarmness, adversity, heresies and division are much in consequence of the labors of an unfaithful and unsound ministry. An unsound ministry is like an unsound tooth, they can't stand exposure. An unsound tooth will cause any one to jump and flounce when exposed to the air or anything else not agreeable to its nature. So with an unsound preacher, if he comes in contact with anything that is not agreeable to his corrupt nature, his corruption will be aroused like the affected tooth when exposed.

I would to God that the time would speedily come that Zion be delivered from corrupt ministers, and that she be given only those "that are even shorn, which came up from the washing," shorn of all self-dependence, having passed through the stripping room and are stripped of every thing that is repugnant to the precious qualities of a God-qualified minister. Then God's called and qualified ministers are like a flock of sheep; the more a sheep is chastised by his master the humbler and more obedient he is. So it is with a true minister. The ministers of Jesus are like a flock of sheep, having one shepherd, even Jesus; and they both in preaching and example come up from the washing of regeneration, i e, they give evidence that they have been washed in the blood of the Lamb, and in their preaching, the blood of Jesus is their theme in salvation and the only means whereby poor sinners can be saved. They (the called preachers) are not a barren people, but are fruitful in good works, and not only fruitful in good works, are endowed with a fruitful mind, and every truly called minister bears these twins; i e, fruitfulness in mind and fruitful in good works, and I sometimes tell my congregations that these are the evidences of a called preacher with me; that is that the preacher both preaches the gospel, and talks and walks the gospel. What a beauty we behold in these gospel twins! I know of nothing more manifestly glorious in the church of the living God.

It seems right here that volumes might be written, but I shall have to pass on by saying; "By this ye shall know them;" i e, if they bear these twin gospel works, or fruits of the Spirit, for none of them is barren. The speech of the church is comely to Jesus, because it is praise to his great and Holy name. There is no speech more becoming and agreeable to the ear of the poor little saint than that of the heavenly language. Oh! how melodious it is to my poor soul, to hear the voice of the bride, it is so fit and becoming to every christian.

We should always try to speak the Canaan language, i e, let our conversation be in heaven, and yea, yea and amen. So we see that the speech of the bride, the Lamb's wife, is no uncertain language. It is not the speech of arminians, but a certain speech, giving God all the glory; and is perfectly adorned with divine glory and heavenly radiance, which makes it the most handsome speech or language under heaven; it's glory to God in the highest.

There is no speech in heaven nor earth that is more graceful and beautiful than that of the Spiritual Bride of Christ, for the praise of God is the very fragrance of heaven, which is deposited in the heart of every saint in regeneration. Then when we think how comely the service of God is in the sight of Jesus our great high Priest, we ought to take great courage and lay aside every weight and sin which besets us, and with the greatest of patience and love, remember with heavenly delight the race

Jesus hath set before us, ever looking unto him for strength, wisdom and guidance. "Thy neck is like the Tower of David," for strength and in purpose. The Tower of David was noted for its strength, and David had a purpose in building this strong fortification, and that purpose was in order for defence against the enemy. This tower of David was not only strong in structure but was powerfully fortified with a strong armory, and with a thousand shields of a thousand mighty men for valor in war. Then Jesus says that the neck of his bride is like this tower of David, for power and defense there is nothing like it. There is nothing so strong as the love of God; it is stronger than death, the most powerful monster of the lower regions. The love of God is the power of God shed abroad in our hearts. Then we are kept by this power of God and cannot be separated from it, neither by tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword, or death, or life, or principalities, or powers, or things present, or things to come, or heights, or depths or any other creature. Then there is nothing stronger than the love of God, for God is love. Then it is God himself working in his children. Oh! what an elevation, when we can mount upon the strong tower of God's love and soar away on the eagle wings of faith, and mount up far away from the world of sorrow, and leave its vain and transitory things behind, and let our minds be absorbed in sweet meditations upon the riches and glory of God's divine grace, and while thus carried away in those heavenly contemplations, we can but smile at Satan's rage, and face a frowning world! Oh! what ecstasy fills our souls when viewing those rapturous scenes of immortal glory, just over the river death.

When our minds are exercised by the love and life of Jesus, we view the everlasting love of God as the citadel of everlasting security, and an impenetrable fortress of salvation. For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her. Zech. 2:5. God's people have ever been encircled by this wall of God's love in his infinite mind and purpose, and now in time manifests to them their security in Jesus, by divine revelation, and furthermore we find that all our weapons of warfare are not carnal, but spiritual and hang on the love of God. The tower of our salvation, and all our protection or shields of salvation hang or are hinged on that neck of love. Then God's children do not war in ambition or through enmity, but in humility, long-suffering and meekness and through love; and all their weapons are weapons of love. And they never go to war in their own strength, for they trust not in their friends, neither do they have any confidence in a guide. But their only trust is in Jesus their great head, and law-giver; and their only confidence is in God.

The inner man of the christian has experienced "that cursed is he that trusteth in man or maketh flesh his arm." Therefore have no confidence in man.

I have only hinted at the great amount of spiritual matter contained in this subject, but hope it will be satisfactory with sister Mayberry. I have written what I have amid company, etc, and ask that the mantle of charity be extended.

I am as ever yours in the gospel of Jesus.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I have a letter from sister Pat-tie Lowry, and she said if I wished to I could send it to you for publication. I will do so; if you think proper you can publish it. It is a comfort to me. She is a loving sister. My dear brother, the subject that you wrote on of Saul and David was so rich; it was so soul cheering and comforting to me, indeed our heavenly Father gave you that subject to write on to comfort and to strengthen His little ones so they can walk and not faint, run and not be weary. The LANDMARK comes to me heavy laden with gospel truths. Every column is precious to my soul. May the good Lord spare you to live long to comfort and to strengthen his little ones is my sincere wish. I am your sister I hope, if saved saved through grace and grace alone.

MISS MAGGIE A. STATON, MY BE-LOVED SISTER IN THE LORD:—Your epistle of love and sweet fellowship was recieved last week. How it cheered my poor sinful heart to know that I was remembered by such a dear sister, one who I esteem so much my superior in the knowledge and goodness of God. Surely if I am one of the Lord's little ones the very least of all, like Peter if I follow the Lord it is afar off.
How wretched I feel to know that I have neglected you so long. You asked me in your letter October the 30th, to write my experience for publication. It is so small and so much below your expectation, was why I did not do it. I always feel a delicacy in telling my hope, fearing I am deceived and will deceive others. My reason for a hope is so little I can scarcely claim it to be one, yet I would not take the world for it. I have been raised by Primitive Baptist parents and I believe them to be Baptists in deed and in truth. My father has long ago tried the realities of another world. My mother is still living. When I was very small I would try to do the best I could until I would get tired, then I would think I will do just as I please, while I am here in the world, let what come will after I die, for at such times I would think there was no hope for me, for I could not help sinning if I enjoyed myself any. But as I grew older I thought I was not such a sinner, and when old enough I would quit many things I did that I thought were no sin, only to those who professed religion. I went on thinking I could get religion at my own will, until '87, when it pleased the Lord in his infinite mercy to show me how far I was from the pathway of righteousness, that I had no power to come to him. I tried but all efforts were vain; ten thousand talents in debt and not one farthing to pay, all unboly, all unclean, nothing but sin. The more I tried to do good, the more I felt my weakness and imperfection, until it seemed like I was almost crushed beneath the burden of guilt and sin, and could only plead for mercy, forgetting that it was written that Christ came to save sinners, of whom I felt to be the chief. But at His own appointed time he relieved me of my burden of sin, spoke peace to my weary soul and all was calm within. I must confess that I never before saw any beauty in Primitive Baptists, but liked other denominations better because I believed them to be more elevated, and preached salvation free to all. But now I loved those old Baptists, at every opportunity I would listen attentively to them tell of their hopes and fears, to see if their's would accord with mine. Oh, how sweet was their conversation, it was a new life. I never remembered hearing them talk like that before, but I thought I would live content where I was. I was so young I feared they would not have any confidence in me, fearing I was deceived and would deceive them, and bring a reproach upon the cause, be a stumbling stone. I some times fear I am now. In March '89 my impression to the Baptist became such a burden I felt I could not live where I was. I felt like David, I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness, would rather suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. I prayed to the Lord if it was my duty to make it plain to me, and remove my doubts and fears, and I believe my petition was answered, for it was the first time I was ever given strength. On April the 18th I went to the church, was received and baptized by Eld. John R. Rowe, he being the day following on a visit to the church. He is to me a dear brother and father in Israel. If the Lord will, may he live long and be given grace to comfort the weak and trembling ones. That was one of the happiest days of my life. I sincerely believed I would never doubt again. But oh, how different; well might the great apostle say, Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death. If saved a sinner saved by grace. But since Christ is our Leader what have we to fear. Like David of old, though we walk through the valley and shadow of death, we shall fear no evil. Oh, what a happy realization to know that we are guided by an unerring hand. My dear sister, may you be given grace to sustain you in all your troubles, trials and afflictions, knowing that these afflictions are but light to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us, and are but working out a far more and exceeding weight of our eternal glory. Write soon and come to see us when you can. Eld. Chas. Meades expresses a great desire to see you. He is a dear brother and an able minister. I feel grateful to the Lord that we are so blessed to assemble so often in heavenly places in Christ, made heavenly by his presence.

Lovingly your sister,
PATTIE LOWRY.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD,—My mind has been impressed for some time to write to you and by your permission to the readers of your valuable paper, the LANDMARK; and as a beginning I will ask a question, or rather a double question, which is this. What did God send his Son into the world to do, and what did his Son, Jesus Christ, come into the world to do? I will if the Lord will enable me, answer these questions. When the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we (the church) might receive the adoptions of sons. And because ye (the church) are sons, God sends forth His spirit into their hearts, crying Abba, Father. And Jesus, who is the Son of God, came into the world to save His people from their sins. Thus Jesus, the Son of God, has redeemed them (the church, the bride, the lamb's wife,) and saved them (the church) from their sins, so we (the church) are not under the law of sin but under grace. And God sent his Son into the world, He also sent the gospel, and when Jesus came into the world, he not only came to save his people from their sins, but came to bring the gospel, and to preach the gospel. And the gospel has for its immediate object the glorification with Jesus Christ of elect sinners of Adam's ruined race. That this is true is evident from the testimony of the scripture and the success of the gospel in the world. The scriptures declare that this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations—not to save all nations, but for a witness unto all nations. This form of words harmonizes precisely with the terms of the command given in Matthew 28 chapter, 19th and 20th verses: Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world, amen, and with the uniform tenor of the word of God concerning what the Son came into the world to do, which was the salvation of the church, the chosen bride of Christ. And it is furthermore said of Christ, that he should be a sign to be spoken against, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed. Such was the Son, Jesus Christ the author, substance and finisher of the gospel; and in view of the identity of the church which Christ redeemed from under the law, and saved from their sins, which is with Christ in nature, life and destiny, such also will be the gospel and the people who receive it. The gospel is a warning unto men showing the inevitable consequence of transgression of the law under which they stand to God, and in accordance with which the gospel proceeds. By holding forth the purity of the law it brings to view the foulness of the human heart, and by establishing the claims of the law it cuts up by the roots the vain hopes of merely moral and unregenerated men. The gospel is a savor of life unto the believer, and a savor of death unto the unbeliever; not as condemning natural man for not performing spiritual works, but as setting forth at the same time the righteous condemnation of every transgressor, that is not redeemed by Christ, and the certain salvation of every one that Christ redeemed from under the law for Jesus saved them from their sins. The same cloud stood between the Israelites and the Egyptians, and it was a cloud and darkness to the Egyptians, but it gave light by night to the Israelites; so one came not near the other all the night. To the Egyptians it was the seal of destruction; to the Israelites it was the seal of deliverance and salvation. The gospel is preached for obedience to the faith among all nations for his (Christ's) name; it is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth, the Jew first and also to the Greek. It also reveals from heaven the wrath of God against all ungodliness, and not only this, but unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness. See Romans 1:16-18. The Apostle Paul preached Christ crucified unto all men; but note the different consequences, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and to the Greeks foolishness; but unto them that are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. The gospel preached to some is the glad tidings of a coming Savior; to others it is the announcement of a coming Judge. These are some of the representations from holy scriptures of the different results attending the preaching of the gospel. In every instance, those who receive it are the chosen people of God, redeemed from under the law, and saved from their sins, and enabled by the spirit of grace to appropriate its blessings through the gift of faith; and these are no other than the church of God, the bride, the Lamb's wife. In exact harmony with these scriptural statements has been the history of the gospel. The agencies of the gospel are of God's own appointment. This is evident from the fallen state of man. Their death in trespasses and sins involves their ignorance of God and of themselves, and consequently of their need of a Saviour, and the method of acceptance with God. But what are the agencies which God has appointed for the salvation of his church. Briefly they are these: The atonement of Christ in redeeming them from under the law, and sanctification of the Spirit of Christ in saving his people from their sins. By the former God does justify the ungodly; by the latter guilty sinners become his holy sons and daughters. The Son of God having accomplished the eternal redemption of all his people by the sacrifice of himself, ascending to heaven to appear as their intercessor in the presence of God. When departing he said, Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. The Holy Spirit has been preparing men unto salvation even from the days of Abel, and at times qualifying others to predict the events that were sure to come to pass; for prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and now that the Lord God might dwell among men, Jesus having ascended into Heaven sent down the Holy Ghost to endue them he had redeemed from under the law, and had saved from their sins with the capacity and power to believe and obey. The Holy Ghost was displayed at Pentecost and other places in which Peter and other apostles preached Christ to the people, both Jews and Gentiles. It was he who gave Stephen wisdom and power to withstand the Jews, and to seal his testimony with his blood. It was he who forbade Paul to preach the gospel in Asia and encouraged him to preach in Corinth, with the assurance that he had much people in that city. It is he who continues the gift of preaching to this day and gives the gift of hearing also, in all cases so ordering his word that the glory of all is acknowledged to be his, see Ephesians 4:11-13. Of course it was the truth which these preachers of the Lord proclaimed—grace, free, reigning through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord. Nothing else is gospel, however beautiful it may seem to the multitude, or however ably it may be presented. Had the apostles preached anything else but reigning grace, they would have escaped persecution; and what is of far more consequence they would have been faithless to their trust, for by the truth alone are men made free, by grace alone shall they be saved, and that not of themselves it is the gift of God, not of works lest any should boast. Your brother in Christ, I hope,

GOOD MEETINGS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have finished my appointments in the Mill Branch Association and had a delightful time among the brethren with some additions to the churches. Two were added to the church at Simpson's Creek, one at Pleasant Hill, one at Bethel and two at Mill Branch. Of the six two came from the Missionary Baptists.

Mill Branch is a large interesting body of Saints and numbers now about ninety six members I believe. The Lord willing I will meet all my appointments as published in the LANDMARK.

Truly and fraternally yours,
J. H. PURIFOY.

BELOVED BROTHER:—I regret having to send you another little card in return for your most comforting and excellent letter which contained so many clusters of delicious fruit from the Master's heavenly vineyard, and many rare, choice and rich, mellow "apples of gold in pictures of silver," from which I enjoyed an excellent feast; but my physical condition is so much worse, my sufferings so perpetual and intense since the warm, sultry spring days have come, that it is just all I can do to live when as quiet and free from motion as possible. So you will please accept this little token as the very best I can do for the present, and forgive whatever may have appeared to you as either ingratitude or negligence in me. I have been in great spiritual darkness, shut up in spirit, burdened with the trials, sorrows and vexations of this vain life for several months, but I cannot give up to final despair, as long as I can lay hold on the sure promises of God. He has been a stronghold in the day of trouble, and I desire to praise him as long as I live, for all his blessings. I become very weary of pain and sin, long to depart from all things earthly, and be with Christ in that home of perfect peace and rest. With abiding love,

THE EFFECT OF THE SPIRIT.

"If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." So says the inspired Apostle. If that Spirit is in one it will certainly be manifest. Its leadings will always be towards truth, purity, holiness, righteousness; therefore it will be contrary to the inclinations of the flesh, which is the carnal mind and heart, for they are always towards that which is erroneous, impure, unholy and wicked. Whatever the Spirit directs us to do will be a cross to the flesh, but in the doing of it will be a spiritual peace and comfort and joy in the Lord. It is tasting of the sweets of spiritual life. Whenever we follow the directions of the flesh we shall have grief, sorrow, darkness and death, if the Spirit of Christ be in us. If this holy principle is not working within one, all the exhortations, reproofs, promises and threatenings that can be given him will be of no avail. If they have any effect it will only be outward, not from the heart. "If we through the Spirit mortify the deeds of the flesh we shall live."

If one who professes to be a child of God finds himself going on in any ways that are evil, indulging in fleshly inclinations in an unlawful way, contrary to the teachings of the spirit of truth, and feels no check of conscience, no struggling against the evil, no crying unto the Lord for deliverance from the power and dominion of sin, he ought to see that this is an evidence that he has not the Spirit of Christ; for that would never allow one to be quiet and self satisfied in an evil course.

Those who can say "Well, this is the flesh, and I cannot be responsible for these things, for it is all evil; and in me, that is in my flesh there dwells no good thing; and I do not expect salvation because I am good, but, through grace," these do not show that they have been with Jesus, and have learned of him; for he resisted the temptation of the devil to cast himself down: and his Spirit in his children will always cause a struggle to resist the temptations of the devil, and a fight against the evil inclinations of the flesh; and although we shall always feel that our struggles are in vain so far as our own strength is concerned, yet it will bring us as humble applicants to the throne of grace, where we shall find grace to help us in time of need.

A natural man, one who has not the Spirit of Christ, may overcome strong passions and mortify the deeds of the body through pride and vain glory, to gain the esteem of the world, and to exalt himself in his own eyes. In a worldly point of view this is good and laudable. But in this there is no true and undefiled religion, no thought of the Lord, nothing spiritual. The struggles of one who has been made to struggle after righteousness are very different. It is "through the Spirit" that he is desiring to break away from that which is sinful, and to "mortify the deeds of the flesh." It is not as in the sight of men but as in the sight of God, who searches the heart. The efforts of one who is thus moved by the Spirit of Christ are of a very different character from those of the man who has never been quickened by that Spirit. He never succeeds in such a way as to gratify his pride and add to his self esteem. Though the evil habit be broken, and he be restrained from the sinful word or act to which the flesh inclines him, yet it will be in such a way as to humble his pride in the dust, and increase his sense of his sinfulness and depravity. His struggles against the evil will open up the depths of that evil in his heart to such an extent that he can give himself no credit for any lack of acting it out. He will not be able to regard the failure to act out all of that evil as due to any settled principle of his own, but from a gracious interposition of the Lord. When he is tempted to gratify a fleshly propensity and does not do so, it will often appear to him as though it is only because something has interposed to hinder the sinful act from being accomplished, and that he is just as guilty in the sight of God.

But how thankful he is that the Lord has put up a bar to the floods of sin in his corrupt heart, so that it shall not be acted out. And how these stroubles, and painful revelations of his depravity, humble his soul and cause him to cry unto the Lord to come to his help. And when that precious help is experienced what wonders fill the soul. For Jesus appears as the Helper, as having fought the dreadful battle for us; and what we have been passing through has been but to give us a little intimation of what he has borne and done for us—the fellowship of his sufferings, and to teach us that we are weak and helpless in this warfare without him. "Without me ye can do nothing."

His Spirit within us thus brings us to realize the power and victory, and to give all the praise to him.

The living child cannot live in sin. The Spirit of Christ cannot be in any one without being manifest as always opposed to sin.

SILAS H. DURAND.

P. S. I am here again at the pleasant home of brother Gold with my family, on our return from Florida. I wrote a little to the readers of the LANDMARK when we were here in December on our way to that warmer country; now I will say a few words to them concerning the result of our winter's sojourn there. My wife had suffered from a severe attack of acute bronchitis in the early autumn, and although she had partially recovered from that her health was seriously impaired. My impression was that I ought to go with her to Florida for the winter. The church at Southampton, Pa. which I am trying to serve, were of a mind that I should follow that impression, and very kindly not only gave me leave to be absent as long as I thought best, but helped us to go. Being providentially favored otherwise we have been able to remain there through the winter. The unusually cold weather encountered here on our way, and which continued after our arrival there for some time, brought on a very serious illness, by which my wife was prostrated for a couple of weeks under circumstances very inconvenient and uncomfortable. As soon as she was able to move we went to De Land, where we staid 'till the last of March. The result is better than we had dared to hope for. Our children have had whooping-cough and have required attention which has taken more strength than my wife could have given for a good while before we left home, but she has endured well; and we are now all here again in improved health, and I hope with a humble sense of the goodness of the Lord.

During the winter I visited the churches as much as I was able, and have counted it a privilege to meet with them and try to preach to them the unsearchable riches of Christ, and they have manifested gospel fellowship for me and my poor labors, and have, so far as I could judge, received my words gladly.

I hope soon to be again with the brethren and sisters of the church of which I am pastor, who manifest such love and kindness towards me and mine, and in whose service I have experienced many very strong confirming evidences, both in afflictions and in joys, that our relation is of the Lord, and that my service for them is for Christ's sake.

OFTEN TRANSGRESSED.

If your brother wrongs you or hurts your feelings, trespasses against you, what should you do? This is a serious question. What do you generally do in such cases? What do Baptists generally do under similar circumstances. They go and tell some one else about it, perhaps spread it abroad and make severe remarks about it, stirring up bad feelings. Then they bring it in the church and have a trial, get up two parties, divide the church, gender bitter feelings and wound some one or more to death. This is common.

Now what ought you to do if your brother trespass against you? Go to him alone—not telling some one else about it. Go to him and tell him his fault between him and thee alone. Go as a brother, not as an enemy. If he hears you and gives you satisfaction, (for that is just what is meant by hearing you) then you have gained your brother. What a good profit. Then the trouble between you and him ends. You never tell any one else about it afterward. Nobody else knows it. How good that is. I wish I could live with such a people. This is feet washing in spirit, and such could wash feet literally. One of the glories of heaven is there is nothing but love there—no enemy.

Suppose you go to him alone though, and he does not hear you, then take two or three other brethren with you; and if he hears you that ends the trouble, but if he does not hear you then the case is ready to carry to the church, or to establish your innocence and his guilt by these witnesses. Then if he hears the church there this trouble ends, but if he does not hear the church then the church at once is to withdraw fellowship from him. In this case there would be no parties, no division in the church.

A case should not be suffered to come into a church until these steps are taken when the trouble originates from such offenses. If one commits an outrageous act against the whole body then the church are to withdraw in a body from him.

Where are the gifts, helps, governments in the church that keep order, rebuke the unruly, support the weak, as true pillars in the house of God?

If you will examine you will see disorders generally creep in because we do not take good heed to the scripture as we should.

If one is full of love he will not see faults of his brethren, nor will those that love the church lay a stumbling block before others, or do what will wound brethren's feelings.

GOSPEL EXHORTATION.

"I beseech you therefore brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1.

Our dear and aged sister, M. M. Hassell, who has been a Baptist perhaps more than three score years, and who in her fruit bearing old age is abiding in the doctrine of Jesus, requests my view on the above most lovely exhortation of scripture.

The apostle Paul had been enabled, according to the gift bestowed upon him, to set forth most wonderfully the doctrine of God our Saviour in its manifold mystery and then its manifestation in the experience or travail of the child of God, and, interwoven with this foundation and superstructure, he here tenderly presents the motive for working out and making manifest these gracious things in our lives. For all the exhortation is founded on gospel truth, or Christ revealed, and is all addressed to those that have eyes to see and hearts to feel and know the preciousness of these things. There is as much need of exhortation to the people of God to repentance and to good works as there is for anything else, and there is as much of this written in the scriptures as any other one thing, in order that each one may know how to deport himself in the house of God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth.

1st, The rule by which Paul entreats the brethren is the mercies of God. This is no threat, no terror, but the mercies of God are presented as the reason or inducement to good living. So that the entreaties of the gospel preacher are full of persuasion and encouragement to good living on the ground of the covenant mercies and everlasting love of God, and it embraces the infinite variety of his sure mercies. The doctrine of salvation by grace could not be conditioned on penalties or punishments, forfeitures or pains, nor could the misconduct of the recipients of this grace be such as to render that grace ineffectual, or to be bestowed in vain. Because the grace of God brings salvation, and begins the good work, therefore it is sufficient to preserve its subjects unto final deliverance. All the exhortations therefore of the gospel preacher are founded on grace or mercy, and hence the rule and limit of these exhortations is the mercies of God.

2nd, The nature of the service the brethren are entreated to perform is of the most excellent character. I beseech you, writes Paul, that you present your bodies. It is not that you control or manage other people, or rule them, or present them, but that you present your own bodies. Let each man present his own body. This is the best rule that could be observed. It is the nature of one man to dictate to another what he should do, but the gospel says thou art the man, I am the man, myself is the one for me to watch, bring my own body under, mortify my own members which are on the earth.

(a) The manner of this service is to be noted. Present your bodies a sacrifice. Under the law the people brought animals, such as sheep, to be sacrificed on Jewish altars; but in the gospel the child of God is to present his own body as a sacrifice.

(b) It is a living sacrifice. Under the Jewish law when one made an offering of a lamb or other sacrifice it was slain, or a dead sacrifice; but the child of God is to present his body a living sacrifice, that is one that is active, willing, cheerful, joyful, obedient and pure. Whatever is sacrificed to God is offered to him in atonement for sin, or in thanksgiving and praise, and is devoted to God, or belongs to him, and is separate from every thing else. Hence the sacrifice is to be holy, acceptable unto God which is the true desire of every one born of God, and that has felt this to be his aim though he counts not himself able to do so good a thing. Our offering could never atone for sin. Christ did that. Our offering is in praise to God for what he has done for us.

3rd, The reward is full of joy and happiness. It is to prove that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. The more humbly and truly we serve God the more we know and enjoy of his blessed presence. As we are transformed by or according to that renewing in our mind, which is already wrought in us by the Spirit of God, so the fruit of that gracious work is to illustrate in our non-conformity to this world, and in our conformity to the heavenly one, even Jesus, according to the glorious transformation we have felt in our mind. As we now love heavenly things let us show it in our bodies, or our conduct and conversation. Thus we shall prove to our own comfort what a good and acceptable, and perfect will God has revealed in us through Christ Jesus. Thus we prove to our own comfort—have the witness in ourselves—that God is love. If any man does the will of God he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or not. What a great thing to have the proof in ourselves of God's truth and love to us.

Paul here beseeches us to do these things, not only to glorify God, but for our own comfort, happiness, peace, and joy.

P. D. G.

NO EXCUSE:

"Behold, ye trust in lying words that cannot profit.

"Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not;

"And come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations?"

"Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the Lord." Jer. 7:8—11.

If any man's notion of predestination justifies any of his wickedness it is only a theory, and is false. The Jews in the days of Jeremiah held that they were delivered to do—bound to do—all the lying, stealing, rebellion, murdering &c they practiced—that the God of heaven prompted them, or that, after they had done these things which the word of God condemns, they would come into his temple and stand before God in the house which was called by his name and say, we are delivered to do all these abominations. I scarcely know of greater blasphemy and presumption. God's word from beginning to end condemns sin and punishes transgression. It is the nature of man to hunt up an excuse for his sins and say, I was bound to do as I did, I could not help it, and blame providence. But when one sees the truth he confesses, I indeed suffer justly, for I receive the due reward of my deeds, I deserve this. Such souls beg for mercy and obtain it too.

One's theories can never measure up to divine truth, nor judge the way of God. He is above. When one is shown his own depravity his mouth is closed against excuses for transgression. The predestination of God provides the remedy for sin, and works its destruction instead of causing it. The Son of man (Jesus) is manifested to destroy the works of the devil.

P. D. G.

WORSE THAN CHILD'S PLAY.

A division gets up in a church because the flesh strives for the mastery. Two parties are formed. Neither will submit to the other. One hurls the other out. The party turned out, instead of meekly submitting or waiting for the Lord to deliver, get up an opposition meeting, and get some other church in sympathy with them to recognize them as the true church. Here is a shameful and chronic discord for life between brethren. If you love the cause of truth better than you love the mastery you will endure this, and do nothing to widen the breach or make a bad matter worse.

Go back to the church of your first love, confess your fault, pray the Lord for meekness and seek a restoration to your former joys. But you say, they have wronged you. Then go and pray for them, and trust in the Lord to guide and save you all. It is a cross to go and humble yourself before a people that you feel have wronged you. But remember you have left your first love. Repent and do the first works yourself. We are all sinners. Those that lament and confess it most are the most blest.

Baptists never make anything by strife and quarreling among themselves. Those that are humbled most are the most favored.

When you take vengeance in your own hand, and set up independent of your brethren you cause a lasting feud, and you will never again be blessed, for the Lord hates those that sow discord among brethren. But blessed are the peace-makers.

P. D. G.

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

What is the scriptural authority for eternal punishment? For we must depend alone on scripture to decide this question, as we could not otherwise know anything about this matter, since it depends upon the knowledge of the future, and that of sufficient duration, to demonstrate this subject.

determine this matter he would deny and ridicule it as unjust, on the principle that any dishonest man convicted of a crime will plead that his punishment is too great—that he is not guilty—and if he were guilty it is not much offence, and that the punishment is too heavy for the crime. This was the plea of Cain in the olden time. It is common to hear men who have never seen and felt that they are sinners protesting against the Justice of eternal punishment. So that we cannot take their evidence. It is not worth anything. Nor would they receive the testimony of men who have felt their vileness, and owned the justice of God in their condemnation.

What do the scriptures say of this matter? They declare there is a hell—a bottomless pit—a place of everlasting punishment—where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched—is unquenchable. Such expressions prove that there is a place of everlasting punishment, and that the wicked are to be turned into hell. Daniel declares that some shall awake to shame and everlasting contempt, Dan. 12: 2. Jesus says of the wicked, And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal: Matt. 25; 46. Here the word everlasting is as fully descriptive of duration as the word eternal, so that while the happiness of the righteous continues, the punishment of the wicked will also continue; for the one is as everlasting as the other.

In the last chapter of the last book of inspiration it is declared that the characters of both righteous and wicked are unalterably fixed: Rev. 22: 11.

Let not false, flattering preachers beguile you into the delusion of no eternal punishment for those who die in love with sin. How few there are that realize the enormity of sin, or the holiness of God.

OBITUARIES.

MRS. ANNIE UZZELL.

It is acknowledged by all christians that an all-wise Supreme Ruler, who doeth all things well, is above all, and he giveth and taketh away according to his pleasure. It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst the old familiar face and christian woman, the dutiful and affectionate wife of Mr. John M. Uzzell, Mrs. Annie Uzzell, in the 79th year of her life. She had been a consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church for twenty five years, and was an honor and credit to the Church as well as to her numerous relatives and friends. She leaves a husband, worn out with age, over 80 years old, three loving children, and several grandchildren to mourn the loss of so good and faithful a friend of them all. She lived a christian life always, and was true to the end, and always put her trust in God, and realized that he was God, and her only Savior. She died happy, and seemed to be at rest, yes, perfectly at rest, in her last hour of sickness.

NANNIE E. HOWARD.

Died, at her home in Edgecombe County, N. C., April 1st, 1893, Mrs. Nannie E. Howard. The deceased was born in Martin County, N. C., September 2d, 1840, and was the daughter of Mr. James Saulsbury, and was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Howard, December 27th, 1860, and there were born to them seven children, six of whom survive her—one having died some time ago. The writer has known the deceased from his boyhood, having boarded at her father's and attended school there, and therefore is prepared to know something, personally, about her. She was what we may term a good woman, and has for a long time loved the Primitive Baptists and the precious doctrine believed and preached by them; and we feel assured had a precious hope beyond the grave; but from a felt sense of her own unworthiness she never made an open profession of religion. But we are confident that she died in the Lord, and her works do follow her, and she now enjoys, in its fullness, that which she hoped for. May her bereaved husband and devoted children, together with the brothers and sisters she has left behind, have grace and strength to uphold them; and may they be consoled by the thought that she but died to live. M. T. LAWRENCE.

ANNIE CASTINE PURVIS.

The sickle of death has again been thrust in and has cut down as its victim one to whom we might have expected a longer lease of life; but surely it is no respecter of persons. Mrs. Annie Castine Purvis, wife of Mr. John A. Purvis, died January 21st, 1893. She was the beloved daughter of our dear brother Henry J. Sherrod, and was married to Mr. John A. Purvis by the writer, April 18, 1888. She was born December 28, 1864. I knew her when a little girl, and have been intimately acquainted with her ever since, and always esteemed her highly, for she was possessed of a lovely disposition. She was first taken with a rising on her face, and then with typhoid pneumonia, and suffered a great deal before she was released by death. I did not see her in her sickness, but am informed that she had no hope of getting well from the first. She seemed to lose sight of everything—even her little babe, and did not notice it at all. But while suffering as she did, the arms of God's precious mercy were thrown around her, and he gave her evidence which she has left behind to give us strong reason to believe that her sufferings are over, and she is now with Jesus. She was to her parents a dutiful child, to her husband a kind and loving wife, and being his second wife, was to those motherless children that became her charges, a kind and affectionate step-mother; and to her neighbors she was kind, hospitable and charitable. She left of her own children three little ones. How sad; how hard to bear, and what a severe stroke is such an one, especially to the husband. No one can enter fully into the feeling but by the experience of it. Also it is a heavy blow to our dear brother, her father, in his declining age. May the upholding, strengthening and reconciling power of God's precious grace be felt and realized by husband and father, brothers and sisters and all concerned, and when they think of her, may they be comforted with the hope that she is now where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

RUFUS H. WATSON.

Died, August 17th, 1892, in Wake County, N. C., Rufus H. Watson, of typhoid fever, making his stay on earth twenty one years and eleven months, lacking one day. He had a bright hope in Christ two years before he died, but did not join the church, which he regretted very much, and he said during his sickness that that was the way with people: when they are well they neglect to do what they wish they had done when they get sick; and his desire was for Elder John R. Roberts to baptize him. He lived a sober and quiet life and was loved by all who knew him. He was never heard to murmur about his sickness, never said he wanted to get well, and said a few days before he died not to tell him of these earthly things. He wanted to sing praises of Jesus forevermore, which I do believe he is doing. He sang "What a friend we have in Jesus," and "Jerusalem, my happy home," and a few minutes before he died, he sang a part of "Jesus lover of my soul," and prayed the sweetest prayer I ever heard, and told his mother, the evening before he died, that he was going home the next evening at 5 o'clock; but he did not go until just before 7 o'clock; and he died like the going down of the sun in a fair evening, and he crossed over the river. All was done for him that a good, kind doctor, and father, mother, brothers and sisters, and kind friends could do; but the Lord called him and he must go. He was a good and dutiful son, and a kind and loving brother. The home circle is broken, and the sweet face we loved is gone, and no one can take his place. He told us that grandmother had come to carry him home, and that they were going across the river. He leaves a father, and mother, two brothers and five sisters, and a host of friends to mourn his loss. Rest on, dear Rufus, until the resurrection morn, and sleep the dearest sleep where none e'er wake to weep. Write to us by your loving sister, MAGGIE R. WATSON.

Eagle Rock, N. C.

ELDER J. N. BELL.

The subject of this notice was born in Pittsylvania County, Va., about the year 1820, and died at his home in Henry County, Va., on the 11th day of July 1892. He had been afflicted a long time with kidney trouble, and in the winter of 1892 was prostrated with la grippe, from which he partially recovered and went about some. He attended his church meeting at Sugartree, on Saturday in April, but was not able, physically, to preach; and went home, to our regret, never to meet us again at Sugartree, of which church he was pastor, and had been for a long time. He was confined to his bed a short time before death. With all the attention that could be given by an able physician and the kindness of a devoted wife and kind friends, he breathed his last on the day mentioned above, at the age of seventy-two, as we suppose. His parents dying when he was quite young, he necessarily had to provide for his living, which he did in a manly way, working and living with other people, until he had accumulated sufficient wealth to buy a farm, and then married. Two children were born unto them—a son and a daughter—and it has pleased the Lord long since to take his wife and daughter home to his care; and thinking it not good for a man to be alone, he married again. He leaves a widow and son, together with relatives and many friends to mourn their loss. Brother Bell was a good man in his neighborhood, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. As an honest, upright, and worthy citizen, no doubt he will be greatly missed. He was pleasant company for young and old. His gift and calling was a noted one, notwithstanding his literary education was cut short to that degree that he had to spell the words in the Bible in order to read, when he first commenced to preach; but his knowledge and understanding of the scriptures proved that he had been taught in the school of Christ. He had been a preacher nearly fifty years, and he spent a good part of that time in traveling and preaching in the counties of Henry, Franklin and Pittsylvania, and the adjoining counties in North Carolina, though not making any long-continued tours; and believing that it was by the sweat of the brow that he should eat bread, he labored with his own hands for the sustenance of the outer man, and was a good provider for his family, and like our Savior, he was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, but he bore it all with that christian fortitude that belongs to the saints of God. As a pastor, he was ever faithful to the several churches of which he had the care during his life, always attending his church meetings when the weather and his health would admit; always feeding his flock with the divine food which the child of God so much needs. It is a sad feeling to the unworthy writer of this sketch to even pass by Sugartree where I have so often heard his voice, which was so soul-cheering to the poor, hungry soul; and to think it will never be heard again—it is sad, indeed. But since it is the will of the Father, we must submit, and say Oh, Father of heaven and earth! not ours, but thy will, Oh Lord, be done. He talked frequently about dying, and said he was willing to go at the Lord's time, and passed over the river as one going asleep in Jesus, in a blessed hope of immortality. That being the case, brace up! take courage! Dear, bereaved friends, submit to the will of him who doeth all things well; for he works, and none can hinder, and shuts, and none open, and may you all be prepared to meet the loved one who has gone before, in my prayer.

J. J. BECK,

WILLIAM UNDERWOOD.

Died, March 18th, 1892, aged 44 years, 2 months and 18 days, William Underwood. He was married to Martha A. Lewis in 1859. He leaves a wife and three children and a great many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. He was not a member of any church, but he delighted in going to the Primitive Baptist church to hear preaching, and took pleasure in their company. He was sick two weeks, and often asked Mamma why she could not go with him home. He would often say that he was going home. Oh, if I could have gone with him, how glad I would have been! I believe that he is now at rest in heaven with Jesus, where pain and sorrow are no more. It seems to me that if I could see him just once more how glad I would be. But our loss is his eternal gain, blessed be the Lord's name! He was as good a man as there ever was. He was a good father and husband, and a good neighbor, and was liked by every one; and when he died, he seemed as one resting in sleep.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.

Written by his daughter,
ALICE UNDERWOOD.

JOHN THOMPSON.

By request of sister Fereby Thompson, I send the obituary of her father, John Thompson, who was born October 26th, 1803, and died January 1st, 1890, making his stay on the earth 86 years, 2 months and 3 days. Brother Thompson joined the Free Wills, and lived with them a while—I don't know how long—and then a while with the Missionaries, and yet found no home until the Lord was pleased to open his blinded eyes and give him a home with the people of God, at Beaver Dam, Lenoir County, N. C. Brother Thompson united with the church at Beaver Dam on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January, 1855, and was baptized on the fourth Sunday in February, by Elder Joseph Croom. Brother Thompson was a faithful soldier all through his pilgrimage here below. He had good hope, and lived so as to prove his faith by his works. He was always ready to give a reason for his hope. He loved to be with the people of God, and hear them speak of his kingdom and talk of his power. Brother Thompson was well beliked by all who knew him. His faith was strong and sure. He walked 75 miles five times in seven years to attend his quarterly meetings. He was a poor man naturally, but rich in faith. He was content with what he had, and was submissive to the Lord's will in all things. I heard him say that he was just as rich as he wished to be. He did not appear to fear death in the least. We believe he is now resting in the arms of a blessed redeemer. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss. They are all Baptists. They mourn not as those that have no hope, for while it is their loss, it is his eternal gain. We pray the Almighty to be a husband and father to the bereaved family, and at last take them to himself in glory.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its chords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

BIRTH-DAY PRESENT TO MY DEAR MOTHER.

Forty years ago to-day I was born in Greene County, N. C. I was raised up in the same house by kind Baptist parents; but I was a rude bad child, the worst by far of the five children whom the Lord gave to you my mother.

At the age of seven years I trust that the Lord opened my eyes to some extent to see my wretched sinfulness. This gave me much trouble and sorrow for a few days, but gradually left me to return occasionally until I was eleven, then it returned never to leave me only at very short intervals, generally when I was on the ball room floor or at the card table and as soon as my merriment was over my troubles were double. In all these things I disobeyed you my dear mother, and did not think of your trouble at heart caused by my sinful practice, neither did I remember my dear father who had fallen asleep in Jesus. These sins I trust are forgiven, but the old scars remain on my mind until this day.

In the month of June 1873 I trust that the Lord was revealed to me as one who was able to save so vile a sinner as I. The sorrows of that morning I shall never forget nor ever tell. All hope was gone and every thing in which I had ever trusted had come to naught. I felt left alone, standing still in a miserable condition and no way to escape. The sorrow of my soul I shall not attempt to describe when I could not pray nor cry. Just at this time a messenger of peace and rest came to me and gave me a song of praise and began to sing, "Amazing grace how sweet the sound" &c, and my heart was filled with joy and mine eyes with tears, while my whole frame gave vent to its feelings and my tongue spake praises to my blessed Jesus. Myself and my sins were all forgotten and nothing but the praise of God found any place in my heart. This was the beginning of days with me, the day in which I was born in the heavenly Jerusalem. I verily thought my troubles were over and that I should not sin any more. Oh the hatred I had for sin.

This blessed frame of mind lasted one week and one day. Those blessed days could not be disturbed, not even by death, for death visited our house and took dear step-father away, we were all sorely troubled and filled with sorrow, but not a cloud passed over my beautiful horizon to disturb the sweet rest of my soul until the next Wednesday, then all of a sudden it came, it was black, it threatened me with destruction and I cried because I was a poor deceived mortal, just as vile a sinner as ever, a heart full of iniquity and a great cloud of troubles filled my heart and I cried unto the Lord to take away this deception from me and let me feel my sins again as I had once felt them, but they were gone and I could not find them. I trust that they were and are yet in Moses' grave and no man knoweth where it is. That day the Lord delivered me again from my sorrow by a beautiful vision in which I saw Jesus hanging on the cross, a thief on each side, one of them pleaded for mercy, the other railed on Him with angry countenance. I pointed to the pleading thief and said "which on the cross in the hour of His death He had power to forgive that thief, and I am as great a sinner as he and the Lord has the same power now to forgive sins as He had then." When I came to myself oh what a heavenly place, my soul was full of love and all doubts were gone. Jesus was all precious to me. In July following I was baptized into the fellowship of the church, the old home church of grand father and grand mother, father and mother, dear old spot where I have ever since rejoiced to visit and speak of the blessed salvation of our Lord. Here I wanted to rest and expected to rest for I could not think that the blessed wise God would require so ignorant a person as I to be a mouth-piece for Him, but a feeling of interest came over me and the preaching of the gospel soon became a weight to me and I grew full of sorrow and heavily burdened and I knew not what to do, I felt that I had rather die than try to preach, but so troubled was I that I was compelled to try: so eleven months after I was baptized I tried to speak, but oh what a failure, I now felt surely the Lord will not require me to try to do what I can't do, but my mind was still deeply stirred up and I could see no peace, therefore I tried again and again, but it was a complete failure every time. Oh such a crucifixion as I passed through no tongue can tell. It was during this time that my mind became weighted with moving down the country, but I was unwilling to do so, to leave all our relations, the graves of those who had gone before, and the church that had so kindly taken me in and had so patiently borne with my weakness and had not said to me, "You must stop for you can't preach," no, they had let me go on. I did not want to leave them, but there was a feeling in me that I could not resist and I broke my mind to you and my dear companion, of course you were both opposed to such a move. This made my burden heavier, but the Lord would not let me off for He had said, "Go," and I had to obey. In November 1875 we bid farewell to the old homestead and all that was there and came to a land that was strange and among strangers, none of whom were Baptists of our order. I now wanted to find my brethren and wished to know why I had been sent down here. It was not until on Saturday before the 3d Sunday in January 1876 that I had the opportunity to attend a meeting which was more than thirty miles from home. Here the blessed Lord opened unto me a door of utterance and I spoke for three-fourths of an hour and on Sunday I occupied about the same time. I returned home with an easy mind. This door of utterance has continued until the present time, for as little, unworthy and as un-serviceable as I feel to be the Lord has seen fit to give me much territory in which to preach and has supplied me with words that I trust have been words of comfort to some of His lambs, and I have been made to rejoice that He had seen fit to feed and comfort some of His flock by my mouth.

In 1877 the church saw fit to have me ordained to the ministry and the same year I was called to the pastoral care of two churches which I very reluctantly accepted, not because I was not willing to serve the brethren, but because of my ignorance and weakness. Those churches I am trying to serve yet. Soon I saw that it was necessary for me to move where I could be more convenient to the churches, therefore in December 1879 I bid you and all my earthly ties (except my wife and two little children) farewell and came here to live among those who at that time were strangers to me. Here my field of labor was enlarged and I was soon called to serve two more churches and since then two others have been organized and I was called to take the care of them, making six in all. In those churches I have been blessed to baptize more than two hundred people and a few in other churches.

In all this time I have had many ups and downs and have seen and felt many hardships and have often been rebellious. I have a bad enemy that follows me everywhere that I go and is in nearly all my thoughts causing me to have many evil surmisings and makes me hateful in my own eyes so that I am often made to wonder how the brethren bear with me and fellowship me. When I meet them they seem to rejoice and give me a hearty welcome. Oh they appear so good to me that I can not help loving them, but could they see me as I see myself, could they be so cheerful and rejoice in my coming? The blessings of the Lord to me are so very great that I often feel like proclaiming "Come, hear, and I will declare what the Lord has done for me." But it is so great that I can not tell it. I have met with some financial losses, but have been made to feel that they are among the all things that work together for my good for I trust that I do love God. Now I am forty years old, I know but little of the past and none of the future. That which I remember more than all the rest is that the Lord has been very merciful to me all the days of my life and has kept me from many snares and delivered me out of many more. He has often overcome satan for me for He fights all my battles and gives me the spoils thereof. He often makes me to lie down in green pastures where none can disturb nor make me afraid, but the most of my days have been days of darkness. Yet He has never left me to the ravages of the enemy, but has many times shown to me that He was with me even in darkness, so that I trust that I am a witness to the fact that His care for me is more than that of a mother to her sucking child.

Dear mother, you are passed your seventy years and I know that you have much more experience in these things than I have and therefore I love to write them. You were enlisted in this glorious army before I was born and many have been the trials and cares through which you have been called to pass, but the gracious Lord has sustained you, yea, and He will sustain you. How glorious it is to think that He has given all your children a blessed hope in Jesus and all of them save one have enlisted under His banner by following Him in baptism. For you are one of us: to die is not to be parted only in this sinful body just for a few days, for we have hope that we shall all be united in the blessed throng of the redeemed to be parted no more, but to be forever joined in one eternal song of praise to our blessed Jesus. Dear mother, this thought fills my heart with joy and makes me look with joy for the coming of that blessed day when all nights of trouble and darkness shall have passed away and an eternal day shall have dawned on us and in us. There we shall have no more heart longings, and, as I heard you say once when I was dreaming and saw you going upward clothed in the blessed righteousness of our Lord. No more fear, sorrow, sighing nor pain. Oh that blessed voice with which you spake, it is now ringing in my ears as I sit here and write of it and in my mind can see the whole scene so plainly. Dear mother let us take courage for the day of deliverance is not far distant when we shall hear the welcome call "Child your Father calls come home."

Please accept this scattered and broken letter in token of my love to you and as evidence that I do not forget you though we be so separated in body that we can not see each other face to face, nor speak in word.

May the God of all grace keep you in all your many trials in my prayer.

Love to all. We are all well.
Your affectionate son,
L. H. HARDY.

WHAT AND WHERE IS HEAVEN.

DEAR BRO. GOLD AND LESTER:—While the giddy throng is passing and repassing, my mind is running upon the above subject (where and what is heaven). I mean the eternal heaven or final abode of the saints. Is it here or is it merely a state or is it a place, a home, a house or habitation? This must be considered in connection with the resurrection and final glorification of all the redeemed of the Lord. Some of the dear brethren in Christ seem to think that Heaven only means a state or an imaginary existence after death. It may be so, but my notion is otherwise. I believe it to be a home, a place, where immortal spirits rest, something that can be felt, seen, realized and enjoyed. When Jesus arose from the dead it was Jesus the very same that was crucified. He raised the same body that was hung upon the tree. No other body. It was Jesus. When he was raised from the dead and ascended to heaven a voice was heard saying, "Ye men of Galilee why stand ye gazing up into heaven, &c., Acts 1:11 (not down but up) I think this was gazing upward or looking into material space or heaven and not into the eternal heaven for thither they could not look. But I think the resurrection is established thereby, that it was the same Jesus that was crucified. Jesus told Thomas after he had risen to "reach hither his finger and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing," Acts 22:27. Believing what? That Jesus who was crucified was actually risen with the same identical body that was nailed to the tree, and pierced by the Roman soldiers. It is now risen and this same body ascended up into heaven. This settles the matter in regard to the resurrection. "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, (that is buried), we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Roman 6:5. Now as Christ was buried in baptism so should we; as he was buried in the tomb, so we look to be, and as he arose, so do we look to arise. Yes our very selves, not something else, not a spirit that knows nothing of us. (I expect to die John Curtis Hall. I expect to rise John Curtis Hall. Not die J. C. Hall and rise something else). If so, how is John C. Hall to realize any benefit by the resurrection? He sees not. So my beloved brethren you can get some idea of what I expect in the resurrection. Now where shall we look for final rest, here in the air, or in an eternal house. I think that there is an eternal house, a place, a home, a temple, an actual eternal spiritual palace. The eternal abode of the eternal God and his Christ. The word Heaven and heavens occur over five hundred times in the scriptures. Of course I do not think that the eternal heaven is meant in all these places. I believe that wherever Jesus is it is heaven. "It is a heaven below the redeemer to know." We sit together in heaven or heavenly places in Christ Jesus when we come together in the church militant here on earth, when all is peace, love and sweet fellowship. But is there not a reality of what these things are only a figure? I think so. There is a material Heaven or heavens. But is there not a real actual heaven? Yes. Yes. For God hath a dwelling place prepared for the saints, it is up beyond the material or visible heaven or heavens. Where? Thus saith the Lord the Heaven is my throne &c. Isa 66:1. Not material but eternal. The Lord made Heaven and earth. Ex. 20:11. The heaven is God's throne. I by faith I trust see him as he sits upon the throne of glory looking down (not up) upon the children of men. When Elijah the Prophet was dismissed from his labors in what direction did he go? up or down? It reads thus, "And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven." 2d Kings 2:11. Was this real, or imaginary? Real evidently. The heaven to which he went was up not here. Elisha saw the ascent and cried, "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof! and he saw him no more," &c. 12th verse. This all surely proves that the eternal abode is up. The sons of the prophets wanted and did look for Elijah upon earth. Fifty in number and sought three days, but found him not," 17 verse.

And I believe that brethren who are looking for the eternal heaven here if there be any such will find it not, but will find it above through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul knew a man he says above fourteen years ago (whether in the body I can not tell; or whether out of the body, I can not tell, (glorious thought, God knoweth). Such a one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, (whither in the body, or out of the body, I can not tell. God knoweth. How that "he was caught up unto paradise, and heard unspeakable words which is not lawful for a man to utter. 2 Cor. 2: 2:34. If he was caught up to the third heaven it certainly follows that he was above or beyond the first and the second, and it seems clear that the third heaven or paradise is above. We will go back for a moment and look at Jacob's vision. "And he dreamed, and beheld a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. Gen. 28:12. This may represent Jacob's faith, and I remark if so it seems to my mind to teach that heaven was above not on earth. But does this prove that heaven is a place, not clearly. We will hear the apostle. "For we know that if this earthly house of our tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," 2 Cor. 5:1. Let us define building according to Webster, (building, an edifice). (House. A place of abode) &c. Then if the saints have a building, a house in the heavens it follows that it must be a place, an edifice, and this house is a place of abode. I think John saw something of this when he said he saw "The souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God' &c. Rev. 20:4. Does this pertain to earth? it may, but I think otherwise. John also saw a new heaven and a new earth. 21st Chapt. 1. He also saw the holy city (or church) Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. See 21 verse. That which cometh down must have been up. Christ said "I come down from heaven." See John 6:38. David said, "If I ascend up into heaven thou art there." Ps. 139:8. "Jesus said touch me not for I have not ascended to my father." John 20:17. "David is not ascended into the heavens" &c. Acts 2:34. "Wherefore he saith, when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men." Eph 4:8. "Now that he ascended, what is it, but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth." 9th verse. "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things." 10th verse. All these passages seem to me to prove that heaven is a place, an abode, not a material state. Now to sum up the whole, Christ lived and Christ died and Christ arose from the dead. Christ ascended into heaven itself. Christ is at the right hand of God as our advocate with the father. Christ will come again and resurrect his church, his body (spiritual). And Christ will be completely glorified. Then I believe John Cirtis Hall will be raised or his body will be raised not as it was sown or buried, but as it was sown a natural body, it will be raised a spiritual body. Sown in weakness, raised in power. Sown in corruption, raised in incorruption, and when raised it will be John Cirtis Hall, raised in the likeness or image of Jesus after his resurrection, yet it will be John Cirtis Hall. Glorified by or through the triumphant reign of grace to the glory of God, through Christ, and that he

John Cirtis Hall will and shall know that it is he and that he has a home, a dwelling, a house, an actual place of abode, and all through or by the atonement and triumphant resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ to whom be glory, honor, might and dominion, world without end. Amen.

GOD—MEDIATOR—MAN.

"One God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." 1 Tim. 2:5.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE MAN CHRIST JESUS:—The desire is in my mind to write to you upon the sublimely wonderful, three-fold subject—God and Mediator and Man—and I trust it is the will of the Lord that I shall write, and that the Holy Spirit will enlighten and guide me to the glory of his name and your good.

First, we accept the testimony of all scripture as given by inspiration of the Spirit of God. 2 Tim 3: 16. Therefore all scripture is both true and harmonious, and the scriptures are their own best interpreter—one text opening and expounding another, and all agreeing with and sustaining the one. Thus the rule of scripture interpretation is, "comparing spiritual things with spiritual." 1 Cor. 2: 13. Let us ever remember to do this.

One God. Moses, Israel's law-giver, said, "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord." Deut. 6:4. Paul the Apostle, to the gentiles, also said, "There is none other God but one. To us there is but one God, the Father of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." 1 Cor. 8: 4—6. This clear and forcible testimony is very comprehensive and conclusive, showing that the God head is also the Fatherhood, as embracing in himself the one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of the everlasting Father, and the entire brotherhood in Christ by and with him, as the chosen and blessed of God in his Son. Paul would therefore say to the whole church of the First-born from the dead, "there is one body and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in you all." Eph. 4: 4-6. Notice brethren, how the numeral one runs through all this wonderful whole, uniting all in the one Spirit and one complete body; and then notice also the completing and crowning words, "and in you all." One God and Father in all the many members of the one body, the Church, of which the one Lord, the man Christ Jesus is the Head, and God the Father is his Head. So to the church, the men in Christ, Paul says, "The head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God." 1 Cor. 11: 3. "The husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and he is the Savior of the body." Eph. 5: 23. Hear another scripture: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." Eph. 1: 3, 4.

All this united testimony plainly reveals the mind and purpose of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father in truth and love, as concerning all the people of his love and choice and blessing. These scriptures show that God is rich in mercy, "the God of all grace," "the God of salvation," "the God of peace," "the God of love;" yea, "that God is love." We should thus regard and speak of the glorious and blessed God; for this inspired portraiture or view of him will inspire us with emotions of filial reverence and love to him, as our Father who hath loved us, and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace. As John says, "We love him, because he first loved us."

For myself, I find peace in thus thinking upon God, and my meditation of him is sweet. But it was not always so with me; for I formerly saw and felt myself under the curse of God's holy law, which so filled me with a sense of guilt, anguish and terror, as a vile sinner in God's sight, that I verily believed that he was offended and angry towards me, and would soon banish me from him forever for my sins. At that time I did not know Jesus Christ, the one Mediator, the Daysman, the man of God's right hand, the near Kinsman who had the right to redeem me unto God. I did not know the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, but I knew him in the face of Moses only, as he came down upon the dreadful Sinai, and the sight filled me with great fear. With all my might I tried to keep the law and honor it; but it condemned and slew me, so that I looked for the wrath of God to fall upon and consume me.

ONE MEDIATOR BETWEEN GOD AND MEN.

The mediatorial office and work of Jesus the Son of God is of supreme interest to us brethren, because herein is our salvation unto holiness and our acceptance and favor with God. Therefore we should all seek to rightly understand the mediatorial relations of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the work which he came to do—his relations both to God and to us, and ours to the Father and the Son. Understanding these, we shall then know and truly appreciate the work of God in Christ, and lovingly adore and praise him in joy and peace.

As we all understand, a mediator is one who occupies a middle and equal position and relation between two at variance, so that in and by him they are reconciled and made one, or brought into unity. The work of a mediator is, then to move out of the way all the differences and hindrances which had alienated and separated those for whom he mediates. When this is done he has made reconciliation and peace, and is rightfully a mediator, which he could not be if he fails in this work. To be thus successful, the one who is a mediator between two, must himself be alike interested in both, so that he may be justly impartial; therefore he must also be equally related to them both.

"Between God and men," the text says. How wide the difference, how vast the contrast between God and men! Yet our Mediator must blot out all that stands between and make us nigh unto God. How wonderful that the high and holy God should come down and dwell with men, and that we should be one with him. How can this be? The text reveals the profound mystery, showing that between the holy God and sinful men is "The Man Christ Jesus." This Man is one with men—their very brother, as the son of the woman—yet he is as truly one with God his Father; therefore he is Christ Jesus the anointed, the Lord or Jehovah, the God-Man. So then God and men are united and made one in Jesus, the sinless, holy, divine Man. For as he and his Father are one, so is the Man Christ Jesus one with the men whom the Father gave him. "And they shall call his name Emmanuel—God with us." Mat. 1. "For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2. "Jesus saith unto her, go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God and your God." John 20. Those sorrowing disciples of Jesus were men, yet they were his brethren, as born again, being made partakers of his life and divine nature, even as he was their brother; as the seed of Abraham and son of David according to the flesh, and God was and is both his and their Father. Now then, this sacred and endeared relationship between God and men is in the Man Christ Jesus—in his wonderful name and nature, as equal with God and equal with men, and in his righteous life and perfect work, in which both God and men were equally interested. Thus this holy man was fitly and truly the one Mediator between the holy God and unholy men, and in every way sufficient to make reconciliation and restore peace, by taking out of the way all that stood between and separated them, and uniting them as father and children in himself. This is indeed most blessed and wonderful, when we consider how far the children of men have gone astray from God, and how sinful and guilty they were.

This leads me to speak of the mediatorial work of the Man Christ Jesus, as between God and men. To this let me invite the special attention of the brotherhood, because it is of vital importance to us, and deeply affects our comfort and peace. Where irreconciliation and enmity exist between two parties, and one undertakes the work of mediator, in order to remove the alienation and establish harmony, he must bring about a change in one or both, as well as make satisfaction for the offense and injury.

Now, according to the Scriptures, God does not change, but he is the same forever, and he loved his people with an everlasting love. Jeremiah, 31.

It is certain, then, that God never hated his people, that he held no enmity against them, to be appeased and propitiated, and that the change must be made in them only. Therefore, it can not be truthfully held that the Mediator of the better testament suffered and died to remove the wrath of God from his people; "for God is love," and he loved them, even as he loved his Son, and as Jesus loved them; because Jesus was God manifest in the flesh, and his work was the Father's work in him.

Why, then, was it necessary that the Mediator, the Man Christ Jesus, should suffer, bleed and die, to make reconciliation between God and men? The Scriptures will give us the true answer, saying, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." Gal. 3. "God sent forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Gal. 4. "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." Rom. 5. This inspired testimony plainly shows that all the enmity and irreconciliation existed with men against God, and that, as Paul again says, "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For he hath made him to be sin for us, (him), who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. 5.

Therefore, brethren, God was not against his people, but for them; reconciling them unto himself, not himself unto them, in Christ Jesus, their Mediator and Redeemer. To do this, God the Father sent his son in the likeness of sinful men, as their near kinsmen, "the brother born for adversity," the sacrificial and atoning High Priest, and made him to be sin for them, or their sin-bearer, to put away their sins forever by the sacrifice of himself. So then, the death of Jesus was not to appease the wrath of God and reconcile him to men, but it was to put away their sins, to redeem them from the holy law and its righteous curse, to abolish death for them, and to thus save them and make them nigh unto God, in life and holiness, love and peace, to the praise of the glory of his grace.

While it is true that God is love, and rich in mercy, he is also just and holy; therefore his law is righteous, like himself, and its just claims must first be satisfied by full and perfect obedience, before sinful men could be justified, pardoned and accepted with him. To this end, then God sent forth his son, as the son of the woman, made under the law, (for his sinful people were under the law), and to fulfill this end Christ died for our sins, and God raised him up from the dead for our justification. The happy and blessed result is, God the Father will likewise raise up from the dead, by his son, all for whom Christ died; because Jesus, for them, made an end of sin, and swallowed up death in victory. Says Paul, "The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 15.

"Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." To ransom or redeem is, to buy back, by fulfilling and satisfying every righteous obligation and claim. This the Man Christ Jesus did once forever, and for all that the Father gave him, when he gave himself for them. Therefore himself is our ransom, the price of our redemption, as well as our Redeemer. This is to be testified to all the ransomed of the Lord in due time, when they shall return from their far off wanderings from God in sin and death, and come to Zion. "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live," said the Good Shepherd of the lost sheep, who gives unto them eternal life. When this is done, then both the Spirit and the Word testify it to them in their hearts, and they are peacefully and sweetly reconciled to God, as dear and comforted children to their loving and comforting Father. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Gal. 4. All this mediatorial work then is "of God through Christ," and while it manifests the everlasting and infinite love of God towards us, it also manifests us as the sons of God, and sweetly overcomes and removes all our sins, enmity, irreconciliation and death, and makes us nigh unto God; yea, inducts us into his blissful presence and glory in his holy, happy heaven! This view of God and the Mediator inspires me with love and peace, adoration and praise, causing me to joyfully say, My father; my brother!

In the Man Christ Jesus your brother.

ELD. B. GREENWOOD AND WIFE:
—While I feel that the apostle expresses my feelings when he says "I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart," yet I find there a desire to communicate to and to interchange feelings with the people of God; and feeling that I have received so many precious words of comfort and encouragement from those dear ones who have been so kind as to remember me in this way. My very soul has ardently yearned for the ability to render unto them some service of this kind, if the will of the Lord be so, that I might by his Spirit be enabled to speak some word of comfort to his poor, humble and contrite ones; and especially my heart seems to go out in love and sympathy to those of this number who are on the bed of languishing, feeling that I myself have realized so much of the conflict that attends one in this condition. The warfare of a poor pilgrim (even when well and strong in body) is inexpressible. But they who are blest in this way cannot imagine how much the poor, weak invalid has to endure. While they may give them their heart-felt sympathy, yet they cannot have that feeling for them that the one has who has or is enduring the same conflicts. How often it seems that we are deprived of the presence of Jesus in such hours of need. How weak our faith, how unbelieving and doubting. And in such a state how long and weary the days do seem. How sleepless the nights.

How deeply we realize the truth of the words of the poet who says,

"How tedious and tasteless the hours,
When Jesus no longer I see."

How far he seems to be from us, and yet he is so near, for he has promised to strengthen us on the bed of languishing, and make all our bed in sickness, will never leave nor forsake, his watchful eye is ever over his poor tried ones for good, and his ear is open to their cry, and when enabled to realize this blessed truth, we are made to feel that even in our darkest hours, he was near us, and as one of old declared "in the place and I knew it not." Affliction ceases to be affliction then, and we are made to feel "that our light affliction which is but for a moment (compared with the joys of an everlasting eternity) worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

I received your letter which informed me of your illness. I learned also from Elder Adams that you were confined to your room when he was to see you. I hope that you are much improved ere this, if the will of the Lord be such. If not that you are enabled by his Spirit to say, "Thy will be done;" for it is only by him that we can feel resigned to his will at any time. May he enable you to cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you. Though these trials which at present may be hard to bear, yet remember dear brother and sister, that our Elder Brother has borne them all. There is not a sorrow that he does not know, there is not a wound that he cannot heal. He knows our condition at all times, and is touched with a feeling of our infirmity. Surely this is a friend above all others. Well might the apostle say, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift," the gift of Jesus. Possessed of him we have all things. Surely his love and mercy toward us are "inexpressible," and while meditating on these things we are often made to ask, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God." Yes we are made to wonder sometimes at our unbelief, made to question why that our tribulation and trials of various kinds should discourage us as they sometimes do, since these are but the evidences that we are of that number to whom Jesus says, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good comfort, I have overcome the world." O for more of his blessed Spirit to resign us to his whole will; and to give us patience to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Mamma wishes her very warmest love remembered to you, also each of my brothers and sisters. Accept much love and sympathy from myself, and remember me in your petitions to the Throne. I hope you will soon be able to send me a few lines that we may hear from you.

My health is some better than it was when I wrote to you last, for which I hope I feel thankful. Yours in hope of a better resurrection.

Remarks.

Elder Greenwood is no better, but worse. His sufferings are very great but his patience is also wonderful. His conversation is rich, for Jesus is the theme of his talk.

Those who wish to buy his book

(price 25 cts) will favor him by helping him along, and also find interesting reading matter.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—The excellent LANDMARK continues to visit us and to bring with it words of cheer and encouragement. It seems to me that never since its beginning, have its contributors come nearer seeing eye to eye and speaking one and the same thing. It seems all love, love to our blessed Jesus and to each other. Oh, how sweet it is when we can feel such love, and feel that the Holy Comforter is with us taking of the things of the Father and showing them to us so that we all walk together in love, each esteeming others better than himself and always ready his brother's failings to hide. I think that much of the troubles of the churches has arisen from brethren who think their own judgment superior to that of the brethren, and who are not willing to yield their opinion when the great body of the brethren speak. If my opinion is firmly established that I can not yield I can quietly submit to the judgment of the brethren and pray the Lord to show us the right way. May the dear Lord continue to be with and bless his people, that his love may continue to abound, and thrive and grow as the willows by the water-side.

I enclose a letter written to mother by brother Lemuel, which we have esteemed worthy of a place in the LANDMARK, and which we submit to you. Yours in love,

GEORGE M. HARDY.

RESISTING THE DEVIL.

More than twenty five years ago I received a request to write and publish what I understood of these words of the apostle James: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." James 4:7. But when I came to consider it I found that I had no especial understanding of it, except a theoretical. The question was, "How can we resist the devil," and I was just then learning that I knew very little if anything about it. I had had some battles with him as I supposed, and had cast some darts at him very bravely, and had occasionally shaken a spear in his face with great confidence that he would get out of my way. But I had begun to conclude that he had counted my darts as stubble, and had laughed at the shaking of my spear, and that all my sling stones would never make him flee.

My mind was at that time very much harassed with inward temptations and trials. I seemed to have no control over my thinking powers to prevent the enemy from taking hold of them and using them as he liked. He would inject as it were, his vile and venomous suggestions into my mind, and tempt me with evil thoughts of enmity against God's ways; and while I felt a hatred of these wicked thoughts, yet it seemed to be my own mind that was engaged in them, and I did not find in myself any power to successfully resist them. Sometimes when I lay down at night I would repeat verses of hymns over and over rapidly, in order to drown out the temptations and hateful suggestions of the evil one. Sometimes it seemed to me that if in the weakness of a dying hour, I should be left to the power of these terrible temptations in my soul I would be overwhelmed with unspeakable horror. The very thought was unbearable. One night when feeling the power of the enemy more than usual, and shrinking with a sense of my own weakness, I turned in my soul's experience, with a kind of helpless, despairing cry to the dear Savior, saying, "O Lord, I cannot contend with this enemy." In an instant the enemy was gone, and the hateful temptations and the fears and terrible apprehensions concerning the future, and I then knew that the Lord had enabled me to resist the devil. I remembered that Jesus had said, "Get thee behind me Satan," and that when I was made in my helplessness and weakness to look to Him, the enemy was behind Him and so out of my sight.

It is only when weakness compels us that we do or can look to Jesus.

When we have a sense of strength in ourselves we cannot see him. He "is of God made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption," and it is only in the experience of this that Jesus is made known unto his people, when the dear Lord thus supplies all their deeply felt need, "according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus." Those who are thus favored to know him, and who grow in the knowledge of him by growing in the knowledge of their great need of all that he is unto them, can easily see how blind and ignorant those are who speak of the dear Savior as offering himself to men, to see whether they will accept him or not.

In order to resist the devil one must have weapons of defense that are stronger than any arms he can wield against us, and weapons of offense that he has no power to resist, and also strength to handle these weapons. All this is furnished to his people, to all who find themselves engaged in this terrible conflict, by the dear Savior in the right time. He overcame this great enemy for them, and gives them the victory. This victory is faith. Faith is their shield that turns aside whatever weapon he brings against them. Faith, also is the power by which they overcome in every manner of conflict, whether they may appear as attacking or defending. This faith is the evidence to them that Jesus has overcome for them, that he is "the shield of their help and the sword of their excellency."

How vain are all our own efforts to resist the devil, or to obtain a victory over him. All our efforts are necessarily in our own strength. We can make no other kind of an effort. No matter how often we may have overcome by faith, yet we never learn how to overcome again. We always begin the wrong way, trying to use some power we think must be ours by this time. But we are trying to handle a weapon that we have no wisdom or strength to handle. We think we are working with the right weapon, faith, but we are surely mistaken, we have to learn every time, over and over, that we cannot exercise faith. It will, however, exercise us. When our strength and courage and wisdom are again brought down, and the weakness of a little child is ours again, then how easily faith is wielded. Then is the strength which alone is of any value made perfect. It is manifest in our weakness. Then faith is in lively exercise, and again we are surprised with the Lord's way of giving us the victory.

Why, we say, the apostle must mean that we must do something when he says, "resist the devil." Well, go to work again, and again we shall find that he does indeed mean something. He means that all this fancy that we have some ability to do something in the battle by which it may go in our favor, is the devil's own suggestion. It is the very thing which is apparently the hardest of all his attacks to resist. Again and again we fall here, in this warfare with the devil, but we fall to rise again. The fall shows us again our utter helplessness, and the rise shows us again the power and faithfulness of Jesus, our King, and the glorious fullness and perfection of his works; and then we are prepared again to sing, "The Lord is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation."

Every venture of a child of God will be worse than a failure. We are given no strength for such purposes, no strength to try experiments with. "The Lord is our strength." How much better that is than to have strength given us to use as we thought best, and which we might lose or worse than lose. This will never fail us, for Jesus is also our wisdom, and so the strength and wisdom are never separated.

"Lead us not into temptation." That is the true prayer, the very spirit of all true, spiritual desire on this subject. Don't undertake to try your hand with the enemy, in whatever form he comes, but look to Jesus. Keep away from evil, from vice, from alluring vanities, from worldly enticements, from whatever has a special power over your fancy or appetite. Don't think you are strong enough to court temptation. Keep away from evil; "avoid it; pass not by it; turn from it, and pass away." That is the only way to resist. Your only true strength is in knowing your own weakness. "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." "Draw nigh unto God and he will draw nigh unto you." He is not near us when we proudly undertake a contest in our own strength. "He resisteth the proud." It is the humble who feel how much they need grace, and "he giveth grace unto the humble."

SILAS H. DURAND.

A RIGHTEOUS PRAYER.

"Set thou a wicked man over him, and let Satan stand at his right hand." Psalm 109:6.

Brother John O. Salisbury desires to know my view of the 109th Psalm, and what gave rise to such a prayer from so good a man.

By reading the entire Psalm one may better see the connection of this matter. The trouble with our brother appears to be to know why a good man would make such a prayer as is recorded there against the wicked. What is there in the nature of God that does not hate sin? If one has in any true sense the mind of God does he not hate evil? If God is angry with the wicked every day, and his face is against those that do evil, would not one that is led by the Spirit of God also hate wickedness?

The common notion of men is that the more godly one is the more readily he condones crime and excuses sin. But the truth is that the more wicked one is the more allowance he makes for sin, and the less hateful it appears to him. Such persons therefore say that the better one is the more he excuses sin and tolerates it.

A consideration of God's administration of justice over the world would confirm the position stated that God hates sin, and that no trait of his character apologizes for nor excuses it.

When God made man he was upright. There was no sin nor death, sorrow nor distress. As soon as man sins at once death seizes him, a reign of terror and wretchedness begins. Everywhere the heavy hand of woe is laid on man. This is the wages of sin. No groans, nor prayers of man can avert it. Ever since then this trouble is universal. Does not this accord with that God hates sin?

The coming of Jesus in the flesh, humbled and full of sorrow, without guile, yet the greatest of all burden-bearers—who knew no hate of truth, nor love of sin—who was holy, yet made a curse for sinners, is the clearest proof of God's hatred to sin. For though God loved his people with so great love that he gave Jesus for them, yet it was not enough for him to be born of woman, found in fashion as a man, but he must be put to death. The cup of death as the wages of sin could not pass his holy lips; but mouth that knew no guile, that spake only truth, those lips full of grace and truth, must drink the cup of death given him by his Father. What could more fully prove God's eternal hatred of sin, and what could so fully show the deep root of sin that nothing but the death of Jesus could pluck it up?

The manner of the death of Jesus too shows this. A death by crucifixion was not inflicted except upon the most degraded criminals, and it made such still more infamous. When one was crucified a cross of timbers was laid down, and the hands and feet of the victim were nailed to it. Then it was erected, the bones of the body were all unjointed, and a most painful and wretched death ensued. Hence Jesus said all my bones are out of joint. Psalm 22:14.

The experience of God's people from their quickening or first consciousness that they are sinners is that sin is their great trouble to the end of their mortal, dying lives. As long as a child of God dwells in this fleshly state he has sorrow. How full of distress and vexation of spirit is the life of a child of God because of sin. He knows that God hates sin. Nor can the child of God form any excuse or apology for his own sins. They are most bitter to him. He can make no compromise. His own case appears to him worse than it appears to others. There is an unceasing warfare being waged in himself between holiness and sin. God hath indignation forever against sin and its desolation is perpetual.

To pray for a sinner though is one mark of a good man, is it not? We are to pray for them that evil entreat us, and that revile us. Vengeance does not belong to us. We could not in faith pray for what is against God's character, nor his holiness. When sin is forgiven, or not imputed to man, it is because it was imputed to Jesus, and he has borne it and atoned for it. Hence the redemption price is the blood of Jesus that cleanses from all sin.

There could be no prayer of faith to God to save the characters cursed in the 109th Psalm. The one making this prayer is Jesus foreshadowed by David. The scene is the crucifixion, the character over whom a wicked man is to be set, and at whose right hand Satan is to stand is Judas Iscariot the son of a murderer—bad blood. Judas pitied not the poor man Jesus, nor showed mercy to him; but persecuted to slay Jesus the broken in heart. (verse 16).

How speedily and surely the prayer of Jesus is executed on the wicked, as well as answered in saving the righteous. The wicked are turned into hell, a place prepared for the devil and his angels. In the righteous judgment of God the wicked are punished, and all iniquity shall stop her mouth, the righteous are saved, and God is glorified. In the resurrection it shall be discerned who served God and who did not. There the righteous shall be righteous still, and the filthy shall be filthy still.

Judas betrays innocent blood for thirty pieces of silver. The love of money is the root of all evil. Quickly he is in the power of the devil, the murderer from the beginning, and he repents himself. This is not a godly sorrow, not a repentance that is the gift of Jesus, or proceeding from the goodness of God. There is unmixed remorse—no mercy—in his self pity. He seeks relief by hanging himself. The godly are blessed with self loathing, nor would they kill themselves, for the strong hand of a just and merciful God keeps them. But when one falls into the hand of the devil there is no deliverance from unmitigated evil. Judas fell by transgression that he might go to his own place. Where is that? In hell. Each man goes to his own place. This is a righteous judgment of God. Jesus prays the truth and according to God's will.

The mercy of God is not like man's mercies. When God shows mercy it is to cause man to abhor himself and repent in dust and ashes. Men's mercies are to consider sin as a small thing and excuse the guilty on that ground.

When a godly man prays for a sinner it is that he might be saved from his sins, not in them.

It is as difficult to pray aright as it is for us to do any good thing that we can not do if left to ourselves. But Jesus knew how to pray aright. He prayed not for the world, but for those whom the Father had given Him. He prayed on the cross for those crucifying him, (but not for Judas), saying father forgive them, for they know not what they do: Luke 23:34. These sinners were forgiven and saved. (See Acts 2d Chapter).

But Judas was a devil: John 6:70, 71. Judas knew Jesus was innocent. Devils know Jesus, Matt. 8:28-31. Acts 19:13-16: James 2:19. These scriptures prove the devils and evil spirits know Jesus, not as their Savior, but as their destroyer or tormentor. Hence their enmity to Him.

Jesus never returned evil for evil, nor should we. But the Lord rebukes satan. We should not bring a railing accusation. Jude 9-11.

P. D. G.

TRUE RICHES.

Brother J. W. Caywood, of Tenn. requests my view of Mark 10:21:

"Then Jesus beholding him loved him and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell what thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, take up the cross and follow me."

Here is presented the case of what the world would call a good young man. All sorts of cases come before Jesus. He is the just Judge that righteously disposes of all cases. These characters are presented to him in the Providence of God, and are pronounced upon that the people who love the truth may see from the teachings declared in the bible how all cases stand. For the bible declares the true principles upon which all judgments are based, or the bible declares what is truth and remains therefore true forever. This is a very moral young man. He is called a young man by Matthew. He said he had kept the law from his youth up. If he had that was not against him, but in his favor. For it is certainly better in itself considered for a man to be moral than for him to be immoral. It is better for this life. But suppose one should fully observe and keep the letter of the law, will he in this way obtain eternal life? No. It does not come in that way. It is not possible for man to obtain eternal life by the deeds of the law.

The answer of Jesus to that young man shows several things. One was that he did not love his neighbor as he did himself. For the law says thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. If a man did this he would give the half of his goods to his neighbor, or treat his neighbor as well as he treats himself. Another is, that the man was sincere. For he went away grieved. He was not attempting to flatter Jesus, but was really, so far as he knew, enquiring the way to obtain eternal life. It shows that he loved riches. It further shows that he had not known the requirements of the law spiritually, nor seen his own vanity. It further proves that, although he addressed Jesus with great respect, yet he did not truly know him. Yet Jesus loved him. But who first begins the love, Jesus or the man? Jesus begins it, or loves us first. Do you understand that Jesus loves any that are eternally lost?

What riches are here referred to :

It would seem that in the letter it means here worldly possessions. Yet one may be rich in his supposed righteousness, or wisdom, strength, or resources, and yet have no money, or worldly goods, or possessions. Would a man that is not married and does not desire to be have any less to forsake than a man who has a natural wife and children; or would a man who has worldly goods have any more to forsake than one who has none? A man must forsake all for Christ. That is he must see that it is all vanity of vanities and vexation of spirit if he depends on any of it. A man might give all his goods to feed the poor and even his body to be burned, but it would profit him nothing unless he has charity. But without doubt the child of God that does as Mary did, leaves all and sits down at the feet of Jesus choosing the good part has all. For Jesus is all we need. If we are truly married unto him and forsake all for his sake then we have all. For if God gives us Christ how shall he not also with him freely give us all things.

There is much difference in this present life in the happiness or misery of a child of God in this matter. One that seeks first, or above all things, the Kingdom of God enjoys tokens of God's favor, and drinks of the cup of consolation, far more than that Christian whose mind is on the world, and who spends his time in the pursuit of worldly goods.

The church member who is too close, or loves money too much, to give to the poor and the needy, who has not time to attend his meetings, who neglects his pastor, or does not help him, does not have the enjoyment of one who does these things with a cheerful spirit.

But suppose one says, if he gives these things, or does these things, but does not do them with a right spirit it would be no benefit to him? Well, we know that if he does not do them at all he cannot obtain the blessing. We know, too, that if he is kept from doing these things, which the Word of God teaches that he should do, by the fear that he will do them in a wrong spirit, he does not much want to do them. He is seeking more after excuses for neglecting his duty than he is searching for reasons for doing it.

One must forsake all before he can truly follow Christ. Can a rich man then be saved? It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye. That is, it is easier for a man to do a thing which he cannot do, which he is utterly unable to do, than it is for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven of himself. It is impossible for a rich man to forsake all his riches of himself. But with God all things are possible. There is one hope. It is impossible for a rich man to save himself. But with God all things are possible.

Can a poor man save himself? If one is a poor man in the sense here used, he is thus in his very poverty manifested as one that is saved. But who would choose to be poor thus? We do not want to be poor naturally. When we see that we must become poor we go away grieved as this man did. But the poor have the gospel preached to them.

P. D. G.

HERETICAL CHARGES.

The Presbyterians claim that they are very learned. They do not ordain any man to preach that is not a graduate of some literary college, I have been informed. It is not my purpose to mis-state matters, nor to misrepresent any one in any thing, but to write the truth. If this does them injustice it will be my pleasure to correct it. What scriptural right is there to require a gospel preacher to be scholarly in worldly lore? The question should be, has the Lord called him to preach the gospel?

These learned Presbyterians have had much discussion and considerable confusion in their ranks of late about doctrine. A new set has sprung up that discard the old Calvinism of decrees and predestination, and clamor for Arminianism. They have also preferred charges against some of their teachers in their theological schools for heresy in preaching that the bible is not at all free from errors because men wrote it, and they were not kept by divine power fully enough to prevent their commission of many errors in their writings. The leader of this heresy, who boldly avowed that the men who wrote the bible committed errors, and that therefore there are many errors in the bible, was sustained on the trial by the body that tried him. That is, of course, an admission by them that the bible is not correct. What think you of the position that the men who wrote the bible were not moved by the Holy Ghost to the extent of securing absolute correctness? Does the Lord send men as witnesses to make false or incorrect statements?

It is impressed on my mind, and the case I will not yield at all in any part, to any man, or set of men, or to any denomination, that the bible contains exact literal statements of facts, and that there is besides the literal meaning a deeper spiritual meaning that is manifold. But that each of the literal facts or correct statements is needful in its place, and also the hidden spiritual meaning is needful in its place. For instance, the heavens and the earth were created or made in six days, and days were the same in length as days are at this time; and that these things were made of things which do not appear; and that through faith we understand that they were made of things that do not appear. There is no intimation in the bible that there was a period anterior to this six days of creation that was an indefinite formative period in which the material out of which, as of raw material, God manufactured a world; nor is there any evidence that each day was an indefinite duration of time in which, by a natural formative process, the earth grew by evolution and development into its present finished state. There is no evidence that a day and night did not consist of twenty four hours then as they now do.

We do well to feel that every statement made in the bible is true in the sense used and intended, and that though all other books may mislead or deceive, or be mistaken, every word of the bible is true. There is no intimation from any writer of the Old Testament that he was guessing, or making gratuitous assertions, or stating mere probabilities about anything, or that any writer had any misgiving or question in his mind at all that he might be mistaken in any of his record, or that he received any part of it by mere heresy or tradition; but with the certainty of eye-witnesses they all positively state the truth. The writer of the Book of Genesis could not have been present when many things therein related transpired, for some occurred before any man was created. How did this writer know these things? He could not have learned them by tradition, for they occurred before any man lived. Evidently the writer was moved by the Holy Ghost to write the truth. So it was with all that was written. They are God's witnesses and give infallible testimony.

Neither Jesus, nor any writer, or speaker of the New Testament gives any intimation whatever that there was any mistake at all in any part of the Old Testament scriptures from which they so freely quoted.

To suppose that God would give his people a bible or record of that which they should know, yet that bible be full of errors, or have any errors, is an absurdity and not worthy of credence one moment by his people. Suppose it be known that there is one error in the bible, but it is not known where it is, when would you know that you were safe. Suppose you are assured that in the road you must travel there is somewhere an enemy concealed that will kill you, but it is not told you where it is, would you consider that a safe road to travel, or would you not prefer to travel some other route? If there is a single untruth uttered in the bible how can that be God's book, who is truth itself, and in whom there is no lie? There are many infallible proofs and evidences of truth by which every word of the bible is attested. Infidels and scoffers have been attacking the bible in all ages, but they butt out their own brains and show their folly and that they are liars by dashing themselves against this wall of immovable strength.

Human learning is a great snare tending to puff men's natural minds up so that they become critics, and appear to be wise above what is written, but alas, they become such fools often that they fail to see what is written or to believe it.

It is not by or through the medium of worldly learning that men either understand the Scriptures or preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and Him crucified. God's people generally are a poor and ignorant people, but blessed with faith to believe that God meant just what he made his servant write, when they wrote the things contained in the bible, and that are most surely believed among us. OBITUARIES.

MARY ANN SHOWALTER

Sister Mary Ann Showalter was born June 1817. Her maiden name was Fralin. She was married to Mr. George Showalter Feb. 8th, 1838, by Elder Moses Green. She was the mother of seven children. Two sons and one daughter survive her. She united with the Primitive Baptist Church by experience at Little Creek, Franklin county, Va. Aug. 14, 1869, and was baptized the next day by the writer of this poor sketch. She died in the triumph of a living faith in Christ Apr. 23d, 1895, making her stay in this sinful world 75 years, 9 months and 29 days.

Sister Showalter was one among the best of women. She was an ornament to the church. Truly a mother in Israel. Never speaking evil of anyone, but to the contrary endeavored to live in peace with all, thereby gaining the respect of all who were intimately acquainted with her. One of her old lady friends said of her that she seemed to love everybody and everybody loved her that knew her. She was a decided Baptist, and when her brethren visited her house, which was often, she and her husband always seemed glad, and she seemed never to tire in serving them. None could feel cramped while with her. She was industrious, saving of things with which the Lord had blessed her; a help-mate indeed to her devoted husband, and in her death he has sustained the loss of his best earthly friend, and no doubt he keenly feels it. Mr Showalter remarked to me that she was one that would be missed, and truly it is so. But her christian life, and we may truly say triumphant death assures us that she is now at rest in that world of bliss where sickness, pain, and sorrow are felt and feared no more. She told the writer on Tuesday before she died that she wanted to leave this sinful world and go home to rest. She was confined to the house and to the bed most of the time for seven or eight weeks. Her physician seemed not to know just what her disease was, but no doubt he did all his skill could suggest for her. Her poor old husband who is over eighty years old was faithful to wait upon her to the last, thereby showing his great love for her; as also did their sons and their wives. Her daughter was not with her as she lived several hundred miles away. But the attention of husband, children and a host of kind friends could not stay the hand of death. Her time had come and she must go home. But all believe that death to her was the gate to endless joys, and she did not dread to enter there. Her funeral was largely attended by her friends, and the humble writer tried to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing ones from the text recorded in Rev. 14: 13. After which the body was borne to its last resting place in the family burying ground, and gentle hands lowered it into the vault to rest until the resurrection morning, when it will be raised in power to be fashioned as her blessed Saviour shall see fit to fashion it in order to his glory and praise. May the Lord comfort his grief stricken family for Christ's sake.*

MARY HELEN WOODARD.

Please publish the death of my dear departed mother. Mother's maiden name was Mary Helen Atkins. She was the only daughter of Samuel and Mourning Atkins. She was born in Wake county, N. C. on the 5th of Nov., 1829, and was married to A. J. Woodard on Dec. 23rd, 1846. There were born unto them six children, two sons and four daughters. Father joined the army in Jan. 1852, went to the war and staid until he received a furlough, and came home on the 7th of July, and died the 2d of August following. Thus at an early age mother was bereft of a good and kind husband, and left a lone widow in a cold and unfriendly world, with six small children, myself the oldest then fourteen, and a girl. Oh how well do I remember the night on which father died. Oh how we all were grieved, and in my imagination I can see and hear her as she sat crying, praying to the God of heaven for help. Oh hav'n't I often seen her when she would seem to be almost ready to sink in despair; then take courage and say, "As thy days so shall thy strength be." And many have been the times that I have been awoken in the still hours of the night and have heard her shouting and praising God for the many blessings that he had bestowed upon her, a poor undeserving worm of the dust. Mother professed a hope in Christ at an early age and joined the Missionaries and remained with them until she became dissatisfied, then when the church at Oak Grove was organized, she went before the church and gave a reason of her hope, and was received on the 4th Sabbath in March 1886, and was baptized on the 4th Sabbath in April. She was ever prompt to attend her church meeting unless providentially hindered. She was a firm believer in the doctrine preached and held forth by the Primitive Baptists, and had been for a long time before she joined them. She would often say if I am ever saved it will be by grace and grace alone. She seemed to be devoted to reading her bible and the LANDMARK. Mother was ever faithful to visit the sick as long as able, and Oh how we her children will miss her in time of sickness, for she was such a good and faithful nurse. She was a kind and obliging neighbor. None ever called on her for a favor that she did not grant if in her power. In mother's sickness she seemed glad when any of her friends would come to see her, and when time came on for preaching at Oak Grove, she would express a desire to be there, but said she would never go again. Having lost her mind she wandered off and was found dead. What a shock it was to us all. How sad to see our dear mother lying on the cold ground still in death. Oh how surprised we all were, for we had no idea she could have walked half the distance, for she had not been out of the house since November, and seldom ever left the room. She was often speaking of her troubles and how miserable she was, and when asked what her troubles were, she would say every thing. On one occasion when I visited her I asked her if she wanted me to do anything for her. She replied, no, unless I could relieve her of her troubles. I replied, mother I wish I could, but feel to be powerless, but there was one who could help and she must look to Him. Oh, she replied, I know that one, but it seems to me I can't take hold of the promise like I once have, but I know one thing, if I am saved it will be by the grace of God. So she is gone, and why she was permitted to die as she did I know not, but this I know, all that God does is just and right, and he works all things after the counsel of his will, and I do feel this evening I can say as one of old, "Though he slay me yet will I trust in him." Mother died in her 64th year and leaves five children, 15 grand-children, one brother and a lot of friends to mourn their loss, but we mourn not as those who have no hope.

M. J. HOWELL.

Massy, Wake Co. N. C.

TERECY HINSON.

This dear departed one is another witness to that solemn truth: In the midst of life we are in death. She was the daughter of Elder McLennon Wright of Columbus Co., N. C., was born in said county March 10, 1848. She was the lovely bride of Mr. Isham Hinson to whom she was united in marriage January 5th, 1867. Death is at all times an unwelcome visitor, but when we see a mother in the vigor of life, surrounded by all that makes life pleasant, suddenly taken away, it is supremely sad, and the only solace we have in such heart-rending scenes is the unsearchable riches of God's wisdom and grace. He makes stars to shine in the darkness. It is he alone that can remove the darkness and despair from the troubled heart. This precious wife and tender mother was sick for a few months, and all was done in the reach of human power that could have been to repel the stern invader. But alas how weak we are. After their marriage they lived in their native county until about the year 1876, they moved to Hinson, S. C., where by their natring industry and economy they accumulated a good living. The deceased was the mother of four children, two boys and two girls, all of which survive her. She leaves a husband, father, brothers and sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She never joined the church but leaves strong and living evidence that she is with Jesus. She often spoke of joining the church but said she was too unworthy. A short time before her death she told some friends that she would not live long and would be better off after death, and repeatedly said during her sickness, "Oh that I could die, so that I could be out of my trouble," that the change would be a blessing to her; yet she seemed resigned to the will of Jesus who saw it good for her to suffer until the 5th day of March, 1893. When we find her pillowed upon a dying bed, her moments numbered and she must die, her mind is clear, her heart is glad and her soul is happy, perfectly calm and serene is her joyous spirit; no tear drop dims the eye, no murmur falls from her faltering tongue; no word of doubt escapes her lips; sweetest resignation plays upon every feature of her brow; heavenly hope speaks out in every expression of her countenance. She has lost sight of earth, the sting of death has gone, she has fought life's battles and won its last great victory, the last word has been spoken, the last breath is being drawn. She is gone! Happy moment! Victorious death, precious wife, tender mother, obedient daughter, dear sister and kind neighbor; sweet recollection of the surge upon the crushed hearts. Thy whole life was beautiful with the presence of thy faithfulness, how desolate and lonely the home that was made so comfortable by the well-directed industry, and so musical by thy kind voice. May the Lord remember us according to the plentitude of his mercies and give us his spirit to say: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

YOUNG JACOB WOOD.

Y. J. Wood the eldest son of Y. Wood and M. E. Wood of Johnson County, N. C. was born Feb. 6th, 1878, and died March 29th 1893. He was 15 years, 1 month and 13 days old. He died of Bright's disease. His sufferings were but a short while on earth. He was a bright intelligent boy and very dear to his parents, was always a steady honest and obedient child, quiet and peaceable and made friends wherever he went. His death has cast a gloom over the community in which he lived, but in the home where he was loved is a vacancy which no one else can fill. He was so good and so young just in the glow of youth, just when it seemed so hard to give him up the good Lord called him home to a place of everlasting joy and rest. He leaves a kind mother and father and six brothers and five sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss. His little sister dreamed that she saw him with wings flying up in the air, and she thought he went to a beautiful bright place.

MARY COCK.

Sister Mary died of heart trouble August 22nd, 1892. If she had lived until the 9th of October, she would have been forty eight years old. She was the daughter of John S. and Nancy Marshall. Mary was married to Joel H. Cock twelve years lacking a few days. She bore three children. Saturday and Sunday before she died she went to preaching. Saturday when we got there we met with brother Blancet, and she told him she could hardly speak she felt so badly, and he preached, and got on to his experience, and she shed tears. I often saw her shed tears when any one was talking on experience, or saying anything about religion. Brother Blancet came home with her that night, and he told me next day that they sat up very late and talked and sang, and he was afraid it would make Mary worse, but she said she felt better, and the next day she visited the sick, and came home about sundown. One of the children who had gone after wood heard her call him, and he threw his wood down and ran to her. She had walked out in the garden and death had struck her, and she never spake any more, was dead before they could get her into the house. I never met with such troubles before, a sister snatched away in a moment was almost more than I could bear. Then to see the poor motherless children weeping, it seemed to me that it was almost double trouble. She was a good wife, a kind neighbor, and one among the best of mothers. She was uncommonly good to her children. Children don't weep any more, for I have a hope that your dear mother is in heaven, and I hope that you will be good children and when you are called away from this world that you will be prepared to meet her in glory. Brother Blancet told me he did not want me to grieve over Mary, for he did not have a doubt about her happiness, for the way she talked to him he was satisfied that she was better off. We lived by and visited each other very often. If I was in trouble it was a pleasure to see her coming. If any of us were sick she was sure to come. I was down sick last spring and she came over once or twice a week for seven or eight weeks and cooked almost all that I ate. I hope the many brethren and sisters that read this will pray for her husband and children, and a poor old gray headed mother. Written by an afflicted sister,

WM. T. GARDNER.

In the wisdom and providence of God, the Creator and Preserver, his people are willing to yield submission to his call. He has called to himself one of our best and most liberal hearted citizens. On the 12th of August 1892 Capt. Wm. T. Gardner died in the 66th year of his life, leaving a sorrowing wife, three loving children, and several grand-children, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn the departure of so good a man. He was in every way a true man. He served through the late war and was captain of his company, and was loved and praised by all of his regiment. Words cannot describe the traits of nobility shining in the life of this man.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

"RABBONI."

DEAR LANDMARK:—The spirit's emergency—the soul's cry for a refuge from the storm that had well nigh overwhelmed me, was accompanied by a questioning, searching spirit—questioning the Hand that had driven the storm, whither as mine to save and help. Searching my heart of the present and past for evidences of divine favor and acceptance, for assurance and confirmation that all things affecting me worked together for my good; crying for peace and patience to a heart bewildered by desolation, and light on my new unknown way; searching the Word of God for tokens of good, tokens that the rod was held by my Father's hand in chastening. Yet scarce knowing mind or heart, or whither wandered my feet, save that all tended to the ground, I fell in, so to speak, with Mary and those other bereaved, sorrowful-hearted women, bringing spices to anoint the dead body of the crucified Jesus. And they, too, were tending to the grave, searching for a dead body. They were bereaved and grieved for their dead. They were bewildered with their loss and disappointment. They suffered deeply. How quick and surely a like condition, especially one of suffering, will cement hearts! I felt that I never more should endure the company of such as had never known sufferings. And how acceptable the companionship of the deeply tried and sorrowing! So these women, by the striking similarity, suited me, and more than ever before I entered into their sorrows and search.

Their bitter hope and glory of earth were crushed in the grave of Jesus; for they "had hoped it had been He who would have restored the kingdom to Israel." My earthly kingdom had fallen. They brought sweet scented spices to embalm their dead. I brought the sad memorate of bitter tears. The main motive ostensible was a loving service to the dead; but no doubt but all hearts were burdened with hidden supplication, and the pent up prayer and thirst unspoken, for the living God, though sought among the dead.

We come to the tomb, and lo! the stone is rolled away, and two angels are within. They said, "Why weepest thou? Whom seek ye? Why seek the living among the dead? He is not here; he has risen. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." Then remembered they the words of Jesus, and how he had said he would arise the third day, etc., and the mourning began to give place to rejoicing.

And looking at the place—the empty place where the Lord lay—I also remembered the words of Jesus and His apostles, as "If ye believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus shall God bring with Him." "For God hath appointed us to obtain salvation by our our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep we shall live together with Him" "I will come and receive you"—at death—"that where I am there shall ye be also." Then indeed why weep? And why seek the living among the dead? Or why associate our dead with the grave; for surely such as die in the Lord live together with Jesus in heaven. Then from that empty tomb I looked up to heaven, and rejoicing said from my heart, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; they live together with Him above." And with up-looking thanksgiving I thought, "As the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ."

Instead of a dead body they find an empty, conquered tomb; and instead of Pilate's Guards, angels of God. But the scene and events are so wonderful and mysterious that perplexed and affrighted they turn about for assurance, when Jesus himself speaks to Mary, "Woman why weepest thou? Whom seek ye?" And then with a thrill of spiritual discernment I knew that thus in a general way Jesus often walks and talks with his sorrowing ones, and they know Him not, though their hearts burn within them at the gracious words. I remembered how brethren and sisters had accosted and talked thus, in substance, to me; and the Lord's ministers, as angels, also. I discerned that such in the spirit of Jesus and the gospel, were as the angels of God and Jesus in person, and sent of God in mercy to comfort. But not discerning this at the time the power of their words was lost; but now, I knew they were as angels, were as Jesus in person; and strong faith reviving I began to eat them as food from heaven—as they were, in truth, the words of God to me, and I was comforted. And I thought with self-reproach how often had I listened to such in a listless way, losing theirunction. Oh! may I listen—may I have ears to hear—hereafter when God's ministers as angels, or His children as Jesus in person, speak to me of the sure mercies of David!

And this also admonishes that we should also be very careful to treat, to love and serve one another as Jesus in person; "For inasmuch as ye have done to the least of these, ye have done to me," Jesus says.

But Jesus has a nearer, sweeter way of speaking. When he would directly manifest himself he calls his own by name, and they as surely hear him. Now he simply says, "Mary," and instantly she knew Him, in the twinkling of an eye the transition, and in the excess of joy unspeakable she cries "Rabboni." How quickly lifted from the low vale of death to a "heavenly place," from the search to anoint the dead body of Jesus to the worship of the risen, ever-living Christ! "Rabboni." Oh, "Rabboni!" My own heart responded as suddenly lifted above the dead, too. Lord and Master Thou doest all things well, all-loving and all-wise to take whom Thou wilt from the evils to come, and leave whom Thou wilt for further trials by fire! King in Zion! Lord of our love and allegiance; Head over all things to the Church; thine the divine prerogative to do us seemeth good in thy sight. But I am vile and foolish and presumptuous. Oh, Rabboni! Lord and Master! Reign within and rule over me and all thy house, and all the earth, and all the heavens, for thine is the kingdom and the glory and the power now and forever.

And why indeed weep and search a grave under bereavement, when Jesus is all we want for submission and for healing, and for rebuke for weeping instead of rejoicing or submission, at least to His will work in calling thine to eternal rest, and for letting our hearts hold them as in the grave instead of, heaven; when Jesus, the resurrection and life, has said, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live again."

Moreover, as my Lord, my spiritual head and husband, possessing all things in heaven and earth, and who has said He will never leave nor forsake me, and who is bound by His immutable word and this relationship to preserve me and provide for me, how is it possible for me, whether in temporal or spiritual things, to starve or be lost by the way? R. ANNA PHILLIPS.

Two days ago I wrote the foregoing. Then my faith claimed all I said, and in its sweet assurance I was even glad. I was found a sinner, because Jesus was the Savior of such—my Savior. But now, looking at my vile self I am afraid I was deceived. Oh, if I only knew I was a child of God! Then how would I cling to that faith and comfort; hold fast that confidence that gave me such a sweet reward! But if not, it was all a delusion, and I want to be honest in religion. Was that the spirit of truth and this the spirit of error? I conclude to submit all for what it is worth.

R. A. P.

WHEN?

When did Jesus wash his disciples' feet? Let the witness answer. "Now before the feast of the passover, etc." John 13: 1—19.

When did Jesus institute his supper? Let Matthew, and Mark answer. "And as they were eating (the passover) Jesus took bread and blessed it and break it, and gave it to the disciples, and said: Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it. Matthew 26: 26, 27, and Mark 14: 22, 23.

This is positive testimony. And it is plain enough for any good juryman to understand, that Jesus did wash his disciples feet before the passover. And he did institute his supper after the passover or in connection with the latter part of it.

Now we stand between the supper in Bethany and the passover. The supper in Bethany must have been a very notable one, for all the evangelists have something to say about it. It was, for there was several important things done there. Well now let us examine the witnesses, and see if we can locate the feet washing there. If we cannot we are left in the dark, "for this is the only supper that is spoken of before the passover. Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, etc." John 12: 1 to 12. On the next day, which was the fifth day before the passover, he rides into Jerusalem. John 12: 12, 13, 14, 15. Now turn to the 11th chapter of Mark; commence with the first verse and read. You will see that in the evening he went out to Bethany with the twelve. And the next day, being the fourth day before the passover, as he was going to Jerusalem he curses the fig tree. When the evening was come he went out of the city. And in the morning, being the third day before the passover, as he was going to Jerusalem, Peter calls to mind how soon the fig tree was withered away. The 21st chapter of Matt. agrees with Mark.

"After two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of Man is betrayed to be crucified." Matt. 26, Mark 14

Now Matthew and Mark agree with John about the six days before the passover. They digressed in telling about Jesus riding into Jerusalem before they told about the supper in Bethany. John digressed also in telling about Jesus riding into Jerusalem, before he finished telling what took place at the supper in Bethany. But they all agree, and Luke, too, in telling some of the same things that took place there.

When did Judas sell or betray Jesus? After the supper in Bethany.

"Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests and said unto them: What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. (That was the bargain.) From that time he sought opportunity to betray Him. Matthew 26: 14, 15, 16; Mark 14: 10, 11. That shows He was sold and bought and money promised.

When did Satan put it into the heart of Judas to betray Him? At the supper in Bethany. "Then entered Satan into Judas, surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve."

"And supper being ended, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him," Luke 22: 3, John 13: 2. For he knew who should betray Him, therefore said He, "Ye are not all clean," 11th verse. "I speak not of you all; I know whom I have chosen; but that the Scripture may be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me." 18th verse.

When he sold or betrayed him that was the time he lifted up his heel against Him, and it was after He had washed their feet. Now these witnesses have located the feet washing after the supper in Bethany.

Now Matthew, Mark and Luke write several chapters after the fifth day before the passover. John don't write any thing, only he finishes telling about what took place at the supper in Bethany. Then he tells about the passover.

At the passover Jesus says, "One of you shall betray me," and the enquiry was made who it should be. Jesus answered, "He is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it." And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

And after the sop Satan entered into him. Now this is twice that Satan entered into him, once at the supper in Bethany, and once at the passover.

"That thou doest, do quickly." Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him." John 13: 26, 27, 28. But some thought one thing and some thought another. But Jesus knew what he said it for, so did Judas. What did he say it for?

You recollect that Judas had done and sold him six days before, and promised to deliver Him unto them.

He now goes out to get his band together, so that he could deliver Him to them and get his money.

When Jesus had spoken these words, (the words of His prayer to His Father), He went forth with His disciples over the brook Cidron, where was a garden, into which He entered and His disciples. And Judas also which betrayed Him knew the place; for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.

"Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priest and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons." John 18: 1, 2, 3. There he (delivered Him to them) betrayed Him.

The Jews had many feasts, and this was called the feast of the passover, feast of unleavened bread, to distinguish it from the other feast.

Jesus kept the passover with His disciples one day before the other Jews did. And he said "Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, the Master saith, my time is at hand. (His time to keep the passover.) I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples. The next day Jesus was crucified, and it was the Jews' preparation day." John 19: 14, 31, 42.

The first day of this feast was called the preparation day, because on that day the lambs were prepared, and about the time these lambs were killed Jesus bowed his head and gave up the ghost. It must needs be so for those lambs were a type of Jesus, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world.

It seems to me the meeting in Bethany was one of the happiest I ever read of. Look at Martha how polite she steps around the table, waiting on Jesus, her Saviour, and His disciples; and Lazarus, her brother, who had been dead, and she had mourned for him, now he is alive and well and sitting at the table with Jesus, his Saviour, and His disciples. What could make her more happy? And Lazarus must have been very happy. And Mary was none the less happy, but more so if possible. Look at her! See the big tears of love rolling down her cheeks as she breaks the box of ointment and anoints the feet of her blessed Jesus, and wipes them with her hair. But it seems there was one there that was not happy. It was Judas, because of the waste of the ointment, as he called it. But Mary did not consider it wasted, for she loved Jesus more than the ointment, and Judas loved money more than he did the Saviour. And Jesus rebuked him for finding fault, and said: "Let her alone; why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me." It made him mad; then Satan entered into him. John 13: 2; Luke 22: 3. And he sold him for the pitiful sum of thirty pieces of silver. But he recommended Mary for what she did. "Verily I say unto you, wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her. Matthew 26: 13 and Mark 14: 9.

This was a good meeting, and the right time and right place for Jesus to wash His disciples' feet. If we could feel as happy as they were it would not make any difference whether we were in a public house or a private one, or before supper or after it.

Is there any more evidence? Yes. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13: 17. What things? The things that took place at the supper in Bethany. First, about doing good to the poor; second, don't forget to tell what the woman did; third, don't neglect to wash each others feet; fourth, and they were in the house of Simon, the leper, and probably they had met there to do him good, etc. "I speak not of you all; I know whom I have chosen; but that the Scripture may be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me." 18th verse. What Scripture is fulfilled in this meeting? See 41st Psalm, 9th verse. "Yea mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me."

This prophecy was written several hundred years before Jesus was born into this world, as if it was then fulfilled. But it was fulfilled by Judas at the supper in Bethany. For there he lifted up his heel against Jesus, when Satan put it in his heart to betray him.

"Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, He loved them unto the end. John 13: 1. What does this verse mean? I think I can tell what it don't mean. It don't mean the hour that He was then living in, was the hour that He bowed His head and gave up the Ghost. It don't mean that it was the end of His mortal life. It could not mean that, even if we put the feet washing after the Lord's supper, for he must have lived then eighteen or twenty hours before He died. Well, what does it mean? Jesus knew these things before the feast of the passover. How did He know them? From the fact that the Scripture is now being fulfilled by Judas, His own familiar friend in whom He trusted. Psalm 41: 9. He knew that the Jews wanted to kill Him, and he knew Judas would betray him unto them, and he knew they would crucify him. And the witnesses all agree that these things took place six days before the passover, as I have shown. So we are not left in the dark about the feet washing. He tells us when, where and how He washed them. When had we ought to wash? Any time when there are two or more together and we feel like it.

I have not written this because I am opposed to feet washing. I am in favor of it because Jesus said so.

"Thou dear Redeemer, dying Lamb,
We love to hear of Thee,
No music's like Thy charming name.
Nor half so sweet can be," etc.

"Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord; that walketh in his ways.

"For thou shalt eat the labor of thine hands: happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee.

"Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house: thy children like olive plants round about thy table.

"Behold, that thou shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord."—Ps. 128: 1-4.

PREACHING THE FOREKNOWLEDGE OF GOD TO COUSIN ALFRED NEWBY.

(Republished by Request.)

VERY DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have had impressions to write something to the LANDMARK for some considerable time, but could not get the consent of my mind what to write; so I have put it off until now. Having taken a trip to Elizabeth City not long since I met with one of my cousins, a Methodist doctor of law. After staying with him at his house all night, before he went to morning service he asked me if I belonged to any church. I told him I did, for I was a member of the Primitive Baptists. When he found out that I was one of those old stumbling stones we disagreed and had quite a controversy. I feel impressed to write some on the subject of God's foreknowledge, so that he might see it in LANDMARK form. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his son."—Romans 8: 29. May the God of all grace direct my pen that I may rightly divide the word of truth. Paul is speaking of those the Father foreknew. God the Father knew every living mortal on the earth by creation, but not by redemption. The apostle is here speaking of them that he afore ordained to eternal life. God knew his people before the world began, and they were saved in the eternal life. God knew his people before the world began, and they were saved in the eternal wisdom and fore-knowledge of the Father by grace before the world began. Paul speaking of this truth says, "Who hath saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. 2d Timothy 1: 9. He knew them then before they were created. My friend Newby says the word predestination was not in the Bible. Paul is very bold, and speaks of it in our text. I told him where he might find it. He was so afraid he would find it he would not look for it. If Cousin Newby will notice in the first chapter of Ephesians and 9th verse he will find this blessed word again. But to the point: The Father foreknew them in another sense; for after they are born of the flesh they are the children of wrath, without hope, and without God in the world; ignorant of God's righteousness, going about to establish their own righteousness, not submitting themselves to the righteousness which is by faith; nevertheless God knew them; "nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his."—2d Timthy 2: 19. God knew this people before they knew him. These people were ordained to eternal life in the one eternal mind of God before the world began. My friend Newby says God intends to save everybody. But when Paul and Barnabas were preaching at Antioch in Pisidia almost the whole city together heard the word of God, but when the Jews saw the multitudes they were filled with envy and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming. We understand here some of this gathering of people put the word of God from them, and when the Gentiles heard this they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. Acts 13: 48. You say that God knew everybody. When we speak of God we speak of Christ too, for they are one. Now let us see if we can find a people that are not known; not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works; and then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity.—Matt. 7: 21, 22, 23. Here is shown the whole matter of Pharisees' religion, for they stand in high places making loud prayer and broad assertions, compassing sea and land to make one a proselyte, and when they have made him he is two-fold more the child of hell than themselves, telling sinners to make one step to God and God will make two to them, and telling them make up their minds and come to Christ; he wants you to be saved if you will. Dear cousin, I hope you are honest enough to acknowledge that this is all lies and blaspheming the cause of Christ. Such people as these do not know the truth, nor Christ Jesus, neither doth Christ know them in his divine atonement, for he knew from the beginning who they were that would believe, and who they were that would not believe, as it written, he that believeth not is condemned already. Are any of them in the true church? O yes; for there are certain men who crept in unawares who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness and denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ.—Jude 1: 4. Jude here and in the sixth verse of the epistle speaks of certain angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, which he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day.

We see these unknown people spoken of again by our Savior to his servants when he was journeying towards Jerusalem: Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? and he said unto them, Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able. Luke 13: 23, 24.

This man says if he believes that if God meant such a thing as predestination and election he would never preach another sermon, for preaching must be null and void if these things are true. Now, my friend, be honest and submit to these truths. When our Saviour was conversing with his servant Peter he did not tell Petér to go and make lambs, nor make sheep, but the command was to feed my lambs; and again, feed my sheep. Read the 15th, 16th and 17th verses of the twenty-first chapter of John. Now, if preaching is to save everybody and quicken dead sinners, as you say it is, why did not the preaching of prophets and the apostles quicken all the dead, as we learn that our Saviour told his disciples, Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature; he that believes and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned? So, then, preaching was to them that believed the wisdom of God and power of God unto salvation. But to those that believed not it was foolishness. Paul says we preach the Gospel, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greek foolishness; but unto them that believe Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God. So then you will acknowledge that to some people preaching is null and void; but to believers it is not; for it is written, how then shall they call upon him in whom they have not believed, and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher?—Rom. 10: 14.

You say men are their own free agents. If I have power or commanding authority over a man he is not free to do as he chooses. In the preceding verse of the same chapter Paul says, How shall they preach except they be sent? As it is written, how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace and bring glad tidings of good things. To them the preacher must be sent.

But they have not all obeyed the gospel; for Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?

So, then, faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God; but I say have they not heard. Yes, verily; their sound went into the earth and their words unto the ends of the world. Romans 10: 15, 16, 17, 18.

I call you to especially notice some words in the 16th verse.—Their sound went into all the earth. The sound went, not the power, that is above spoken of. I might stand upon the wall and preach and preach, but if the power of the Holy Ghost did not accompany the words to some poor sinner's heart my preaching would be as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. A man like me and you might have gone to the grave of Lazarus and preached and called Lazarus come forth, and if it had not been the will of the Father which is in heaven Lazarus would have been in the grave this day. So I have long since learned when I try to preach all or none of my congregation may hear my voice, but the gospel is to them that God gives a hearing ear; for verily, verily the time is coming and is now when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. Christ Jesus knew in His eternal godhead who were the saved people just as well as He does now. This, too, is against your own creed of religion.

I was there in Elizabeth City on the same Sunday that I and my cousins were conversing on this all important matter, and I saw a preacher of his order sprinkle a little child about two years old. I noticed some of his remarks. Speaking to a large Methodist audience he said, And lest ye repent and become as little children, ye can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven. He said that he was glad it was so that all of our Father's children had to become as little children before they could enter the kingdom of heaven. This is all very true. I am also glad. Now let us consider your creed. You believe that people go to heaven by their works. I hope our Methodist friend is honest and willing to confess that all God's people are saved just alike, whether you confess it or not, they are all saved one way, and that way is by the blood of Christ Jesus.

But according to your doctrine the adult must save himself by his own filthy works, and the infant God will save anyhow. Notice his term: they all must be like little children. Do you suppose a little child can do anything towards saving itself from invisible destruction or hell? You are bound to answer no. If it is possible for a man to teach another to know the Lord you could not teach that little infant to know the Lord according to your theories. Instead of the adult becoming as a little child, it is to the reverse—the infant has got to become an adult so that it can work righteousness and do works meet for repentance.

Now I will show you, my friend, that their eternal salvation is not predicated on good works to be performed by the creature, neither is it prohibited by all the bad or sinful works that are done by the creature; I mean God's elect. Let us turn back to the Scriptures. Our beloved brother Paul admonishes his dear son Timothy (in his second epistle to Timothy first chapter and ninth verse), "Who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." This grace was treasured up in Jesus for this people before they had their beginning on the earth, for he was as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

Well, you will admit their calling was not according to their works, because they had not done any works, good or bad. You will say then, why doth he save them and what for? Well, we can very soon state what for.—Read the second chapter of Paul to the Ephesians:

"But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us even when we were dead in sin, hath quickened us together with Christ; by grace ye are saved."—Eph. 2: 4, 5.

We see then it is only for his great love, and that alone he saved the Ephesian brethren, and the same cause it takes to save all of God's dear children now. "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast."—Ephesians 2: 8, 9.

We see, then, the adult has to come like the infant not to do any work, nor even know how to do any; instead of the infant becoming like the adult, as you say, to know good and evil, and do works meet for repentance, as agents of their own command, and as Arminians generally say, if they do sin a little they can soon pray it off or balance evil works with good works. But the great love whereby the adult is saved saves the infant; for after that the loving kindness of God towards man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but of his own will he hath saved us by washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost.

The apostle says to the brethren, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Now mark the apostle's expression. He says, "for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Now it is God that gives them the will and the ability to perform that will. You ask of our articles of faith, which I will make a short statement of.

"We believe there is one God and Father of all, and above all. We believe there is one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, the Lord. We believe he hath a people on the earth known to him. We believe that Jesus Christ came in the world to save that people, for the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19:10.

"Again, all that the Father gave to me shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out; for I came down from heaven not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."

"And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again, at the last day." John 6:37-39. He says "all that the Father gave to him shall come." Do not ask them concerning their will. You are ready to say you Old Baptists preach that God saves people anyhow or against their will. I never heard a preacher of our order preach this. If I were to I should say he was not sound in the faith, and I would try and teach him the way of God more perfectly. God does not save his people anyhow or against their will, as you see all are made ready. They are saved by grace through faith, so then they are saved in a way. Neither does he save them against their will. God says my people shall be a willing people in the day of his power; so then he gives them a will. Think of the above quotation. It is God that worketh in them to will and to do of his good pleasure, for they need not go about to teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord, for they shall all know me from the smallest even unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord, for I will forgive their iniquity and I will remember their sins no more.—Jeremiah 31:34. Behold the day cometh, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which my covenant they broke, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord. But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their inward parts, and will write it in their hearts, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.—Jeremiah 31:31, 32.

Happy art thou, O Israel, O people saved by the Lord. There never was a convicted sinner that saw he was lost and ruined by sin but what wanted to be saved, but when they have the power they have not the will; when they have the will they have not the power.

Now, in a way of conclusion, I will tell a little of my experience. I used to think when I was a boy I would get religion when I became an old man. The day of grace, or my day of grace had not come yet. I felt like it was in my power to get religion when I chose, so I moved on in this way until the day of the Lord came, as I humbly trust, when he was pleased to give me to see what I was and what I needed. I saw I was a sinner, and needed religion, but had no power to get it. Then it seemed to me that my day of grace had past, and there was no religion for me. Poor miserable creature I was, I wanted to be saved, but did not know how in the world it was going to be done. So when I had the power to save myself I was destitute of will; when I had the will I was destitute of power.

Now let me say to you, our God's people are just as sure of a seat in glory as Christ Jesus himself, from an infant not a span long to the adult seventy or a hundred years old; for the Father chose them in Christ Jesus before the world began that they should be holy and without blame before him in love.

Now, friend Newby, let me ask you to search the scriptures and ask knowledge of God, and consider what I have said, and may God give you understanding in all his wondrous ways to save fallen man. From GEORGE ROBBINS, (col.)
To ALFRED NEWBY (col.)

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Last night I was agreeably surprised when my husband returned from the office and handed me your letter. I suppose I am indebted to brother Thompson for what information you have received of me since he visited my house the 1st of January, and told me much of you and your paper, and insisted that I would subscribe for the same. Brother Thompson said he believed I would derive much comfort and benefit from the reading contained therein. Of this I had no doubts; for if my sinful heart deceives me not, I love the Baptists and the Baptist cause.

I have anxiously waited for the papers, since I am one alone, cut off from christian associations, comforted by the revealed will of God, and the much valued paper, "The Primitive Baptist." And now brother Gold, your request comes to my mind, and when I tell you that I am hardly convalescent from a severe spell of sickness of thirty days duration, which leaves me in much weakness both in mind and body, you will be prepared to look over all imperfections, and if God in mercy will strengthen and sustain me, I will try and tell you some of the joys and sorrows I have been called upon to pass through, humbly trusting I have been taught of the Lord. I was raised by strict Methodist parents, believing in all that pertained to the doctrines and usages of that society, yet I believe and hope, they have been born of the Spirit, for my dear father, though dead for years, left sweet evidence that heaven would be his home, his last words being, "All is well; heaven is just before me," and while I write my heart fills with joy, and unbidden tears flow, when I think that when done with the troubles and severe afflictions of this life, God will in mercy take me to rest. Ah, my brother, I well know if I am ever saved it will be a sinner saved by grace. Then struggle on my dear mother, and may God sustain you in your old age, and permit you to enter into the joys prepared for the faithful.

You must excuse this digression. When quite a child I often thought of death and what would be my doom if I were to die, so I set about doing as I was taught, to work myself into the grace of God. I was ever ready and anxious to attend

Sunday Schools, preaching and prayer meetings, often refusing to go with school mates to places of worldly enjoyment, actually preferring church privileges. I much thought it a duty to read a certain portion of the bible every night before retiring. About this time there was a big revival at the church and I was a mourner. I wept sore, and was frequently told to give my heart to God, which I tried to do; but the meeting closed and I could tell of no change.

When fourteen years old I went to Richmond, Va. to attend school. While there I was almost entirely associated with Missionary Baptists, and as summer came, as is usual, the revival season set in. Right here I stop and study. Revival season. What think you my brother is the revival season. Often when borne down with doubts of my acceptance, fearing that my wicked, sinful nature is too full of evil to ever be forgiven, I am humbled and made to cry, "Lord have mercy upon me a sinner." Then it seems that God for Christ's sake removes the dark cloud for a time, and I am made to hope that to me has been given the white stone, with the new name written therein. Then I can read the bible. I can try to pray. I can weep joyful tears, can take my little book and sing the songs of Zion. Then the revival season has commenced with me, and I only wish that I could be faithful and ever feel like rejoicing. While that meeting was in progress I was made to see and feel that I was a sinner in the sight of God, yea that the foundation I had built was sand, and would and did fall. I then tried to pray in earnest that God would forgive me, that I had done nothing, could do nothing to merit the favor of my Master. I was in deep trouble for days and nights, and in anguish prayed like Ephraim of old, "Lord turn me and I shall be turned." It was then I hope my many sins were forgiven. It was then I read the bible not only from a sense of duty, but for comfort and peace. It was then I loved the children of God in truth, not as I had before, but as brothers and sisters in christian love. My desire was great to join the church, for I did not consider any mode of baptism right but immersion. I wrote to my parents and told them of the happy change, and my desire; but my father so bitterly opposed immersion that he came to Richmond and positively forbade it, consequently I had to make my wishes subservient to theirs, but it was a great cross to me and I was determined if I was ever permitted to have the privilege of communion I would follow the desires of my heart, but I am sorry to say I lived out of duty until I was the mother of three children, then I was a life member of the Missionary society, ten dollars having been paid in when I was a child, and I no doubt felt thankful that I had often dropt money into the box given by my father, feeling that I was doing my part to save souls. Then I was satisfied and therefore tried to live in discharge of my duty believing the doctrines taught by the Missionaries, except, paying a stipulated salary to a preacher, and supporting the Mission Board.

I lived with this church for fifteen years, and attended their meetings, assisting them in every way I felt was my duty. At their protracted meetings I felt that they were doing right to give sinners an opportunity to be saved. At the same time I have often felt humbled when requested to come forward and pray for sinners, and to talk to them, would feel I needed the prayers of God's children to help me to resist temptations: and shall I, sinful as I feel myself to be, offer to teach others. I knew God in his own way lifted the load of sin from my heart, and I could not tell them to exercise faith; and when I tried to talk to poor mourners, I would feel that I wanted to prostrate myself in the very dust, and tell them to pray Lord, take me just as I am and purge this vile heart.

Such feelings as this troubled me. I would think, can I be a christian and thus be with such doubts. I would ask brethren of that faith how can we tell these sinners that Jesus has done all he can to save them? They would reply that we must discharge our duty. If they sink down to ruin we cannot help it. We have done our duty. Such answers did not help me, but I kept my thoughts to myself. Now brother Gold, I will try and tell you of what proved to be the happiest period in my checkered life. A friend loaned me a little book written by brother T. S. Dalton, entitled "Salvation." Right then for the first time, I learned or began to see the difference between time and eternal salvation. I read and re-read the book, and to-day if I had it would enjoy reading its pages. The foundation I had built upon was badly shaken. I found the sweet promises to the children I was handing out to the unbeliever, yea "casting the children's bread to the dogs;" but God in mercy led me along until it pleased him to send a gospel preacher into our midst. That day, entirely against my will, my eyes were opened, and I could and did see myself in Babylon partaking of her plagues. The minister was I. P. Pilkington. His text was, Proverbs 30: 11—15. I tried to withhold—tried not to hear, but all in vain. "The truth is mighty and will prevail." At the close of the services he invited all that could and did endorse what he had set forth to give him their hand. Oh, the warfare that was in my bosom. Me endorse the doctrine of predestination! No. Then why these tears; this trembling frame? I gave my hand without any self-power to stay back. After this day for two years I was burdened with a heavy load. I distinctly saw I was out of duty; but prejudice was strong. I believed the Old Baptist to be the true church, the humble poor, but I still staid away. Never after could I feel satisfied at the church to which I belonged. Time and again I had chances to attend Baptist meetings at my mother-in-law's who was a "Landmark Baptist," a good scriptorian contending for the truth.

At last, one night, I went to hear Elder P. preach, and as often before refused to discharge my duty. I went home and retired, but not to sleep; wrestled Jacob-like 'till just before day. Passages of scripture passed through my mind. "Who art thou oh man that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus?" In deep humility I was made to feel if I am ever saved it will be mercy, if damned it will be just. I tried to pray to my Father to remove the burden, and to show me the right way so plain that I could see with my natural eyes; and I do thank God he answered my feeble prayer. Just before day a sweet peaceful calm came over me. I could hardly refrain from praising him aloud, and lying before me as it were was a little narrow path leading me home to my Father's house. I hesitated no more, but as soon as possible joined my brethren and sisters in christian love, and followed my Saviour down into the liquid grave, and from that day to this I am well contented, the only regret being that I am deprived of meeting brethren and sisters, and listening to the gospel.

In conclusion brother Gold, will say my health is bad; have several times been brought as it were to the verge of the grave. I try to be patient, and resigned to my lot. I beg you to pray for me that I may hold out faithful, and when it pleases God to call me from time may I be ready to meet him in peace. God bless you in your efforts to comfort the little few. Your affectionate sister, VIOLA HARLAN.

RETURNED HOME.

DEAR BRETHREN:—It is with much pleasure that I write to you all this evening. Many of you I have seen, and many I have not seen, nor have any hope of seeing. The people of God is a company that no man can number. Dear brethren, this evening our Association, which is known as the Bear Creek, has closed. I with many of my brethren have had a feast. Our meeting is a meeting long to be remembered. We were blest with able preachers of the gospel, to wit: Elders P. D. Gold, Isaac Jones and Gardner Bryant. I believe I saw the power of God manifested while those faithful brethren were preaching to us. We hope and believe that much good will be accomplished. While the brethren have taken their leave of us, we hope they will be sent of God to come to see us again. I wish to write something about my tour of appointments in March and April, but my mind has led me to write as I have done. I returned home on the 11th of April and found my family well.

My health is as good as common at this time. I remain your brother in tribulation,

J. C. WILLIAMS.

ACCURSED FROM CHRIST.

Brother B. F. Hancock requests my understanding of Romans 9:3. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."

In this declaration there is one of two things evident, that Paul spake after the manner of men, by the Spirit, because of the hardness of their hearts, or without command according to the sympathies and ties of nature. Or that this separation from Christ was not in the Spirit, but in the flesh. It does not seem possible for him to have spiritually or otherwise desired spiritual, eternal separation from Christ, but that he felt willing to forego all spiritual comfort here in this life, if by that his kindred could be saved.

It is natural and proper for the servants of God to-day to earnestly desire the salvation of sinners, whether kindred or not, provided it be the will of God to save them. It is possible, but hardly probable, that a woman may forget her sucking child. It is probable that we may earnestly, to ourselves, desire the salvation or spiritual comfort of our kindred in the flesh, and may, with propriety, ask the Lord to have mercy upon them, knowing at the time that the will of God must be done. "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." Rom. 10:1.

Paul did not thus desire as though the word of God had taken no effect (Rom. 9:6); but knew that they were not all Israel which were of Israel.

We know that God knows his own elect and will save them, but we do not know them, only as they are manifested by birth of the Spirit.

While we must, both by command and willingness of mind, ascribe salvation, and the glory and honor of it to the Lord, yet it is not inconsistent with our call to the work of the ministry to entertain a general interest in the salvation of any one. Or in other words, it is not consistent for one who is saved to manifest indifference in the salvation of others. But we should not allow this interest to move us to set up Arminian auxiliaries for the salvation of sinners—such as trying to use ourselves as instruments, and our preaching as means for advancing the work and kingdom of God. Nor should we so draw back as to manifest no interest whatever in the work of salvation and who is saved.

There are two classes either of which I will call Arminians. One preaches and practices the doctrine of Job's miserable comforters, and the other that of the devil. One says you must begin the work and keep working unto the final perseverance or you will be lost forever and ever, and the other says: go on, let them alone, if they are among the elect God will bring them out, and will save them.

Acquaint now thyself with God and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee. Job, 22:21.

If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written: "He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. Jesus said unto him: It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Matt. 4:6, 7. See Deut. 6:16—21.

To be utterly indifferent is as bad, or worse, than to be over zealous, doing that which is not commanded.

Paul finally confines himself to the spiritual Israel among those who were called Israel. So in point of spiritual comfort and soundness in the faith, we should specially testify of and to those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious.

Paul, no doubt, had reference to the spiritual portion of his kinsmen—Israel. He was of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin. He bore them record that they had a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they, being ignorant of God's righteousness, went about to establish their own righteousness, and had not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. They had been bewitched by false teachers—men of Judah, who claimed that they must be circumcised and keep the law of Moses. Paul saw how they were blinded, and had great heaviness and continual sorrow in his heart for them. He could give up his comforts for them, that they might have true knowledge of God, and enjoy the righteousness of Christ.

The weight of the ministry to-day certainly embraces the welfare of every one to whom the Lord has appeared. It is to feed the sheep and lambs. Not simply those within the fold, but those which are without. It seems to me that those outside of the visible church require much more attention than they generally receive, more than those in the church. The church is evidently the home of all who believe in Jesus. The very fact that one believes, and yet does not come to the church, is sufficient evidence that he is in some way blinded, or is induced by a seducing spirit to overrate the general condition of the child of God, or underrate himself, or both.

No doubt the true minister of the gospel has great sympathy for any and every one who desires to do right; but sometimes he may be, and no doubt often is, over cautious about exhorting such, and encouraging them by stirring up their pure mind by way of remembrance, for fear he might use some bible language used by arminians in the wrong place. The scriptures are addressed to the people of God, and may be used freely and fully with reference to them. There is no danger in reasonably urging them to action according to the scriptures.

In performing the work assigned to us we need have no fear of overstepping bounds and doing something which the Lord alone can and must do. His work is above, before and beyond our work. We believe the Lord will bring his people into the church at his own appointed time, and yet we appoint the first, second or third Saturday in each month and say that is the time for them to come in. According to the scripture, any time, day or night is the time, the accepted time—the day of salvation. So far as we have any thing to do with it the Lord's time is all the time. In whatever sense the servant is authorized and commanded to minister it should be readily and promptly done. "As ye have freely received, freely give."

Those who are deceived or bewildered in any way and thereby hindered from coming to a knowledge of the truth and acting accordingly are to be pitied rather than blamed. They should have our sympathies rather than censure, called for rather than driven away, comforted rather than discouraged, drawn nearer by affectionate entreaties rather than allowed to drift about and away, from careless indifference to their condition and needs. They should be teachers; but from some cause they have need to be taught what be the first principles of Christ. They should be able to eat meat, but must be fed with milk. At heart they know the truth, but their heads have been turned away by doctrines of men and devils—seducing spirits—which hold men's person in admiration because of advantage. This is a carnal, temporal advantage, and those who seek it care nothing really about the salvation of sinners. They make merchandise of what they term the gospel, and overturn the faith of some, and causing others to make shipwreck of theirs.

My desire is that the people of God might be one in doctrine as they are one in experience and in Christ.

QUESTION.

A friend desires to know on what authority women preach.

Answer.

On man's, or the devil's; for God's word gives her no authority to preach. Christ called no woman to be an apostle. No apostle ever ordained a woman to preach. Nor is there any evidence in the New Testament that ever a woman preached by divine authority. But on the contrary, the scripture expressly forbids woman teaching or usurping authority over the man. Paul is treating of the subject of preaching, and the proper behavior of God's people (see 1st Tim. 2:7-15). He declares he is ordained a preacher and an apostle to the Gentiles. He wills that men pray everywhere lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting. Also that woman adorn themselves with modest apparel, &c. Let the woman learn (not teach) in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man. The reason is here given: For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived; but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Woman can decoy man into trouble where she becomes the leader. Her place is not there. She should be a keeper at home. She that carries at home takes the prey. But women that gad about and want to be leaders, whether in politics, religion, or anything else, are out of place and make themselves contemptible in the eye of decency and in the judgment of wisdom, and become a snare.

The worst form of false religion is represented by a woman attired as an harlot and worshipped, or wondered after, by all the world, and she bewitches the nations with the wine of her fornication, and whoso loves wisdom escapes her meshes.

P. D. G.

WHY.

I have received many inquiries as to why I do not write for the LANDMARK. I will not attempt to give all the reasons, but will try to answer principally by writing more, "if the Lord will." Besides having been somewhat cumbered with other things which required time to discharge them, I have had but little mind to write. I have had about my usual interest of mind to preach, but not to write. I do not regard myself as being a ready writer, only being able to write, such as, I do, when I have a mind to write, which is only now and then. I am frequently filled with uncertainty as to whether I should attempt to write at all, especially editorially.

I sometimes fear that my whole life has been more that of an adventurer than a matter of fact. My reasons of a hope sometimes appear insufficient to sustain a well-grounded one, and fear, therefore, that mine is not well grounded. My experience would rather discourage than comfort but for the saying "Mine heritage is as a speckled bird." My life is much checkered—many things remaining without interpretation, many things to discourage, with only one now and then to encourage. But, after all, when I recount the blessings which have been bestowed upon me all along the way I have come, and consider the vileness and sinfulness of my carnal, depraved nature, I must say that goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life; and sometimes when I am given some degree of liberty of thought and power of expression, I feel that I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

How wonderfully strange is the experience of one who is made to see his sinful self all defiled and polluted by sin, and to feel the workings of sin in his members, made strong by the law warring against a law which desireth better things—the law of his mind—the law of the spirit of life; having by the one law the knowledge of sin, and by the other the knowledge of life; by the one being dead unto sin, and by the other alive unto God.

What a precious thought, that the existence of life does not depend upon the evidences thereof, nor the lack of them. Eternal life once bestowed is ever there whether its presence is realized or not. By this life is the child of God preserved, and is therefore as imperishable as the life itself. When this life, by its mysterious power, sends forth its vital pulsations, we have evidences of its existence, and are made to rejoice; but when we have not its vital influences, we mourn and long for a restoration of the joys of salvation. Therefore, whether we live, or whether we die, having this life, we are the Lord's, and shall live for ever and ever in the Paradise of God.

In the infinitely wise provision of God it is so arranged that we shall, while in this pilgrimage, be made to see and learn the ways and wages of sin, and the way and gift of eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. It is as essential, therefore, that we should know the depths and abounding of sin, as that we should the greater depths, heights, and abounding of grace. We must know in ourselves that sin hath reigned unto death, before we can know that even so grace shall reign through righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Sin must become exceeding sinful before grace can become exceeding gracious and precious. The life of a child of God is not one of uncertain experiment, but one of certain experience. Eternal life is designed to dwell in this tenement but a brief period, and then to burst forth and embrace and comprehend eternal immensity. Mortality is to be swallowed up of it, and so vitalized by it, that future being is now, to us, incomprehensible. How infinite the theme! how glorious the thought!

What a blessed and gracious privilege to have a hope that anchors the soul, both sure and steadfast, which binds us in everlasting strength to the full realities of a better and ever glorious resurrection.

P. G. L.

TO A DEAR SISTER:

"Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." Rom. 6:12.

As clearly as light doth make manifest, each child of God is painfully conscious of indwelling sin in his mortal body. I know that in me, that is in my flesh, dwells no good thing. Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? There is no power by which the child of God can rid himself of this lust of the flesh. To suppose that a child of God is without this is a contradiction of Scripture. Every abomination and lust of the flesh dwells in the body of death or flesh of a child of God. Hence, feeling these lusts of the flesh working in him to bring forth fruit unto death, and having vile, foolish thoughts and the law of sin in his members leading him into captivity, the child of God often feels, "Is it possible that I am a Christian?"

The command is, Let not sin

therefore reign in your mortal body. Why should it not reign? Because we are dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is true that all that are baptized into Jesus Christ have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. This is because they are dead to the law, by the body of Christ. How do I know this is so of me? If it is I hate sin and it distresses me, and I long to be free from it, as our sister describes her case.

What we are dead to we cannot take pleasure in. No one that is quickened together with Christ can ever take any delight in sin. But there is a great difference between being dead to sin and being dead in sin. When one is dead in sin it gives him no trouble at all. When one is dead to sin it fills him with grief. It is the child of God who is afflicted.

But let him remember that he is in no sense a debtor to the flesh. The flesh can never help any in the salvation of a sinner. We, therefore, are not debtors to the flesh.

Therefore let not sin reign in your mortal body. Do not yield gratification to the flesh. Deny it. Resist the devil. He works in the flesh. But he is a conquered foe. We are not to be subject to the devil or the flesh.

If you had no sense of vileness what need would you feel for a Saviour or deliverer from sin and death.

"Be afflicted and mourn." God's people are an afflicted and a poor people, and this makes them mourn.

We mourn because we are sinners. We fear we are not born again. But the perfect love of God will cast out this fear. How often have I felt how can I be a child of God, and feared. But the fear of the Lord is to hate evil. Nothing but the perfect love of God can comfort such an one. When we can feel and see that God's love is everlasting and hides all our sins, then we can rejoice in that perfect love that casts out all fear.

But we must mourn because of our afflicted state. Blessed are such mourners for they shall be comforted. We should remember those in need of worldly goods and help them by ministering unto them, and we should visit the fatherless and widow or distressed ones in their poverty, distress and affliction.

OBITUARIES.

RUTH LEE.

My darling mother was born one mile of Bethel, Pitt Co. N. C., the 11th of Dec. 1838, and on Feb. the 28th 1893, she fell asleep in Jesus. Mamma never knew what good health was, but for several years was almost an invalid. O, her sufferings were great, beyond the expression of human tongue. I have stood by her bed time and again when it would it seemed to me every breath would be her last, and would show it so plainly she would look up in my face and say, My dear child don't be so nervous over me, but trust the Lord. Her afflictions were great, but never so great that she didn't call on her blessed Savior. Her conversation ever since I can remember was of Jesus, his goodness and mercy, how he'd led her through this world of trouble and trials: for she had no friend to advise her or even protect. Her father was taken from her when she was but eight months old, and soon her mother was married to a very dissipated man, and he treated her so badly that her grandfather took her, and when she was ten years old the Lord took him from her. She has often told me at that age her troubles began. She had been a pet of her grandfather. She was then taken by her guardian and boarded out, always among stranges, until she was seventeen. Then she was married to my father, John H. Lee, the 17th of Sept. 1857. As a wife she was the most devoted and true, ever ready to lend a helping hand to her husband and willing to help bear his troubles.

The Lord says in his blessed word he gave woman to man for a helpmate, and I do know she was a faithful one to hers, and as a mother she was the most loving and affectionate mother to be sure the blessed Lord ever gave to a set of unworthy children as I feel we her children are. I feel we were too unworthy to have so sweet a dear mother.

He has taken her to himself, and now she is basking in the love of the Savior. O, her sufferings were great, but she never murmured or grumbled, but would say it was right and just. She was submissive to His will, and would ask and beg of her family to be submissive. I don't believe she had any enmity against any one. If anyone wronged or persecuted her she wasn't angry with them, but would pray for them. Often have I heard her say when any one would do her a wrong, Lord have mercy upon them, for they know not what they do. She was attended by the best physician, but he could only ease her pain for a little while. She would tell me so often when I would call him in, my dear child, there is but one physician that can heal me, and he will do it at his own appointed time. Yes, the Great One has been, and she is now cured. She was ready when he called. She told me Saturday before she died Tuesday she was ready, willing and anxious to leave this world and go to her Savior, only waiting for her summons, and told me how to have her put away. I tried to cheer her up by telling her not to talk so, hoping she would soon be better. She said yes, she would soon be better, and went on and went on and told me she wanted me to manage after she was gone, and asked the old colored woman to live with me, for she was trusty and felt too she would be kind to me. She said she hated to leave me worse than any one of the family because I was always with her and would miss her worse; but would leave me in the hands of God. Oh! it is so hard to give up my dear sweet mother. It almost breaks my heart to think I must live here without her comforting tender words, and dear sweet smiles. She was always so willing and ready to comfort me in any little trouble that might come upon me; but now she is gone, yes, she has been taken from my heart. I go in her room and it seems I ought to see and hear her sweet voice, as she always did speak some sweet tender words to me whenever I went out and would re-enter the room. But there stands her chair in her choice part of the room vacant, never can be filled. Then I go to the table, a seat is vacant there by my side. Sometimes I feel like it is more than I can bear, but then these words present themselves to me, God giveth and God taketh away. Then I must say, Blessed be the name of the Lord.

I don't grieve for my darling mother as if I had no hope; for no one could judge her from her daily walk in any way but a Christian. Although she was not connected the church until the year 1888, the 4th Sat. in June, and was baptized on Sunday 25th, by Elder P. D. Gold, and she often told me when she was laid under the water was the happiest moment of her life. Monday morning she asked me what were those bells ringing for? I told her there were no bells ringing. It was only from the effects of the quinine, but she said there were bells ringing, for she heard them, and just before sunset she asked me if everything didn't seem strange to me. I told her no, and asked her if it did to her? She said yes, every thing seemed strange and looked so, but she was so much stronger and looked so bright, I felt revived. I thought she would soon be raised from her bed of affliction and spared to me once more. After supper we had company, and she told them as they would ask her how she was she reckoned she was better. At ten o'clock all left and pa helped her up while I made her bed. After I had gotten through I went and sat by her side, and she talked with pa and myself for some time. Then she got up and walked from the chair to the bed without assistance, then told pa and me to go to bed, which we both did, but it was some time before I went to sleep; but she soon fell asleep. I soon woke up and thought it was about time to give her her quinine, but I felt her breathing against my cheek and remained quiet, for I hated to disturb her. Then she turned over from me on her back and drew one long breath, as she so often did in her sleep; but then I opened my eyes and to my surprise the lamp had gone out. I got up as soon as I could, but thought while I was lighting it perhaps she had pa to put it out while I was asleep, and had not disturbed me. Just as soon as I got it lit I went to the bedside to look after her as I always did, but O! how sad it was for me when I got to her my darling mother was breathless. She had already entered through the pearly gates of the holy city of the New Jerusalem, and there joined the angel choir above in sweet concert of praise to Him who had saved and washed her in his own blood. I had been with dear sweet mother in all her afflictions, and nursed her through hard spells of sickness, but never had seen her act and look so strange as she did during her last illness. Although her sufferings were great, but as before her eyes didn't become weak, but seemed to sparkle. As I would open the door to enter her room she would put her sweet eyes on me and they would follow me to my seat, and she would even raise her dear head from her pillow to look at me, and I would get up and go and sit on the side of her bed, and ask her if there was anything she wanted. Her reply was every time, no, nothing in this world. She would often tell me when she was young and her children were small, she asked the good Lord to let her live to raise her children to be grown, and now you are all grown. He answered my prayers, and now why should I ask Him to keep me here any longer.

She was the mother of nine children, six survive her, four married daughters, one married son, one single son, my dear old father, myself and her only sister to mourn the loss of a sweet angel wife, mother and sister. Three of her little ones preceded her in infancy. I don't want to remain here without my darling mother, and trust to God he will make peace with me and soon take me to her where we will part no more. Yes, I feel if I could only go to her how happy I would be, for I feel sure he has taken her home to heaven to live, a home not made by man, but by His own precious hand. He prepared her place before the foundation of the world. O what a sweet thought to know he has prepared a home for his people that man can't cheat and defraud them out of. No, it is a free gift from God, can't be bought with silver or gold. No; what is given us by our Heavenly Father can't be taken from us by man, blessed be the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I do ask of him to lead, guide and protect each member of her family in the way he would have us go, that we may all meet my angel mother, and O what a sweet thought to think we will live with her forever, and will never part, and again the good Lord says in his precious words, blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted, and each promise he fulfills.

BETTIE H. LEE.

MRS. ANNIE E. HOWARD.

Please publish the death of my dear mother, Mrs Thomas W. Howard, daughter of Jimmie and Louisa Salisbury. She was born in Martin Co. in the year 1849, and departed this life April 1st, 1893, making her stay on earth 52 years, 6 months and 28 days. She was the mother of seven children, four sons and three daughters, the eldest of whom a son went before her to "the better land" twenty eight years ago. The remaining six of us with our father remain on the earth and with grief stricken hearts feel the meaning of the motto, "What is home without a mother." She also leaves a loving sister, two fond brothers and many dear relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but we sincerely believe that our loss is her eternal gain.

She had been a great sufferer with dyspepsia for two years which terminated in catarrhal ulceration of the stomach. She was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist church, but am sorry to say had hesitated to make the public confession of Christ by being baptized, always rendering her unfit for an excuse. She always attended the monthly meetings at Cross Roads unless providentially hindered until December last, when she had pneumonia, from which time she never went out the house more than half-a-dozen times. In the loss of my dear mother the greatest sorrow of my life has come upon me, yet in the midst of it I feel that we all have great cause for thankfulness. I thank the good Lord that he gave me such a kind and devoted mother and that he spared her to us these many years. Oh! she suffered terribly, yet she bore her sufferings with christian meekness and fortitude, was never heard to murmur or complain, and always seemed perfectly satisfied with everything that was done for her. We believe her sufferings here worked for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory in the world to come, for we believe she is now in Paradise basking on the wings of immortal love in the sunlight of the adorable Redeemer, where those that meet part no more and those long parted meet again. The ties of nature between man and wife, mother and children are close and to part seems hard, but we should be resigned to Him who doeth all things well, for it is the Lord that giveth and the Lord that taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

I hold in high esteem the many acts of kindness bestowed on mother by relatives, neighbors and friends, and can only say, may the Lord reward you all. I sincerely hope and pray that our Heavenly Father may sanctify this sad visitation of his providence to the spiritual good of each member of my dear family circle, and that when he sees fit to take us from this earth, that we may all be prepared to meet our dear mother in heaven, where sorrow, sin and sickness will be no more,

CARRIE L. HOWARD.

passed away from this world of trial, trouble and affliction, and, I hope and believe, to a world of bliss beyond the grave, on the morning of November 30, 1891, aged 67 years, one month and some days. He was married to my sister, Louisa L. White, February 27, 1861. He was a plain, honest, truthful, upright man, a kind and appreciative husband, and a kind, obliging neighbor. When called upon for a favor it seemed that he couldn't deny—would deny himself to oblige a neighbor. He did not seem to care for much of this world's goods. He, together with his wife, united with the Primitive Baptist church at Country Line, Caswell County, N. C., in 1866, and was baptized by Elder Robert Shreves. After the death of our dear old mother, which occurred in 1883, they removed to her old homestead near Moon's Creek Church. They had their membership transferred from Country Line to Moon's Creek, of which church he was a devoted member at his death. Many were his sorrows and troubles the last few years of his life, having the misfortune to lose his dear wife, she having preceded him to the spirit land five years and five months, lacking ten days. He would sometimes speak of her as being such a good woman and how he missed her. She was everything that a wife could be. She was industrious and economical, and a good, loving wife—was ever ready to minister to his wants, to comfort him in trouble and sympathise with him in affliction, and was always true and faithful. He had been a sufferer from rheumatism for several years, and on the 20th of November, 1891, he was taken seriously ill with la grippe, which ended his existence. He suffered much, though he bore his afflictions with much patience and christian fortitude, and would often call upon his Lord during his illness. All was done that loving hands and physicians could do, but it seemed that there was no relief for him until the gate was opened for him to pass through to the great hereafter. He passed away as one going asleep, and after death he looked as pleasant and natural as in life, with a smile beaming on his countenance. He was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist faith, and seldom went among any other denominations. How sad to see his seat in the church at Moon's Creek vacant. It seemed to be his greatest pleasure to attend meetings and hear preaching, and also to have the brethren visit him. He was true to attend Associations if possible for him to do so. He was a soldier in the Mexican war, and I hope and believe

A soldier of the cross of Christ,
A follower of the Lamb;
He did not fear to own his cause,
Nor blush to speak his name.

When in usual health he said his daily prayer to the Lord—as if he was not prepared for death if his will to prepare him when on his death bed, he said he could not live in the condition he was in, and said he put his trust in the Lord. A few days after Mr. Kennon took la grippe sister and myself were both stricken with the same disease, and Oh! what a dreary, gloomy time it was with us no one knows but those that have witnessed the same that we suffered in body and in mind. After the death of his wife he remained with sister and myself. He has and will be sadly missed by us. He seemed to be ready and willing to gratify all our wishes; but he is gone never to return, gone from our sight though not from memory. He was laid to sleep his last long sleep by the side of his dear wife, whose obituary appeared in the LANDMARK of March 15th, 1887. May the Lord comfort and strengthen us to endure to the end, then receive us into his peaceful presence, where there is no death, no parting and no sorrow.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

EVERY KNEE SHALL BOW.

"That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

This language is according to prophecy, Isa. 45:23, and where it is walked out, and performed by the people, it shows the deep and incomprehensible wisdom of God, who knew all the future of mankind, and all the desires of the hearts of all men, for all time, from the day of Adam to the last day of the existence of the world, and was therefore able to make men to speak and to write what men would do, and then in the fullness of time men unknowingly fulfill the scriptures. The prophets foretold of the coming of Christ, Isa. 7:14; 9:6; Jer. 30:9; 33:15; Ez' 1 34:23; Mic. 5:2; Zec. 3:8; Mal. 3:1; Luke 1:31. Now God caused Isaiah to plainly describe the birth of Christ. The prophets bowed to him in foretelling his coming. The Jews bowed to him in looking for him, not spiritually, but naturally. The angel Gabriel bowed to him when he foretold of the birth of John the Baptist, who was to make ready a people prepared for him, and when he told Mary she should conceive and bring forth a son and call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. The angel of the Lord bowed to him when he was sent to the shepherds to bear them the news of the birth of Jesus, and the multitude of the heavenly host which appeared with the angel bowed to Jesus and confessed that Jesus was Lord, to the glory of God the Father. Then the shepherds bowed and confessed him when they went to look for Christ. Herod bowed and confessed to Christ when he tried to destroy him by slaying all the children of two years and under. Some bow and confess to Christ ignorantly, and some by faith. All bow and confess him. John bowed and confessed to him in faith, when using this language: "Behold the lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, and the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose." The devil bowed and confessed Christ, tempting him in the wilderness, for he did not speak to any other man as he spoke to Christ, nor offer any other man such rewards, for he led them captive at his will, and there was not any need to offer them any inducements to worship him. The fact of his offering to purchase the worship of Christ shows an acknowledged superiority of the strength of Christ over him, and shows that he knew he could not compel Christ to fall down and worship him, but tried to allure Christ by his lying and deceptive methods. The Jews bowed and confessed Christ ignorantly when they hanged him on a tree without offence, fulfilling the scriptures; he in whose mouth was found no gulle must needs die on a tree. They did not hang any other man without a lawful right. The rocks bowed and confessed him when crucified, by rending; the sun by failing to give light; the veil of the temple by rending in twain; the graves by opening, and the dead by rising. The author of every book that has been written or printed since Christ was born, bows to him and confesses him. The editor of every newspaper bows and confesses him. Every almanac, every law-book, every deed for land, every court of justice, every officer of the law, every monument, every tombstone, every railroad and telegraph operative of the higher class; every book-keeper; every merchant; every note bearing interest; every share in an incorporated company; every bill or piece of money; every check or draught drawn for money; every letter that is written, simply by saying how long it has been since the birth of Christ Jesus, our Lord. Every person who celebrates Christmas bows to and confesses Christ; every person who makes Christmas fire-works, and every person who buys, and those who fire them, bow to and confess Christ; every person who makes Christmas toys, or buys, or sells, or uses them, all bow to and confess Christ. The Jews, though denying the birth of Christ, date all their papers, notes, bills, draughts, accounts, books, business transactions, marriage, birth or death of a member of their families from the birth of Christ, and therefore bow to and confess him. All the inhabitants of the world since the birth of Christ have been contributing liberally to immortalize the name and birth of Christ, and therefore bowing to and confessing him. No other event ever occurred that has been kept daily before the eyes of all people as the birth of Christ, by all people keeping a daily record for nearly nineteen centuries, naming, every time they write, how many years, months, days and hours have elapsed since the birth of Christ, and in this way they all bow to and confess him Lord, to the glory of God the Father. The devils bowed to and confessed Jesus Christ when they besought Christ not to torment them, and besought Christ to suffer them to go into the swine. Luke 8: 28-32. Now the larger portion of people, while ignorantly confessing Christ when writing and talking of his birth, deny him in saying he is not able to save his people from their sins without the aid of earthly means and human instrumentality; and saying a person must act faith to have it; and saying that Christ made the way possible for all, and left the acceptance with the people; and teaching commandments of men for doctrine; teaching the law for the justification of the people; completely ignoring Christ and the gospel; saying that all people by diligently applying themselves to keeping the law, joining the church and being baptized and praying, can go to heaven, and that all people by neglecting such work will go to hell. Now there is a people who, being born again, have been given faith from above, that faithfully bow and confess Christ, and spiritually worship God, rejoicing in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. They confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father, as he hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, who is able to save unto the uttermost, them that come unto God by him; who is made unto us both wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption; who have been given a mind by the second birth to fulfill the law, living soberly and righteously in this present world as a duty to God, for which they expect nothing in return except ease of mind, and a mind void of offense toward God; and also are given the wisdom to know that Jesus Christ is their salvation; and they do not work to make themselves sons and daughters, but because they are sons and daughters. They do not worship God to obtain life eternal, but because they have eternal life abiding in them; hence they do not die, but fall asleep in Jesus. These are they that bow to and confess Jesus in faith, which is the gift of god. Humbly yours,

J. D. ARMSTRONG.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD (if one so unworthy may claim this relationship):—While listening to a Methodist minister preach a sermon from St. John 9:6-7, and finding therein so much to glorify man, I was impressed to write a few words on the same subject, and if you think them worthy, may place them in the LANDMARK.

In the beginning of this 9th chapter of John, we learn the cause of this man's blindness, viz: that the works of God should be made manifest in him. Neither the sin of his parents nor his own sin was the cause of his blindness. He was born blind—blind to the natural world and carnal things, in a sense, and it seems to me he represents all men in nature—all men not "born again" by the Spirit of God; for until one is born of God, he or she is blind to the things pertaining to the heavenly world and spiritual things. The carnal mind cannot know the things of the Spirit, for they are spiritually discerned. Without the new birth we are as blind to spiritual religion as this man was to natural things around him. The difference between this man, blind to natural things, and the unregenerated sinner to spiritual things, is this: that, whereas, the former KNEW he was blind and unable to lead himself or others aright, the other believes he can see as well as is necessary—that it is every man's privilege to see when-ever he chooses, and feels competent and qualified to lead himself and others in the way of salvation. And this very fact—the fact that a man feels himself able, within himself alone, to find the way and lead others to eternal life, is a clear proof that he is blind to spiritual things for Christ, in this connection, says "I am the light of the world," and if any man looks to anything save Christ for light, he is in darkness. If men are their own lights, they are blind, and will go astray in the works of God as easily as this blind man would in worldly things. If they have the wisdom of this world for their light, they are in darkness; if they have any light save Jesus Christ, they are in darkness; for he is the light of the world, and all other so-called light is nothing but darkness itself. "When he had thus spoken, he spat upon the ground and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay." How insignificant was this action to the world—how humiliating to men! The process was simple yet effective, and so is the religion of Jesus—a man though a fool may walk therein. Was it ever known before that there was virtue in clay to open blind eyes? and the world would reason why did not Christ command the blind eyes to see? But no; there must be, in the process, humiliation to the proud spirit of man. He must be spit upon (in sense), and the very dust of the earth brought in requisition for his cure. He is made to feel that he will do anything whatsoever Christ commands—that he is nothing, and that Christ is all and in all; that he is but a poor worm upon God's earth; that he is black with sin and can be clean only through the cleansing power of Christ; and when he feels his utter helplessness and need of such a physician as Christ, he will then go and wash. He will do as commanded, and like this blind man, he does not want to vary one jot or one tittle from the command of Christ. The blind man was told to go to a certain pool and wash, and from the command it is inferred that he is to wash one time only, for he is not told to wash (or dip) seven times as was Naaman, and in scripture that which is not commanded is forbidden. If the blind man had washed twice, or had sprinkled instead of washed, would he have been blessed? We have no example in scripture where a blessing from God was the result of disobedience. If Christ has fulfilled the law for us, set an example and commanded us to follow him, and if we feel we have been born into his kingdom—feel called to take up our cross daily, and desire to accept Christ for our Lord and Master—for our Captain, and do profess to do so, why then are we not content in doing as near as possible his commandments, and not through blind zeal go beyond that which is required, and try to make improvements upon the plan of Christ and his apostles? I believe all Primitive Baptists are content with their patron—Christ. I do not believe any of them feel worthy or capable to make a more perfect rule of action for christians than the footsteps of Christ, and his apostles. Did the present popular "missionary" work of evangelizing the world with its money basis and numerous salaried officers and workers—the present plan of making converts by sifting the young generation through the sect Sunday-schools, which teaching has a tendency to obscure God's holiness and power and man's sinfulness and dependence, and the present salaried ministry, by which a man is hired by the church to preach, and often the same man is hired by the world not to preach (by giving him better wages, thus proving that they are "hirelings" indeed), did they have their origin in the example of Christ and his apostles? If so, then the Primitive Baptists may truthfully be stigmatized as "Hard-shells," "an hundred years behind the times," etc.; but if this kind of religion is not taught in the law of Christ we are justified in not taking part in such work, and let those espouse and practice it who will, but bible Baptists will never. Why wash in this pool when there is no more virtue in this water than in other water? (Why immerse when sprinkling will do?) There is only one reason, and that is the only reason true followers of Christ care to know, viz: it is the command of Christ; and whatever he commands is right, whether it seems right to men or not. Let God be true and every man a liar. The blind man was commanded to wash in the pool of Siloam, and "he went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing." He obeyed the command of Christ with a willing heart. He did not go and consult with flesh and blood before he obeyed. He did not stop to ask questions about the necessity of this, or the reason for that. He did not "reply against God" and question his action. Christ was the author of his own action, and it must be right though it was insignificant and humiliating in the eyes of man. And so believes every child of God—what he says is truth, what he commands is right. They do not reply against God and question his justice. They are meek and lowly, and are "made willing in the day of his power." As this man was blind to natural things, so are the children of God blind to spiritual things until their eyes are opened by the same power, and as this blind man did, they too, when made to see, give God all the honor and glory. What is there in this miracle to glorify man? The clay in his hands had no virtue; spittle from his mouth had no power to open blind eyes, and working by his own command would not have restored his sight. He did only that which every poor, "helpless, blind sinner is glad to do—obeyed Christ and gave God the glory. And even though this man took no glory himself, yet there are ministers who in using this text will glorify and render praise to this blind man for his blessing, instead of giving Jesus all the glory. And these same ministers, after rendering so much praise to this blind man for doing the thing Christ commanded him to do, will not only obey and follow Christ, and be "buried with" him in baptism, but they will make this ordinance more convenient by sprinkling—substituting a mode not practiced by Christ or his apostles, and call it baptism. How inconsistent! And now, in closing this imperfect letter, I will say I have thought the clay here represented God's chosen ministers, the spittle the Spirit of Christ, and the application and result the work of God.

The clay had nothing to do with choosing or qualifying itself for this wonderful work: neither do God's ministers appoint and prepare themselves for their heavenly work. They, as the clay, are earthen vessels in the hands of the great and wise Potter. The clay was broken and mashed up by Christ for the application. God's ministers must have their self-will and self-righteous spirit broken up, and they must be prepared by the same power. And after the clay had received the spittle it could not apply itself to the blind eyes; neither can God's ministers, after they have received the Holy Ghost lead themselves, of their own will aright, but must be led (carried) by the Spirit of God. And when thus chosen, qualified by the power of God and led by his Spirit, and through his power the message they deliver is applied to blind eyes, deaf ears and hard hearts, which, when prepared by the same power, receive the message (application), are led by the same Spirit in the way of obedience and like the clay and spittle are made to work the works of God, and the hearers, like the blind man, receive a blessing the world cannot give nor take away. Your little brother, if one at all,

R. H. PITTMAN.

Bishopville, S. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I cannot tell you how utterly unworthy I feel to thus address you; but if I know my own sinful heart, I love you and all the household of faith as brothers and sisters. I have been a member of the church only a short time, and I feel if they knew me as well as I know myself they would not fellowship me. When I joined I thought I would lead a holy life, as it is written, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." I thought I would go softly all the rest of my days; but alas! I am constantly doing something or saying something that I regret, which gives me scruples. We cannot attain to anything like perfection in this life. How consoling to think we are kept by the power of God through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. I look at some of the members of other churches around me. They do not seem to be troubled in the least about the kind of life they lead, and seem to think if they go to church and pay their dues that is all that is necessary. Why is it that I am not that way? I desire to live nearer to God every day that I live, and that he may keep me in the path of duty and forbid that I should turn to the right or to the left from following after him, but that I may press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. I wrote you a portion of my experience some time in October and asked your advice about the impressions I had, but do not know whether or not you received it. I was in a great deal of trouble and felt that I must write to some one. I am young, and I did not want to deceive the people I loved; but I think I have learned or will learn that it is "I will, and you shall," in everything; for I fought against the impression and staid away as long as I could. But I think I have received the answer of a good conscience in obedience since I was baptized. My prayer now is that I may adorn the profession I have made with an orderly walk and a godly conversation. I have been unusually low-spirited for several days. It seems the Lord has hid his face from me as it were. Oh! that he would bless me with one more token of his love, though I do not feel worthy of the temporal blessings that I enjoy, much less the spiritual ones. From one who feels to be the least of all the saints, if, indeed, I am one,

ANNIE ROBERTSON.

Mount Cross, Va.

Remark.

If there are any dear ones to me in the flesh, those that feel they are poor and needy are of that number. They are the dear little ones. We must be tried, and through much tribulation enter the kingdom.

Two things are plainly seen in the church. One is the poverty of God's people. The other is the praises they render unto the Lord. We must be shown our vileness to feel our poverty, and when we in our distress and poverty call on the Lord, and he delivers us, then we praise him and ascribe greatness to our Maker. Praise belongeth to God, and his people know this, and hence their very poverty abounds to their liberality in rendering praise to Him, and the poorest gives the most liberally, and God loves a cheerful giver.

I hope and think the time will come when our dear sister will thank God for all her afflictions.

P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have a subject that has been on my mind for two years or more. I have spoken of it in private conversation several times and have had it on my mind to write out a short piece and send to you for publication. Then I would think perhaps it might insult some of the brothers or sisters who are guilty of the same filthy habit I had been guilty of. About two years ago I was made ashamed of chewing tobacco and spitting on the church-house floor. I was in great trouble about what my duty was—whether it was my duty to speak in the name of the Lord or not. I was in such distress I felt than none but the God of heaven could relieve me, and felt he could. I wanted a sign, and prayed for it. One night while in this distress I had a dream or vision. I was in a meeting-house. It was nice and clean and there was a large congregation of people standing up. They were nice and neat, and in the house there was a man near me dressed in fine white linen—a most lovely man. I cannot describe his appearance it was so attractive. He said "Let the people be seated." As he spoke they all sat down except he and myself. I started to sit down but he would not let me, but made me stand up with him, and here is what he said, seemingly, to all that were in the house: "Avoid the use of tobacco, for decency becometh the house of the Lord." I never see any one using tobacco in the church-house but the vision comes plain to my mind. I do not feel that it is any more proper to have a filthy church-house than it is to live in a filthy house at home. I never saw a true Primitive Baptist that liked that that I know of. I saw a church-house not very long ago where they had chewed tobacco and spit up around the pulpit, and put dirt on it and spit on that until it did not look like the house I saw that night. I never saw a man preach with a chew of tobacco in his mouth, and why cannot the rest do without it while he preaches? Brother Gold, I do not wish to offend any one, nor to shrink back from what I feel is my duty. I have written this because it got on my mind and I could not get clear of it. If it is of the Lord may he bless it and cause it to have its desired effect. He shall have the praise. Your brother in Christ, I do hope, ISAAC S. SMITH.

Water, N. C.

Remark.

I fully agree with brother Smith, that it is right for a meeting-house to be kept neat and clean, literally, and still more important for the members to be so spiritually and inwardly.

We should have a decent regard for our houses for worshipping God in. They should be plain and neat, and comfortable, not showy and vain, though.

If a brother or sister cannot refrain from chewing tobacco while preaching is going on, let them have boxes or spittoons to spit in,

and have them cleaned out now and then.

While the principle of worship is the chief thing, still a decent regard to outward appearances ought to be observed always. Let ALL things be done decently and in order.

Suppose you wish to kneel down when you pray; you would not like to get down in tobacco spittle. Suppose neatly dressed ladies wish to sit down or kneel down when they pray, but cannot keep their dresses from being stained by tobacco spittle, would it be nice?

We commend brother Smith's remarks, and suggest that some good sisters (and brethren might help them,) meet early enough on Saturday morning at our meeting-houses, to go over the houses with good sweepings before preaching, and do this at every meeting.

If any window-glass are out, put them in, and make the house comfortable for cold weather. What our hands find to do let it be done with diligence, even in such little things as this, and let all help about such expenses. P. D. G.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LESTER:—I have been thinking for some time I would write my little experience, but I feel so small it is a task. My health and unworthiness have prevented me from doing so. I hope the Lord will direct me. I was raised by Primitive Baptist parents, and believed the Primitive Baptist to be the true church. I was wild, but often had serious thoughts about death; but thought I was as good as anybody, and that when I was married I would try to settle myself. One day I was in my room in the house and heard a roaring in the elements. I went to my room and saw myself a justly condemned sinner begging for mercy. To my surprise I had been a sinner all my days and was lost forever. Oh, I never expected to see the sun rise again! I could not sleep nor eat—all my cry, "Lord be merciful to me, a sinner." I would read the LANDMARK. I thought that was what kept me in such distress, so I put them away and read the bible, but found no comfort. I was taken sick and mother came to see me. I hid my bible; and read to myself and would read for her, as I did not want her to think I cared for it. I would get so full I could not read and thought I was going to die. She said, "My child, be of good cheer: I believe you are under conviction. The Lord never begins a work but he finishes it." I did not think so, for I thought I would know it. I prayed to be submissive to the Lord's will, and went on in this way begging for mercy, and could not sleep. I would look at the sun set and would think I would never see it rise again. On the 1st of August, 1878, I thought my time had come. I went to myself and tried to pray, but feared I would sink in the ground. I then went up stairs, but it was too high: the Lord would not hear my prayers. If my soul was lost it would be just; but I should go begging for mercy. A hail-storm came: and I went to the door crying for mercy. I said the Lord would do right, and I went to the bible and prayed that I might find something to relieve my mind. I opened the bible at the 10th chapter of Romans. Oh, such light! My troubles left me, and I feared to stop reading for fear my troubles would come again. I slept all night. Oh! it was so bright I felt like praising God; but I did not take it for religion. I soon had doubts and fears, and would go to the churches and think I wanted to be with them; but I felt so unworthy for ten years and became so distressed that I thought I was going to die: the Lord was taking me for my disobedience. I went to Story's Creek Saturday before the 3d Sunday in October, 1887, and told part of my experience, and was received at Story's Creek church, and was baptized Sunday morning by brother A. Bialock. I felt that my troubles were all gone, and went on my way rejoicing; but doubts soon returned. I feel that I want to be with you, brethren, and I hope to live with you and all christians. I want to pray for all, and I want you all to pray for me and mine; and I have the hope that I have seen, by the eye of faith, the things that God has prepared for them that love him; and if I am saved it will be through the mercy of God, and not by my own merit. I do feel to be, at the feet of Jesus, the least of all.

LUCY A. HORRON.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I am traveling and preaching in Mississippi, and have been on this tour nearly three months. My first appointments were in western Arkansas, in the Union Association. The land and the people are poor. There is a trouble in that Association on the doctrine of the spiritual birth, and two churches have divided into factions. I labored among both parties to try to bring about a unity in the faith, for that is one object of evangelistic work. God gave to the church evangelists for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, etc., as well as pastors. Let each man abide in his calling. Both parties endorsed my preaching on the subject, and seem to have gotten together again on this point of doctrine, but have not come together in church organization. One party held that the whole man is this side the resurrection born again; the other held that it was the inner man. Both held that man is at present quickened, but that his body is not yet; hence it must be his spirit. Both believed that man goes to Paradise when his body dies, but that his body does not go there; hence both believe that it is man's spirit. One claimed that there is in us prior to regeneration an inner and an outer man; the other denied that, but believed what the other meant. One believed that God's children are not partakers of flesh and blood prior to regeneration; the other denied this, but believed what they meant. They meant that man has a spirit and a body before regeneration, but are not God's regenerated children. Neither believed the doctrine of soul-sleeping nor the doctrine of eternal children—viz: that God's children are as old as himself, or existed as children before time. One party doubtless appeared to the other as soul-sleepers, hence the trouble. There certainly must have been some other cause of the division lying underneath—some old sore that broke out in a new form, which is often at the bottom of nearly all divisions in churches. One party was thought to hold the doctrine of extreme predestination, but in talking with them on this subject they made the following statement of their belief: "We do not believe that God is the author or approver of sin, but that he uses wicked men to accomplish some of his purposes. We believe that God predestinated his own use of them, but not Satan's use of them;" that is, they do not believe that God fore-ordained sin, such as bad motives, evil designs, or the wickedness of events. I suppose they believe that it would not be necessary to fore-ordain the works of Satan, just as it would not be necessary to fore-ordain the actions of a hungry wolf towards an innocent sheep. I might determine the death of the sheep by bringing it in sight of the wolf. In such a case I would decree my own doings and the sheep's death, but not the wolf's doings, just as God sent Joseph the dreamer into Egypt by bringing him as such before his jealous brethren. It was not necessary to fore-ordain their jealousy, nor the fruit of it, that is to say, the wickedness of their doings. We read the wicked are God's sword. We all believe that, but they are not God's wicked. A brother once said that God will have all the preaching done that he wants done. Said I, do you also say that he will have all the lies told that he wants told? He agreed with me that he did not authorize the telling of lies; that they came from another source, that they flowed from the fountain of sin, and that God did not make sin, or originate bad motives, hypocrisy, deception, or the wickedness of events. Suppose they agree with me that Shimei's cursing of David was not God's cursing, but was God's chastisement, and that David's prosperity kept Shimei bound; but when God's judgments bound David that the binding of David was the loosing of Shimei. In that sense God bade him curse David; beside, David was, or had been a bloody man. Doubtless the evil spirit which was upon Saul from the Lord was irritable of temper caused by the afflicting hand of God, and when David played on his harp it soothed his temper, just as sweet music will generally do. I have never found our brethren who believe predestination of all things to be Arminians nor means Baptists, and I have felt very much at home with them feeling assured that I believed what they meant, and that they meant that God is a Sovereign, and rules the whole world by influencing, permitting and restraining. We all believe that God sends one wicked nation against another, that they are his sword and his nation, but not his wicked: Zec. 12. We believe that God took Job's property from him, although the Sabaeans and the Chaldeans robbed him, that they were not God's robbers, but Satan's; but they were God's sword. Some say that God permissively decreed sin, which is not so much objectionable, but is nevertheless a mistake. If to permit is to decree then we may substitute it in the place of it, and say whom God foreknew he also pre-destinated to be conformed to the image of his son; also as many as he permitted to eternal life believed, instead of as many as he fore-ordained. God decreed to permit sin, but his decree relates to the permission of it, and not to the thing permitted. I have met only one preacher on this tour who believes that God decreed the wickedness of events—or sin, as such. He is a pleasant, courteous and lovely brother, and I am glad to know that he believes that God hates sin and did not originate it in man, although he held that God originated dispositions to lie, blaspheme, murder, etc., but not in man; that is to say he originated sin, but not in man, but I do not believe it. I hope to return to La Grange, N. C., in June. Yours in love,

I. J. TAYLOR.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Having returned to West Virginia after an absence of over three months on a preaching tour and being requested by many of the brethren and sisters to have my trip published in the LANDMARK, I will try to give a sketch of it. On the 24th and 25th of Dec. 1892 I preached at Camp Creek church on Flat Top Mountain. There I met with Elders I. Lilly, W. L. Simmons and A. McKinney. We were favored with a meeting. Then I went to Indian Creek Church. On account of the rough weather there were but few out. I went from there to the Flat Woods church; there I met a large congregation and had a good meeting, and met with Elders R. Ballard and I. Cummings. By the request of brethren and friends I went and preached at the Missionary church at Rock Camp. I then went on to Floyd Co. Va., to the White Oak Grove Church, where I first had my membership. There I had the pleasure of meeting with Elder A. Dickerson, the one that baptized me, and also brethren and sisters and kind friends. On Tuesday after I preached at the Lick Log School House, and enjoyed myself well. The day following, I preached at a school house near there to a well composed congregation. I then went in company with Brother Charles Lester to Laurel Creek Church meeting. There we had a most delightful meeting. On Monday Brother Furgurson took me to my Uncle Isaiah Sumner's. I preached that night at the brick house near there. On the 5th Sunday in January I preached at a school house on Little River. There I met with Elders Dickerson and Weeks. We had a good meeting. Monday night I preached at the Slusher School House. Tuesday night preaching was at a school house on West Fork and had a very good meeting. Wednesday night I preached at Brother Morell Dickerson's to an attentive congregation. On Thursday night I preached at the Moore School House to a large congregation. Saturday morning they conveyed me to the Pine Creek Church Meeting. I preached Saturday and Sunday, and went from there to the Country Line Church on the Blue Ridge, and preached on Tuesday and also Friday at that church with Elder A.

Short. On Friday night I preached at Brother Wm. Thompson's in Patrick County. On Saturday and Sunday I was at Lonely Branch Church. On Monday I preached at a school house near there. Tuesday I preached at the McAlexander School House again, to a large congregation. On Friday preaching was at Mr. Hall's in Patrick Co. Saturday and Sunday I preached at Jack's Creek Church. There I met with Elders Lawson Matherly and Connor and enjoyed myself well with them all. I then went to Panes Creek in Floyd Co. The weather being so cold there was no preaching on Saturday. Sunday I met with Elder Turner and a good congregation, and enjoyed the meeting. On Tuesday I preached at the same place to a large congregation. Tuesday Night I preached at Mr. Bells, I also visited Brother George Ingram, Sister Canady, and many others. On Friday I preached at a school house on my way to Salem Church, and staid that night at Mr. Enoch Wilson's. Saturday and Sunday I preached at Salem Church to a large and attentive congregation. I went home with Brother M. H. Caster Saturday night. On Sunday night I preached at Mr. West's. On Monday Brother Jonathan Connor conveyed me to the Pine Forest School House and preached at twelve o'clock. Monday night I preached at old Brother Connor's. Wednesday night preaching was at Brother Poffs.

I attended fifty three meetings and tried to preach fifty one times. I never enjoyed a trip better. The Baptists are generally in peace where I was.

I shall start in a few days if the Lord wills to see the brethren and sisters in the Pocatalico Association about one hundred miles west of here.

Dear Brother Gold, please put the above in the LANDMARK. Yours in gospel bonds. DAVID SUMNER.

MRS. S. A. EDWARDS, MY DEAR SISTER:—Your very kind and welcome letter is at hand, and I will hasten to reply. I was glad you thought enough of me, and trust I appreciate your loving favor. While we will miss you at Lawrence's, I do hope you will be able to get to see us occasionally, if not so often, and while we can't see your face here, I trust you may have the opportunity of visiting other churches sometimes. I am glad you are so near one Primitive church and hope the good Lord will enable you to attend, and that you may enjoy the blessing; for I do think to be able to attend our meetings and to be made able to enjoy the preaching as I think you do, is a great blessing. Yes, if we can't attend but one church it is a great favor which the blessed Lord bestows upon us, and for which we should be thankful. I know the blessed Lord is good and merciful, but I feel like I can't appreciate his loving kindness and tender mercies as I could wish. I would be glad if I could write and express my feelings as you do; but it seems that I can't. Yet, if I am one of the Lord's children I should try to be content. I know I have been greatly blessed, and trust I sometimes can appreciate it. I know the Lord is a sun and shield, he will give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from those who walk uprightly. Oh, if we could always be found walking in the straight and narrow path! But, sister Edwards, I, for one, feel like I can't walk in it as I so much desire. I hope the change you have made will be the best for you, and that the Lord has directed you, and if he has, you need not fear—you will be successful and find work. The future sometimes looks very dark to us; but where or to whom should we go but to the blessed Lord? If we go to him, trusting not in an arm of flesh, he surely will direct as aright. He is able to wipe all tears away. Yes, when our race is run, and we come to leave this world of trouble, I trust we may land on that happy shore and rest in the arms of our thrice blessed Jesus. Jesus, Jesus! how sweet that name sounds in a believer's ear; it soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds, and drives away his fears. Well, I will close this uninteresting letter. This leaves us all well except myself. I have been suffering with a cold of late which don't seem to improve much. All join me in love. I hope you will write again and come to see us when you can. May the good Lord be with you and yours. Your loving sister, as I trust,

M. HOBBS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—As many of the dear brethren and sisters with whom I met on my late tour in the eastern part of this state requested me to write on my return, I now make the attempt, desiring that I may be directed by the good Spirit of Truth. I was blessed to visit the old church at South Quay, Va., once more, and found them in peace and love. They had not had any preaching since December. I was blessed, I hope, to speak to them of Jesus, and his goodness and mercy to his poor and needy people. I next visited Flatty Creek church, in Pasquotank County, and found the dear brethren and sisters here all in love and peace. Preached for them one day and night, which they appreciated very much. I was sorry to find dear brother Charlie Meads in feeble health. I hope he is better. He is highly esteemed, and justly so, as a faithful minister.

DID CHRIST WASH HIS DISCIPLES' FEET BEFORE THE PASSOVER?

1st. The supper being ended at which the devil put into the heart of Judas to betray Christ, Jesus rising from supper began to wash his disciple's feet: John 13: 1—17.

Having loved his own unto the end he washes their feet. What love. Mary loved him and she washes his feet. Jesus loved his disciples so that he condescended to wash their feet. When we truly are humble and love each other then we can wash each others' feet.

Matthew (26: 6—16) tells us that Judas plotted to betray Jesus at the supper at Bethany and this was before the feast of the passover. Mark states, (Mark 14: 1—11) that at the feast in Bethany before the passover Judas went unto the chief priests to betray Jesus.

Luke also states (22: 3—5) that Satan entered into Judas who went and communed with the chief priests and captains and they covenanted with him how he might betray him unto them. This was before the feast of unleavened bread which is the feast of the passover. Now here we have a declaration of John that the devil having now put into the heart of Judas to betray Christ was the time he washed their feet: also we have the three witnesses Matthew, Mark and Luke all stating expressly that Judas went to the chief priests and covenanted to betray Jesus before the feast of the unleavened bread or passover. Judas did not of course seek conference with the chief priests to betray Christ until Satan had put it into his heart.

So that it is fixed by all their testimony that Judas agreed to betray Christ before the feast of the passover: and John tells us Jesus washed their feet at the time the devil put this into the heart of Judas. Therefore Jesus washed their feet before the passover or feast of unleavened bread.

2nd. We know that the Lord's supper was just after the feast of the passover or of unleavened bread: See Matt. 26: 17—30; Mark 14: 12—20; Luke 22: 7—22. All these show that while they were eating the passover he took bread and blessed and brake, and also the cup he blessed and this is the Lord's supper.

3rd. Another event fixes and proves this to my understanding. It is this, Jesus says, (John 13: 21-30) and this was after he had washed their feet, that one of you shall betray me. They enquire who it is. He says to whom I shall give a sop, and He gave it to Judas. Now John tells us this came to pass after he had washed their feet. But when do Mathew, Mark, and Luke say he gave Judas that sop? Matthew says (Matt. 26: 20-25) that while they were eating the passover feast Jesus told who should betray him. Mark says, (14: 17—21) that Jesus told them at the passover that Judas should betray him.

Luke also declares that at the passover Jesus told them that one of them whose hand was with him on the table should betray him, (Luke 22: 15—23.) It was at the supper of the feet-washing that Peter besought John to ask Jesus who should betray him: John 21: 20, also John 13: 23—27. Then just after the supper before the passover Judas agreed to betray Christ, and just after the Lord's supper at the passover he did betray him. It was between these suppers Jesus washed their feet.

All these things prove that he washed their feet before the passover, and therefore before the Lord's supper.

The several chapters following the 13th of John, in which Jesus declares so many wonderful things unrecorded by any other writer, shows that it all occurred (feet-washing, and the declarations contained in those chapters) before the passover; because he was betrayed on the very night of the passover and immediately after the passover. (Matt. 26: 31—47; Mark 14: 27—46.) * So that these wonderful declarations recorded in the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th chapters of John could not have been uttered between the Lord's supper and the crucifixion. John does not record the events of the passover and the Lord's supper in full, but merely refers to them. He wrote many things that none of the others wrote, and left off many things that the others wrote: but all that they all wrote is needful.

4th. While this in my mind does not in the least lessen the importance of feet-washing, still I insist that it is unwise to connect it with the Lord's supper to the hurt of brethren and churches unless it is proven that it must be observed there only.

Is it not unwise, unbrotherly and distressing to the cause of truth to force brethren to wash feet at the Lord's supper, when it cannot be proved, neither by the example or language of Jesus, nor a single apostle that he did it after the Lord's supper. John says before the feast of the passover—supper being ended. Before does not mean after. Besides, do you know of any place in the bible where the feast of the passover is called a supper. If it is so called in the bible I have failed to find it. The Lord's supper followed the feast of the passover. This contention causes division among Baptists. We never hear of any contention among them on anything plainly declared. It is not wise nor profitable to make this contention. Far more brotherly love would be shown, and much more of the true spirit of feet-washing would be practiced by bearing with one another until each one is fully persuaded in his own mind. Such conduct would commend true feet-washing much more effectually to the hearts of brethren.

Being impressed that feet-washing is right I am willing to wash feet at any place or time where it appears to me that brethren are in the humble and lowly spirit thereof.

If you know any thing the Lord commands, happy are you if you do it. To keep the sayings of Jesus in truth is the most important of all things. It is manifest that feet-washing is a good work because Paul thus considers it. It is also manifest that all God's people were not careful to maintain all good works from the declarations of scripture. It is also manifest that some would beat the men servants and maid servants because that they would not do all that some contentious people desired to be done.

It is also manifest that one may contend in the letter for the mastery, and yet not have the spirit of charity, and may oppress God's humble poor by straining at a matter in itself proper, but to which he attaches some circumstance giving it a wrong place or importance in the sense that he neglects things much more frequently taught in scripture.

P. D. G.

A CERTAIN YOUNG MAN.

"And there followed him a certain young man having a linen cloth cast about his naked body: and the young men laid hold of him; and he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked." Mark 14:51, 52.

I have been requested to express my view of this portion of the word of God.

A certain young man followed.

It was not a matter of chance or uncertainty. No such thing is allowed in the occurrence of the events connected with the life of Jesus.

Two things impress my mind in this incident. One is the great terror and excitement manifested in this matter. When Jesus was seized by the rabble such consternation fell upon his disciples that they all forsook him and fled, and fear also caused this young man to flee naked from them. Every one that had any affection for Jesus, or that was in any danger because of him, or under any suspicion fled. Such was the power of darkness that reigned in that dreadful hour that all hearts were full of fear, except those servants of Satan engaged in the murder of that Just One. Hence this young man fled even naked rather than fall into the hands of these murderers.

The other thought is that it represents in a type the character of Jesus in that divine nature that men could not take hold of. The linen cloth shadowing forth the pure humanity of Jesus is left in the hands of wicked men, but the young man fleeing shadows forth the departure of the divinity from Jesus as he went into death, for that could not be taken by man, nor die, nor could Jesus die until that separation: but as soon as the divine nature was withdrawn at once the man sinks under the weight of the burden of the sins of the people, though pure and spotless as typified by linen, and that in which the Godhead was manifest.

Every child of God is a partaker of the divine nature, for in the child of God is Jesus in Spirit, and he follows Jesus to death; but Christ dying for him, he escapes and leaves time forever in the dew of eternal youth. He does not see death.

P. D. G.

PREACHING.

The subject of preaching is one which all preachers should understand, that they may not only be able to preach, but while preaching to explain the purpose of, or that which is designed to be accomplished by it. The Lord has a purpose in having the gospel preached, and it cannot accomplish more nor less than he determined from the beginning that it should. Therefore nothing but preaching in the simplicity and power of the gospel is of any worth to the children of God or any praise to his name.

We should not only be established in our being called to preach, but equally so in what we must preach. Sometimes I hear brethren say they do not know that they have ever been called or sent to preach. With the same propriety one could say he did not know that what he preached was the word—the gospel—the truth, or he does not know that he has a hope—that he has passed from death unto life—that he loves the brethren.

By what authority does one question his call or that which he preaches? By virtue of what kind of qualification does he expect his hearers to know he preaches the truth when he does not know it himself? The gospel carries with it the idea of authority, the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. It is Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God. The knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ whom he hath sent is eternal life. One therefore who has this life knows Christ, and Christ is the Truth, therefore he knows the Truth.

When one preaches the truth he realizes its power, knowledge, authority, wisdom and assurance, and under such circumstances it comes to the believer the same way, and he believes it and rejoices in it and knows it is the truth. It comes to him in no uncertain sound, but in faith and in much assurance.

One may well and truly hope in the mercy of God, but he could not well say that he hopes he is called to preach, or he hopes he preaches the truth. One's hope does not contemplate the past nor the present, but the future. The reason thereof is deduced from things in the past, but the consummation is in the future.

Preaching springs from a dispensation of the gospel committed unto us and is in and present with us, and as much as in us is we are ready to preach the gospel wherever it is to be preached.

A call to preach comes with such irresistible power and so forcibly impresses ones mind to take up, or bear the cross which he necessarily realizes must attend such a work, that he becomes thoroughly convinced that the divine injunction to preach the gospel is imposed upon him. If he refuse or rebel, which is generally the case to a greater or less extent, famine in soul and spirit takes hold upon him and he cannot refrain.

It seems to me that under the circumstances attending a call to the work of the ministry, the one so called must know that such is the case. I do not mean that he knows this like he knows natural things, but as spiritual things are known—of the Spirit and not of the flesh. He knows it in such a way that it is not consistent with his preaching nor the doctrine he should preach to say he does not know he is called to preach. Such declarations weaken the force of the preaching in the minds of the hearers, or rather tend to produce questionings in their minds as to whether the word spoken is with authority as of one ordained to preach the gospel. It would come to them like the saying, "Do not do as I do, but do as I tell you." We are commanded to examine ourselves whether we be in the faith. When we feel the need of such examination it is not inconsistent with our being in the faith to feel an anxiety as to whether such is really the case, but the result of this examination must be the assurance that we are in it.

We are also commanded to take heed unto ourselves and unto the doctrine, and continue in them; for in doing this we shall both save ourselves and them that hear us. After taking such heed, the assurance that we are in the doctrine must certainly follow, and the same assurance is established in the hearts of them that hear; whereby they are brought into our doctrine and fellowship, and are saved from things to the contrary.

It is not profitable for us to tell just how we feel when we attempt to preach. We may feel for the time being cold and without any understanding or light, and very soon come into a broad place full of living waters, radiant with infinite light, and be given much liberty of thought and expression. Now if we have told our former feelings, some may conclude we are inconsistent, having seen the liberty afterwards manifested. Suppose when we get up to preach, we feel to be clothed with light and say that we are in the light, then are shut up in darkness and cannot come forth; what would be our feelings, and what the thoughts of the hearers? But I do not remember ever hearing one say he was in the light when he began to preach nor when he quit, but have often heard brethren say they were in the dark when they commenced or as they closed their remarks. I have a few times done the latter myself, but I should not have done it, at least it amounted to nothing.

Sometimes we announce to the people that we have but little or no education. That is not necessary, for the people will soon find that out, besides it seems as much as to say: "If we had education or more of it, we could preach and preach better," whereas we know a man cannot preach without the Spirit of Christ however much education he may have, and if he has the Spirit he can preach the gospel whether he knows the laws of language or not. We know, and hold education to be a good thing, but not as an indispensable prerequisite to the preaching of the gospel.

An apologetical introduction to a gospel sermon—rendering many and varied excuses, is worse than a ten minutes' talk on the most prominent secular issues of the day. There is no gospel in apologies of this kind.

Sometimes we allow ourselves to acquire the habit of what is termed fighting arminians, and I have witnessed instances where a discourse of an hour's length was devoted to this kind of fighting, when there was not an arminian present, but to the contrary, every one present was a member of the church to whom the discourse should have been addressed. The children of God only are subjects of gospel address, and not arminians. There is nothing, perhaps, better calculated to starve a child of God than to continually tell him what arminians believe and are doing.

The arminian principles which every child of God has in the flesh should be designated and rebuked, or rather he should be warned of the dangers lurking in his own flesh, and have his pure mind stirred up by way of remembrance of all things which make up his experience and hope of better things.

The true object of preaching is to feed the lambs and sheep of the Master. To preach is to set forth Christ crucified as he is revealed in his people the hope of glory, and the more the doctrine preached confirms the experience of believers, the better they are fed and the more firmly they are bound by the principles of the religion of Christ. Preaching seeks out, calls forth, identifies, beautifies and glorifies the hope of him who believes in Jesus. It exalts Christ and abases the sinner. It sets forth the true doctrine of salvation together with the joys thereof, the ordinances and order of the church, the privileges of the children of God, and the discipline which maintains the order of the church and the development of the members. It richly savors of the sufferings of Christ, the glory which follows, of that love which is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and the fellowship of the Father, the Son, the Spirit, the apostles, and those who are present, and strongly knits together the members of the household of faith, giving each favor in the sight of all the others, filling each heart with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

BROTHER H. C. BOOKER.

This brother, now about 73 years of age, is a remarkable man to me in many respects.

He told me that when about 19 years of age he attended a singing school with the understanding that if he did not learn to sing a tune he was not to pay anything for tuition. Up to the 11th day he had not been able to sound a note musically. The other scholars avoided his company in the class because his voice was so harsh and unmusical. He had learned the rudiments and rules of music, but there was no music in his voice. He could not sound a note. On the evening of the 11th day of the school, which was of 14 days' length, he, in crossing a stream of water, fell into it and got up singing, and could sing anything he chose without trouble. The next day the scholars, generally, desired seats near him, but he told them they had formerly rejected him, and now he would choose his own companions among the sons and daughters of music. At the end of that school he was chosen by 30 out of 33 over their present teacher to teach the next singing school. I suppose he paid the teacher for the former tuition. He said he could sing for 24 hours and his voice would remain good and firm, musical and sweet, singing any part of the music he chooses. He has been sent for many miles to sing to sick and dying people.

Now, though an old man, his voice is strong, musical and clear—no break in it. It seems to be no effort to him to sing. I have never heard him make a failure at all in singing.

He has visited more churches and Associations, going further, more frequently and cheerfully, than any man within my knowledge. I think he is a warm, lively brother, excellent company, a capital Deacon, dwelling chiefly in his conversation on scriptural topics. He is a thorough Baptist, and it is very cheering to me to hear him sing. He has a gift of singing, and when you hear him you feel like adoring God, the giver of all blessings, and rejoicing to hear singing, and feel the power of that new song, for he sings with the spirit and with the understanding.

His name is Henry C. Booker; his post office is Mt. Airy, N. C. He is not a lazy man. He has a good farm, a charming home, a precious wife given to him of the Lord, and many a Baptist has been entertained at his pleasant home.

P. D. G.

WHAT IS SINNING AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST?

Brother S. G. Via, of W. Va., requests my view of what is the sin against the Holy Ghost.

"Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

"And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

Matt. 12:31-32

Men judge according to the spirit that is within them, and they speak according to the same rule. So that our interpretations of scripture show our character, and our judgments show whether we are of the truth or not. So that by a man's words he is justified or condemned.

The Pharisees showed their enmity to Christ by charging a collusion between him and the devil, saying, that "This fellow doth not cast out devils but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils." This shows the bitterness of their enmity to him. Nothing could have been worse.

His reasoning is unanswerable:

"Every kingdom divided against itself shall fall. If Satan cast out Satan how then shall his kingdom stand?" because he would then be divided against himself. Baptists ought to remember that even devils are not divided against themselves, knowing that when they are they shall fall. Men of the world know this. But how often the children of light split up, divide, and get to strife. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

If Jesus cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils, then by whom did the children of the Pharisees cast them out? By any better power? No. Their own children would condemn them.

What is the power by which devils are cast out? By the Spirit of God only. Then no doubt the kingdom of God is come among them. To rail against this work of casting out devils is to utter blasphemy against the Holy Ghost; for it is only by the Holy Ghost that they could be cast out.

Words uttered against Jesus might be forgiven. Whosoever speaks against the Son of man it shall be forgiven him. He makes redemption for sins in his own body on the tree, and all sins that he died for or that are committed against him are forgiven.

But blasphemy committed against the Holy Ghost is never forgiven. There is no redemption for such.

There could be no greater blasphemy than that committed by those men charging the casting out of devils to the prince of devils, when it could only be done by the Spirit or finger of God.

How could there be forgiveness or salvation to a character blaspheming the Holy Spirit, or ascribing his gracious operations and work to the chief of devils?

The Holy Ghost, the Comforter, is the Spirit of God, quickening the dead and convincing of sin, and revealing the Lord Jesus, and taking the things of him and showing them unto us. He is the Spirit of Truth, guiding us into all truth, illuminating, teaching and instructing us in all truth. We can say that Jesus is Lord, only by the Holy Ghost. He is the Spirit of joy and peace, of faith and love. We know nothing of ourselves or of the kingdom of heaven until we are born of the Spirit of God. The Spirit only knoweth the deep things of God. No man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man; even so no man knoweth the things of God, but only the Spirit of God. If we know anything of the things of God it is by the Spirit of God revealing them to us.

Then to ascribe the blessed work of the Spirit of God to the chief of devils excludes the guilty from all hope of forgiveness forever, or of participation in the things of the kingdom of God.

Sin against the Son of man could be forgiven. But such blasphemy against the Holy Ghost could never be forgiven. For if the Holy Ghost is in one he could never by the Spirit call Jesus accursed. To blaspheme against the Holy Ghost shows the most devilish, satanic spirit of one utterly cast off, for whom there never is forgiveness.

P. D. G.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—About three months ago I read an article written by an Old Baptist minister in which the following sentences occurred. "In thinking of the Lord we can only do so with such ideas as we have of moral good and moral evil." "If I think of God at all I must do so with a finite mind, for this is all the mind the Lord has given me."

At the time I made some comments upon this, which I will now send you to publish in the LANDMARK, if you think best.

Can we with the finite mind think of God at all correctly? I have understood the scriptures to teach otherwise. A birth from above is necessary in order that a man shall even see the kingdom of God. The second birth manifests a life not before possessed, with powers and qualities that do not belong to the life of the first man, Adam, which was manifest in our first birth. While in the possession of that life of the natural man only, we could not with the finite mind belonging to that life, see, or know, or approach unto, or think about the true God, "Whom no man hath seen or can see; whom no man can approach unto," "No man hath seen God at any time, but the Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath revealed him," "No man knoweth the Father, save the Son, and he to whom soever the son will reveal him."

If, therefore, the natural man cannot know God or the things of the Spirit of God "because they are spiritually discerned," when those who are born again do know him, and are able to have his thoughts, which alone are right, it must be because they have a power of vision, of thinking and of judgment, which has come to them in the new birth, which they did not possess before. So we read in 1st John, 5: 20, that the understanding by which the Son of God is known was given by himself, and that those who "know him that is true, are in him that is true, even in his Son, Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life." About this God there can be no correct thoughts or judgment except what God reveals to us. His thoughts are not our thoughts, nor are our ways his. Isa. 55: 8. The things that he has prepared for them that love him, and his thoughts concerning them, cannot be seen by the eye, nor heard by the ear, nor can they enter into the heart of man. Isa. 64: 4: 1 Cor. 2. "But God has revealed them unto us by his Spirit." It is not the spirit which is of the world, nor the wisdom of the world, by which we know them. "For we have not received the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him; even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." So the apostle at the close of the wonderful argument presented in this 2nd chapter of his first letter to the Corinthian Church, shows by what power, not finite, but infinite, we know whatever we do know of the wonderful and precious thoughts of God concerning us, by saying, "But we have the mind of Christ."

All this precious teaching concerning the inability of any man, saint or sinner, to find out God by searching, and concerning the revelation of him by the Son to whomsoever he will," seems very important for me, for it is according to my experience. I seem never to have been able to make any headway in approaching unto him, or in finding out anything pertaining to his thoughts and ways, by study. The study of commentaries has been of no value to me in this vital sense. I have always had to wait, and grope in the dark, as the blind, until the Lord revealed his thoughts to me. Then how clear it all seemed. I would always decide that his thoughts concerning me must be thoughts of evil, because I was so vile, until in some way whatever scripture was upon my mind would seem to say, "I know my thoughts concerning you; thoughts of peace and not of evil, to bring to pass an expected end." Then I could say, "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me O God! how great is the sum of them." "In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul." At such a time I could rest like a tired child in its mother's arms. There is all true knowledge in that child-like trust and rest in the Lord. It is an experience of him as of God made unto us wisdom. It is in this way we realize that "we have the mind of Christ." His mind directs, comforts, guides us.

It is not that one has a superior mind to another, or more learning, or knowledge of a natural kind. What the Lord reveals to us of "the things that he has prepared for those that love him," we know; what he does not reveal we do not know. He not only "brings the blind by a way that they knew not," in their passage from death unto life, and from under the condemnation of the law, but he leads them afterward "in paths which they have not known." No one can tell them the way beforehand, nor can they find it out. Some may think I go too far in this, but it is just the way it has been with me, and I cannot but rejoice that the bible talks just as I have felt.

I cannot think that any ideas possessed by any man concerning moral good and moral evil will lead him to a right judgment concerning the government of God. Is any reason given why these things are "hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed unto babes"? But "even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." Is any reason given that would suit our natural ideas of moral good and evil, why the Lord should impute righteousness to a man who had nothing to deserve it, but who is justly condemned? or why he should love Jacob and hate Esau? or why he should find fault with one who had not resisted his will? or why the inhabitants of Canaan should be driven from their homes to make way for a people who were just as wicked and acted more wickedly than they? Can God's ways and thoughts be judged of by any human standard, or understood by the wisdom of any of the princes of this world?

I understand all teaching that is of real value to be by the unction which the saints have received from the Holy One, even the Spirit of God. "This anointing," John says, "which ye have received of him teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie; and even as it hath taught you ye shall abide in him." The branch must receive all vital instruction from the vine. It can have no fruit but what is found from him.

The scriptures are all according to this teaching, and all the gifts in the church have their power and efficacy from the same teaching power of the "True Vine." If we ever try to fix a meaning to any scripture that will bring it into accord with our finite minds, or our natural ideas of moral good or evil, we take it away, in a sense, from the table which God has spread for his children. If it does not look clear to us just as it reads, we must wait till the Lord is ready to give it to us. When that time comes we shall be hungry for just that truth, and nothing else will answer, and we shall eat it, and live by it, at that time, whatever any one, now or formerly, to whom it has not been applied, may have decided as to its meaning.

I read experimental writings always with interest, and mostly with comfort; for in them the scriptures brought to the mind seem to be so placed by the Spirit as at once to make the meaning clear.

I visit many little churches where the Lord has gathered his "twos and threes" of "the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him." Probably not one in fifty of them ever read a commentary or a "confession of faith." The bible and relations of experiences are all their reading. They meet in harmony and fellowship. It is in the Spirit of wisdom and understanding given them, the eyes of their understanding being enlightened, that they look into the mystery of faith, holding it in a pure conscience. For no man can call Jesus Christ Lord, but by the Holy Spirit. SILAS H. DURAND.

BROTHER GOLD:—Will you please say to the readers of the LANDMARK that the church at Gills Creek near Columbia, S. C., is composed of three sisters and one brother, and all very limited in this world's goods. They want to build a house of worship, as they are forbid using the district school house for that purpose any longer. All who may feel willing to help them in this their hour of trial will please send their contributions to Elder P. D. Gold, Wilson, N. C. who will forward same by a safe way to the church, as mail is often lost sent to a city to be delivered to parties in the country. Yours in gospel.

OBITUARIES.

ARAMINTA PITTMAN.

This dear sister was born of earthly parentage Dec. 21st, 1841, and died April 10th, 1893.

It was the pleasure of the writer to know sister Pittman about thirty years, having lived next door to her about thirty years ago, while I was exercised unusually about the true church. Then a fellowship sprang up between us that no earthly shocks or changes ever severed or weakened. Her strength in the faith of Jesus was to be wondered at, and her love for the doctrine of Christ was such as to receive and embrace with strong affection all those that possessed like precious faith. Her love was not an artificial, imaginary feeling produced by the word of man. She loved where and in whom she saw Jesus. If there was no power of truth in one her love would not manifest itself to that one as it did to those that had a like precious faith.

Few people in my knowledge were fonder of hearing good preaching than she was, and few were better judges of good preaching. There was always a power in the gospel to enliven or quicken her to a warm response to its charms. There was principle in her profession. She was a Baptist of a positive order.

Her weaknesses were singular as well as her strength. Her candor and sincerity stripped her of all policy. What she thought she did. What she felt she uttered. What she loved she loved unstintedly. What she disliked she did not conceal. Often her plainness of talk caused her trouble. But truth was her object.

She was controlled by a temperament that would in her happy hours lift her above worldly anxieties, but in her gloomy days would plunge her into spells of great despondency. Hence she suffered much at times, and often from her own wayward nature. She was at times very happy in the Lord. She felt she was a great sinner, yet was as truthful a woman as you seldom find. The church was deeply in her heart—its strangled condition, coldness, its divisions, its distresses. She was a member of the church more than thirty years, joining at Tarboro, N. C. and was baptized by Elder R. C. Leachman whom she greatly loved. In her last years her health was wretchedly poor, and her sufferings were almost unbearable. For months she lived in excruciating pain. Her husband was untiring in his efforts to relieve her, and her sisters were as devoted as they could be, and friends ministered to her. Her love grew and increased as her sufferings became more severe. Her last days were a crown of beauty in the love, meekness, patience, humility and tender affection that she manifested to all around her. What had before, while in health, been to some persons knotty features of a harsh disposition, now were beautiful with the mantle of charity and the sweetest disposition of meekness and patience and good will to all. Her last audible words were,

"Rock of ages cleft for me, Let me hide myself in thee."

She had many times expressed a desire to depart, to leave the unhallowed scenes of earth, but wished to wait until her passport was sealed. I feel that she dwells in eternal love, and that it was to me a blessing to know such a saint. P. D. GOLD.

WALTER J. GALLOWAY.

Walter J. Galloway was born in Cumberland County, Va., April 3d, 1809, and died April 24th, 1893, making his stay in this unfriendly world 84 years and 21 days. His father died when he was a small boy, and he was bound out until he was 20 years old, when he left, and came to Henry County, married Elizabeth Hanks, and unto them were born nine children, two sons and seven daughters, and they raised them all to be grown; but all have died but four. Mr. Galloway was a house-car-penter, and worked hard for his living. He was a straight-forward, honest man, and was a good neighbor and good husband and kind father. He was not a member of the church but loved to hear the Primitive Baptists preach, and his folks think he professed a hope a few years back. I asked him if he did not have something to tell. I think his answer was "I am afraid not;" but the tears began to run down his cheeks, which made me think the love of God had reached his heart, and he could not hide it any longer. He was always very healthy until two or three years ago, when his health began to fail. He had kidney trouble, and at times his mind seemed to be off its balance. He did not take to his bed until four days before his death. He often said, "I cannot stay here much longer." On Saturday before he died, he said "Thank the Lord,

I am going home;" and said the Lord had blessed him. What a glorious thing it is when God calls us to pass through the dark valley and shadow of death, to see our home in heaven—that house not made with hands. His wife seems to mourn her loss, but according to nature she will soon be with him, where they will await the Lord's coming. May the Lord give his wife grace to bear her up in her troubles, strengthening her faith, brightening her hope, and prepare the children, if it be his will, to meet Christ in peace, is my prayer.

C. D. BRAY.

NATHANIEL HINES.

The subject of this notice was born November 14th, 1892, in Onslow County, N. C., and died May 19th, 1893. Nathaniel was a bright little boy and looked promising to the sight; but the Lord had better use for him than to let him stay in this world of trouble, so about the 10th of April he afflicted his little body with pneumonia, and I don't think I ever saw a little child suffer so. All was done that kind parents and friends and a doctor could do, but his time had come; he had staid as long as the Lord had loaned him. I was sent for a few hours before he died, and when I went in I saw his time was short with his parents. A little before 6 o'clock, p. m., the good Lord released his little frame from all pain and trouble. Weep not, father and mother; your darling has gone over Jordan to sing redeeming grace. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. Written by request, by his uncle, E. J. H.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getting up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I send you a letter written by our highly esteemed and aged brother, H. Cox, as I should enjoy re-reading it in ZION'S LANDMARK, and I know others will enjoy reading it there too; so if it meets with your approval please publish.

May the Lord prosper you in all your work for the Master's sake is my wish. Your little sister in hope of a better life,

SALLIE VAWTER.

Farmdale, Ky.

DEAR SISTER SALLIE VAWTER:—While we were at brother Farmer's last September we were engaged in conversation which was very pleasant and instructive to me. The subject which engrossed our attention was the great and wonderful truths recorded in the Book of Revelation for the edification and comfort of the Saints. I then remarked to you that I regarded that book as a prophecy. That remark was founded on the language recorded in the 1st verse of the 1st chapter of that book, in these words: "The revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him to show unto his servants things that must shortly come to pass and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John. The character of John was there declared in these words: "Who bear record of the word of God and of the testimony of Jesus Christ and of all things that he saw." That character made him a fit witness to bear testimony of the things which must shortly come to pass. John said of him who made those great revelations to him, "And when I saw him I fell at his feet as dead, and he laid his right hand on me saying unto me, 'fear not I am the first and the last. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more: Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death.' Write the things which thou hast seen and the things which are and the things which shall be hereafter." Here is the authority under which John was to write and his full commission. That authority was he who was the first and the last, he that liveth and was dead, is alive forever more, and had the keys of death and of hell.

He was to write the standing and character of the seven churches in Asia. Those churches then existed. To the church at Ephesus he said: "I have somewhat against thee because thou hast left thy first love." This was a warning to that church, and he gave warnings to all the other churches. These things then were; but he foretold what was to come to pass with his people. Belshazzar made a great feast and saw the hand-writing on the wall. Those things then were; but Daniel's interpretation of that handwriting was a prophecy which was fulfilled—John by symbols foretold the things that were to come to pass both as to the kingdoms of this world and to the sorrows and sufferings of the saints. That was prophecy, and the things symbolized did come to pass. As to the setting up of that kingdom which should never be removed, John says: "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:"—Rev. 12:1. "And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads."—1b. 3. That woman evidently symbolized the church; but she was then in the legal heaven, and the great red dragon had to go where she was that he might make his effort to destroy the man-child about to be delivered. That child was the coming Messiah, and the great red dragon symbolized pagan Rome. Herod, an officer of the Roman government, sought the young child's life, but the young child was caught up to God and to his throne. Throne carries with it power; therefore the child was protected by the power of God. The woman was clothed with the sun which symbolizes the righteousness of Christ; and she had the moon under her feet, which symbolizes the legal dispensation. It had not then been rolled up as a vesture. The glorious light of the Zion of our God was then appearing. Old Simeon saw that light when he took the child into his arms and said: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and a glory to thy people Israel." Rome was then at the zenith of her glory; but what an awful symbol that represented her—a great red dragon! Yet it was a complete representation of her character. She was great, for then she had carried her conquests into Asia, Africa and Europe, and her armies were the grandest the world had ever seen. The dragon was the most powerful and destructive creature that men had ever known. The historian says: "The Roman army was once checked in its march by finding a dragon in its line of march. A number of the soldiers were killed by it, and the officers had to order the battering rams to be used against it before they could remove it out of the way." But the dragon which John saw was red, which symbolizes blood, and it was so-called because of the number of the saints Pagan Rome had slain. The symbol is truly an apt one and fully represents that idolatrous nation which slew its millions because they would not fall down and worship idol gods. John says: "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her a thousand two hundred and three-score days." Pagan Rome continued her relentless persecutions of the saints during a period of three centuries, and during the third century they fled into the valleys of Piedmont where they escaped persecution and established churches and were blessed with the preaching of the gospel. In the 13th verse John says: "And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child. And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent." A day in prophecy represents a year, and the thousand two hundred and three score days represent the same length of time that was represented by the words time, and times, and half a time, and the woman, the true church, was fed through that long period, twelve hundred and sixty years, in the wilderness of Piedmont upon the ever glorious truths of the gospel. After the beast which represents papal Rome arose, they sent unto the valleys of Piedmont missionaries to convert the disciples of our Lord from true worship to the dogmas of Catholicism. But those missionaries failed, as all will ever fail who attempt to convert from the truth of the gospel to systems of reasons sustained by money and the wisdom of this world, taught in the schools of men. When the Novationists, which was the true church symbolized by the woman that was clothed with the sun, fled from the persecutions of the dragon into the wilderness, some of the saints remained in the provinces of Rome, and the dragon made war upon the remnant of her seed. Thus, it was then as it is now—a few have maintained and held the oracles of God above all the dogmas and innovations of men. But the dragon must finally lose his power. Pagan Rome must be superseded and give way to another power equally as corrupt as she had been. John says: "And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy."—Rev. 13:1. It will be seen by the history of those times that Constantine, an Emperor of Rome, called a council, convened at Nice, and that he presided over that council, which was composed of over three hundred bishops, and a large number of presbyters. That council was in session from June to August, and issued a decree that pagan or idolatrous worship should forever cease in Rome, and that the christian religion should be the established religion of Rome, and that none should hold office but those who professed the christian religion. It was then that the beast arose out of the sea which symbolized the empire of Rome. That beast rose out of that sea, and the dragon gave to that beast his seat and great power. The seat was the Roman Empire, and his power and authority was to persecute the true church. That beast symbolized Catholic Rome. It rose out of the Roman Empire—was not built on the Rock of which Christ spoke to Peter—and consequently went down, under the providence of God. While it lasted it filled its destiny. It had seven heads and ten horns—just the description given of the dragon. It stood upon the seven hills where Rome was built, and the empire was afterwards divided into ten kingdoms. As I have quoted, to the woman was given two wings of a great eagle that she might fly into the wilderness. The fleetness of the eagle's flight symbolized the rapidity with which the true church fled from the persecutions of the dragon and of his successor, the beast. The woman was fed in the wilderness in the place prepared of God for her twelve hundred and sixty years, which brought her to the time of Luther, Calvin, Zuingli, and others who protested against the corruptions of Rome and the false doctrines taught by the old mother of harlots. Then the Pope, who claimed to be clothed with both temporal and spiritual power, seeing the decree of his downfall, became enraged and sent an army into the valley of Piedmont to crush out, as he ignorantly thought, all who refused to bow to his scepter and power. Then persecutions of the saints there reigned in those hitherto peaceful valleys, the history of which is revolting in the extreme. But the true preachers of the everlasting gospel being driven from their homes by persecution went forth into all the world preaching Christ as the way, the truth and the life. The glad tidings of salvation through the finished work of our glorious Lord was borne to America by those heralds of the cross—not for filthy lucre—not by combinations and societies formed by men, but by the power and in the providence of God who had raised up and would continue to raise up and send forth his servants to tell to his saints the glories of his kingdom and his reign, which will endure forever. The dragon made war on the woman and on her seed. A large number of the true christians remained in Rome and her provinces. Every effort made by them to organize churches and keep up the true worship of God was opposed by pagan Rome and the opposition was continued by Papal Rome. The dragon gave his seat and great authority to the beast, which led to a continuance of those fearful persecutions by Popes and Emperors. The historian says they (the Catholics) took possession of all the churches (houses of worship) of the Novationists (the true church), and compelled them to worship in private houses in the most obscure places. As the ages rolled on those persecutions increased. Mr. Jones, in his church history, says: "All our historians, civil and ecclesiastical, agree in describing the tenth century of the christian era as the darkest epoch in the annals of mankind. Then, surely, they made war on the remnant of her seed. The inquiry appropriately suggests itself why these fearful persecutions of God's dear people? The answer to that inquiry is, "The carnal mind is enmity against God."—Rom. 8:7. It was that carnality that led to the killing of the prophets, the crucifixion of Christ, the martyrdom of his apostles, and the awful persecutions of the saints. But God avenged those persecutions. The sword, famine and pestilence were visited upon Rome. The Jews were driven from Palestine, and their house was left unto them desolate. Our Lord said: "And shall not God avenge his own elect which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you, he will avenge them speedily." Luke 18:7, 8.

But how our hearts should pulsate with purest thankfulness for the great mercies of God extended to us in permitting us to worship under our own vine and fig tree and none dare to molest or make us afraid. Naturally we are no better than those persecutors, but if we are the children of God we are made so by his power, love and mercy and to his name be all the glory.

In conclusion, I ask you dear sister to pardon me for having written so much that will perhaps both worry and annoy you, but if I could imagine that you would enjoy reading what I have written as much as I have in writing it I would be doubly paid. I am nearing the eighty first mile post in the journey of life and my highest enjoyment now is in meditating on infinitely glorious truths recorded by the Sacred penmen. May the glorious truth of the gospel be your meat and drink while here below.

Write me soon. H. Cox.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I wrote to Sister Sallie Vawter of Shelbyville, Ky. some time since, and gave her some of my feeble reflections on the great and wonderful things recorded in the Book of Revelation. But have lately received a letter from her informing me that she had forwarded that letter to you for publication in ZION'S LANDMARK. Perhaps she erred in doing so as I am satisfied that my poor thoughts are too feeble to interest others. Should you publish that letter in the LANDMARK, you will please forward to me a copy of the paper that contains it.

This day will complete my eighty first year on earth, and I am daily made to realize that I have but few more days to remain amidst these scenes of sorrow, pain, disease and death. Darkness and gloom are my companions. But sometimes I am permitted to hope and trust that a brighter and more glorious day is before me. That when I lay by these habiliments of mortality hope will be changed into a glorious fruition, and faith into sight: that sight which will be no more obscured by doubts and fears. Ah, dear brother, if I could from the depths of my heart say with that ancient servant Job of the Most High that I know that my Redeemer liveth, I should be most happy. While not a doubt rises in my mind as to the true character of the glorious Son of God, yet the question often arises, is he my Redeemer? "Am I his or am I not."

Am I one of those for whose redemption he laid aside the glories he had with the Father before the world was, became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, passed through the gloomy scenes of Gethsemane, and the tortures of calvary, that he might redeem his people from all iniquity? Am I one of those people is the great question as I approach the great darkness of the tomb. Surely if I am it is not because of works of righteousness that I have done, for I can truly say that every day of my life has been marked by sin and rebellion against him and his holy law. Then if I am saved, it will be a sinner saved by grace and grace alone.

For near sixty two years I have had a name to live, but I often fear that I have never been entitled to that name. Dear brother, pray for me that the darkness and gloom may be removed from my pathway, and the glorious light of Zion may shine upon me while here below; and believe me affectionately yours,
H. Cox.

Remarks.

I have noticed that what the wise man, Solomon, said of God's people in old age is true: See 12th chapter of Ecclesiastes. We naturally think if we were christians our last days will be our brightest, best days. But how then would we be burdened with the frailties and failings of old age wherein we have no pleasure?

When one is born again it does not change the flesh, nor exempt it from disease. We, if we live to eighty, must know it is labor and sorrow, and like Jacob few and evil are the days of the years of our pilgrimage. But while we can perform manual labor we can bear it better.

But does not the path of the just grow brighter and brighter? Yes, but that is all in and of Jesus. He does increase as I decrease. That is I feel more and more the longer I live that I am vile and unprofitable, and feel more that if I am saved it is all of grace, and all in Jesus. Thus he is exalted and becomes more precious.

Our dear brother was a Baptist before I was born. Such aged elderly ones we feel to honor. May the God of heaven who has kept him unblemished all these years, preserve him blameless unto the coming of the Lord Jesus.

P. D. G.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—I feel somewhat impressed to write some of my reflections for your many readers, trusting it will be comforting, as well as stimulating to some way-worn pilgrim; if you think different I will take no offence.

These reflections were suggested by visiting recently some of the old mothers and fathers in Israel, who have proven themselves landmarks to the traveler as well as true soldiers of the cross; some of them seem to be not only ripe but ready and anxiously waiting for the Harvester, among them were old sister Francis Robertson of Stokes Co. who is nearly 90 years old, she has been on pilgrimage over 70 years fighting the good fight of faith and she says as she grows in weakness she grows strong, for the inner man is renewed day by day, her sight brighter and brighter until it is almost perfect though naturally entirely blind. It was a spiritual feast to be with her, and see how elated she seems to be of being at the threshold of her desired and sought for haven of rest, for there is a rest that remains to the people of God. She reminded me of a school girl who had been off for a long term of months from home and loved ones under rigid discipline and among those that were always finding fault of her doings and sayings, those she looked upon as her superiors intellectually, goodness &c, it certainly was a treat to me to see her approaching loved ones and with them to remain. Deacon Terry was another one about the same age, who has led a very active life, serving his day and generation as faithfully as any one I have ever known. A more devout man I have never known. It seems he has been commanded to go upon the top of Mount Pisgah and lay himself down and die. He reminds me of an old veteran who has fought through many hard fought battles, fighting for principle and not praise or bounty, and has come off more than conqueror through his leader the Captain of his salvation. He seems to be patiently waiting his summons and crown of eternal life. It does my soul good to be with such persons who love God for his goodness and mercy. They prove themselves to be "followers of them who through faith is still in the gall of bitterness and the bonds of iniquity," and in a state of unbelief; and not a true penitent, for he that has once been arrested by the Spirit of God, and had the love of God shed abroad in his heart will hardly stop short of making it manifest by keeping the commandments, but many make their unfitness an excuse for not identifying themselves with the people of God; and not to do this after obtaining a hope though it be ever so small is acting like one who has received by some means knowledge of there being food and raiment when they are almost perished, and had actually had a foretaste, and had started for them and after getting well on the way concluded he was not worthy of food and raiment and lay down in the road not only to perish, but for other way-faring men to stumble over, for just such characters are stumbling blocks in the way. The son or daughter, thinking if father or mother is not fit to join the church, or worthy to bear the cross, I am not. It has been well said, that although we are justified by faith, we must have good works to justify our faith, for good works is the only way we have to prove we have faith. The fruit of the tree is the only evidence we have of the kind or nature of the tree. If it bears good fruit at the proper time we know it is a good tree.

We do not expect fruit until after it has budded, blossomed and received the former and latter rains. Then we expect to see fruit. I know those who maintain that salvation is by grace and grace only, and contend for the imputed righteousness of Christ are said to be opposed to works, and you will have to make up your mind to submit to these things, and be content to undergo the mortification of being thought opposers or discouragers of good works, though they constantly deny the charge, and all the time pleading for them and for this doctrine of God our Savior, as the only sure way of attaining to that joy and rest that is enjoyed only by the obedient. When we obey in this way and perform that we are impressed or clearly taught in God's word to do, we make manifest we love God and it is the only way we will ever be received into the wedding feast or his banqueting house. We should trust to Christ for holiness, for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord," and in this way we make our calling and election sure.

Holiness is not the foundation of our reward as so many seem to think. Love is the foundation, and if we love God it is because he first loved us, and gave his son as a ransom for our sins," to redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. It is God's gift to us, in order to qualify us for our proper happiness, and as the grand means of enjoying him, and therefore cannot in any sense be the procuring cause of it. But nevertheless it is by this kind of reasoning the Apostle uses that it is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing. God first quickens and pardons in order to cleanse. Whoever expects forgiveness without any thought or desire of being cleansed cannot or will not receive it. It is impossible for God to receive or forgive an unrepenting sinner, and no one ever did repent without first desiring a change and he will never desire a change as long as he is satisfied with his present state or condition. I well know that all that I have or am without charity is nothing, but I cannot have charity only as it pleases God to give it to me. Every other faith or doctrine, but that which receives Christ as a complete justifier or purifier, as well as atonement and righteousness is false and hypocritical, for God can only be received into the soul. When he is desired for his purity and when we have the Spirit of Christ in us which is the spirit of obedience we cannot be at ease contending and striving for the things of this life, neither can we be idling away our time, we feel it is too precious to throw away. We feel to glorify God in our bodies and spirits when in the exercise of faith. We will have our doubts and fears, more at sometimes than at others. "The wicked have none of these changes, therefore they fear not God." The christian always has a desire to do good, but cannot always do it. Rom. 7:15-21.

As Christ has wrought salvation by himself and gotten the victory for us within and by himself, he must have all the honor and glory of our salvation. For there is nothing we can do to make his payment full-weight or more sure.

Brethren, these reflections I write to stir you up, to reflect, for my desire is to animate you to endurance and the perseverance in the glorious race, press on toward the mark of the prize of your high calling of God as it is in Christ Jesus. Please pray for me that I may keep my body under and bring it into subjection less after I have preached to others I may be a cast-away.

If I know my sinful heart, it is that I may "run with patience the christian race" and be counted worthy in the end of all these sufferings I am now passing through. It is my desire to be faithful, "because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption unto the glorious liberty of the children of God."

I have written this as an exhortation to those represented by the nine who were cleansed but never returned to give God the glory. Some that I feel especially interested in, some that I have been trying to pray for several years, some who I am satisfied are living out of their duty. I know several in our town who take a great deal of interest in the welfare of the church, willing to make any sacrifice and everything they are asked to do, except be baptized. May the Lord impress them with this duty is my prayer.

J. M. HARRIS.

PRIDE HUMBLED.

Murfreesboro, (Va.) News.

[The following remarkable incident has been sent us for publication. It may not be amiss to give it a careful reading. Pride is a great and growing evil.]

The following incident is told, as part of the unwritten or traditional history of Eld. John Leland:

During the latter part of his life Mr. Leland traveled much over the country on preaching tours, on foot. One occasion he had been warmly solicited, in writing, by a widow lady, to visit the part of old Virginia in which she lived and preach, telling him to set his time and her house was at his service, both as a place of abode and also a place to hold his meetings. Mr. Leland replied to her by setting a day that he would preach at her residence at 10 o'clock a. m.

The lady was a wealthy planter, in Appomattox valley. She regarded herself as one of the most pious and exemplary persons to be found any where. She had been raised in the high circles of life, and knew nothing about poverty, nor had ever associated with laboring classes. She was at this time about thirty five years of age, and had been a widow two years, but knew nothing of the privations commonly attending the life of a widowed mother. She took much pains to appear pious, and her chief object in inviting Mr. Leland to preach at her house was, that she might make a display of wealth, and thus have the applause of all her associates; not only to show her wealth but her piety as well; so she went to a great trouble and expense in preparing for the meeting. The appointment had been spread far and near, pressing solicitations had been sent to numerous friends to attend the meeting; no expense or pains had been spared, not only to have the best and the finest of everything, but to have everything in the very best style.

On the evening preceding the meeting several carriages had already arrived, to be in good time and enjoy the hospitality of the hostess. About sunset Mr. Leland came up to the mansion on foot. The day was quite warm and dusty when he made his appearance. The walk had caused a free perspiration, which ran down his cheeks, making roads in the dust which had settled on his face during his day's walk. He walked up to the door of the large stone mansion, and his rap was answered by a black servant, of whom he inquired for the landlady; the servant ran down the broad carpeted hall to a door, from which proceeded the sound of talking and laughing. In a very short time a lady, very richly attired, made her appearance, walking briskly and lightly toward the door, where Mr. Leland was standing. He had a fair view of her person, and at once read in her physiognomy and deportment something of her leading traits of character.

His intention had been to introduce himself, but before he had time to speak, or before she was near enough for him to address her, she spoke in rather a harsh tone:

"Old man, what do you want here? I have nothing for beggars."

Mr. Leland, in a very soft and unassuming tone, said, "Please excuse me, madam; I do not wish to beg for money, but I am very tired from a long walk, and called to know if you would do me the kindness to allow me to stay under your roof during the night."

Viewing him hastily from head to foot, she very positively answered: "No; I have company now, and to-morrow the Rev. Mr. Leland is to preach at my house; so I can't take in poor stragglers."

"Well," said Mr. Leland, "I am too much fatigued to travel further to-night, will you allow me to stay in one of those cabins?" pointing to a row of negro houses just outside the mansion yard.

After a moment or two of reflection she said, "Yes, you may stay there with the negroes if you want to."

He bowed a very polite thank you, and turned toward the row of huts. He proceeded to the farthest one from the mansion before he found any one to whom he could speak, to ask permission to stay, but came at last to the smallest, but neatest of all the huts, where he found seated at the door an old negress, who was fanning herself with the wing of a fowl. He spoke to her very gently:

"Good evening, aunty."

His greeting was answered with, "Good evin', mosta."

"Well, aunty," said he, "I have come to ask a very uncommon favor of you."

"Bless de lord, mosta, what can that be, fo' pleas God I se got nuffin to give any one?"

"I am very tired from walking all day. I called at the house of your mistress, but she says she has no room for me in her great house. I am too much fatigued to go further, and so I have come to see if you can allow me to shelter in your house."

"Bress de Lord, mosta, I got no 'commodation for any one; but 'fore a fello' mortal shall stay out does, I lets 'em stay in my cabin sho', ef da can put up wid my plain hut. Uncle Ben be in dree-ly, den he can keep you company while I fixes you sumpen to eat, for you looks as do you had not eat a morsel for a long time," at the same time pointed to a three legged stool by the side of the door, saying, set down dar and rest yourself, for you looks so wore out."

Mr. L. took the seat as directed saying at the same time, "I am sorry that I am compelled to put you to so much trouble, as I have no money to pay you."

"Please God, mosta, Aunf Dilsey never charges any one yit for sich commodations as I could giv 'em for God knows it's poor enuff at best. You say, mosta, you call on missus at de house dar, and she can't take you in; Well, you must 'cuse her, for she's lookin' for a mighty heap o' company to-morrow; dar's a great man to be dar to-morrow, what's gwine to preach in her house, an' a good many folks done come a'ready, an' heap mo' comin', to-morrow, so missus is mighty busy flixin' for

'em. But here's Uncle Ben," she continued as an old gray-headed negro came around the corner of the cabin, muttering to himself about the carelessness of some of the other negroes.

This old couple, Uncle Ben and Aunt Dilsey, as they were familiarly called by all who knew them, both black and white, were an old couple who, from age, had for a long time lived in a small, but snug cabin at the far end of the row of huts occupied by the younger and more active slaves. Although Uncle Ben was not required to do any labor, yet he voluntarily took a kind of supervision over the farm, stock, &c. When he saw Mr. L. he stopped short and gave him a scrutinizing look, when Aunt Dilsey spoke, saying: "Uncle Ben, don't stare your eyes out at a stranger; dis ole gentleman was out travelin', and come to stay in our cabin, kase missus, can't let him stay dar, as she's got a heap o' company now."

"Well," said Uncle Ben, "We's commanded dat if a stranger comes along we's got to take him in an' give him sech as we have to set before him."

While Aunt Dilsey was preparing supper Mr. L. learned much about the lady of the mansion from Uncle Ben; he learned, with other things, they were a very religious family, but the hostess had been raised in the city of Richmond and had imbibed all the fashionable ideas of religion, with but very little of its true principles, and none of its humility. Soon after Mr. L. had finished a very good coarse supper, he told his host that he was very much fatigued from a long day's walk, and would wish to retire for the night and that he felt like he wished to return thanks to his Creator for the blessings of the day, and invoke his protection through the night; that if it would annoy them, he would retire to some place out of doors.

"Bress God" said both the old folks at the same time, "we allers likes prayin' in our house, and neber goes to bed 'thout one of us tries to pray."

Mr. L. then took an old well-worn Bible out of his little bundle, and read in a very solemn tone the one hundred and second Psalm. During the reading the two old blacks often said in a low voice, "Amen, bress de Lord." When the Psalm was ended Mr. L. fell upon his knees, and poured out his feelings in such an outburst of reverential eloquence as was seldom ever equalled, and never surpassed by mortal lips. His host and hostess were so affected by his reading and prayer that they could do nor say no more than to fix their eyes on their guest, as though they felt that he was something more than a mortal man. He retired to a clean little pallet in one corner of the cabin, where he soon fell asleep. When morning came he was up early; Aunt Dilsey soon had him a good, plain repast, after which he seated himself to read, telling his hostess that he felt too much fatigued to travel, and if she was willing, he would rest there until afternoon any way, and then if he felt better he would go on his way.

Aunt Dilsey said, "Yes, mosta, stay jist as long as you want to; we be glad to have you stay with us a fortnight, if you can put up with our far."

Mr. L. seated himself under a shady tree in the cabin yard, with his Bible, waiting to see what the finality would be.

About nine o'clock every thing was in a bustle at the stone mansion; all the servants were called in to dress in their very best.

Carriages began to arrive by the dozen, until the hall and every part of the large and elegant building was crowded to overflowing, but to their dismay no preacher made his appearance, for the last carriage that came in sight had been scanned to get a glimpse of the minister. No one in the large congregation had ever seen him, but all had heard of him. So every one was full of anxious expectation, supposing that when he came he would be drawn by two or four fine horses, driven by a servant in livery.

Ten o'clock passed, half-past ten, eleven o'clock was announced by the clock on the wall, and no minister.

The company had by this time become restless, and were about to disperse, when Aunt Dilsey went to her mistress and said:

"Bress de Lord, missus, why don't you git dat ole man who stayed in our cabin last night to come here to de door and pray, 'fore de folks all go home; he prayed in our cabin last night and dis morning,' a 'fore God, in all my born days I nebber heard sich prayin' afore. He's settin' right dar now, under de tall pine tree; an' as de preacher's not come, if you'll let him pray, I'll go right now and fetch him down."

The lady consulted with some of the company, the matter was talked of among the congregation when it was agreed to have that old straggler, as they called him, come and pray before the congregation broke up. So Aunt Dilsey went to where Mr. Leland was sitting, and said, "Mosta, de folks all dispirited bout de preacher comin': he am not cum and da wants you to go down an pray for 'em, 'fore da all breaks up. Mosta, I wants you to pray jis like you did las' night."

Mr. L. walked down to the front door, and standing on the steps, repeated a short hymn by memory sang, and then engaged in prayer; by the time his prayer was ended all eyes were fixed upon him with amazement. He then remarked that as there seemed to be a disappointment, that if it would not be assuming too much, he would talk to them a few minutes; and as a foundation, or starting point he would read a short passage from the word of truth, which they would find by reference to the thirteenth chapter and second verse of Hebrews: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." When he had spoken for twenty or thirty minutes, the hostess, who had refused him the hospitalities of her house the evening before, became so deeply affected that she ran and prostrated herself at the feet of Mr. L. and would, had he allowed her to have done so, have washed his feet with her tears. It was said that she was so overcome and affected that from that time forward she was a changed and different woman, so much so that she threw off all her finery and ornamental dressing and became an humble and plain christian. Though she was a professor before, her whole deportment underwent a complete change. Her house became a place of divine worship, where she delighted in making all, no matter how plain or how poor, as happy as kind attention could make them; in fact it was said that if preference had to be given to any, it was always in favor of the poor and needy.

"In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you," I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2

The Lord knew how soon he should be separated from his disciples and how their expectations should be shaken, therefore he says to them, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me."

Notwithstanding that their faith should be so shaken that they would return to their fishing, some of them should say "But we trusted that it was he which should have redeemed Israel" &c., showing that that confidence was now gone, yet the Lord Jesus would not suffer them to be lost; no, they are his and he will not lose any of them.

The Lord always comes to his people time enough to save them from utter despair. He revives their hope, strengthens their faith and causes their love to flow more freely than before because they see that mightier works are done than they could expect, or had ever seen before. Each manifestation being a renewal of their confidence in Him and a further testimony that, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," but, "will be with thee always even unto the end of the world." How tender is his love, full of long-suffering and gentleness, forbearance and tender mercies. Though all the disciples should forsake him yet he would not forsake them, though they should turn from him to their former occupations and lose confidence in him as the Restorer of Israel. He loves them just the same as before and seals all his work and words with his own blood for those who had now turned from him. He speaks words to them that should give them comfort and that should be of comfort to all his children throughout all generations. "In my Father's house," the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth, the abode of God's children here on earth. Jesus came in this world the foundation of this house. He built it, all the material was and is in him. He is their strength and salvation. "My Father's house" is not heaven above but heaven here, where all God's children rest together in love and hope for the eternal deliverance from sin. This is a family of love, one feeds and comforts the other in speaking of the rich mercies they have received of the Father's hand. What a glorious house is this, not an earthly house that can be dissolved by death or troubles. These things make us feel more drawn together. The more two are troubled and the nearer their troubles are alike the closer they feel to be united. Thus this house is so built that one joint supplieth another. Built a city compacted together. Thus it is impenetrable. It has salvation for walls round about it, so that no enemy can come near it nor destroy anything belonging to this building.

In this house are many mansions; places of rest, vocations unto which we are called, places to be occupied by the saints in "My Father's house," the church of God militant. All are not apostles, no, there were only twelve of them and they have never had any successors. While they are all dead as men they are all alive in their apostolic office or mansion. They are twelve judges sitting on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. They have given their judgment and we have it in the New Testament. This decision is unchangeable, no repealing one part and amending another. It is the code that shall be adhered to in "My Father's house." There will never be another divine legislature. "My Father's house" has no right to make any new laws nor to pass any new resolutions. All that was necessary was done by the Divine Law-giver who never made a mistake or gave a bad law. These laws have been recorded by the pens of the inspired apostles and prophets and that without error. They are still occupying their mansion in "My Father's house."

Some are prophets. These occupied their places (mansions) in the days of old, preaching and writing to the children of Israel, reproving them for sin, testifying of the promised Messiah and his wonderful works in the salvation of his people, each one occupying his mansion as God had commanded him. Now they are called preachers engaged in the same glorious work in "My Father's house," not succeeding those who have gone before as occupying their mansions but each abiding in their own calling and doing the work assigned them to do. When one passes out, his work is done and another comes in to do his work or fill up the measure of his mansion. Thus every child of God has a mansion in "My Father's house." They are his workmanship created in him unto good works which God hath before ordained that they should walk in them. In these mansions there are first, second, third &c, as Paul laboring more than all the rest of the apostles but only filling up the measure of his mansion. We have to-day those who preach much and those who preach little but one is not occupying the place of the other, he is only doing his own work. Peter follow thou me and feed my sheep and lambs. But what shall this man (John) do? What is that to thee if he tarry 'till I come? No excuse will be taken, Follow thou me, is the imperative command. We have nothing to do with this other man, we are not responsible for his mansion, we must fill up our measure in "My Father's house."

"If it were not so I would have told you." Our blessed Lord does not leave his people in the dark, but tells them things he would have them know, revealing it to them in love and with power. If they should all have received the same gift, occupied the same place (mansion) he would have told them, but as there are many mansions he tells them so. There is no need to be misled in this, for he tells us plainly. These gifts are so arranged that they do not clash so as for one to confuse the other but each works with the other for the edification of the house of God and the building up of the saints. Therefore if there is confusion somebody is not occupying his gift, he is gone out of the way and is not walking worthy of his vocation. Let him repent and do his first work and all will be peace and joy in "My Father's house."

"I go to prepare a place for you;" Not mansions but a place. It is but one. All the saints shall occupy the one place in glory. No prophets, no apostles, no preachers nor teachers, but all one in Christ Jesus. All clothed in his righteousness and glorified in his glory, possessing in his possession, seeing him and being like him. "Where I am there may ye be also." Every saint shall say "It is enough."

"When I can read my titles clear To mansions in the skies" seems to me to have a wrong savor about it. There are no mansions there but a place which Jesus has prepared.

"When we've been there ten thousand

seems also to sound strange to me for there are no years in this immortal glory but one eternal now with God and all the glorified saints who shall forever dwell in his presence and praise only him forevermore.

WHOM RESIST—WHAT SERVE.

"The powers that be are ordained of God. Rom. 13: 1.

This verse declares that there is no power but of God, and says, let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. Does this mean that we should yield obedience to the power of Satan, thereby owning his power as of God and ordained of God, to which we must submit? If that be true what shall we do with that scripture which says, "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you?" James 4: 7. Here we are told to resist the devil, but submit to God. Then here are two distinct powers. To resist is the opposite of submitting to. We are not to give place to the devil. What shall we say to this scripture, Eph. 6: 12. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." To wrestle against is to exert all the power of opposition one can command, Satan is the god of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the head of spiritual wickedness in high places. Him we are to stand against, as a roaring lion, as an adversary whom we are to resist, steadfast in the faith: 1st Peter 5: 9. The powers that be which are ordained of God, treated upon by Paul, are governments to protect the good and punish the evil. We must always consider the subject matter treated upon, and regard the purpose of the writer. We should not endeavor to make him say more or less than he intends, but to fairly understand and consider what he does say, and use diligence to ascertain what he designs to say. Some in their zeal for their theories will bend all scripture that appears to favor their views, and ignore all else. If one hold absolute submission to all things as coming from God, he has much use for such language as this. There is no power but of God, and will interpret this in such a way as to make devils and wicked men the servants of God; whereas they are the enemies of God. That he is above all and makes the wrath of man to praise him, and purposes good out of what they intend for mischief we hold; but that is no excuse for them, nor does it atone for their wickedness.

We should not speak evil of the rulers of the land. They are ordained of God for the protection of the innocent, and as a terror and punishment to the guilty. The doctrine of God warrants no compromise with sin, nor does salvation by grace allow of indifference or slackness of conduct on the part of receivers of grace. There is a warfare here between that which is born of God and the lusts of the flesh that admits not one moment of compromise or truce. There is no discharge in this war. For and during life it is incessantly waged.

Shall we commit sin that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein. Salvation is deliverance from sin. His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. We of ourselves have no power against sin. It is only in the faith or power of Jesus that we can resist sin or Satan. Without Jesus we can do nothing that is good. For in the flesh we are the servants of sin, and serve nothing else in the flesh but sin. Hence by the grace of God I am what I am.

Nor is there any scriptural warrant for the wresting of what some call free-agent scriptures to the encouragement of the notion of the efficacy of flesh as being profitable. For the flesh profiteth nothing. Hence we are not debtors to the flesh. It has never aided us. One class of scripture is not arrayed against another, except in the darkened minds of men. There are not two classes or kinds of scripture. There are two kinds or manner of people, and the bible describes both kind, for it separates between the precious and the vile. The man therefore who rightly divides the word giving to each his portion in season, or so expounds the word as to give to each what belongs to him is a good workman.

There are not two systems of salvation taught in the bible. Man will interpret scripture or anything else, according to the prevailing principle of his mind. If the light, or what he considers light in him, be darkness that gross darkness will blind him, and his interpretations of scripture will be all wrong, though it does not so appear to him. If he has the understanding that God gives he will rightly consider his word.

There is a fleshly principle in man that flatters him with the notion of his ability to do good works, and hence he interprets the scripture on this works system, supposing he is able to do what the law requires. But he does not understand the law, and not understanding the law, nor feeling his own vileness, he does not see or feel the need of the gospel. He does not know that the power of the law is the ministration of death. The law has no power to save the guilty. It has power to condemn the guilty, or rather the law is the strength of sin. Its power therefore is only to condemn the guilty. Take away the law and there is no condemnation. For where there is no law there is no transgression. I through the law am dead to the law—that I might live unto God. Hence the power to live is of God, not of the law. Jesus has the power of life, and the devil has the power of death. For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But I must be crucified with Christ before I can live by the power of Jesus. When this power is in me it is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

Our service therefore first of all, and above all other service, is to the power of God in the gospel of his Son. Every reason and motive there is for that. He has redeemed us, and none others could from the power of the devil. He is able to reward as none others can. His service alone can make us happy forever.

While the powers that be, or are existing and operating for the present, or a short time only, and are ordained for the betterment of men's condition in time, and we are for a wise purpose commanded to obey these powers that thus be, or exist only temporarily, how much greater the reason to obey God who is able to save forever and able to destroy.

WHAT IS LIFE?

BROTHER GOLD:—My son 14 yrs. old asked me a question that I cannot answer. The question is this, "What is life, human life?" I told him "in Jesus was life, and the life was the light of men." But that does not satisfy him. Will you please give your views on the question through the LANDMARK. May God bless you with all the household of faith is my prayer.

Remarks.

James asks the question and then answers it, "For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." James 4: 14.

There is no better answer than this to the question, what is your life—not the life of Christ which is eternal life. James is considering it as to its duration. It is even a vapour. It is not a reality. It appears for a little time and then vanisheth away.

There is no reality in it as there is nothing real in vapour. Suppose a man by reason of strength live to be eighty years old, yet is it labour and sorrow, for it is soon cut off and we fly away. It is so uncertain that we know not what a day or an hour may bring forth. We do not know that we shall live an hour longer. We do not know what an hour will bring forth. Therefore we should say even in the matter of worldly, ordinary business, such as doing this or that for a living, or to obtain food and raiment, if the Lord will we will do so and so.

Scientific men, that is those men who have made the human system a special study, or those who have studied vegetation, or both animal and vegetable matter have asked the question, how do the bones grow in the womb, how does the child grow, what causes the tree or plant to grow? They know no further than to say "because it has life." But when the further question is asked, "what is this life" it stops them, for they cannot tell. It is something man cannot give, even natural life to a gnat or to a plant, not even to a blade of grass. Nor can man retain his life in the day of death. Death is an enemy to this vaporous life and always is stronger.

The bible puts forth this question, "consider the lilies, how they grow." There is not any effort on the part of a boy in growing. It is not something he does by volition or willing to grow, or by saying now I will grow. He toils not in growing.

True life or eternal life has no corruption, decay, or sorrow, sin nor death in it. There is no enemy that with overmastering power or subtlety can destroy it. But that life man by nature knows nothing whatever of, nor does nature in any of her decaying moods or processes teach such a glory. P. D. G.

"Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whoever speaketh a word against the Son of man it shall be forgiven him: but whoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world nor in the world to come."

The word "wherefore" refers to something preceding and introduces a reason that follows, or is a deduction that results from the preceding premises. We look therefore to the context for a key to this matter.

A grievous sin, unpardonable forever, is here treated of. What is it, or who are those guilty of it? For sin is not an abstraction, but it is a thought, desire or lust acted out by man, angel or devil. It is never said that brutes sin, or that inanimate objects sin. There must be responsible or accountable creatures under law which they transgress in order to constitute a sinner.

The devil sinneth from the beginning—never does any thing else. Fallen angels sinned. All men have sinned. In proportion as light or knowledge is given is a transgression under that light and knowledge the less pardonable, and the more grievous. A sin in David was worse than in Absalom. Rebellion would be less excusable in a gifted preacher than in a very ignorant man. Where much is given much is required: where little is given, little is required. It would be more tolerable in the day of judgment for Sodom and Gomorrah than for Capernaum. The terrible punishment visited on Jerusalem was in consequence of the bitter treatment its people, so highly favored, had given to the prophets and to Jesus.

The greater the dignity, the holier the character the one against whom I sin, the more aggravated is my offence. To sin against the king would be a graver offence than to sin against the subject. To sin against God is graver than to sin against man. Now we find in the sin here treated of the presence in its most virulent form of enmity, dregs of the most poisoned cup of iniquity. Here are the leading pharisees or rulers, those intrusted with the law of Moses and its observance, those having charge of the worship in the synagogue. When these pharisees saw Jesus healing on the Sabbath they held a council to destroy him. When one was brought unto him possessed of a devil, blind and dumb, the pharisees said this fellow always casts out devils only by the prince of the devils. To charge that Jesus, who by the Spirit of God cast out devils, was casting out devils by collusion with devils or because he was in league with the chief of devils, betrayed a degree of wickedness that is forever unpardonable. There could not be a greater sin. It is against the Holy Ghost, not merely against the son of man as in the likeness of sinful flesh, but against the Holy Ghost, the revealer of Jesus, the Comforter, the very Spirit of Holiness.

- 5 Let men beware how they charge the Holy Ghost with such blasphemy. To blaspheme the Holy Ghost is to charge him with wickedness. Or to charge him as being in league with the devil. There is no forgiveness for that, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. This means there is never forgiveness for this blasphemy. When it says neither in this world nor that which is to come, or the gospel world it means that there is no forgiveness forever.

Do God's people ever commit this sin? We think not. They are reserved as well as preserved, or they are kept from this great sin. Keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins, and cleanse me from secret faults. It is not in the heart of those born of God to charge any such thing to Jesus, or to the Holy Ghost, but they love and fear the Lord, and desire to grieve not the Holy Spirit whereby they are sealed unto the day of redemption. While the people of God do many things they cannot forgive them selves for, but are ashamed of as long as they live, yet the Lord forgives all their iniquities and heals all their diseases. For the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sins, and if we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins.

P. D. G.

KINSMAN—REDEEMER.

Sister Rosa Weed of Texas requests my view of Ruth 4:14—17.

"And the woman said unto Naomi, Blessed be the Lord, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

And he shall be unto thee a restorer of thy life, and a nourisher of thy old age: for thy daughter in law, which loveth thee, which is better to thee than seven sons, hath borne him.

And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became nurse unto it.

And the women her neighbors gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name Obed: he is the father of Jesse, the father of David."

The book of Ruth deals in comely matters of courtship, marriage and birth. The characters in chief are bright and great. The scene is the harvest-field, a joyous goodly place.

But first there is sorrow and weeping, for there must be seed-time before harvest, and the sowing is in tears; nor must one withhold his hand in gloomy days, nor because of cold or clouds. But they that sow in tears shall reap in joy.

Naomi's coal is quenched. Her hope is dried up. With two widowed daughters in law on her impoverished hand, and she a widow and desolate, far off from home, what can she do? But one widow Ruth (of goodly appearance and character) cleaves unto her from love. Thence does the hand of providence reach out and search out the chosen, hidden ones. Who could have divined that Christ should come out of the line in which is found the blood of a Moabitish woman by nature. Whence is it that such a stranger finds favor of the Lord?

One that exalts the flesh says because Ruth left all of Moab and followed poor, afflicted Naomi. But she that exalts the Lord says, that Ruth did these things because the finger of God had already touched her heart with love to Naomi and to Israel's God, and that her bright character was proof that she was one of the Lord's handmaids. The women of Israel thus spoke goodly words to Naomi: "Blessed be the Lord God which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel." These women were not of that craft which exalt man's works, but they are of that hidden number that some notable event of the Lord's doing calls forth, and then they bless and honor the Lord ascribing all glory to his name.

The child Obed (meaning a worshipper of God) that is born of Ruth and born unto Naomi is a type of Jesus the Redeemer born unto the church. For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government is on his shoulder, and his name is wonderful, counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. What a famous name in Israel is Jesus.

Obed is a kinsman to Naomi. He was seed raised up to her dead son that the name of a family should not be cut off in Israel. He was as if one had been raised from the dead, and he should be life to Naomi—a nourisher of her in old age, one that she should take in her bosom and become a nurse unto him. How happy was Naomi in her old age in this blessed service. Her supporter dwelling in her bosom, a type of her Redeemer, the near and dear kinsman dwelling in her heart, and she nursing him, serving him. What can make old age so bright and green, so fruitful and pleasant, as the testimony that Jesus is our hope and life, our righteousness and peace. He is our stay and staff in old age, our strength as we totter towards the tomb.

Little Ruth performs wondrously in Israel, and builds marvelously in Ephratah. Of that which is lightly esteemed by men do come forth things glorious in Israel. We must realize that we are as the barren womb ere we have hope towards God. When we fail then the Lord takes up the afflicted and needy. He maketh the barren woman to rejoice, and the desolate becomes a joyful house-keeper, and mother of children, and then we can say, It is well, it is well with the husband and the child. The new man makes the household glad. Thy land is called Beulah for it is married unto thee. In the resurrection there is no loss but wonderful gain—great increase.

P. D. G.

"A faithful witness will not lie: but a false witness will utter lies."

TWO EVILS.

Brother J. W. Caywood of Tenn. Requests my view of Jer. 2: 13: "For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water."

Can the people of God do wrong? The record or word of God charges upon his people the commission of all kinds of wrongs or evils. The word evil here is used in that sense of sin or wrong, wickedness, that God's word forbids. In some instances the word is used in the sense of a correction, or chastening, or the opposite of that which is pleasant and agreeable. For instance Job says, Shall we receive good (that which we desire, such as life with its comforts) at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil? loss, death or such things as we do not desire.

Who is so foolish as God's people? None in the world, considering what is done for them, and in them. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. The heathen do not forsake or change their false gods as often as God's people forsake the true God.

Fools and slow of heart we are to believe what God hath spoken, or what Christ hath done. Quick we are to forget God, to turn our back upon him, to ignore our experience, to do the things we know are wrong, or to do the things that we would not, and to neglect the things we ought to do. If we do the things we would not then we do the things that we know are wrong. After we do the wrong how stubborn we are in confessing it, and how slow we are to repent of it.

We have forsaken the fountain of living waters. God is himself the fountain of living waters, or of life and blessing. To forsake him is what is the greatest of all folly and sin therefore: and what none but God's people ever do. Those that never knew the Lord could not forsake him. All we like sheep have gone astray. We have turned every one to his own way. That evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God is the wretched state of God's people.

Nor does this wrong stop here. Another evil follows. One sin breeds another, or they multiply. If we, when we forsake the right way, would do no more it would not be so bad. But we commit another evil. We hew out cisterns, broken cisterns, that hold no water. Our nature is to work—to do something: and being wrong ourselves all our works are wrong. Our works are as broken cisterns, they are worthless for they can hold no water. When Adam transgressed the law of his Maker he went to work to hide his evil deed by supplying himself with covering. But what was it? He could not cover himself. His works are a failure. He is himself broken at the fountain, and therefore all his works are like him corrupt, broken. Every desire in our hearts is only evil. Every effort we make plunges us deeper in the mire. Poor man what is he? How merciful is our God to pity vile man, and send his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin, to redeem us from all iniquity: not to mend the old cistern, or patch up the old pitcher, broken at the fountain, but to make a new man, a new creation. The water of life flows from the throne of God and the lamb, and that is the pure river of the water of life clear as crystal. In the midst of the street of the city, and on either side of this river is there the tree of life, Christ Jesus, bearing twelve manner of fruits ripening always or every month. This is the New Jerusalem wherein God makes all things new. Salvation is of the Lord.

UNION ORGANIZED.

ELD. P. D. GOLD:—Please give notice in the LANDMARK that the first session of the Smithfield Union will be held with Bethany Church, Pine Level, Johnston Co., N. C., the 5th Saturday and Sunday in July 1893. An invitation is especially extended to ministering brethren. Please publish its organization by request of the brethren.

H. F. PEEDIN.

Saturday before the 5th Sunday in April, 1893, according to previous appointment, a number of churches of the Little River Association met in conference with the church at Clement M. H. for the purpose of organizing a Union Meeting in said Association. Conference was organized by appointing Eld. Jno. D. Scott, Moderator, and G. S. Wilson Clerk. All brethren present were invited to take part in the deliberations. On motion the messengers from the different churches were called on to report when the following churches were represented by the following named messengers, to-wit: Bethany, Eld. H. F. Peeden and Bro. Elbert Brown; Union, brethren Jno. R. Thompson and B. C. Woodard; Little Creek, brethren Eli Bartin and Joseph Edwards; Smithfield, Eld. Wm. J. Stephenson and Bro. Seth Woodall.

The above named messengers representing the said churches agreed to organize a Union Meeting in said Little River Association under the same rules of decorum as the Black Creek Union. On motion, the Union just organized shall be known by the name of The Smithfield Union, and it is further agreed that the first Union meeting be held with the church at Bethany M. H., Johnston Co. on Saturday and 5th Sunday in July 1893, at 11 o'clock, and that Eld. Wm. J. Stephenson preach the introductory sermon and Eld. H. F. Peeden his alternate. Agreed that Elds. H. F. Peeden and J. D. Scott preach Sunday, services to begin at 11 o'clock. It is agreed that Eld. H. F. Peedin should purchase a book for the use of the Union in which to record all the business proceedings of that body. On motion the conference adjourned.

ELD. JNO. D. SCOTT, Mod.

G. S. WILSON, Clk.

UNION MEETINGS.

BROTHER GOLD, DEAR SIR:—Please publish in the LANDMARK that the next Staunton River Union will be held with the church at Mt Zion in Pittsylvania Co. Va., commencing Friday before the fifth Sunday in July next. Ministering brethren, as many as can, are requested to come and see us at that time. Brother Gold, can't you come? Yours Truly, JOHN HODNETT.

The Skewarkey Union is appointed to be held at Flat Swamp (near Robersonville, N. C.) Friday, Sat. and 5th Sunday in July.

The Contentnea Union is appointed to be held at Mewborn's (near La Grange, N. C.) Sat. and 5th Sun. in July.

The Black Creek Union is appointed to be held at healthy Plains Sat. and 5th Sunday in July.

The Toisnot Union is appointed to be held with the church at the Meadow Sat. and 5th Sunday in July.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Please publish that the Durham Association (Col.) will convene with the church at White Oak on Saturday before the first Sunday in August, 1893. We solicit all ministering brethren to be with us. We will be glad to see them. Those coming by R. R. will be met at Mebane Depot. W. E. SLADE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Please publish in the LANDMARK that the next session of the Abbots Creek Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with the Mount Tabor Church, commencing Saturday before the 4th Sunday in August. Those coming by rail from the South or West, will be met at Ashboro, the county-seat of Randolph Co., Friday afternoon at three o'clock and conveyed to the Association. Those coming from the North or East will be met at Ram-suer Friday evening at 5-50 o'clock, and will also be conveyed to the Association. Brethren, and especially ministers are invited to attend. Brother Gold, can't you come? We would be glad if you could.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

Brother C. W. Wilson's Post Office is changed from Coulee City, Wash. Ter. to Genesee, Idaho.

OBITUARIES.

MRS. AMELIA STYRON.

The subject of this obituary, sister Amelia Styron, was born August 25th, 1818. She was the daughter of Richard Day and Elizabeth, his wife. She was married to Benjamin Styron on the 11th day of June, 1835. The fruits of this marriage were fourteen children—seven boys and seven girls. Some time, unknown to the writer, she received a hope in the Lord Jesus Christ, and in June, 1868, she joined the Primitive Baptist church at Cedar Island, Carteret County, N. C., and was baptized by Elder Thomas Goodwin. She continued a very consistent member in this church until the day of her death, which occurred on the 14th day of February, 1893. For several years she lived mostly with her children, who had all married, and at the time of her death she was with her daughter, sister Mary C. Mason, on Hunting Quarter. She often prayed that she should not suffer long with sickness, and so it was. She had been infirm for some time but was able to be up and wait upon herself, and on the day of her death she ate her meals as usual. Shortly after supper she was taken, and just as the daylight was passing out in the west, her life gently ebbed out and she passed from this world of sorrow and darkness into the world of joy and light, to praise the name of Jesus forever. On the 17th of February her body was laid to rest in her desired burial ground on Cedar Island, there to await the morning of the resurrection, when all the saints shall arise in the likeness of our glorious Lord and praise him forever and forever. May we all be wholly resigned to his will.

L. H. HARDY.

MRS. SARAH A. PAUL.

departed this life March 26th, 1883. She was born September 6, 1863, and was united in marriage with Joseph B. Paul, March 21, 1883, with whom she lived quietly until her death. She leaves a kind husband, three children, five brothers and one sister, a father and mother, with many relatives and friends to mourn her loss; but we mourn not without hope. She assured me more than eight years ago of the dealings of the Lord with her soul. She never united with any church but was a believer in the Primitive Baptists. She often said she had not done as she ought, and in her last sickness seemed to feel chastisement for neglecting her duty. She was a great sufferer though patient to the end. She had to sit on a chair nearly three months, as she was so swollen she could not lie on the bed, especially during her last days. She bore her afflictions with patience and seemed to be reconciled to death as she had a hope of a better world. She had the aid of two doctors with all that kind neighbors and friends could do, but the good Lord saw fit to take her to a better inheritance, we hope, where there is no more sickness nor weeping. She seemed to be entirely weaned from the things of time, and fell away into the blessed sleep from which we hope she will not awake to weep or suffer. While she was suffering I believe her soul was praising the Lord. She tried to sing but could not, for lack of breath. The Lord giveth and taketh. I hope he will reconcile us to his will and have mercy on her bereaved ones and take care of them in time and eternity, is the desire of the lonely was born May 4th, 1827, and was married to the writer February 16th, 1879. She united with the Primitive Baptist church by experience at Middle Creek, Wake Co., N. C., September 7th, 1850, and died in the triumph of a living faith in Christ, February 8th, 1893, making her stay in this sinful world 65 years, 9 months and 4 days.

MOTHER.

CAMILLA BUNDY

I can well say that I believe she is at rest, for she was so faithful to the cause of Christ; for if she was able she was sure to attend every meeting. We cannot grieve as though we had no hope, for I do believe she is at rest, and by the grace of God I hope to meet her where we can sing praises to his holy name. May the Lord remember me according to the plenitude of his mercies, and give me his Spirit to say "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord."

C. A. BUNDY.

EMELINE SHEPHERD.

It is with a feeling of sadness I make the attempt to write a few lines in loving memory of my dear sister, Emeline Shepherd, who departed this life July 25th, 1892, after an illness of eight weeks, in the 56th year of her age. She was afflicted with nervous prostration and although her sufferings were intense she bore them with uncomplaining resignation and christian fortitude. She told me about 4 weeks before she died that she had a hope in Jesus and was not afraid to die, and asked to see her sister Bettie, and when she came in she raised up in bed and told her she was not afraid to meet her Jesus, and that she had a home in paradise. She never joined any church, but was a strong believer in the doctrine of salvation by grace, and enjoyed hearing the Primitive Baptists preach, and loved to have them visit her, so she could wait on them. She was always quiet and unassuming in her manners, and possessed a kind and amiable disposition. I never heard her speak ill of anyone, but would rather excuse others of faults than accuse them. I felt for some time after she died that I never could give her up or feel resigned to her death. While I knew the Lord had done right I could not feel reconciled. I prayed to the Lord for submission to his will, and I feel that my petition was answered in a dream. I dreamed that some one came to me clothed in pure white and told me to follow them. The road we traveled was very straight and narrow, and was as solid and white as marble. We soon came in sight of a beautiful building unlike anything I ever saw, and glittered like gold. We entered and I saw my dear sister with a host of others clad in robes of snowy whiteness, and oh, how happy she looked. I had not been there long before my sister Bettie came in and I felt that I was in "My Father's house of many mansions." While this was only a dream it has given me much comfort. I have a hope that when this life of sin and sorrow is ended of meeting my loved ones in a home where pain and parting are unknown. Sister Bettie has had a vision since sister's death which she wishes published, that has given her some consolation. She had been praying for some sign or token that sister was at rest, when she heard sister's voice telling her that she was at rest and for her to tell me so, or I would dream of her again that night, which I did. I could write much more in regard to her many virtues and noble traits of character, but fear I've already taken up too much space.

She leaves one brother and three sisters with many relatives and friends to mourn her departure, but not as those who have no hope, for we feel that our loss is her gain.

Dearest sister, thou hast left us
And our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Brother Gold, remember us all at a "Throne of Grace." Yours in hope.

CASEBIA SHEPHERD.

MRS. MARGARETT V. COOK

died at her home in Pittsylvania Co., Va. Feb. 19, 1893 aged eighty one years and one day. She was the wife of Harmon Cook Sr., who died seven years ago. She had been in feeble health for more than a year with the la grippe which finally turned into something like dropsy. She had several times to all appearances been near death's door, but would again revive and mend. For a month or two her health seemed to be better than it had been for some time until about twelve days before she died, when she was attacked with heart dropsy and suffered a great deal, though she bore her affliction with great fortitude. She told the family she could not live and seemed willing to go. All of her children reached the bedside before she died but one daughter that was living in Texas. Could the skill of her physician or hearts overflowing with grief have saved her she would not have died, and we would not have to weep for a loving mother who always sought our comforts and pleasures regardless of her own. Nothing seemed to afford her more pleasure than to make those about her pleasant and agreeable. She had a kind word for every one, being especially kind to the needy, never turning them empty from her door, though in the last few years of her life she was not able to help much as she had given the most of her property to her children. She had been a strict member of the Primitive Baptist Church for more than fifty years; her home was a home for the Baptists. She loved to have the brethren and sisters visit her and talk about the goodness and mercies of God in the pardon of their sins. Her chair at home is vacant, but she is not forgotten, and we are not left to mourn as those who have no hope, but we hope to meet her and our dear father where there will be no more sorrow and pain, but all will be joy and love.

She leaves seven children, four daughters and three sons with a number of kindred and friends to whom she has often said in her christian walk and faithfulness that there is no Saviour but Jesus. Oh! may her acts of kindness and good examples make lasting impressions upon those left behind her. We feel that our loss is her eternal gain. May we all be prepared by the grace of God to meet her in the kingdom of God.

Dearest mother, thou hast left us;
Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He will all our sorrows heal.

Dearest mother, we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled;
There in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

May the Lord comfort and strengthen us to endure to the end, then receive us into his peaceful presence. Written by her devoted daughter,

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A PETITION.

My Father who art in Heaven,
Author of all good gifts that are given;
Wilt thou in the days of my youth,
Instil in my heart thy holy truth;
Teach me to say thy kingdom come:
On earth as it is in Heaven be done—
Teach me to know thy word,
Oh, thou most blessed Lord,
Give me faith to cling to thee,
And from thy mercy seat never flee,
Until a blessing thou hast given,
And from my mind all doubts are driven.
From my heart cast out all sin.
Through the blood of Jesus make me clean.
Thou must save and thou alone.
Salvation's not given for what man has done.

Man's ways are wicked—he's born in sin,
And remains unrighteous 'till he's born again.

By the spirit of God—the righteous Judge,
And who, his people from sin doth purge,
Good Lord my transgressions forgive,—
It's through thy mercy that I live.
I have no power of my own,
All from thee is drawn;
And from sin I cannot flee,
Until from sin I'm set free.

Until I'm made by thy power
A vessel of mercy to ascribe to thee all glory;
And worship thee as the only God,
And all power of man discard,
Until thou dost my nature renew Cast out the evil—instil the pure.

Thou knowest how degraded and vile,
And full of sin is thy penitent child,
If indeed I am a child of thine,
And in Thee sweet peace can ever find.
But for such did Jesus die,

Such rebellious, wicked creatures as I.
And through him I do claim,
And beg to bear the christian's name;
Through Him I do implore,

That Thou wilt let thy mercy flow;
And bless me with a christian spirit,
That I may heaven with christians inherit.
Oh! Lord, give me this day my daily bread,
Thou hast ever Thy children fed,

Thou hast given all I possess,
Thou art merciful and I confess.
Confess my sins and implore thy grace,
O merciful God hide not Thy face
From me a sinner in sore distress,
For Jesus sake do thou bless.

Bless as thou seest I need,
Teach me thy word to gently heed,
Make me an humble servant in Thy hand
To do whatsoever Thou command;
A tree whose fruit shall be good
O Thou most blessed Lord,
And I will with joy proclaim
All honor and praise to Thy holy name.
R. H. PITTMAN.

COME, SEE THE PLACE WHERE THE LORD LAY.

As I take my pen to write of the goodness and mercy of God to poor vile sinners like myself, my mind is led to the words at the head of this article as recorded by St.
Matthew 28 : 6.

These words were spoken by the angel to the women who went to the sepulchre seeking the body of Jesus. Could they have understood the prophecies concerning him, the message of the angel would have been glorious news to them; but they did not fully understand his mission into the world, hence Jesus said, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory?" The Holy Ghost had not yet been given to take the things of the Father and show them to the children, yet they loved Jesus, and they proved their love by going to the sepulchre seeking his body: and though he was not there, they could behold
the place where the Lord lay.

How sad it makes us feel to see the place where the Lord lay when we do not know where he is! No doubt the tears dimmed the eyes of those dear sisters when they could not behold their loved one. They had thought that it was Jesus, but alas! Where is he? How often we lose sight of what the prophets have spoken concerning him, and how their testimony agrees with our experience. Darkness hovers over our hungry soul, and we long to hear his loving words. We go to the sepulchre. This earthly tabernacle in which Jesus dwelt is all vile and full of sin, we see the grave clothes—the sign of death, but Jesus is not there. We go to the written word, for we have found Jesus precious in that; but all is dark. We have only the letter, no Jesus in it. Our experience is dark, and we decide that we are deceived in the whole matter. We had hoped that it had been he that should have redeemed Israel. Oh, how sorrowful!

We think of his merciful visits, and how he raised the very Lazarus of our dead natures, opened the blind eyes, unstopped the deaf ear, and poured the oil of grace into our hearts. We remember how our souls have been fed as we listened to his loving words, and ere we are aware we see Jesus, high and lifted up. "He has risen; come, see the place where the Lord lay."

Just a little while ago we could behold only the empty space where he had lain. We felt so vile, so full of sin. No Jesus there. He is pure, holy undefiled. We can do nothing good, but when we see Jesus, in the ecstasy of our soul we forget our selves, and admire, love, and adore him: we want to tell his disciples that he has risen, that he laid down his life for us, and rose a victorious conqueror over death, hell, and the grave. Oh, then come see the place where the Lord lay.

If you will go with me to the manger, Bethlehem of Judea, and there behold the son of God: he was so poor that he had not so much as a garment to put on, his parents so poor that a place could not be found for them in the inn. Brethren, you that are poor in the things of this world, take courage, and behold the place where Jesus lay. You who have abundance of this world's good, be not proud or vain, and think you are better than your poor brother; for there are no big I and little you in the Kingdom of God. When we were brought low, in the very dust of humility, and made to feel that eternal death was our portion, and if we were sent to hell it was just we were all brought upon one level; and we were made, not only willing to be saved by this one who was so poor, but we were made beggars, begging for his mercy. Here all the family of God are made equal. The wealthiest man that ever tasted the goodness of God is brought down to poverty, like Jesus his Elder Brother, and the poor are made rich in him.

Jesus said, "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the son of man hath not where to lay his head." He was poorer than any thing God had made. Who of us, my dear Brethren, have not felt this when we were without God, and no hope in death? The birds, foxes,—every thing of God's creation was in peace with him; while man alone had merited his wrath, and I, of all his creatures, am the worst:

"Fain would I become earthly worm That has no future being."

But when Jesus makes himself known to the poor sinner, we see that he is risen for us, and we turn from the grave and love and adore him.

I would like to follow Jesus in baptism, at the supper where he washed his disciples' feet, to the garden of Gethsemane, to his trial before the Jews, and finally to the Cross; but my letter is already lengthy. Suffice to say now that Jesus has gone through all these trying scenes for us. Is it not enough to dissolve the heart in thankfulness and melt the eyes to tears.

Brethren, I feel like I want to praise his name. I cannot praise him enough for his goodness and mercy to poor sinful me. He has removed the dark cloud that has so long obscured his blest presence from my soul, and enabled me once more to rejoice in his mercy.

In hope of life in him, your little sister,

S. E. BROYLES.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, MY DEARLY BELoved BROTHER IN CHRIST, TO YOU GREETING:--It is by and through the mercy of a just and al-wise Redeemer that I am the spared Redeemer of another day. I have a mind to write you a few lines to let you hear from me. I am well at this time and the rest of the family are all well, and mother's health is a great deal better than it was when you were here. She was able to go to meeting last Saturday and Sunday, and surely I felt glad that she was able to go; for it carried my mind back to my child-hood day, for just 35 years ago last Sunday she was baptized, and I never have forgotten that day, nor do I ever expect to forget it; and just 19 years and 14 days after she joined the church I joined too, and have been comforted on many occasions, and built up in my feelings. When at other times I feel to be down in the valley, and can't come forth, and feel to be shut up as it were in darkness; and then my mind is carried back I hope to my first love and I am made to wonder why I am blessed so, for God has not forgot to remember me in all my trials and troubles, but has healed my poor broken heart. My dear Brother, who of us is able to do anything without the mercy of God? I am willing to say none of us has any strength nor power of our own. Jesus is our strength, for it is in him we live and move and have our continual being, and my dear Brother are we not poor, destitute creatures. I for one feel like I am destitute of every thing: but then I think maybe I crave more than I ought to, but I can't help it. I do crave the peace and prosperity of zion every where: for David says, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. O how glad I would be if I only could live just as I desire, but my dear Brother, I fall so short of it that it makes me fear and tremble, and I can't help it. If I only could feel like the rest of the members look, it seems like I would not have such bad feeling as I do. I feel like that they are all my superiors, and I feel like when I am at the feet of my brethren and sisters that I am at my place, for I feel to be less than the least of all saints. Dear Brother, I have thought of you many time since you were here and the sweet discourse you preached at New Hope. It did my poor soul good then, and it does me good to think of it now, for I do believe that the blessed Lord sent you with that sweet message to deliver to his children, and when that is the case they are benefitted by it. I hope the time will soon come when the Lord may direct your mind to come to see us again; although your stay was short with us I did enjoy your pleasant company so much : it seems like it was a feast to me and a double feast at that. When I think how we are blessed, I hope that I do not esteem you nor any other brother preacher only for the work sake. It is not my desire to do anything wrong if I know it, but the great trouble with me is that I can't do anything but wrong in my own estimation. When I would do good evil is present with me. So you see that I am poor and little amongst the flock of God, and I don't feel like I could live anywhere else but with the people I love and believe to be his followers. I have often made this remark that if there were no Primitive Baptists in the world that I would not want to stay here any longer, for I don't think that there would be any pleasure for me in this world. I will soon have to close this imperfect letter, hoping to hear from you soon through the lines of a long and interesting letter if you feel like writing to one who feels to be less than the least of all saints, if one at all. With love and kindest regards to you and yours, and when it goes well with you remember me at a throne of grace, and may the blessings of God rest and abide with you and all the true Israel of God is my prayer for his name's sake. I remain you affectionate little sister in the bond of peace.

ELDER R. A. WISEMAN, DEAR BROTHER:—The article handed me in the LANDMARK of the 1st inst. I have casually examined. I think in the main Elder Gold agrees with my oft expressed views of unpardonable sins. But in the conclusion we differ somewhat. I can accept, as I understand him, all the first part of his article and when he quotes : "There is no forgiveness for that, neither in this world, nor the world to come," and makes his explanation, I was more than pleased. But I want to follow that "gospel world" a little farther. There is no forgiveness for that, neither in this Jewish world, nor in the gospel world to come. Christ came in the ends of the world ; in the last end of the Jewish world, and the first end of the gospel world. And this sin shall not be forgiven in either of these worlds. Here is a rule that is perpetual, a rule that is to last forever, to be applied to the church when the Jews had the oracles of God, and applied to the church in the gospel dispensation. And whatsoever his rules or laws say, they say to them who are under them. Hence my view is that none but the children, the regenerate, even commit that sin, or none but them are held responsible for that sin. The alien is not under the rule. None but the children ever quench the Spirit, ever resist the Spirit. It is the Spirit as the comforter that is quenched, or resisted, and the alien does not have him. God sends the comforter to the sons, not to the aliea. The life giving power of the Spirit is never quenched, never resisted by any one. Here is where God works and none can hinder. By the life giving power of the spirit He gives unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish. Through your knowledge the weak brother shall perish. (The former in an eternal sense, the latter in a time sense.) Eternal life never dies, never perishes. Fellowship, peace and love, the entering into that life here in time, does perish. Some perish for a shorter and some for a longer time. But if they come back properly, they should be forgiven and restored to the organic church ; for these are not sins unto death. But if any member is guilty of any heinous crime, that is a sin unto death. He should be put out of the church, and forever left out.

For this reason the organic church cannot afford to carry thieves, liars and scoundrels. Hence God shall cut them off. Do not pray for their return. They have sinned unto death, have died to the church, and the church should remain dead to them. In the Jewish world they were cut off from among the people. Moses was cut off, his carcass fell in the wilderness. This did not shut him out of eternal Heaven, but he missed those large grapes—so those who sin unto death miss the heavenly places here, not Heaven. God's grace fits them for heaven. Again when one of these who has passed from death unto life has the benefit of the true light and then charges Christ and the devil with being partners, denies the power of the Spirit (that gave him life and light,) God says this sin should not be forgiven in the Jewish church, nor in the gospel church. The blood of Christ will only save him as by fire to eternal heaven. He is cut off here forever.

Respectfully,

JAMES EVANS.

Remarks.

One may take a position in itself condemned in scripture, and may haul in another matter true in itself, and supported by scripture, and then attempt to prove the unscriptural position by connecting the two. But to link a matter that has no connection with another that is undeniable, and to attempt thus to give currency to an unsound thing is not good reasoning.

We do not doubt but that there is also a gospel world. But there is an assumption in the above article of another world after the gospel world, and that there is forgiveness in that other world for transgressors that are not forgiven in the gospel world. Will the brother point to the scripture that proves there is another world AFTER the gospel world in which sins are forgiven? This is a catholic theory and smells of a purgatory, does it not?

It is Pharisees Jesus was addressing (see Matt 9:34: Matt. 12:24.) Do you think these Pharisees had the Holy spirit? No man by the Spirit can call Jesus accursed. They were full of bitterness against Jesus. Can one be in that state that has the Spirit of God? To say that no man can sin against God except he has the Spirit of God would be to say that no man can sin but a christian. What an absurdity. The devil himself sinneth from the beginning. 1st John 3:8.

The language of Jesus, if it means any thing, means that those thus accusing him were bitter enemies, and that there never would be any forgiveness for them.

It is true that there are some sins unto death and some not unto death. This refers to the manifestation of church fellowship. Some offences of church fellowship are so scandalous that the church cannot bear those committing them, but are to let them remain out while they are on earth.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, BELOVED BROTHER IN THE LORD:—Through the protecting care of our great Preserver and kind Benefactor my life has been spared amid sore afflictions of which I almost despaired life to pass through the bounds of Mt. Pleasant, & Licking Associations of Ky, the Indian Creek of W. Va., and a number in Indiana where I have met many dear and loving brethren whom I shall never forget. While I have had some dark gloomy seasons then again I have been made to feel the presence of Jesus I hope. My health has gradually improved and I am feeling much better now than when I left home. I am not suffering near so much with my heart as I did.

The Baptists are in much better condition than in the past. They have gotten rid of an arminian element in W. Va., which has left a good sound band of loving brethren and sisters earnestly contending for the faith: while they have gone there are disciples that have been drawn after them which we regret to lose, but we feel assured that some at least will be brought back.

The party that has gone off are worse than Missionaries in Ala., but they are not near so liable to deceive as if they imitated the truth more. Zion is in travail and is bringing forth children. I had the pleasure of baptising dear brother C. V. Ashworth's daughter on Flat Top, W. Va. I use to nurse her when she was a child and carried her many nights when I had no idea she would live till day. But the Lord has preserved her and she told as clear an experience as I ever heard about midnight at Bro. Ashworth's house and was received by a number of brethren and I baptized her next day. Many precious ones have a hope in that country who I trust will soon live in obedience. I think there is a bright future for the Baptists in W. Va., since they have been purified.

There has been a division in Indiana by Eld. Pence & Co., similar to Harman & Co., in W. Va., which has cleansed the Baptists of a disaffected element who are arminians, and the true Baptists of Indiana are in a better condition and stronger than I have ever seen them before. It is indeed a blessing to the Baptists of Indiana and W. Va., for they are firm and the true Baptists are coming together and love seems to prevail among them.

God's people who are sound have fought each other here in days past, but I feel to thank the Lord that they are understanding each other better. It is a pity for God's people to be biting and devouring each other. May the Lord enable us to live in peace and have that charity to bear with the weak, considering that we are but dust and frail, erring mortals.

I shall ever feel grateful to many dear saints whom I met for their kindness. In hope,

LEE HANKS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Being requested by some of the brethren and sisters to write a description of my trip down in the Eastern part of this State, and also my return home, I will now, with the help of the Lord, try to grant that request. I had been impressed to visit the churches down in that part of our state, and following my impression I went, and filled all of my appointments with the exception of one.

In the performance of these duties, the Lord blessed me with very good liberty excepting two or three times, at which times I was very cold and barren.

During my stay down there I met a good many of the brethren and sisters, with whom I enjoyed myself in the worship of God, and I can say with the Apostle Paul, that, through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto them and they received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus. Gal. 4-13, 14. And another distinct feature in the description of my travels is the enjoyable conversation which I had with our dear and afflicted sister Ruth Taylor. When I visited her I found her, although a great sufferer in body, perfectly resigned to the will of God, in whom she has great faith and confidence. She desires to depart this life and be with Christ, which is far better. I believe when she leaves this world her sufferings will all end, and I hope to meet her together with all of God's dear children, in Heaven, where there will be no sorrow, sickness, pain, nor death, for all such things will be passed away.

In regard to my return home I will just say that I found my family enjoying very good health, as usual, for which I feel thankful to the Lord. And I will now say in conclusion, that I return my most humble and sincere thanks to the brethren and sisters and friends who were so kind to me while I was with them, and I hope the Lord will reward them, both in time and eternity.

A. N. HALL.

DEAR BRETHREN, GOLD AND LES-TER:—I am in receipt of a letter from Elder L. H. Hardy, of North Carolina, in which, after commenting favorably on the letter published in the LANDMARK which I had written to sister Sallie Vawter, he says, "Now I desire you to continue the subject, if it please the Lord, and give your views on the second beast that John saw rising out of the earth." It is with hesitancy that I attempt to write for publication on that mysterious subject, knowing as I fully do my inability to write that which would satisfy, comfort and instruct God's dear people. I am not prepared to say that I have no views on that seemingly mysterious subject which is revealed in these words. "And I behold another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb and he spake as a dragon." Rev. 13: 11. I have frequently said that I regarded the book of Revelation in the light of prophecy of things that must shortly come to pass. Those prophecies are given to us in symbols which present all great coming events, many of which have transpired and the prophecies have been fulfilled. The purposes of God made manifest by those prophecies and their fulfillment lift the minds of the saints to his great and wonderful character which presents to them his power, wisdom, immutability and love, all of which center in the great and ever glorious plan of salvation, and they rejoice to know that he says, "I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Mal. 3-6. John had seen the great wonder in heaven, the great red Dragon which clearly symbolized Pagan Rome. He also saw the beast coming up out of the sea with seven heads and ten horns and upon his heads the name of blasphemy. This is an apt and illustrative symbol of Papal Rome. In this symbol John presents the corruptions and wickedness of that hierarchy and her blasphemy, when her emperors and popes claimed to be the vicegerent of heaven clothed with power of successful intercessions, and by their intercessions have all the sins of those who confess and paid the proper amount of money blotted out. One of whom said that by his indulgences he had saved more souls than Peter had by his sermons.

Now, brother Hardy, let us turn our thoughts and meditations upon that beast that John saw coming up out of the earth. Let us remember that this, as well as that which had upon his heads the names of blasphemy, were both beasts, beasts of the most ferocious and corrupt character. It may be observed that neither of them came down from God out of Heaven as John saw the New Jerusalem. But one of them coming up out of the sea (the Roman Empire) and the other out of the earth. The earth was cursed on account of sin, and this beast had all the pollutions and corruptions of that earth attached to him. Thorns and thistles were its productions. They lacerate the flesh of all who come in contact with them. This was the character of that beast. He afforded no spiritual food to the saints but persecuted them, and labored to insert the most deadly poison in them spiritually. But he had two horns like a lamb. Evidently the word horn symbolizes governments. This beast came up out of the earth, not out of the sea or Roman Empire. The first appearance of that beast was in England where Henry the 8th threw off all dependance upon Rome, and was declared by act of Parliament supreme head of the church of England. Thus one of the most corrupt monarchs that had ever reigned in that kingdom was by law made head of that church. John saw that beast rising up out of the earth. In the reign of Henry the 8th it was not made fully manifest. It was then rising, but soon the Arch Bishops were made members of the British Parliament, and heavy penalties were imposed by law upon all who failed to give implicit obedience to all things required by that head of the church and his successors in that position. One of their dogmas was, the King can do no wrong. This was a complete union of temporal and spiritual power, or a union of church and State as we call it. The beast has the horns of a lamb. The British government in the character of all its officers claimed to be true christians. In that way it has the horns of a lamb, or, in other words, it was externally lamb-like. It spoke by its laws as a dragon. The dragon is used as a symbol to represent Pagan Rome in all her fearful persecutions. She spoke by her laws as all other governments do, and those laws are declarative of the character of the government that adopts them. The British colonies in North America were under the laws of that government, and after those colonies were settled laws were enacted in conformity with those of the mother country. Taxes were imposed on all without regard to the religious views of the tax payers. Those taxes were for the support of the Episcopal clergy who were protected by law. It was provided by an act of the Virginia Legislature in 1643, that all ministers shall be conformable to the orders and constitution of the church of England, and that no others be permitted to teach or preach publicly or privately, and a penalty was affixed to that law which required that all who did not conform to that law must without delay leave the colony. Many Baptist ministers were imprisoned under that law in Virginia. That law continued in force till the Declaration of American Independence. It was in the defence of one of those Baptist preachers that the illustrious Patrick Henry distinguished himself. Similar persecutions existed in most of the colonies, specially in New England, and had existed for many a year in Old England. Then surely that beast spake as a dragon. Under that law in Virginia John Ireland was imprisoned for seven months. He was a Baptist preacher and one of the purest men that ever graced an American pulpit. That beast had two horns. It will be remembered by those who have studied the history of those times that Martin Luther was the bold, able and fearless advocate of the reformation in Germany. That government soon yielded to his power and discarded catholicism. But they established the Lutheran church by law, and commenced persecuting all who did not recognize that as the true church, and accept its teachings. In Germany at that time there was a large number of Baptists, but they were called by the Lutherans by way of burlesque Ana-baptists because they refused to accept any in their churches who had not been baptised or refused to be immersed. The Lutherans and others who opposed the Baptists were then called Reformers, and they established this decree, "We therefore ordain and require that hereafter all men, women, boys and girls forsake rebaptising, and shall not make use of it hereafter, and they shall let infants be baptized. We therefore determinately command all citizens of this land, and all who are in the least connected therewith, namely the chief and under officers, town councils, Judges, deacons and deaconesses, that if they meet with any Ana-baptists they will report such to us, according to their oaths not to suffer them any where, nor let them increase, but to imprison them, and to deliver them to us, for we will according to law punish with death all the Ana-baptists and those that adhere to them." (Benedict's history, page 86) Then Germany was the other horn and there the beast spoke as a dragon. Webster gives this as the definition of the name Ana-baptist, "a Baptist, one who holds the doctrine of the baptism of adults alone, or of the invalidity of infant baptism, and who of course maintains that those who have been baptized in infancy ought to be baptised again." With these sentiments is generally united the belief that baptism ought to be performed by immersion. But another radical objection that the Baptists of Germany had to the followers of Luther and their law established church was that that church held the doctrine of consubstantiation. They held and maintained that after the consecration of the elements the body and blood of Christ are substantially present with the substance of the bread and wine used in the sacrament. The Baptists then held as they do now, and have ever held, that the bread and wine used in the sacrament are emblems of the broken body and spilt blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. The catholic church holds the doctrine of baptism by affusion, or in other words, by pouring or sprinkling, and Martin Luther brought that and consubstantiation with him as part of the household goods of his own catholic mother, and because the German Baptists had no use for those goods he and his followers decided that they must be put to death.

Evidently the beast described in the text is both symbolical and prophetic. That beast symbolized the character of the religion established by law in Germany, and England, and that symbol was prophetic of those things that did come to pass near sixteen centuries after the angel of the Lord gave them to

John on that lone isle. That beast was lamb like. It had two horns which represented those two governments, and they claimed to worship the meek and lowly lamb of God. That beast speaks as a dragon. Those governments attempted to force all to accept their corrupt systems by fines, imprisonment and death. While Henry the 8th of England did not during his reign accept the system adopted by the reformers, yet he laid the foundation on which the Episcopal church was built, and which has been up to the present time sustained by taxation levied upon all without regard to religious views. Our Lord said, "My kingdom is not of this world." What a contrast. The churches of which I have spoken have been built and sustained by earthly power, and men have been declared the head of the church. If the history of those times is correct Henry the 8th broke his connection with the Catholic church because the Pope of Rome refused to grant him an indulgence which would enable him to be divorced from his lawful wife so that he could marry Anna Boylein, one of the most beautiful ladies about the throne. This perhaps is sufficient to show that the creature that John saw rising out of the earth was a beast, and that that beast symbolizes the rise of two of the most corrupt religious organizations that then disgraced the religious world. Then it is a prophesy given to us in symbol likeness or figure. Then what a contrast between those counterfeit churches and the church of our Lord Jesus Christ. The former were built and sustained by the money, might, and wisdom and power of men, but of the latter it is declared that it is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts. Our Lord said to Peter, "upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." That rock was Christ, of whom the prophet speaks saying, unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace." In that great and wondrous name is found all the ever wonderful and glorious attributes of our God. While the saints are journeying here below amidst the mists, gloom and darkness of this sin-cursed world, sometimes they are blessed with a ray of light from the eternal throne. Then they have the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ shining in them. Then they rejoice to know that it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy. Of that mercy the Psalmist says, "The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him," and the wise king of Israel says, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." The saints daily experience the corruptions of this old man. It is that which causes them to fear the Lord who is holy, harmless and cannot look upon sin, or behold iniquity. They fear the Lord and seek to do his holy will, and mourn the presence in them of corruption which causes them in deep sorrow to cry out, "When I would do good evil is present with me."

But they rejoice to know that the time will come when this mortal must put on immortality, and this corruptible must put on incorruption. Then death will be swallowed up in victory. That victory will be through the finished work of their glorious Lord to whom their chief desire while here below is to give all the glory. They look not to emperors, kings, popes, prelates and bishops to lead and direct them in wisdom's ways, and the paths of peace and holiness. Their only trust is in the sweet and ever precious name of Jesus who conquered death and brought immortality to light through the gospel. Now dear Brethren Gold and Lester, brother Hardy and the readers of ZION'S LANDMARK, I certainly have worried you long enough with these feeble and rambling thoughts. But all the errors which perhaps are many that you find in these thoughts you must charge to brother Hardy's account for not calling into use abler pens than mine to present to him and you the wonderful mysteries contained in Rev. 13-11., and I subscribe myself affectionately yours,

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER:—I have a desire from some source or other to hear from Eld. B. Greenwood, as I have not heard how he is getting along for some time. I would be glad to know if he is well, for it seems that he is drawn to me like some near kinsman; though I have never seen him in the flesh, but I feel like if it is the Lord's will I would be glad for Him to enable him to visit us. I received his book the next day after I joined the church, which was a rare feast to me; though my mind was too full to read it for several days. The Lord's works have been great and marvelous with him.

Brother Gold, I have had the sweetest rest and peace since I joined the church that I ever had before. For five weeks and a half after I was baptized nothing bothered me. Satan was not even permitted to come near me. I verily thought while I was at the association that my mind would be employed the remainder of my days in thinking of the goodness of God. Such was my joy that I wondered what ever could come to hinder me from meditating on such glorious things. I never wanted to sin any more. I thought I could continue to live in the glorious praise of my Redeemer as long as I lived. It seemed I was dissolved in love, such love, O matchless love! I felt it was a heaven below. That was the most joyful meeting to me that I ever was at. It seemed that the preaching sounded sweeter than ever before. But I remember you told me to hold up as long as I could, and so I did, for I have been very low down since then. I know if I could have kept from getting in that condition I would have done so. My mind is so shut up now that I can't write as I wish, but I trust you will look over all imperfections, for I am young, and sometimes this bothers me. I get to fearing I am so young the Lord is not in the matter. The clouds overshadow me. I sometimes wonder, have I deceived the people of God? Then I think if I have what made me go, for I could stay away no longer. I will close this scribble. I wrote a letter to Brother Gardner while in such a state of rejoicing and thought I would send it to you, then fear kept me back. Remember me in your prayer. I hope I am your little sister,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

BROTHER GOLD:—I have a letter that I received a few days before I left home from Mr. Fountain, and it was so much comfort to me I feel like it will be to many others. So I will send it to you.

This friend is on the outside of the church. When I returned home from my meeting at Durham in June, I reached home about midnight and learned that Mr. Fountain had just left, and had left word for me to go to his house, a distance of about twelve miles, saying his wife wanted me to baptize her, and I went according to request thinking likely that both man and wife would go into the water together, but when I went down to the water my friend says, "I have been showed I cannot go with my wife now." After I baptized his wife and left he was enabled to see the blessing of God in the obedience of his wife, and the joy of salvation seems to have been given to them both, and it looks like that his evidences would be enough to cause Mr. Fountain to follow Christ.

ISAAC JONES.

MR. ISAAC JONES, DEAR SIR:—As my mind has been so impressed to speak to you all day, I now make the attempt to tell you how we are getting along. On yesterday evening after my wife was baptized I was in trouble. I feared I had trampled the mercy of God underfoot, as I have done many times before. I had a burden on me, and felt like one alone, but, blessed be the Lord in a few hours this burden left me, and joy filled its place. O I wanted to join hands with my wife and walk the yard and praise the Saviour's name for what he had done for me. The loss of sleep the night before did not trouble, for I was as bright and easy as people often get. My wife was as happy as any one. It looked like we retired for the night's rest, and there was no sleep about my eyes. I commenced talking about the love of God, and the relief I had found in his obedience, and it seemed like the love of God was shed abroad in my heart. I got so I did not know what was going to happen. I never was in just such a condition before. I think I had about all that I could bear. I felt like shouting at the top of my voice. I looked for the angels of God to come. I felt that the house was full of the glory of God. I lay and looked out and listened, and desired to praise the Lord, and there was not a jar to disturb my joy, and in this condition I passed off into a deep sleep, from which I waked this morning, and the same is present with so much force that I have not tried to do much work, but want to tell the people all around, what a joy I have found. I need not go abroad for joy. I have a feast at home. My sighs are turned into songs. The comforter is come. Oh, this is a feast. How long will it last? There is nothing like the love of God. Help us to praise the the Saviour's name, for I feel that you were a messenger of peace sent from God to minister in time of great need. Blest be the God of joys who gives me here a crumb, and fills my soul with earnest hope till I arrive at home. My wife is at rest as near as mortal flesh can get.

Your loving friend,

Laurier, N. C.

About fourteen years ago it pleased almighty God to send me to these parts of this great country, where I found so many God fearing and believing children of the living God. I feel in duty bound to give them a small sketch of my experience in and during my sickness. But I find I have to desist. My pains and aches have ceased, but great weakness still remains. Sometimes I have fancied I am getting better, then again brethren find me worse off than before. Brethren, I commend you to the grace of God. Pray for me. I am truly yours in bonds and afflictions. I am very weak to day.

WISE AND FOOLISH.

If the five foolish virgins are saved equally with the five wise ones, or if they are saved, wherein is the difference between wisdom and folly? What is better than being wise? What is worse than being foolish? What difference is greater than theirs—one class is welcomed with the bridegroom at his marriage, the other not recognized by him at all, and the door is shut against them.

This marriage refers to the end or completion of the life of loneliness. At and after the marriage those welcomed are never put away but betrothed in loving kindness and righteousness forever. The land is married unto the Lord never to be put away.

TALENTS.

They are gifts for service and to be employed by the receiver for the benefit or honor of the giver. Does the Lord give talents to any but his own servants? Does he not bestow these talents or gifts wisely according to the capacity of these servants? Does he not hold each servant accountable for the proper use of these talents according to the several ability of each?

The reckoning time, when each servant is to give account of his use of the gift bestowed upon him, is not at the end of the world, but at the coming of the Lord Jesus in the approval and joys he manifests and gives to the obedient and faithful, or the reproof he administers to the disobedient.

We have the witness in ourselves of the blessedness of those walking in the Spirit, and the wretchedness of those walking after the flesh.

WHAT ORDER.

One must bake the cake for the prophet before he eats himself. We are to serve the Lord Jesus Christ, and not our own selves. It would be wrong for a church to call upon any one to pray that is not in order himself. If one has for years been in good order and serving even as a preacher, and is thrown in disorder, let him hold his peace until set in order. Let all things be done decently and in order.

NOT ALWAYS STRIVING.

"My Spirit shall not always strive with man." The same verse by the same word says, yet his days shall be a hundred and twenty years. Why not consider the entire verse? Man is flesh, therefore the Spirit of God shall not always strive with him. God would withdraw his Spirit from man for he was very corrupt. Yet he shall live one hundred and twenty years.

That is, it would be one hundred and twenty years to the flood which would end their lives.

The sons of God—the line of Seth's children—or the race that God's name was called on loved and married ungodly, vain women, the daughters of Cain. They walked after the lust of the flesh, and married these beautiful women from an impure motive, and great wickedness broke out over the earth, and all flesh corrupted his way, and God would take his Spirit away from the corrupt race, a great calamity indeed it would be, and he would destroy the race with a flood of water, but it would be one hundred and twenty years before the flood then, or man's days would be one hundred and twenty years. Here the long-suffering of God is shown wherein the ark was a preparing, wherein few souls (eight) were saved by water.

WHAT IS THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

Is it not better for us not to know? If we never commit it, and therefore never learn by experience what it is, it is better for us. The sweetest comforts we ever receive are through the Holy Ghost, and we cannot know anything in truth of Jesus but by the Holy Ghost, for no man can say that Jesus Christ is Lord but by the Holy Ghost; therefore to sin against the Holy Ghost is to sin against that which gives no pardon. While all manner of sin and blasphemy against the Son of man shall be forgiven, for the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanses from all sin, there is no forgiveness for sin against the Holy Ghost. Grieve not the Holy Spirit whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.

CAN A CHURCH DO WRONG?

If we assume that a church is always in the Spirit and infallible, as the Pope of Rome claims to be, are we right? It must be that way to be exempt from sin. As men we sin every day. If as a church we never sin why is it that so many reproofs are addressed by the Apostles to churches, and why did Jesus send such messages to the seven churches of Asia? Please answer. When a church sins what is the best thing to do? Repent and do the first works. They were works done in their first love. In their first works they do no one any wrong.

FOUND LIARS.

A friend writes me that I am accused of being hired by the Primitive Baptists to leave the Missionaries, and that I am going back to the Missionaries again. He thinks it would be better for all denominations to quit telling lies on each other. Well it would be nice it seems if there were no liars in this world. But take all the liars out of this world and things would be lonesome and quiet. If I was hired to go to the Primitives would I own it? If a man is base enough to change his religious profession for money, what is it vile he would not do? What would you think of Primitive Baptists that would receive one among them that they could buy?

I have no malice I hope against any denomination—but desire to be in possession of that principle of truth that will cause me to do right towards all people. Those who are not of the truth love and believe a lie. I am able to say if I do not love the doctrine held by Primitive Baptists I do not love any thing. When I went to them it was because I had no peace anywhere else. I was distressed and afflicted, and went to them because I loved them. They made me no offer at all of worldly honors or wealth.

MODERATION.

"Be not righteous overmuch, neither make thyself overwise. Why shouldst thou destroy thyself?"

Be not not overmuch wicked, neither be thou foolish. Why shouldst thou die before thy time?" Prov.

What a good thing is moderation? If one can settle down just where he belongs and abide in his calling, then he gets along easily and fills his place well. Suppose one thinks he is wiser or better than he is, and pretends to be very righteous. He will destroy himself. The brethren cannot love him as a humble one, and all his good savor as a meek one is lost, and he has destroyed himself.

Suppose one is overmuch wicked and foolish, not regarding the plain word of God that commends right-living and condemns wrong, he shows his folly to such an extent that he kills himself or destroys his good name and dies as a fool dies before his time. P. D. G.

ELDER P. D. GOLD:—Please, if you have space in your next LANDMARK, give your views on Psalm, 37: 12-15, and oblige, OLD SUBSCRIBER.

"The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

The Lord shall laugh at him; for he seeth that his day is coming.

The wicked have drawn out the sword and have bent their bow, to cast down the poor and needy, and to slay such as be of upright conversation.

Their sword shall enter into their own heart, and their bows shall be broken."

1st. Who are the wicked?

2nd. What is their character?

3rd. What is their end?

Satan is the author of all wickedness or opposition to God. That wicked one (See 2nd Thess. 2nd Chapter) whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish. The devil sinneth from the beginning: 1st John 3: 8. Some hair splitters might say that the devil is not under law and therefore could not sin. But John declares that he sins continually or from the beginning. Then he is the father of lies or sin, and is that wicked one in the fullest sense. Those must like him are the greatest sinners. The children of the devil do his will, for he works in them.

The wicked plotteth against the righteous. Jesus is the just or righteous one in the best sense. His people as they partake of his character are righteous. The wicked devise evil things and practice them against the righteous. They have their weapons of war, their bow and spear, and they aim to destroy the poor and the needy. Their nature is opposed to godliness, and they lie in wait to deceive, and gnash upon the righteous with their teeth.

One way they attempt as adversaries to destroy the righteous and entangle him is lies, deceit, flattery. If they can beguile the righteous, and entangle him this is their craft and joy. When the devil came to Eve and beguiled her, it was in a fair appearance of conferring great benefit on her. When the devil tempted Christ it was to induce him, under the appearance of great advantage, to do what seemed to be justifiable under the circumstances. For the surroundings were such as to make it appear to carnal man allowable to convert stones into bread to appease hunger. What wrong would it be? The rocks did not belong to any one. To change them into bread would be to feed the hungry. What wrong? Then it would prove that he was the son of God if he would receive the support of angels as he cast himself down from the pinnacle of the temple; and had not God commanded his angels to take charge of Jesus lest he dash his foot against a stone?

The devil's favorite method is to quote scripture and pervert it to a wrong purpose in some way, and thereby DECEIVE: and his servants or ministers do likewise. For instance, he will take some matter of less weight, yet taught in scripture, and dignify it with supreme importance, and make it very prominent by dwelling on it to the neglect of other more important matters, and distress and divide churches, and burden the people of God, and cause divisions contrary to the doctrine we have received. The pharisees magnified the importance of tithing mint &c., a thing taught in scripture, but they neglected the weightier matters of law, as judgment, mercy and faith: Matt. 23: 23-25. Straining at gnats they swallow camels.

The goat and sheep are used as types of the wicked and righteous. The goat is a fighter. He carries his head high. That is his natural position indicative of pride. The goatish principle is to transgress. If a goat can find a low place, or an unguarded one in the wall, or a rail of a fence down, or any way unguarded into a field, he will enter as a trespasser. That is the disposition of heady, high-minded men who get up hobbies of some matter. They have the cunning to choose something taught in scripture, but they seek to exalt it into undue importance. Coming into the church and appearing very humble at first, and seeming to think the church all right when they first join, they soon find something wrong, and with heads high they set about as reformers, and will carry their point if it divides churches and brings general grief among brethren better than they are. You may know they are wrong by the divisions and confusion they cause.

Or take one that is turned out of the church for some wrong that he has done. If a goat he will raise a big fuss by claiming that he is innocent, or has been wrongly tried, or unfairly dealt with. He is full of fight as a goat, but it is under the appearance of being persecuted. He will get some brother or more on his side, and scheme and trick and push and butt until he gets up a confusion in the church, and this is his delight. He plots against the righteous, and draws sword and spear, bow and arrow, digs a pit, or plans the destruction of God's people. That is the way the devil and his angels work. They killed the prince of life and persecuted God's church. The Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

A sheep is lowly and meek. If he is turned out of the church it gives him much sorrow, but it does not make him mad. He is sorry he has caused any trouble. He cannot blame others. He feels unworthy to be a church member anyway,—too unworthy to be among God's people.

The greatest troubles to the sheep are wolves in sheep's clothing—appearing as sheep. They will hide among the sheep and attempt to look like sheep, and claim to be especially zealous, but it is zeal and no love, zeal for their own schemes, but no true love for the brethren; yet they will make you think it is great love for God and his truth.

We do not want people among us that do not believe as we do. It would seem that when one cannot fellowship the ways of Baptists he could leave them and go somewhere else.

The Lord shall laugh at the wicked. This means the utter confusion of the wicked, for God sees that his day (of calamity) is coming. Their sword shall enter into their own hearts, and their bows shall be broken. We are not to follow evil doers—nor fret ourselves or sin because they do. Let us abide in the doctrine. Do nothing by vain glory. Do all things in charity. Keep all the commandments of Jesus, but do so in love. Tarry one for another. Let love be without dissimulation.

God will bring everything into judgment. Cast your care on the Lord who careth for the humble. The meek shall inherit all things.

MUTUAL HELP.

What a help it is for each other for the Lord's people to meet and speak together of what the Lord has done for them, to talk of their trials and deliverances, of their hopes and fears. This is where they can render help to each other. They cannot help the Lord. He needs no help, and has never asked any one to help him in any kind of work; and those who think they are helping him, and assume the title of workers for the Lord, show that they do not rightly understand the character of God as the Creator, nor the relation to him of man as his creature, and as fallen under the condemnation of his holy law. As no man can assist the Lord with his work, so none of the Lord's people can give to any one any knowledgs of him, nor advance any brother one step in the experience of his salvation, nor put into any heart the grace of faith or hope or love. All this is the exclusive prerogative of God. "They shall be all taught of God." "Every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no variableness neither shadow of turning."

If, then, we cannot advance one another in the knowledge of God nor in the experience of his Salvation, what is the nature of the help we can give each other. It is as witnesses, whose testimony is for mutual confirmation, encouragement and comfort. "The multitude of them that believe" are now, as they were of old, "of one heart and of one soul," for "he fashioneth their hearts alike." The same one Spirit of Christ is in each one of all the family as the teacher and the life, and therefore the experience of each is essentially the same, however the circumstances may differ. Whenever one tells any of the exercises of his mind, therefore under the workings of the Spirit, he will be telling what is the experience of all the family; and so far as each who hears him has been led in the path of righteousness he will understand and receive the testimony. For all that is said by the saints either in preaching, or conference is but testimony of God's work. "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the word of life: For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us; That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us." 1 John 1: 1-3.

That which the Lord works in the hearts of his people is not known by them to be his work until he tells them. The blind man whose eyes he opened, and the lame man who was healed at the pool of Bethesda, did not know that it was the work of the Son of God until he told them. Abel did not know that he was righteous until he received the testimony of God. For all the righteousness that any man can have in this world is that "which is of God by faith in Jesus Christ." The enemy of all righteousness is constantly disputing the validity of the evidences which the Lord gives to his dear children; and they need to have those precious evidences continually confirmed. The dear Lord has in love ordained that they shall receive much of this confirmation from each other by speaking often one to another, as "they that feared the Lord" did of old, and so comfort one another with the words of his truth and salvation spoken by him to each; and by this sacred and comforting intercourse that they should be drawn more closely and firmly together in the sweet bond of love, "which is the bond of perfectness."

This confirmation does not come by one assuring the other that he is a child of God, but by simply telling his own exercises, and speaking of what the Lord has done for him. When one is in the dark concerning his own acceptance there is no man or angel whose assertion of confidence that he is a child of God could remove that darkness and give him assurance. The Lord alone can do that. But he often does this through the simple words of one of his children telling of his own feelings. The one whose words are so powerful for comfort does not think of being able to do any good to any one by what he may say; he does not look over his life to choose out of all his experiences what he thinks will be most profitable to his brethren; but he says what is now upon his mind, speaking with trembling, because he is constrained to, and doubting whether what he says will not be a trouble and annoyance to his brethren instead of a comfort. Some one hears in those simple words some exercise of his own expressed for the first time, and is by that witness favored to see his own exercise as the work of the Spirit. It may be that he had felt some great affliction of soul, something that made him doubt whether he had any right to go among the people of God, and that had almost made him decide to stay away. He has, however, come, but has been, up to this time, in great distress. But now he hears this very affliction of his told by another, and that which made him almost sure he was not a child of God now becomes one of the most precious evidences that he is. As his brother describes it he sees that it is an affliction that none but the Lord's people can have, and light and joy spring up out of that very darkness and affliction. The darkness is made light before him.

If one had seen a vision once, or had a glimpse of a peculiar landscape, which was afterward hidden from his sight, and the existence of of such landscape was denied by everybody around him until he began to doubt himself whether he had not been deceived by his own imagination, the assertion of some friend that he believed him to be truthful, and had no doubt but that he had actually seen the landscape would do him no good. But if he should hear a stranger, or one that had been an enemy before, begin to describe some portion of that landscape, the features of which are indelibly fixed in his mind, and which he has never seen except in that vision, nor even heard or read of, here would be a confirmation that he could not resist. Here is one who must have seen what he thought he had seen, for otherwise he never could have described it. Here is a witness. At another time when the denial and ridicule of all around him have almost made him doubt again, he hears another, whom he never saw before, describe some other portion of that same vision that he had never heard spoken of before, and had never alluded to himself. Now he is made doubly sure. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." So every additional testimony is a comfort to these "strangers and pilgrims" whose only comfort is in the sweet prospect of "that land that is very far off," which they have seen in vision, and the view of which fills their souls with delight.

It is well to keep in mind that we cannot tell each other what to believe, nor exercise any dominion over any one's faith. If one professes to have faith we can try that profession by the word of truth, the inspired scriptures; but we are not at liberty to try it by the words of any uninspired man, nor by the articles of faith prepared by any number of uninspired men. There is but one interpreter of God's word, and that is God himself by his Holy Spirit; and his work in the hearts of his people always shows them to be of one heart and of one soul. And when each one speaks of what the Lord has spoken to himself, and done for him he will not speak in vain. As face answereth to face in water, so his heart thus honestly expressed answereth to the heart of each one of those who are taught of God. This is not so when one tries to speak what he is made to think he ought to believe, or tries to set forth and defend some point of doctrine as expressed in some decision of councils, or in some articles of faith, and which he has been taught that it is of great importance should be firmly held and supported in that form of expression. He who is engaged in repeating thus after some one else is of very little if any vital use to the church of God. But when one is given the simple honesty of heart and strength of purpose to say, whenever it is his lot to speak or write, just what he himself has felt and seen and heard and tasted, and it is brought to his mind at the time, he is doing vital work. The Spirit places every gift and divides to every man severally as he will; and outside of the place and lot assigned one by that Spirit he is of no value to the church; and when speaking other than the words which Jesus has spoken to himself, which "are Spirit and life," he will give no solid comfort to another. No matter how few the words he may speak, nor how broken, if they come out from what he himself has seen and felt, however far he may think they fall short of expressing it, yet they will not be in vain. They will be most valuable and precious testimony to some poor soul.

And by this mutual testimony of the Lord's work his people help and comfort each other, and build themselves up "on their most holy faith," and grow up together "into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ."

OBITUARIES.

PAUL TURNER SHERROD.

Died near Hamilton, N. C., June 21st, 1893. Little Paul Turner Sherrod, son of J. T. and Mattie Sherrod, and grandson of her beloved brother H. L. Sherrod. This sweet little babe was born June 15, 1892, making its stay on earth a little over a year. It was as a flower that bloomed to remain for only a short time, but while open its odor is inhaled by all around it. So these little ones are given us long enough to take fast hold upon our hearts, and are taken away making manifest the truth of the scripture that all flesh is grass, and the goodness thereof, as the flower of the grass. Though sick but a short while, yet his sufferings were intense during that time with that painful and fatal disease bilious dysentery. What can be plainer to us than the fact that these little ones, though not sinners by actual transgression, are born in sin and shapen in iniquity, and therefore must be saved alone by the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ who died for them, and while on earth blessed them and said, "suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Then may the fond parents be comforted with the thought that their little babe is safe in the arms of Jesus, and free forever from all the snares and sufferings of this world; and may the spirit of reconciliation possess their hearts, and when their pilgrimage on earth is over they shall be taken to Him where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

M. T. LAWRENCE.

BARNEY DANIEL.

Barney Daniel's death occurred on the 4th of March 1893. Oh for strength from on high to help me to bear up in these my saddest trials of life, but while I thus try, some still voice seems to whisper cheer up, be not discouraged, for he that gave hath the same power to take away, blessed be his name. In the year 1877 we were married and lived together 15 years. Oh but he is gone. What is my home without him. His voice is no longer heard in our home. We can no longer welcome him around our fireside. Sometimes I hear some of his children list his name Papa, but the still voice is hushed. We are bereft now of him, and I believe he has gone to dwell with Jesus eternally. This is indeed a balm to my poor heart, for when in such pain he seemed to bear it most patiently, and would say, "oh you dont know how much I am suffering," and would say, if it could be the will of the good Lord to raise him up again, and if not he hoped to be better off after death. I often told him when in health when he would speak of parting from me, and even on his death bed, not to speak of leaving me, for I felt like I could never, no never bear it. He said you ought to be more resigned, but no, I would cling to him, and would try to pray if it was the Lord's will to spare him to me for a good long time to come. For I thought there was nothing impossible with the Lord, and while I was in much hope of him the doctor said he was in a very bad condition. Dear children, and grand children, and friends, and all that are near and dear to me, I entreat you all to pray for me in my great afflictions, and that when all our earthly trials are ended here, that we may meet those that are gone before. Then if the Bible be true, it after death we are so fortunate as to be with Christ oh how much more happiness. But I feel like when I have drifted out of all the cares and trials of this life I hope I shall enjoy the blessed and sweet privilege that will follow; and I believe those blessings are for those that have been sorely tried in this world. My dear husband was born Sept. 1st, 1817, and died March the 4th, 1893.

MRS. BARNEY DANIEL.

Goldsboro, N. C.
(Gospel Messenger please copy.)

SAMUEL B. LESTER

was born March 17th, 1842, and died Nov 17th, 1892, making his stay on earth forty four years and eight months. He was taken with typhoid fever Sept. 3rd., and lingered for two days and took his bed. He told me he never would get well. He told me that night while laying on the bed, he was praying to the Lord that if he was taken down to die, was his hope sufficient to die with; and he said the prettiest light shone all around him that he ever saw. He said he viewed his way clear. Oh! he said I was so happy I almost viewed my Saviour. He was never able to get out of doors any more. He got well of the fever so he could set up a little when abscess of the liver caused his death. For ten long weeks did I wait on my husband thinking he would get well. When I was cheered the most was when my hardest trial came. The day before he died he seemed so lively; he laughed and talked with me so sweet. At night he asked me if I was not going to sit up and talk with him; I told him I was. He then told me to lay down and talk. I then asked him if he was not sleepy as I wanted him to sleep some. Oh! little did I think I would never get to talk with him any more. At one o'clock I went to him asking him how he felt. Oh, perfectly easy, he said. I told him that made me feel better. He said lie down and rest. One hour later he called me telling me he was getting cold. I ran to him and told him he was not cold, and did all I could for him. Three doctors visited him but none could stay the hand of death. That morning he told them all around his bed farewell, pointing upward and smiling as if to say, I am going home. He professed religion Jan. 11th, 1889, and joined the Methodist church in May. I know he lived as near right as any one could. He loved all good preaching, and loved to read the LANDMARK next to his bible. Oh! the happy days we spent together after he professed religion. May the Lord help me to be resigned to his will, for I have a hope of meeting my dear husband beyond this vale of tears, where parting is no more, for I believe he is now enjoying the rest that remains for all of God's people. So pray for me and my family. I am your sister in Christ.

JANE D. LESTER.

ANN MCGOWAN.

You will please publish the death of Ann McGowan, a dearly devoted sister in Christ. Her maiden name was Ann Hobbs. She was born May 8th 1829, and died Dec. 19th 1889. She was married to Noah McGowan when quite young. Six boys and three girls were born to her, all of which lived to be grown and married except one which died when about twenty one years of age. Mrs. McGowan expressed a hope in Christ about the year 1860, and united with the church at Stump Sound, Onslow Co. She was Baptized by Eld. Wm. Brown. I knew her from that time until her death, and have never known her fail to attend meetings, and was always glad to see her meeting time so she might enjoy the company of her brethren and sisters which she delighted to entertain. She would always fix for traveling ministers, and would give them dinner when their appointments would be at Stump Sound, as all that preached there will witness, and many times she and her two youngest daughters would walk the distance of ten miles to hear them preach at their next appointments. She and these two daughters have spent much of their time attending the sick for days at a time. They were good nurses. She worked hard to raise her children. Her husband was in the late war, and like many others he breathed his life out there. Then his widow had to do the best she could. The largest child was not large enough to plough but little, but she being a good provider managed to keep all her children together until they were grown. She reared her children to work hard. Her daughters labored in the field in summer, in the winter they spun and wove cloth. The mother's prayer was that they all might be saved. All have followed her in the liquid grave but one. May that one come also. She had broken up house-keeping, but in Dec. becoming sick she desired to be taken back to her old home. This was done, but she soon died. She desired the Lord's will to be done. May the children take her advice, and long remember that as they grow in days they may grow in grace, and mourn not as those without hope, for we feel to hope that her last days were her best days.

MARSHALL SWINDELL,

on Dec. 3rd, 1892, passed away from this world of sin and sorrow to the world of joy and peace. Brother Swindell was born Oct. 16th, 1830, of Baptist parents, on the south side of Mattamuskeet Lake, Hyde Co. N. C. Brother Swindell had a kind and quiet disposition, and was a good neighbor, citizen and husband. He united with the Baptist Church some eight or ten years ago at Rose Bay, and was baptized by Elder A. Cartwright, and from thence forward was a kind hearted and amiable brother. I have often thought that I never saw a brother more devoted to the church and brotherhood than he. It seems he never tired of waiting upon them, and at all the Baptist meetings in the neighborhood he seemed to want all the company to go to his house. I think I have seen as many as forty or fifty people take dinner with the dear brother at meeting times on Sunday, and it really seemed that his whole soul was completely absorbed with the love of the church and the cause of truth. Brother Swindell married Miss Dorcas Credle, of Swan Quarter, and by her had six children born to him, of whom three survive him, one son and two daughters, his youngest daughter being a member of the church with him before he died. The dear brother was taken sick at Mr. Charley Benson's, his son-in-law, a few days before he died.

—He died in the full triumph of living faith, the faith of God's elect. It seemed that salvation by grace was the very theme of his soul I often think of the many times that I have been to his house and so much enjoyed the conversation with him of Heavenly and divine things; but though his voice will no more be heard on earth, yet his christian virtues will be long remembered by his dear brethren with joy and gladness.

May the Lord in his mercy bless his widow and children, whom he has left behind, with all natural and spiritual blessings, and save them with all the redeemed host, with an everlasting salvation.

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

Please publish the death of our dear little babe, Franklin Taylor, Son of W. T. and M. F. Summers, who departed this life June 18th, 1892. He was born April 9th, 1891. He was a very dear little babe to us. Indeed as he was the only one we had to love and care for, it is heart-rendering for such a bright little face to be shut off from us; but we realize the fact that the one who gave it has taken it away, and we must be subject. For I do feel that the Lord has done right.

My babe is resting, sweetly resting
In the arms of Jesus' love;
I pray the Lord to keep me trusting,
To meet my babe in heaven above.

Remember us.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

AFFLICTIONS—JOYS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD :—I have just been thinking how great a stranger I am to myself. It is so seldom that I am ever just as I wish to be. Sometimes everything is dark and not a promise can I see to sustain the thought that I am a christian. These periods of darkness are so frequent and last so long that it seems I would get used to them but I can't; each one has something about it that the others did not have and therefore each one is a new trial peculiar to itself. When I am blessed with a deliverance from trouble I think that I will be more watchful next time and not fall in the pit any more, but it occurs at a place where I am not expecting it, therefore I get in it before I am aware that I am near it. Just that way I am taken up each time. I have never yet met with a trouble from which I could deliver myself; I just had to remain there and wait and groan at my sad misfortune. Here I have learned that I can of my own self do nothing. But doesn't it seem that one would remember a lesson that he has been compelled to learn so many times? Each time that I get in trouble I have to learn anew that I cannot get out, for each time I try and keep trying until all my strength is completely exhausted and never be still until I am absolutely compelled to be, yet I know that this is the only place that one learns that "I AM GOD." How little we would know of Him or His way, only a little as He reveals it. We must learn everything by experience, yet we are constantly trying to learn otherwise. You will see from these few words that I am a slow, dull student. I know that I am not one of those who will learn the way so thoroughly as to become perfect, sinless, &c. I never learn anything spiritual by studying, only that I am nothing and cannot learn. The only time that I learn anything is when I am compelled to be still and then it has to be revealed to me. Then I learn that God is merciful, that He has not lost sight of me, that His ear is not heavy, that He can hear, (even the very thoughts of one who has sunk so low that he cannot groan,) that His arm is not shortened so that He cannot save, that His arm is made bare in my salvation and He has reached down in my troubles and underneath me, and by His mighty death and resurrection has forever saved me from the pit and all its torments. Oh how good it is to "be still and know that I am God," yet how hard we do think of having to learn this often taught lesson. I rejoice much at times because we have such an old school and such a good, kind patient teacher. He takes us as he did Jonah, in the belly of hell to teach us, but He never leaves us there, (no all hell cannot hold one of His people,) and He has never changed his school house, He does not employ any other teachers as assistants: no, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the ONE GOD is the whole faculty. He has never made, nor bought any new books nor improved the lesson which he teaches nor His manner of teaching it. This is the solution of the question so often asked, "Why do you Old Baptists know and love one another so well?" How can we help it when each one of us go to the same school under the same teacher, commence at the same identical place and learn the same lesson all the way through. Therefore we are compelled to speak the same language and our speech betrayeth us so that we cannot hide ourselves from each other. Another thing about this is the power of teaching is not so communicated to us as to enable us to teach others who have never been to this school, neither can we teach those who have been only just enough to let them know we have been taught by that same Teacher. Therefore what we know of God is a secret that we cannot reveal to others. It is this secret that gives us sweet fellowship for each other, such fellowship as the world has not neither can it get it. It is strange yet it is true. The strangest thing of all to me is that He should teach one so vile and unthankful as I this lesson and that he should continue to teach me who am so vile a sinner and so unthankful. Here is where I learn of his continued mercy and that His loving kindness He will not utterly take away from me. Though he rebuke me yet He remembers me still and holds me up. Here I am made to say, "Thy rod and thy staff they do comfort me."

When I come to sum the whole matter up I cannot see how we could live without these conflicts, they are a part of the image of our Lord to which we are predestinated. He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. So must his brethren be to learn the fellowship of His sufferings and when we look at the matter right we cannot afford to lose any of His fellowship. We are also introduced to his joys even while we yet live in this world for there can be no joy to a christian, unless it be in harmony with the joys of our Lord. He is the source of all our moments of rejoicing and they are but a foretaste of joys to come, an earnest of our heavenly inheritance. These he gives us and by them we have the renewal of the Holy Ghost. They are the spirits witness in our souls making us look forward to heavenly joys that shall be fully revealed in us and we in them to the glory of God the Father, world without end, amen.

Affectionately,

L. H. HARDY.

Newport, N. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I deeply regret to see that the dear saints are having so much trouble up there and some have crept in among us to spy out our liberty. All who prefer to live among the Babylonians to living in the church of Christ we are willing to let them go. Oh that I could see the dear saints living in peace and earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

The cause of the Primitive Baptists should concern the people of God everywhere. It causes me to feel very sad when I hear of brethren having contentions in other states as well as here. How painful and even very shameful for a professor of Christ to visit drinking saloons and drink with the drunken.

Some places brethren come nearly every meeting and make statements, which they call acknowledgments for being drunk. I think if the church was strict in discipline it would have a better time. Primitive Baptists ought not to visit drinking saloons and drink with the drunken. It is unbecoming to see a Primitive Baptist sitting in a bar-room among the drunkards.

Paul says, "Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, in all lowliness and meekness, forbearing with one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

Let us follow Jesus. If we see Jesus going to bar-rooms let us go, and if not let us not go. If you never take a drink you will never be a drunkard.

The churches should not tolerate drunkenness but withdraw herself from every brother that walketh disorderly. The preacher should preach by his deportment as well as in the pulpit.

May the Lord bless you in the future as in the past to speak such things as become sound doctrine.

Yours in hope of immortality,

LEE HANKS.

Ozark, Ala.

BROTHER GOLD:—I have thought that I would not write any more for publication, but the more I strive against the impression, the more I want to write. The Psalmist says, "give ear to my words, O Lord. Consider my meditation." I hope the Lord will consider my meditations, and if I am not right he will direct me. It is said, as for God his way is perfect, the word of the Lord is tried. He is a buckler to all those that trust in him; if we put our trust in the Lord why should we fear: for there is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard, but I can say as one of old, my leanness, my leanness. But if we believe in him and put our trust in him, and if our hearts are prompted by the Spirit of God to pray to him our prayers will be answered. But the trouble with me is how to pray and what to pray for: but when we are thrown upon the bed of afflictions and trouble and the prayer is indicted in our heart, we sometimes can pray and it seems that our prayers are answered. Then it is we can praise God in the highest. Oh what a joy inexpressible. Our troubles vanish and the stroke of affliction seems lightened, and we can rejoice in God our Saviour. How different then the feelings are? When we can say, "awake my glory; awake psaltery and harp, I myself will awake early. I will praise thee O Lord among the people. I will sing unto thee among the nations; for thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds. Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens. Let thy glory be above all the earth." How good it is for the poor way-faring, wandering, tortured soul, to have peace and communion with God. The life of Thomas Story which has been written about 200 years speaks of his presence, for his presence is life to all the faithful and obedient: but death and condemnation to such as reject his counsel. If we reject him and walk not according to his commands we can expect nothing else but death and condemnation. "To a throne of grace then let us go and offer up our prayer. A gracious God will mercy show. To all that worship there." So if we can worship at that throne we can enjoy the goodly land that Moses spoke of, "for the Lord thy God bringeth thee unto a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains, and depths that spring up out of valleys and hills, a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees, and pomegranates, a land of olives and honey, a land where thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack anything in it. What a rich treasure for us to find. Then when we have eaten and are full we should bless the Lord our God for the good land which he has given us. Oh how thankful we should be. But the question arises, can I thank him aright? If it be that I am one that possesses that land. But sometimes I fear the Lord has never thought of such a being as I am. Sometimes I can thank him and rejoice in him, while at others I am in the dark, and feel almost lifeless, but some of the writers say he is a merciful God, for his mercy endureth forever, and so let me say with the poet:

"Wake and lift up thyself my heart,
And with the angels bear thy part,
Who all night long unwearied sing,
Glory to the eternal king."

Jesus had mercy on the poor, blind man, that sat by the way-side begging, when Jesus spake these words to him, "receive thy sight, thy faith hath made thee whole, and immediately he received his sight and followed him glorifying God." What a joyful time it must have been with him, he could then repeat those beautiful lines of the poet,

"I once was lost but now I'm found,
Was blind but now I see."

Oh how precious is Jesus the giver of every good, and perfect gift, and that has pity on the poor, the blind and those that beg. Then they can see their way; then they can sing,

"Bright Sun of righteousness arise
Thy radiant beams display,
And guide my dark, bewildered soul,
To realms of an endless day."

Where their eyes will not be dim any more and the precious words:

"I long dearest Lord in thy beauty to shine,
No more as an exile to sorrow to pine,
And in thy dear image arise from the tomb,
With glorified millions to praise that home, home, sweet home."

How beautiful these words to a weary, longing soul, under the oppressive hand, but the Lord takes vengeance, so we can rejoice still.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

RUTHA TRIPP.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Your paper comes to me laden with many good things, yet I am very lonesome here in Texas. My nearest Old Baptist church is twelve miles away.

We arrived in Texas from Kentucky June 28th. There were two churches near us there, but here they are more scattered.

I had many special friends here among the Missionary Baptists, but since I left them and joined the Old Baptists, it seems that all our mutual friendliness is gone. There are some two-seed Baptists here, but they don't look on me as being anything but an Arminian. They even say I had better stand among the Missionaries. So upon the whole you see I am in a lonesome, lonely place. There is not a single old Baptist in this community that I know of. There are those who no doubt claim to be. So here on the first Sunday in August I am bound to stay at home or go to hear the Arminians.

There are of course some Old Baptist churches east and south. Since I have been here I visited two three-day meetings. The Philadelphia church on 3rd Sunday and Little Vine on 4th Sunday in July. At the first meeting I had the pleasure of meeting quite a number of preachers. I will give their names. The names I give also composed a presbytery to set apart brother J. W. Segler to the full work of the gospel ministry. J. G. Webb, W. B. Sikes, Ben. Carter, M. L. Barrett, L. M. Gordon, J. T. Huckabee, J. W. Her-riage. The above brethren with myself composed the presbytery. General examination. Prayer by your unworthy servant. Laying on of hands by the presbytery. Charge by brother J. W. Herriage. Hand of fellowship by the presbytery and the church. This is a very prosperous church. Brother J. G. Webb is pastor. Three were added to the church during the meeting. I tried in my weakness to preach several times. I thought that the good Lord gave me some liberty, for which I desire to thank and praise his holy name.

During the week I visited a debate, conducted by brother J. W. Herriage and U. S. Williams (Campbellite.) The debate was to be continued at night by persons other than the regular disputants. The brethren selected me, and I tried to meet a Mr. Cox three nights. From the debate I went to Little Vine church. We had a good meeting. These two churches are in Fannin and Lamar counties. Little Vine is in Lamar near Paris. Dear brother Gold, I hope to meet you in Kentucky at Mt. Pleasant Association. May God be with you.

In tribulation,
JNO. H. FISHER.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—The LANDMARK comes to me regularly, and like the cart which was laden with rich sheaves. As you know I am a long way from my church and brethren, and am not blessed as I once was with their precious company often. But I can sit and talk with a goodly number of brethren and sisters through the LANDMARK. Sister Anna Phillips' letter was very instructive and I was highly pleased with the letter written by the colored brother Robbins. I think he struck the key note, and is proof that the Lord has a people in every nation and tongue as he hath declared in his word, and they shall be taught of the Lord.

I was at Brother W. J. Ladd's last Sunday, and spent the day with him. Brother Ladd is quite low. He has not seen a well moment since Saturday of the Country Line Association last August. He thought he got choked on chicken while at breakfast. He now thinks it is consumption. But I must say I do not think I ever saw anyone so bright. He says he is like one at a wayside waiting for the train to pass so he can start. It is indeed soul-cheering to talk with him. Brother Gold, I wish it was so you could see him and hear him talk. His hope is an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast.

I will close. I truly hope that you and your family are enjoying good health, both spiritual and temporal. Remember me at a throne of grace when it is well with you.

Yours in hope,
R. S. WILLIAMS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have many thoughts and doubts and fears, and I often feel that I am not worthy to write to a brother that the Lord has blest with such great revelations as he has you; but I often fear and tremble over these things, and I often feel like I should have to preach with all the excuses that I can make, I try to plead ignorance. Sometimes I feel like I should have to try or lose my mind. I know that I can not preach without the Lord gives me light and liberty. I have to cry over these thoughts. Preaching has ever been a mystery to me. Ever since I have heard preaching it has caused me to sink down in myself so much that I would think if I could crawl in the ground, or disappear in some way or other, that I would if I could. But when I look and see where I am I find that I am helpless and can do nothing without the mercy of God. He is able to make a preacher of the most ignorant man that we have if it were his will. I have seen myself in a dream standing in the pulpit preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ; since then I have seen myself called to preach twice in slumber, and I was with my little boy both of these times. I thought that I had this to do. I saw no other chance but go and preach. I thought I had to cry right there before my little son. In these dreams I saw no excuse but to go and preach the word. Since I was at White Oak association at Sand Hill, in Duplin County. On Monday of that Association while sitting listening at brother Greenwood I was brought to consider the power of God, and that God had a people in every nation, tongue and kindred, and that they were all taught by that same God to preach the gospel. Then I was told in my understanding and feelings that I had to stand where he did and preach Jesus Christ. When I saw this I shed tears and could not help it. It was for some weeks that I felt like I should have to leave all and go and deliver the message given me. I often feel that it will not do for me to tell this to the church, or any one. I have been at this pass for nearly three years. I have tried as hard to relieve myself of these troubles as I ever did. The first trouble that I had I joined the church to get relief, and found great ease and relief of mind. But these troubles I can get no relief from only from what little I have written to you and you have published it through the LANDMARK. I have written this to try to show why I have written any. It is through deep impressions that I do this. I might go on and tell more, but I will soon stop, hoping that you will pardon error and excuse my ignorance. I will close by asking you to write on the 20th chapter and 5th, 6th, and 7th verses of Revelation. If you feel to have any revelation on this Scripture you can write on it. This space of time mentioned as a thousand years. It seems that this time mentioned means a thousand years. I have asked several on the 5th verse and none could tell me what it meant. I hope you will not allow me to trouble you with my ignorance if it does trouble you. Gracious God be with all the true Israel of God, now, henceforth and forever.

Your little, weak feeling brother,
ELI BRYAN.

Remarks.

Brother Bryan, as there was relief found in uniting with the church, or confessing the name of Jesus in baptism, when you were so deeply impressed to do this; so if it is deeply impressed on your heart and mind (and it seems to be from what you write) your relief of feeling will come in obedience to that heavenly vision. To forsake all is to find all. To lay down or lose one's life is to find it. A living sacrifice is a living feast.

They that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel in the sense of having meat to eat the world knows not of.

May the Lord guide you, my dear brother.

P. D. G.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have been requested to write my experience of grace, and have it published in the LANDMARK. Although I feel unworthy and utterly dependent on the Lord for wisdom and understanding I feel that the time has come when I must make the attempt.

I was born of Primitive Baptist parents, trained up by kind hands and cared for by an alwise and unchangeable God. I was born in sin and remained in nature's night until I reached the age of eleven years. Then there was a Primitive Baptist association appointed to be held with the church at Clover Bottom, and my parent's membership was there, and they showed all kindness that lay in their power to take care of the visiting brethren and sisters, and on the evening of the first day brother Dameron arrived at our house, and it seemed to me my father's face was lit up with joy, and he said time and again he was glad he came; and that night before we all retired brother Dameron led in prayer, and he prayed for all who are yet in nature's night, and had no heart to pray for, or pity themselves, to lead them to the banqueting house and let his banner over them be love. He asked the Lord to make them as Daniel of old, who was cast into the lion's den, and the three Hebrew children that were cast into the fiery furnace, yet all these came out without being hurt; and I felt like then (and do now,) that those words were spoken for me, for I have truly felt that my soul has been tried by as strong temptations as that, yet the Lord has brought my soul out unhurt. It is true the body can be killed but eternal life cannot be taken away. In conclusion, on that point I feel to say with the poet:

"Lord I believe thou hast prepared, Unworthy though I be;
For me a blood bought free reward,
A golden harp for me."

The words mentioned in the prayer have remained in my memory from that time until now. I have tried to pray when I felt like praying, and I felt like I wanted to be a christian; whenever I felt that my way was so hedged up that I could not do right, I would often shed tears and ask the Lord to be with me and show me what was right, and for a short while it seemed to me I could come nearer pleasing my parents, whom I believe wanted me to do right; but the weight of sin soon grew more burdensome to carry. The need of God's mercy was soon felt more sensibly; the need of some one to pray for and pity me was soon felt, much to my sorrow. I felt satisfied that my Father prayed for his children, for that was what I heard daily. I thought of the words mentioned in brother Dameron's prayer, and had a desire to hear him again. So I prayed to the Lord to spare my life to hear him again, I thought it might be that there was some hope for me. When I reached the age of fourteen years my oldest sister married and left me quite lonely, and most of the cares of this life fell on my hands, and I tried to ask the Lord to be my guide in all I did, and I did all in my power to please my parents, for I felt like I did not want to commit any more sin if I could help it. And now the last hope is drawing near; my father received an appointment from brother Dameron, stating that he would preach for us, and I knew the time was drawing near. My sins were blacker and more serious to bear and behold. But I could not believe I was under conviction, I could not believe I was one of the Lord's appointed ones. I asked the Lord if brother Dameron was coming to give me an evidence of it, and I heard a voice saying, "you shall live and hear the true sound of the gospel that day." Late in the afternoon before the appointed day came, Brother Dameron and Stone, and Elder Dodson arrived at our house. When my father went out to meet them they all seemed glad to see each other, but poor me. I felt like I was not fit to go where they were. After supper was over we went in to prayer and Elder Dodson raised a hymn which read as follows,

"Broad is the road that leads to death,
And thousands walk together there.
But wisdom shows a narrow path
With here and there a traveler."

And it seemed to me these words pierced through my heart like an arrow. I could not refrain shedding tears. I felt like I was in the broad road, and would soon go down in death. He prayed for all who might be mourning on account of their sins, and I felt that I was a mourner indeed, but could see no hope for me. The next day Elder Dodson told the troubles of a convicted sinner, and after he was through he said, if there was any one in that house that had experienced these troubles, if they were not a christian, they would be one. I felt that I could safely say I had felt them, but was satisfied there was nothing that I could do that would make me a christian. After preaching was over they all returned home with us to eat as quickly as possible and leave for Campbell Co., and when they were ready to start I felt like I would have given anything in the world if I could only ask brother Dameron to pray for me; but when I told him good-by I felt like it was beyond my power to ask him. I could not refrain shedding tears, and felt like my last hope had failed. But I tried to keep it concealed the best I could. I took my bonnet and walked out to be alone with myself and God. I went near the grave yard and thought that was where I would shortly be laid, and I said, Lord I know I am lost forever, and I know it is just, for I know I am too great a sinner to enter the kingdom of Heaven; but I felt the need of God's mercy, and thought I would beg the Lord for mercy until I died. And shortly after that I was praying, (as I constantly had for some time,) and it being night, I soon fell asleep, and I dreamed I was in a broad road with many others, which went down to destruction, and on the right hand was a narrow road, quite pleasant to behold, and I said Lord I wonder which one of these roads is marked out for me, and I made no effort to turn to the right, nor to the left, but the first thing I knew I was pressing forward in the strait and narrow way, and I thought while I was traveling, will I be received? And I saw the kingdom of Heaven and my Saviour come near the door, and the door opened and two angels came out, and they had wings on their shoulders and trumpets in their hands, and they blew the trumpets and sung with a refreshing living power, "You are welcome, you are welcome in my Father's kingdom;" and they conveyed me to the door, and my Saviour stood therein and smiled on me and said, "you are welcome in my Father's kingdom." I think now the angels I saw were my father and brother Dameron. I felt like I was stript of sin, and could walk in newness of life. When I awoke I thought surely I had fallen asleep in Jesus; a new song was put in my mouth, even praise to God. I said within, "Bless the Lord O my soul," give thanks to his name, let all that is within me glorify his name. I never slept any more that night. The next morning I arose from my bed and looked around and every thing I looked at seemed to have new life. I looked on the works of an alwise Creator's hands and thought he was worthy of praise and that I would praise him all the days of my life. I left all this concealed, but it was hard for me to do at times. When I reached the age of seventeen years my oldest sister, who then lived in Tennessee, lost her husband and returned home with a young infant in her arms, and of course we deeply mourned her loss: the next Spring I was taken sick, and for a short while I suffered greatly. After my sufferings had abated, I was made to consider that the fear of hell had been taken away, and I felt that I was not afraid to die, and I felt like I wanted a home with my Saviour, and these words sounded within,

"O, what is here to count my stay,
Or keep me back from hence,
Bright angels beckon me away,
And Jesus bids me come."

Another time I was sick and my oldest sister was lying in bed with me. All were asleep but me, and I heard a voice saying, "You shall soon be called home, and many people shall be astonished," and my body trembled and quaked with fear, and I said Lord is this satan come to take me on earth, and he said unto me, "Fear not it is your Lord and Master, I will send a shining angel to convey you home, and your sister that now lies by your side has seen trouble, and she has more yet to see, and the heart of your youngest sister shall be moved, and your little brothers shall be affected, and you shall be at rest, and when it pleases the Lord to call your oldest sister home she will be at rest."

Of course this caused me to wonder and ponder much. At length I told my two sisters of it; but told them not to say anything about it.

I could not tell what it meant, but it took such an effect on my oldest sister that she told some others the next Spring.

Old sister Wallow who was a member at Clover Bottom and a christian, I think if there ever was one, came to see us and spent two or three days with us, and my oldest sister talked with her a great deal on the subject of religion, and told her of what I had said on the subject too. Sunday morning my oldest brother came and my oldest sister and sister Wallow was up stairs, and my oldest brother, and my youngest sister and myself, sang, "O, for a closer walk with God," and "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds, in a believer's ear." Sister Wallow came down stairs and meekly laid her arm around me and said, you all don't know how pretty those hymns sounded to me, and gently looked me in the face and said, "I love good children." On her return home I was with her, and she said she had much desired to see the church at Clover Bottom prosper and added to, such as should be saved. She thought if we had not been good we would not have remembered her so much in her sickness and poverty; that her poor body had been nourished by our hands many times, and felt that she was due my parents many thanks for their kindness, and said there had not been any added to that church long before my father took care of it. She was received into the fellowship of the church, while their membership remained at Old Buffalo, and so was my fathers while brother Burns had the care of it, and was baptised by him. She had lived to old age and had never regretted it. Sister Wallow was a near relative of Elder Charles Lovelace; one my father loved and often spoke of during his life. Sister Waller said in conclusion that she thought if we had a hope we ought to join the church, that it was a duty enjoined on us, and that it was discouraging to them to linger so long, that we ought to think what a pleasure it would be to our parents to see us members with them. I told her if I could only be half as good as I thought she was I would never doubt or fear. Ah, she said, people have told me that before; but the Scripture says, "The tree shall be known by its fruit," but the question often arises in my mind, who are the fruit. I have borne during my life very poor fruit, and of course I was unprepared to make any answer. So we said no more on that subject. Soon after that my father received an appointment from brother Dameron, stating that he would preach at Clover Bottom Tuesday before the 4th Sunday in June, and I asked the Lord to show me my duty and enable me to perform it. Soon I became very much troubled about something, I knew not what, and asked the Lord to show me what was the matter with me. I heard a voice saying, "I have spoken peace to your troubled heart, and you obeyed not my command. I commanded you to be baptised and you have not obeyed." From that time forth I desired much to see the doors of the church opened. So at the appointed time brother Dameron came and rested with us at our house; and sister Waller also came. That night after prayer was over it seemed to me all were overcome with something above human power. Sister Waller said she hoped I would soon stir them up and give them some good news, but I answered not a word, but was sobbing and so were my two sisters. Sister Waller said next morning, she never heard a young girl groan as I did that night. That day brother Dameron preached two sermons, one in the morning and the other in the evening. After the morning sermon was over several of the members took dinner with us, and brother Dameron told my father he saw two ladies there that day that he thought were christians, and he wanted to know if they were members, and my father asked him who it was, and he told him it was his two daughters. Well said he, I have not heard them say anything about it, but we will go and ask them about it; and my father met my oldest sister (who was then a widow) and told her what brother Dameron said, and asked her if she had any experience to tell, they wanted to hear it, and she sat down and began to tell her experience; and before she was through I drew my seat near to hear what was said, and after my sister was through, brother Dameron asked me to tell him mine. I told him I was afraid I did not have any, (but really I was glad he mentioned it,) and I soon told him mine, and he said he was going to open the doors for us that evening. I told him I did not feel satisfied with the world, and I did not feel fit to be with christian people. My father said that was the way christians felt, and thought he had great reason to feel thankful, and had often asked the Lord to pardon his children's sins and give them life eternal. Brother Dameron said he rejoiced with him, and all that were in the room were weeping like little children. I felt like I could bid farewell to all that were in this world and follow my Saviour in baptism. When the doors were opened temptations began to arise, and with a deep sigh these words came in my mind, I care not for what this world shall say about me, all I want is to be right in the sight of the Lord. And I went forward and tried to lay my experience at their feet and leave the matter in the hands of God. With dropping tears and words of comfort I was received. My widowed sister looked down in tears. My youngest sister had almost given up the ghost, and those that looked on seemed to be astonished. My baptismal day was a very bright, glorious day to me. My youngest sister said she felt like kneeling down and asking all christians to pray for her at the water. The sacred wave was a solemn thought with me. With fear and trembling I was led down in the water and yielded my body in his hands to be laid under the wave, as a memorial of my Saviour, and felt that I was raised in newness of life. As I came forth out of the water I felt like my Saviour was smiling on me, and for a season I enjoyed rest sweet and refreshing to my soul.

Much desiring your prayers in this life.

NANNIE E. DODD.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD, AND BROTHERS AND SISTERS IN CHRIST:—I have been a member of the church for a little more than six years, and notwithstanding all my imperfections I reckon I enjoy my privileges as much as any one; for it is almost my meat and my drink to meet with the brethren and sisters at their regular meetings and talk to them, and hear them talk of the glories of Christ's kingdom. It is my desire to live the life of a christian. But I cannot do so, or at least I can't live like I think I ought to. But my failures make me feel more and more the need of a merciful Redeemer. Truly I can say, and must say, if I stood by myself in saying so, if I am saved it must be by grace. I have tried my best to live in peace with all men, and so far as I know there is not a Baptist in my knowledge but what is in peace with me and I with them, and so far as I know they all enjoy my efforts in preaching. But I have found it impossible to live in peace all the time with all people. I can't feel sure that all Baptists receive my preaching by what they say, for I find they have hearts full of deception. I believe I love them and I want to live and die with them. But I am sure I do not love them good enough to hide all their faults. I will mention some of the things that some of our brethren are guilty of, and I know I am guilty of more or less of the same things. Brother Gold, what would you think of a Baptist who when he goes to town will go into a bar-room as soon as a dry-good's store and take two or three drinks besides? He ought to be dealt with. How can a true Baptist afford to be a store-keeper at a government still, where he is all the time in a rowdy crowd and deprived of going to any of our Saturday meetings. My observation is he soon fails to come much on Sunday. Some brethren where I go seem to think they have not treated their guest with proper courtesy unless they set out a decanter of brandy. I believe this is wrong. I find some Baptists that allow their children to go to Sunday Schools and Sunday School picnics. Such may seem right to them. Others I find with their lives insured, and still others belonging to some secret order, or third party, which is no better. As an old brother said once, "I have to tote such Baptists as these." I know others that don't go to church much only where their membership is, and often on Saturday don't go at all. Such don't show much love for the cause. Still others come late in the day after having sought everything else but the kingdom of God. Such is wrong. But the thing we are nearly all guilty of, is unfaithfulness. Here is a poor fellow that has got a notion to preach. He exercises a while. The church is satisfied he has no gift. But they are afraid they will hurt his feelings if they tell him so, and they let him go on and on until he really has cause to complain at the church for unfaithfulness to him when they do tell him to stop. I once heard a man preach at the top of his voice for 1½ hours without making a single point in connection with his text, or a word of gospel, (such was the decision of all the brethren.) We talked it among ourselves, but no one of us had faithfulness enough to tell him what a blunder he made. The next day he stood and prayed at the opening of the services for thirty minutes. Several of the brethren said they did not believe he uttered a word of real prayer. But no one spoke to him of it that I know of. Such may be my condition sometimes; if so, I desire the brethren would tell me of my errors and let us be fellow-helpers to the truth. I might mention many other faults, but I have said enough already no doubt to cause many of the brethren to talk about me. But I am not much afraid of any talking to me. Some one will say if they were in my place they would denounce the whole principle of the Baptist doctrine. But not so. I admit in the church sin abounds, but here is the place where grace does much more abound. I believe the church of God to-day is composed of sinners of Adam's race, and but for the one offering that was made by the Son of God for their redemption we would be to-day in the same condition as our Arminian friends, without God and without hope in the world. In conclusion, let me say to my Father's children, let us avoid the very appearance of evil and let us try to honor the profession we have made by an orderly walk and godly conversation, and let us advise with one another in matters pertaining to our Father's kingdom, and if we see a brother in a fault let us go to him in the spirit of meekness, and if we should convert him from the error of his way we have the assurance that we have saved a soul from death and hid a multitude of sins.

Poleota, N. C.

DEAR CHRISTIAN FRIENDS:—I will try to write what I hope the Lord has done for me. O dear friends I never shall forget the time I felt to be a sinner. I thought death was my portion and hell my doom. I thought the dumb brute was better off than I. I would lay down at night never to rise again. The pillow would be wet with tears. I would promise to sin no more, but soon I would find myself sinning again. I went on in this way for some time. I would think it was imagination but I could not get rid of it, I would go to parties and try to throw it by but O christian friends the doubts and fears would roll over my mind; but I loved the christian best. I would be glad to go to preaching and hear the brethren tell their experience. This was what I loved to hear. I have been made to cry and tremble under their sound. O dear friends I did not feel worthy to be among them. I went off one day never to return again. I would attempt to bend my knees to pray; the thought would be it is nothing but folly. I know well when I felt the burden upon me I tried to keep it to myself but could not, for I showed guilt and my conscience condemned me. I went on in this way for about two years. The impression was to join the church but I felt too sinful, but felt it to be my duty.

I thought I would enjoy myself with them. I have prepared clothing many times to be baptized. I have often crossed the water and would think O how pretty it looks. O if I could go down in it and be baptised. But the answer would be you are not fit. I had a severe spell of headache while in this condition; I thought I was going to die, the fear of death was on my mind. I wanted to tell my mother and father but feared it might not be so. I wanted to tell my pastor. I remember well what he said to me when he bid me farewell. He said, "I hope you will get better" I had some dreams; I dreamed of traveling a strait and narrow path. I prayed if it was right to be baptised to be shown in a dream. I did dream of being baptised, and was rejoicing in it. O I thought if it was so how glad I would be; I would promise to join the next opportunity. I remember the time when a sister was baptised; they opened the door and I thought of my promise when I saw her laid in the water. I felt my time was next. I felt that she had obeyed and I had not. I went on in this way till the next meeting; when the door was opened I could hardly stay away. I cried and trembled but did not go. One of the sisters said why don't you come and tell us some good news. I felt too unworthy. The first I remember was shaking hands with brother Chandler. I could not tell them much. I was received and baptised next day. I felt glad when brother Chandler gave me his hand to go down in the water. I thought my troubles, doubts and fears were over, but I have many trials and troubles yet, but my little hope gives me joy at times. I want the prayers of God's people. I thought I would not write this but felt constrained to do so. Your sister in Christ I hope,

LUCY MCKINNEY.

By request of certain members belonging to the Stewart's Creek church of Primitive Baptists in the Fisher's River Association—a presbytery was appointed by the said Association to constitute them as a church at Dover meeting house at White Plains, Surry Co, N. C. The presbytery met on Saturday August 5th, and proceeded to business as follows:

Elders M. G. Harber, A. C. Woodruff, Calvin Blackburn and W. H. Atkinson. Elder F. J. Stone being present was invited to act with the presbytery, also the following deacons was invited to sit with the presbytery, brother J. W. Jones, J. M. Gordon and Thos. Jones.

Chose Elder M. G. Harber Moderator and F. J. Stone, Clerk. Elder James D. Draughn called the members wishing to be organized to order. They then on motion made Elder Draughn spokesman for their body, whereupon he presented a letter from Stewart's Creek church, dismissing the following brethren and sisters to be organized at the above named place.

Elder J. D. Draughn, brother C. J. Draughn, James M. Creed, Wm. Jones, Hugh Jones and Eli M. Draughn. Sisters Sarah F. Draughn, Mary E. Draughn, Winnie Creed, Easter E. Creed, Eliza Hemmings, Clara Draughn, Mary Jones, Ruth E. Potts and Laura Reeves.

Whereupon they presented their articles of faith as found in the Hassel History on page 892 and 3. Church decorum found on page 696, church covenant on page 695. On examination by the presbytery were found to be sound, whereupon they were set apart as a church in gospel order. They then presented brethren James M. Creed and C. J. Draughn to be ordained to the office of deacons of Dover Church.

On examination they were found to be sound in the faith and were ordained by the laying on of hands and prayer by the Moderator.

They being organized, proceeded to elect C. J. Draughn church clerk, also Eld. Jas. D. Draughn as their pastor. At Elder Draughn's request they called Elder G. O. Key to visit and preach for them as often as he could.

The church then requested all Primitive Baptist preachers to visit them and preach for them when convenient.

We hope the blessing of Almighty God will richly dwell with the members of the above named church.

F. J. STONE,
Clerk of the Presbytery.

The next Session of the Cool Spring Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with Gill's Creek Church, commencing on Friday before the 2nd Sunday in Oct. 1893. Those coming by R. R. will be met at Columbia S. C. Hope that the dear ministers will feel to visit us, also as many dear brethren as can feel to do so. All that have a mind to visit us please write to me so I can arrange conveyance. MARTHA M. BRAZELL.
Columbia, S. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD:—Please give notice in the LANDMARK that the next session of the Little River Primitive Baptist Association will convene with Bethany church, at Pine Level N. C., Johnson county, commencing Friday before the last Sunday in September, 1893. Pine Level is on the R. R. and convenient for those who would come on the cars. We hope to meet many of our dear brethren especially those in the ministry.

THE LORD'S WILL.

"Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." This is one of the expressions in that prayer which the dear Saviour gave to his disciples as showing the manner after which they shall pray. I regard that prayer as expressing not only the desires of the child of God, but as also declaring what shall be fulfilled in him. Every prayer of faith shall be answered. "Every one that asketh receiveth." Faith makes no mistake. "It is the evidence of things not seen." We do not know what to pray for as we ought, but the Spirit does; and that Spirit makes us know and feel our need of the very things which God has prepared for us, and therefore he maketh intercession for us according to the will of God.

Whatever is asked for in this wonderful form of prayer is found to be characteristic of the church of God, and fulfilled in the experience of the saints. The name of God is hallowed by them, the kingdom has come, and they have an experience of its coming and power with them. Their daily bread is given them day by day, and none is given them to carry along and save up for another day. They have it only as they need it. Their sins are forgiven manifestly as they forgive those in any way indebted to them, and only as they experience the spirit of forgiveness to others do they experience the forgiveness of God. Not that their forgiveness of others is a condition upon which God forgives them, but that the Spirit of Christ within them which causes them to desire and pray for the forgiveness of their sins also makes them freely forgive all who have trespassed against them, and to desire and pray for the forgiveness of their bitterest enemies, as the dear Saviour did.

In repeating the words which are now the particular subject of consideration, the word on is often used instead of in, and many appear to regard it as a prayer that the will of God may be done on earth by the inhabitants of the world as it is done in heaven. The will of God is done on the earth or in the world in a certain sense, and is desired by all who are directed by the Spirit of Christ, as the Saviour prayed, "Thy will, not mine, be done," although that will was that wicked men should crucify him. We are told that his will is done "in heaven and in earth and in all deep places." But this is not as it is done in heaven, for there all the working of his will causes peace and praise and joy because of righteousness and holiness and glory, and no darkness or sorrow on account of wickedness and rebellion ever appear there, "and there is no night there," while here in the world the Lord has use for wicked men, as Pharaoh and Balaam and Shimei and Judas, in working his Sovereign will and fulfilling his eternal purpose. "He made the wicked for the day of evil," and as the potter fashions of the same lump one vessel unto honor and another to dishonor, so the Lord has use for the "vessels of wrath fitted to destruction" as well as for the "vessels of mercy, which he hath afore prepared unto glory.

But the idea may be with many that the prayer here expresses what the child of God would like to see; that is to see everybody in the world good and pure and holy, and no sin or sorrow at all; and that although there are no signs of such a blessed state near at hand, yet that it is to be so at some distant time. I think a child of God desires in his Spirit just what the Lord desires, for it is the Spirit that raises up in him every holy thought and every right desire. But the Scriptures do not intimate that this earth is ever going to be changed in that respect. We read that it will be evil to the last, and that the people of the world will be doing to the very last as they did in the days of Noah, and as in Sodom and Gomorrah, and that the world is to be burned up.

I regard this as a prayer for the will of the Lord to be done in these vessels of mercy, which "are of the earth earthy," as it is done in heaven. And this is done. The "Lord works in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Phil. 2: 12. "He hath wrought all our works in us." Isa. 26: 12. He works "in us that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Christ Jesus." Heb. 13: 21. "His people shall be willing in the day of his power." Psalms. "The king's heart is in his hand. As the rivers of water he turneth it whither-so-ever he will."

It may be said that the word IN should have been translated ON. The word is ἐπί, meaning on, upon, over. But I count in Young's concordance over a hundred places where this word has been rendered IN. Among them are such as these: "Seed sown in the earth;" "the way of God in truth;" "mention you in my prayers;" "in these last days;" "write them in the heart;" "in my name;" "knowing what was done in her, she fell down before Jesus." These express what I understand to be the true meaning of the word in this case. It is in the vessels of mercy that the will of God is done, and it is in and over them that its power is manifested. "The strong man armed keepeth his palace, and his goods are in peace; but when a stronger than he comes he first binds the strong man, and then he will spoil his goods." The Lord will so cause his will to be done in his people, that they shall show forth his praise. "The life of Jesus shall be manifest through their mortal bodies." They shall weep on account of sin, because his spirit is in them, and rejoice on account of salvation. They shall be enabled to work out their salvation by walking in the order and truth of the gospel. They shall manifest that the reign of grace is stronger than the reign of sin, that "where sin abounds grace does much more abound; that as sin hath reigned unto death, even so grace shall reign through righteousness unto eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." They want his will to be done in them as it is done in Heaven, and it shall be. "The work of righteousness (in them) shall be peace and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance forever." "He will keep the feet of his saints." He will perfect praise in them. While they remain in this bondage of corruption they hunger for righteousness, and love holiness, and hate evil, and wait for the revelation of Jesus Christ from Heaven. And so the will of God is done in them as it is done in Heaven. And the consummation of his will is changing "our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue even all things unto himself." Then they shall be like him, and shall be satisfied; and in the perfect fulfillment in them of this prayer which the dear Saviour teaches all of his children to pray, they shall be perfectly prepared to sing his praise in strains of perfect melody in Heaven.

SILAS H. DURAND.

Southampton, Pa.

"And Moses verily was faithful in all his house as a servant for a testimony of these things which were to be soon after."

But the honor is given to the son of God—not to any man. Heb. 3: 5-6. No man was ever more faithful than Moses. If Moses failed on his own works to enter the earthly promise land what will become of all such poor mortals as we, if we are left to our own works to reach heaven by?

Here is the testimony in Moses who was faithful in setting forth the patterns. Moses did just what was proposed that he should do, for he was the most faithful servant of God under the law, and none like him, failing but once when he spake unadvisedly with his lips, and that was provoked by the transgression of the people, and for their sakes he failed to enter the promise land: Deut. 1: 37. Deut. 3: 26, 27: Deut. 32: 48-52. These scriptures show that for one failure Moses came short of entering an EARTHLY Canaan. How then can man by his own works enter HEAVEN?

A man to whom God spake as he never did to another man—the most honored man, the meekest—failing to enter an earthly good land for one transgression of the tongue, and he provoked to that by the angry people, should teach us that all the glory of our entering Heaven is due to Jesus the SON, not the servant, over his own house the church.

Moses has been in glory many ages. For in the transfiguration of Jesus Moses and Elias appeared in glory, honoring Jesus in speaking of the manner of his decease. But Moses was saved by grace.

Why not say as the scriptures do that those whom Jesus calls to preach are his SERVANTS. They are nowhere in the Bible called INSTRUMENTS. Men use tools or INSTRUMENTS to work with, or to accomplish their designs, because of their weakness. The fact that one uses a tool, say an ax, to cut down a tree is proof of his inability to get it down any easier way. Suppose he could speak to the tree to come down and be shaped in the form he desires it, would he then use an ax or instrument to cut it down? The hour is coming, AND NOW IS, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. God quickens the dead. He speaks and it is done.

When a man uses instruments to build himself a house he does not consider the instruments any part of the house. According to the Arminian notion of preachers being instruments what becomes of them after the house is built?

God's servants called to preach are certainly dearer to God than a man's instruments are to him. We have this treasure (gift of preaching) in earthen vessels. This gift is of God. But the instrument a man uses is in no sense any part of the man. What is there of a man in his ax he uses to chop with? Nothing at all. But the gift of preaching is of the Lord Jesus and comes from him, and the excellency of it is of God.

It is that by which the flock is fed. Peter was to feed sheep. Without this gift he could not feed sheep. God was in Peter. Christ was revealed in Paul and therefore Paul preached Christ. Is a man in his ax that he chops with?

It is common for mankind to differ. Not only is their language confounded, but their thoughts and aims are confused.

It is therefore contrary to nature and illustrative of the reign of grace for people to speak in the one pure language of Canaan of the things that are in Christ Jesus and AGREE therein. When they have one mind, and a sound speech, one doctrine, one Lord, one faith and one baptism, then they are manifested in that unity or oneness as the people taught of God, and therefore they have great peace.

To suppose that in the church of Christ one baptizes, another sprinkles, another pours, and another does none of these things, each claiming that he does what he feels satisfied with is an absurdity.

It has been in my mind for years to write as well as preach the gospel as much as in me is. Whether I shall live long or not God hath not shown me. The 25th of this March, (if I live until then) counts me 61 years of age.

It is a comfort for me if God puts it in the hearts of the brethren to pray for me. Next to my own salvation and comfort that of serving the children of God to their comfort and profit is my chief joy.

It is a matter of regret to me that Elder Durand withdraws his name from the Editorial correspondence of this paper, though he promises to write still as much as ever for its columns.

Elder Lester's health has not been good of late, though he writes me it is better, and we trust he will enrich its columns more with his good gift than he has done recently. Any favors that brethren and friends have a mind to communicate to me, either to aid me in supporting my own family, or enabling me to supply the destitute with the LANDMARK, will I hope be thankfully received as a testimony of love and affection.

OBITUARIES.

MRS. LUCY ANN BURKE.

Was born June 20, 1854, and grew up to womanhood in accordance with the usual course of Adam's race, and was married to Jas M. Burke in October 1885, with whom she lived happily until death. She was a good wife, saving and industrious, so that her husband could safely trust in her. A few years before she was married she became seriously concerned about her eternal welfare, and after a season of mourning and supplication, experienced deliverance from the fears of death, but being timid and fearful she said but little about it until a few days before she died. For sometime before death she seemed well assured that her time was at hand, but went on cheerfully performing her various duties and making preparations for her departure. She was finally stricken down with pneumonia, and in the midst of her sufferings God poured the oil of joy and gladness into her heart so that she talked freely of his mercy and goodness and requested those around her to sing the hymns, "How happy are they" and "How tedious and tasteless the hours," and joined in singing the last named. She regretted that she had not in days past spoken more freely of the dealings of the Lord with her, and spoke of her affliction as being sent on her for disobedience. She was submissive and resigned to the last and on May 1st 1893 she passed peacefully through the waters of death, as I believe, into the promised land, where sickness and death are felt and feared no more. Her travail from nature to grace is of peculiar interest to me because she was one among a few others with whose condition I was burdened. While she was in trouble on account of sin I felt a spirit of supplication in her behalf, and when hope had sprung up and the fear of punishment had been removed I felt it in my own feelings and read it in her countenance. Sometimes afterwards when I asked her about her hope, she confessed a change but seemed afraid it was not a good hope through grace, and would not say much about it, and when on her death-bed she was filled with joy of hope she regretted that she had not spoken to me more freely on the subject. I at the same time was prostrated with pneumonia and could not go to see her; but I believe she is at rest, from a dream she had. She said two of the family would be taken, and so on the 14th of July 1893, her youngest child, James Wilkerson was taken from the evil to come being nearly six months old. She leaves a disconsolate husband and two little girls to mourn their loss, but should not mourn as those who have no hope.

CORA BERNICE COX.

Daughter of Preston and Emma Cox, was born June 21st, 1889, and died January 16, 1893, after a short illness of a few days. She was the idol of a fond mother's heart. She was too pure to live in this world of sin and sorrow, so God took her to dwell with him in that land of unclouded day she sang about just before she went home: "Weep not dear friends for your loved one, though you miss her presence here." You know she is with Jesus in that beautiful land beyond the skies, where there will be no more parting, sin or sorrow, and where God will wipe all tears from our eyes. Oh how sweet it will be to meet with our loved ones after this sinful life is o'er and to dwell with Jesus forever, in that beautiful city whose maker is God.

May God prepare us for a better world when we are called to die. Where we shall never part, but shall sing songs of praise to him forever who doeth all things well

Dear mourning friends I know 'tis said
To part with those we love,
May God prepare us all to meet
In you bright world above.

Where the tree of life in eternal bloom
Sheds its fragrance round us there,
And where flowers exhale their sweet perfume
Upon the summer air.

Where the gates are made of glittering pearls,
Most glorious to behold;
Where Jesus is the light of that beautiful world,
And the streets are of shining gold.
IDA C. MARSHALL.

MARY F. HARRELL.

I am requested to send you the obituary of sister Mary F. Harrell, wife of James L. G. Harrell, who was born in Martin county, N. C., October 4th, 1822, making her stay on earth 71 years, one month and 26 days. She was the daughter of Jason Purvis and his wife Sabey, who have long since crossed over the river. She was married to James L. G. Harrell, August 31st, 1847.

Only one daughter is the fruit of the marriage. She joined the church at Conoho, Martin county, N. C., Saturday before the third Sunday in November 1852, and was baptized by Eld. Blount Cooper, with Margaret Hyman, Sarah Manning, Mary Mayo, Milze Davis and Harriet Cross, and George Bryan, col., of these all have passed over the river except Harriet Cross. She was one who filled her seat at church when able, and manifested her love for Jesus by a well ordered walk and a godly conversation.

She had a dream the night before she was taken down, about a flock of doves. She caught one on her way to Conoho that was white as snow. The others vanished out of her view. She thought a great deal of it, and could not be persuaded to part with it though many wanted it. She spoke of the dove as long as she lived and could speak, and called it her little angel. Her disease was said to be bilious dysentery. She and her husband had been afflicted for years, and spent the most of their property for medical attendance. She was buried in the public cemetery, and the burial services were conducted by Elder M. T. Lawrence, May God comfort the feeble husband and all concerned with these blessed words and give them grace to say, "thy will be done." We hope to meet her in a better world than this, to meet to part no more.

J. O. SALSURY.

CORA L. TAYLOR.

On June 6th 1891, at her home in Green Co. N. C., Cora I. Taylor, daughter of Bryan and Talitha Smith, departed this life at twelve o'clock A. M. She was born in Pitt Co., June 12th, 1865, where she resided until Nov. 14th, 1890, when she was happily married to Geo. W. Taylor, of Green Co., and was a resident of the same until the final summons came. Unto them one child was born, a sweet baby girl who preceded its mother to the Spirit Land two weeks.

All that skillful physicians, willing hearts and ready hands could do for her was done, but all to no avail. For the "Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away." The deceased was confined to her bed about two months, she suffered much from the time she was taken till she was relieved by death. Though her sufferings were intense at times, she bore it patiently. She said she knew that she would never get well. While she made no profession of religion, she was strictly moral and kind to all, especially her husband. She was sympathetic and never turned her hands from those who needed help. Honesty of purpose, faithfulness to her family, were the guiding principles of her life. We offer our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones, and commit them to God's grace that is able to sustain under the heaviest burden of life. The deceased leaves a kind and devoted husband, mother, one sister and six brothers to mourn their loss. To them we extend our heart-felt sympathy. I was with the deceased most of the time during her sickness, and by the request of her mother I have written this obituary which I trust you will find space for in the LAND-MARK.

A FRIEND.

Brother Gold, Cora told me she wanted to die. She thought it would be a sweet sleep to her, and I believe she has gone to rest. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be his name."

TALITHA SMITH, her mother.

JIMES B. PROCTOR.

Brother and Deacon Hines B. Proctor, the subject of this notice was born October 27th 1825, and died May 15th, 1893, making his stay on earth 67 years, 6 months and 16 days.

He was a devoted husband, compassionate father, and kind neighbor. He leaves a dutiful, faithful and loving companion, three children, all of which are grown, one of them a member of the church, and many relatives and friends to lament his departure. We cannot sorrow for him as we should for those without hope. We feel that we are separated but for a while. The church of which he was a member will sadly miss him, besides many brethren of other churches who knew him, may we all endeavor to emulate his christian virtues, and profit by his mistakes. Brother Proctor at the time of his conversion, and profession of religion which was about 1852, was living with my father. I was then but a small boy and have known him ever since. He first joined the church at Old Town Creek, Edgecombe Co. N. G., on the 2nd Saturday in April 1852. In 1858 he moved in the vicinity of Pleasant Hill Meeting House, Edgecombe Co., and after acquiring a little home (on which he remained until death) it being more convenient to attend services, moved his membership by taking a letter of dismission from Town Creek. After uniting with Pleasant Hill he was set apart to officiate as Deacon, in which capacity he served this church until a few years ago, when he with some others took letters of dismission to organize a church at Mill Branch, Nash Co. N. C., where he continued consistently and dutiful to the end of his natural life. Though in limited and ordinary circumstances he devoted his labor and means to the service of God and the brethren. He seldom failed, unless providentially hindered, visiting churches in reach, both at stated times of meeting and appointments for travelling preachers. Took great pleasure in looking after the ministers, many of whom can remember sharing his hospitality; also the sick and needy members of the church had his attention. He manifested a great desire that peace and love should ever abound among the brethren, and would sometimes speak and exhort the members and if he saw any who manifested any interest in religion he would take pleasure in trying to encourage them to obedience. Contended earnestly for the faith to the best of his ability. I never knew a charge brought against him in the church, though he had faults—as we all have, none are perfect in the flesh. His worst faults as a christian at times seemed not to have the patience necessary to endure with erring brethren. Sometimes would speak too hastily, thereby wounding feelings; but he was ever ready to confess and apologize for wrong doing, which I think is very commendable. I was with him just one week before his death, when he expressed that he was perfectly reconciled, and longed to be released from earth and its troubles, and enter the kingdom above, “where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.” I would say to his wife and children, do not grieve, we have so much evidence to believe he is at home in glory. We soon may be called from time. Are we living as we wish to die, in exalting and honoring our Redeemer. “Oh how blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.”

B. C. PITT.

DEACON WILLIAM IDDINGS.

This beloved brother in Christ was born in what is now Floyd county, Va., June 15, 1797. This was probably some years before the county of Floyd was known as such, as this was taken off of Montgomery county. I do not know the names of Brother Iddings parents. But I think they probably lived and d'ed in Montgomery county.

William grew up to manhood in his native county. And in the year 1818 he married Miss Sarah Connor, daughter of Jonathan and Sarah Connor, with whom he lived until her death December 23, 1881. They had no children. His wife was indeed a help-mate to him, for she was one among the best of women. They walked hand in hand together, not only as husband and wife, but in the love and fellowship of the saints. I have not been able to learn at what time they united with the church; but from the minutes of the New River Association it must have been but a few years after their marriage, as the name of brother William Iddings appears in the minutes of the Association for the year 1821, as a messenger from Salem church. At what time he was ordained to the office of Deacon is unknown to the writer; but when I first visited the church about the year 1859 he was then a deacon and had probably been for years. Suffice it to say that he was one of the few who used the office of a deacon well and purchased to himself a good degree and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus. Brother Iddings was an honest, upright man in all his dealings with his fellow-man, faithful in the discharge of his duties to his divine Master and to his church, thereby justly meriting the love and fellowship of each member. All had the utmost confidence in him. His neighbors regarded him as a man of God. In fact as husband, neighbor and humble christian he filled the bill. I never heard of a charge being made against him by the church. In matters of difficulty his advice was generally sought and heeded by his brethren. He was always ready to serve the church when called upon. The poor found in him a friend as far as he was able, ever ready to relieve the sick and distressed so far as his ability would allow. His house was a home for his brethren and friends whenever they chose to make it such. The writer has often enjoyed the hospitality of this excellent man and his noble wife. Brother Iddings probably attended more Associations than any man of his day. Seldom failed to be at his own Association, and often went as a correspondent to sister Associations, and wherever he went he was honored by his brethren. Few men served his generation in his humble sphere better than he. He recollected well when the separation took place among the Baptists in this section of country, and when the Missionaries would claim to be the Primitive Baptists in his hearing he would say, "I was present when the non-fellowship was declared, and know you were excluded from us." He was gentle and kind to all, yet firm and strong in the faith. A Primitive Baptist in deed and in truth. This excellent man lived to the great age of 95 years, 7 months and 24 days. On the 24th day of February 1893 he gently passed to the world of perfect peace as we confidently believe, leaving many friends and acquaintances to mourn because he is not. Mr. Wm. Vest who lived in the house with him kindly cared for him in his last days. He was buried beside his wife in the grave yard at Salem Meeting House, Floyd Co. Va. And here we must let the sleeping body rest until the resurrection morn when it will be raised up and fashioned, as it seems fit, by the dear Saviour whom he loved and honored while here in this world of sorrow and sin. May God comfort all who mourn for him, if it be his will.

The funeral was preached July 9th, 1893 by Elders W. A. Via, A. D. Short and J. C. Hall at Salem Meeting House. Seldom have I ever seen a larger congregation, or more marked attention paid to the preaching.

"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." Psalms 37: 37.

C., on Friday before 4th Sunday in October 1893, four miles from Fremont. Those coming from the South will be met at Fremont and those from the North at Black Creek and conveyed to and from the Association. An invitation is given to all.

— W. T. HALES.

The 128th session of the Kehukee Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with the church at Flatty Creek, Pasquotank Co., N. C., beginning on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in October 1893, and continuing the two succeeding days. There will be a boat to leave Hamilton on Thursday night, and will stop at Williamston, Jamesville and Plymouth, and return after the Association. The fare will be about Two Dollars for the round trip. Those coming from the west will take the train so as to be at those places by Thursday night. Those coming from the north will come by way of Norfolk and Southern R. R., to Elizabeth City, and be there on Thursday to meet the steamer, or be met by private conveyance. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

SYLVESTER HASSELL, Mod.

M. T. LAWRENCE, Cl'k.
Hamilton, N. C.

The next session of the Contentnea Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held at Gallo-way meeting house, in Pitt county, N. C., and to commence on Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in October 1893, and to continue three days.

Messengers going by R. R. will be met at Greenville and conveyed to the Association. Those coming by way of Kinston (South,) will be met Friday morning at 7 o'clock. Those coming from the North will be met at 6½ o'clock in the evening Friday. Those going by rail will please write to brother Thomas Dunn, Greenville, N. C.

Those coming by steam boat from the East will be met at Boyd's Ferry Friday morning. Those coming from the West will be met at the same ferry Saturday morning. If the water is low probably the boat will run up and down the same day. Those going by steamer will please write Elder J. S. Corbett, Grimesland, N. C.

Those travelling by either R. R. or water will please ask for reduced fare.

JOHN W. GARDNER, Mod.

L. J. H. MEWBORN, Cl'k.

P. S. It is about 13 miles from Greenville and two miles from the Ferry to the Meeting house. Those going via R. R. by Kinston must reach Kinston Thursday night.

NOTICE.

See change in time of opening the excellent school of Prof. Warren of this town. If you want your daughters educated in a first class female school send to him.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—It seems to me desirable that honest, conscientious brethren should aim in all their intercourse and correspondence at a better understanding of the scriptures, and a better understanding of each other. I am not assured that this is their aim at all times. In old times there were some who are said to have "Fasted for strife and debate," and the same spirit may be still in existence for aught I know. I do not mean this remark as a reflection upon the letters to which I may at this time refer, or to the writers of them. I like to feel to hope that the readers of our Baptist papers are open to conviction, and are honest inquirers after truth. I have a letter before me, written by Elder L. J. Taylor and published in the Gospel Messenger, in which are some sentences to which I propose to call attention. I have no personal acquaintance with Elder Taylor, but I have read his letters always with interest, admiring the vigor and force of his utterances. I hope I shall not say anything that will sound harsh, or appear in the least degree unbrotherly. I will quote a few lines that I think will admit of some explanation. "Those Baptists among whom I travelled were called Clarkites and had no correspondence with those called Beebeites, however both parties are alike good brethren. It appears that there sprang years ago a difference between Elder John Clark and Elder Gilbert Beebe, and those siding with Clark were called Clarkites, and those with Beebe, Beebe-ites. Elder Beebe was accused of advocating Arianism, Eternal Vital-Unionism, and extreme predestination; while Elder Clark I think was accused of Arminianism."

This lengthy quotation seems to me to be necessary to get at what I want to say. If these people are all brethren and alike good brethren, they ought not to be misunderstood. As I was thoroughly conversant with the whole matter from the beginning, what I say I trust will afford some satisfaction to honest inquirers. Elder Beebe became involved in a discussion between other parties by being editor of the Signs, and publishing more or less of the discussion in his paper. Elder Clark was not alone and I did not regard him as exactly in the lead, but Elders Buck and Lauck were identified with him, and the main writer on the other side of this discussion was Elder S. Pratt of the same state—Virginia.

As to Elder Beebe being charged with Arianism; it is true that he was so charged by those preachers above named and in a paper afterwards started and published by Elder John Clark. But there never was any other warrant for the charge than was found in some expressions by some of the writers for the Signs. No man that I have ever known was more emphatic in his expressions of detestation and abhorrence of Arminianism than was Elder Beebe. I was personally and intimately acquainted with him for fifty years, and if extreme predestination was held by him it was always held. If there ever was any change with him on any point of doctrine there certainly was not on that. The Kettocton and Rappahannock and Ebenezer Associations were in perfect accord with all the Associations of our order further North. If Elder Clark was charged with Arminianism it was unwarranted and wrong. As to the expressions that led to the charge of Arminianism I don't suppose that there was one in a hundred of the Old School Baptists that accepted or approved them. There was no siding with Elder Beebe about it. The Old School Baptists were just what they are now before they had ever seen Elder Beebe. They sided with Christ and the Apostles.

There was no stand taken against those Associations above named, or the views held by them; and no such stand was contemplated. And I have never thought they were warranted in dropping correspondence. But it was done under the lead of Elder Clark and then he started a paper in opposition to the Signs and did what he could to sow discord, alienation and strife among the brethren. One circular letter published by the Warwick Association and written by Elder Beebe was specially named by Elder Clark as objectionable. The discussion of the various fine points was very unpleasant to me, and I think not profitable to any body, but tending rather to bewilder and confuse than to instruct. Elder Pratt lived to abandon the position he had taken, and if there were any following him at the time they too have abandoned the ground so that there are very few now living that know what the dispute was about. There is such a multitude of subjects, the expounding of which tends to edification, instruction and comfort. I am at a loss for reasons why that able minds should waste their time and their energies in introducing and debating questions that tend only to confusion, division and strife.

Another paragraph in brother Taylor's letter I will make a brief reference to. "Why should brethren wish to cast Jesus the humble and lowly feet-washer out of their churches by casting this lowly rite, or observance, out?" Brother Taylor says that this topic has not been a hobby with him at all, but that he has spoken of and preached it where occasion seemed to require it. In the last issue of the LAND-MARK a brother Roberts has an article published which is entirely devoted to the subject of feet-washing.

As there is confessedly a question involving a difference in understanding and leading to a difference in practice in the churches that are all in loving fellowship as brethren and sisters, do we not well to note just what that difference is and the grounds that it rests upon? I am not going to argue all the points involved here; but just call attention to one point about which there is evidently a misunderstanding. Disagreement very often is the result of the brethren having failed to clearly understand each other. The point is, whether feet-washing was enjoined upon churches, as such, to be observed by them as a public church ordinance. If it was so intended, we have a right to expect the Primitive churches, so understanding it, and so observing it. If it was so intended, we have a right to expect the Apostles to lead the way, directing and instructing the churches. The Scriptures give us both precept and example that the man of God may not be left to grope his way in the dark, but that he may be thoroughly instructed and furnished unto every good word and work. In regard to the two ordinances, baptism and breaking bread, we have repeated examples and full instructions with regard to both. Now confining ourselves to the point, whether it was enjoined as a church ordinance; will any of those who are disposed to agitate the matter find a single instance in all the New Testament where an organized church so observed it. I will not ask for two or three witnesses, I will only ask for a single one. Did the Apostles ever give directions in any single instance to any church, or admonish any church or churches in regard to such observance? In all the letters to the different churches, in all the admonitions, reproofs and instructions, is there a word, or even a hint, at the observance of a public ordinance of this kind, or an admonition with regard to the neglect of it. If it had a place in the first love and first work of the apostolic churches, there ought to be somewhere some record of it. If there is no proof, or a particle of evidence that feet-washing was observed in the churches as a public ordinance, brother Taylor is not well sustained in his charge that it is throwing Christ out of the church to cast this observance out. It needs to be shown that it was ever in the Primitive churches in this sense before anybody can be charged with casting it out. It is certain that the Baptists who came over from England and Wales and Holland, and settled in this part of the country did not bring it with them, neither has it ever been so understood or so observed among them.

Among those churches that we recognize as New Testament Baptists called Waldenses, and various other names who were faithful witnesses for the truth throughout all the dark ages, maintaining the original simplicity and purity of the Primitive churches I fail to find anything of feet-washing among their church ordinances. I am not meaning to agitate this question. I am merely defending and vindicating ourselves. I see most of the Baptist papers (and there are several of them) that are published in the Northern States, but I have not seen for several years in any of them an article on this subject. Our people are satisfied with their faith and practice, and there is no call for discussion. If the Baptists of the Southern States believe that they should make a church ordinance of it, why should they not go on quietly and so observe it, without continually agitating it? I think it was agreed years ago between all parties of this question that it should not be any bar to our meeting and mingling together in christian love.

Brother Roberts in his letter speaks of confusion and discord, and finally of quarreling among brethren about feet-washing. I certainly was not aware of any occasion for the use of such terms. I was not even aware of any unpleasant unbrotherly feeling, as I have never witnessed anything of the kind. I allow to our Southern brethren all that sincerity and honesty that we claim for ourselves. When the sincerity of our action and conviction is called in question, we like to answer for ourselves. Brother Roberts suggests a remedy for all the confusion and discord, that is so ingenious as to be quite amusing. I do not see why it should not be effectual. Indeed I do not see but that it would apply to everything else, and end all the differences and disputes of the world. That is, simply to all of us adopt brother Robert's faith, and practice accordingly. There however appears to me some very serious obstacles. There are many good brethren who have been accustomed to look to the Scriptures for guidance, and have honest and deep seated convictions as to what the scriptures teach. They would not feel warranted in attempting to end discord at the expense of truth. Brother Roberts says, "If all the churches and Associations would practice feet-washing they would end the discord about it." And then he goes on to say, "I would be glad if all the brethren would do so." This certainly looks plausible, but I do not see why it would not work just as well, and bring about the designed harmony just as speedily, for those who occupy that side of the question to abandon their position. I would suggest to brother Roberts that it might be worth a trial. Then perhaps other differences and difficulties might be healed in the same way. I will say in conclusion that I understand both Christ and the Apostles to place the washing of each other's feet among the rites of hospitality in our own homes.

In continued fellowship,
E. RITTENHOUSE.

State Roads, Del.,
July 1893.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I often doubt and fear whether I am a child of God—whether I have been led from nature's darkness into the marvelous light of the Son of God, doubt my calling, doubt myself, and fear that I am deceived and am deceiving the people of God, for I do feel so little, so weak and unworthy. I am such a great sinner and wonder how God's mercy reaches me,—one who has trampled His law under my unhallowed feet without even a remorseful conscience. But while I doubt myself and doubt if ever I have been "born again," yet I never doubt the all-sufficient power of God to save. I never doubt Jesus; and this I do know, if I know anything, that there has been a change in me and that I was not the author of that change and had nothing whatever to do with it (for if I had I should have remained as I was,) that the things I once loved I love no more, and the things I once hated I now love; that the very people (the Primitive Baptists) whom I once persecuted and had the least confidence in all those I now love and desire to be with.

My parents were members of the Methodist church and I joined the Methodists in my twenty third year and have been with them seventeen years; always tried to live a consistent member and obey the rules of the church, and verily thought I was doing God's service when endeavoring, by my influence, to weaken the Primitive Baptist cause. I had no faith in any denomination except the Methodist but least in "Hard Shells." My only knowledge of this sect was obtained by association with some of the Primitives who were members of a weak church in the neighborhood of my early days; and while I always found them to be good neighbors and honest in all transactions, yet I considered them cranks, selfish, ignorant and foolish. I had no cause for disliking them only their foolish notions, (as I, in my wisdom, then thought) about salvation by grace alone, man's total depravity, God's effectual calling, man's inability to save himself, Christ's finished work, &c.

I cared not to hear them preach. I wanted them exterminated and verily believed they would soon be, in this enlightened age. They would not help God to convert the world. They would not advocate Sunday Schools. They would not give money to send missionaries to save the heathen. They said we all were heathens until God in his mercy led us out of nature's darkness and implanted in our bosom the spark of eternal life. They cared nothing about the applause of the world. They preached a hard doctrine—predestination. They cared nothing about fine churches; they would not pay a man a salary to preach for them, and many other things foreign and offensive to my mind. And I disliked them for these things, for I was proud and high-minded, foolish and blind. I looked down on them as exceedingly ignorant and to be pitied. I was ambitious and worshipped the gods of this world among them, creeds in the name of Christ. I cared more about the standing of my church in the eyes of the world than I thought of how I stood in the sight of God. I believed salvation was by works, and I worked, and therefore consoled myself with the idea that I was on the road to heaven. It was the height of my ambition to have a fine church, a good organ, an eloquent and fascinating preacher, a large membership, and I labored for this end. I knew but little about spiritual religion and cared less. Knew nothing about the just living by faith, but believed they lived by works and worked themselves in the favor of God. I believed all one had to do to be saved was to join the church, quit his bad habits, live a moral life, pay the preacher and pray off his sins when he felt that he had committed any. I knew not that man could not even say that Christ is the Lord, without the Holy Ghost. I knew not that he was dead in sin, blind, deaf, and without understanding until God gave him a new birth—life—eyes to see, ears to hear and a heart to understand the things of the spirit. I thought in this enlightened age of the nineteenth century, with the country full of educated Divines that any one who was lost, was because he would not do so as told by man, and I knew that the world by wisdom knows not God, and that not many wise, not many mighty, and many noble are called of God; I knew not that God chooses the foolish things and base things to confound the wise.

I was in total darkness on these scriptural truths, yet I felt secure for seventeen years. All this time I was building my individual tower of Babel to climb to Heaven on. But thank God he confused me as he did the men of old—showed me how all of my works were vain and my self-righteousness as filthy rags in His sight, how that it was not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy, how that salvation is of the Lord, and in my weakness I was made to realize that there is a way which seemeth right to man and the end thereof is death, and verily believed I was on that road.

One night I was passing the Methodist church and was communing with myself on the superiority of Methodism, and thinking of some who had left the Methodist church, and was saying to myself that though others might leave I would never,—that I would live and die in the Methodist church.

I had walked but a short distance when it appeared to me as if a voice had almost spoken it, "you will leave the Methodist church." I tried to cast the impression off my mind, tried to dispose of the idea, but could not fully do so. This was in March 1893. In the latter part of March, Elder Parifoy came through this section of the country and had an appointment to preach at Mt. Pleasant church March 28th. I felt impressed to go and hear him, but why I cannot say. Never before had I desired to hear a Primitive Baptist preach. Yet the desire to hear this one was so strong that I went. His text was Isaiah 42:16. I felt condemned. I had been going the way I knew and this was evidence to my mind that I was blind. I learned that God's people were blind, that this way of going was crooked and that they were in darkness, but that God himself would lead them in the way they knew not, make crooked things straight, rough ways smooth and darkness light. This I never knew before and I was astonished. I was made to believe that man had to be born again,—that until this birth he is dead in sin; has eyes and sees not, ears and hears not,—a heart but does not understand. And worst of all I feel myself in this condition. God had brought me down. He had laid me low and I was in this frame of mind for weeks. I would wander about in deep distress and uneasiness. I would close my store, fall on my knees and try to pray as I never did before, for never before had I felt the need of mercy as now; I could not sleep, I was unfit for business, I desired to seek some human aid, some one to tell my condition and trouble. But to whom must I go, to whom could I go. I felt that people would make light of my condition and fears. I was not impressed to go to my minister, for it seemed something within me said, "there is no comfort there for you." I tried to persuade myself to go and ask advice of the Presbyterian clergyman, who is an old minister, and an old man I have confidence in, yet I did not and cannot say why not. So I continued to grope in darkness, and in this condition I was led by some irresistible power to go to Mr. R. H. Pittman, (now my dear brother in the bonds of christian fellowship,) and to tell him of my trouble. I do believe the Lord led me to him, for he was young and one would naturally go to older heads. He was a Primitive Baptist too; one of those very people I disliked and thought he was in the dark on all religious subjects. But I went to him and tried to disclose my burdened mind. He did not proselyte. He did not try to persuade me in any direction. He endeavored to point me to Jesus only. He told me it was not in the power of man to give me peace and lead me out of darkness—that God alone was the healer of the broken hearted,—that He is the rewarder of those who diligently seek Him,—a comforter of the sorrow stricken heart,—that he makes darkness light and crooked things straight, that He loved a contrite heart and would heal it in his own good time, that if it was the Lord's work in my heart it was a good work and he would carry it forward to the end; that salvation was of the Lord. He would read the Bible to me when I could not read it for tears, and point me only to Jesus the Saviour of sinners. And many are the happy hours we spent together reading God's word, speaking His praise and imploring His mercy.

About this time I became greatly concerned on the subject of baptism. I was sprinkled when I joined the Methodists, but now I believed Christ was immersed, and I desired to be immersed with him in the liquid grave. I prayed with all my strength for guidance, and in one of these prayers, when I had been on my knees for sometime, I seemed to have a vision and saw Jesus being baptized in a stream. This confirmed my belief, and I no longer doubted the mode of the one baptism spoken of in God's word.

I soon became concerned about my duty in a religious way, for if I believed in only one mode of baptism and that by immersion, then I could not conscientiously go to the communion table and there partake of the emblems of Christ's broken body and shed blood when I had not been baptized; and I refused there-after to go with my Methodist brethren.

And while in this state of mind I felt to be a condemned sinner before God, without God and without hope in the world,—a helpless creature grasping in the dark with God's wrath resting on me. I was no longer ambitious—no longer proud.

I no longer felt secure resting in the works of my hand, I cried for mercy,—I did not want justice, for felt I had nothing to justify me. I no longer gloried in my works, for I believed that no flesh shall glory in God's presence.

In this wretched condition I wandered down in the woods on one beautiful Sunday evening, where there was no human eye to see, nor ear to hear, and there I fell down and tried to pray God to spare my unprofitable and sinful life another day, for I felt I would never see the sun rise again. All nature seemed to be rejoicing and praising God. The little stream went sweetly murmuring by,—the birds were singing songs of joy, a gentle breeze fanned my brow, the soft white clouds floated across the blue heavens on their errands of mercy, all things seemed to rejoice but my poor heart, all things seemed to be for some good but poor me. There was no joy for my poor heart, no peace for my poor soul. I could only stand and look on these things and wish myself one of them. I would have gladly exchanged conditions with the bird that had no soul. My soul was indeed in deep distress, but blessed be God it pleased Him to lead me out of this dark valley of sorrow and give me some peace, and while I prayed for light on my duty, for I felt the need of a Saviour as I had never felt before and promised God if he would show me the way I would follow the best I could, though it led from my dearest earthly friends, that I would worship him and him alone. A few nights after this I dreamed I saw a light come down from above and shone around me, and heard a voice say, "This is not an earthly light, this is an heavenly light," and it has been my desire to follow the heavenly light whenever I am enabled to see it. After these revelations I was somewhat comforted, but still there was an aching void, a heavy weight pressing me down. I felt this to be the fruits of disobedience, for now I had come to love the Primitive Baptist doctrine; believed with them that salvation is alone by grace, and that there is no sure foundation except in Jesus, and I desired to join them, and promised them, and promised God to do so when I had an opportunity and was enabled. It was months before I had this opportunity. On Friday July 21st, in company with brother Pittman, I left South Carolina, and went to Eastern North Carolina. On following Saturday and Sunday I attended the church Eld. Gold is pastor at Wilson, and was comforted and strengthened by his preaching. Saturday and Sunday following I visited the Meadow church in Green Co., where I heard Elders Hassell and Moore much to my edification. Saturday August 5th, I attended a meeting of Brother A. J. Moore's church at Whitakers, where with the help of the Lord I went before the church and offered myself as a candidate, and tried in my feeble, stammering way to tell the dealing of the Lord with me and the rewards of my hope. I was received and baptised Sunday morning following by Elder A. J. Moore. My joy in obedience I cannot express. How my poor heart fluttered with joy when being led down in the water, and the sweet peace and boundless love I felt when raised with Christ from a burial in baptism and being led straightway up out of the water, as the dear children of God stood on the shore singing, "Children of a Heavenly King," I can never fully describe. It is too deep,—too divinely precious to be expressed.

And now since I am with the Primitive Baptists I feel as unworthy of their fellowship as I felt unworthy to go among them, and as I desired to go, so I now desire to stay, and try to pray God to give me grace to stand all persecution, overcome all temptations and hold our faithful to the end.

They are to me the most lovely people on earth. They are my best friends, and I desire here to thank them all,—all I had the pleasure of meeting in North Carolina, for their unequalled hospitality and kindness to me, a stranger in their midst. May the God of all grace and from whom comes every good gift, reward them and bless them, is my prayer.

ELDER WM. R. WELBORN, DEAR BROTHER:—If it would not be asking too much of you I would like to have your views on Matthew 11th chapter and 11th verse. Billie and I have talked a great deal about this text, but we can't see into it.

N. J. MAYBERRY.

Reply.

The Scripture to which sister Mayberry calls our attention reads as follows, "Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he." I feel a delicacy in attempting to give my views on this Scripture as I have never heard any one express their views on the subject, and I have never read a single note or commentary on this text, and I don't recollect ever thinking on the subject prior to sister Mayberry calling my attention to it. But since then I have given it my prayerful consideration, and feel to have the direction of the Holy Spirit in the matter, if I am not deceived. And I think Jesus, when speaking of the greatness of John the Baptist, had direct reference to the glorious and memorable position that John held, in the golden chain of the divine events, in the sacred history of the church of Jesus Christ. There has not risen a greater than John the Baptist, and none have been ordained to a greater work than he. His work was to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest God smite the earth with a curse. Mal. 4: 6, i. e. to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. Luke, 1: 17. The fore-runner of Christ, coming before Jesus, preparing the way before him. Mal. 11: 1. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Isa. 50: 3. John was the intermediate or connecting link between Moses and Jesus. For the law and the prophets were until

John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. Luke 16: 16. There had only been types and shadows up to the time of John the Baptist, pointing the people to the substance "which is Christ," but now a special revelation to John of the kingdom of heaven is made, and the day spring from on high dawns upon God's people. When we turn our attention to the Antediluvian dispensation, we find no man that was so highly favored by divine revelation as John. Their evidence of eternal life consisted in shadows, pointing them to Christ. But John has the substance revealed to him, insomuch that he is prepared to preach the kingdom of God in demonstration and power. And the force and power of John's preaching was so wonderful, and effective that every (enlightened and experienced) man presseth into it. Right here a volume might be written; but I shall have to pass on. But notwithstanding all this wonderful endowment which God had endowed his John the Baptist with, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he, that is, that meek and humble principle of humility which makes any one the least (or to feel the least) in the kingdom of God, is greater than all the endowments which qualified John to do the great work which he done. Humility is the first and greatest grace given the child of God in regeneration and is preferable. And if we hunt for the humblest, (least) and meekest one that ever appeared in the kingdom of God, we will find the man Jesus Christ every time.

I hope this will be satisfactory with sister Mayberry. I am as ever your humble servant in the gospel of Jesus.

FROM LANDMARK, NOV. 1. '68.

[By request.]

To my dear brethren in the State of Georgia, scattered in various counties and in different sections of the State for I do not recollect the counties I travelled, as I did not take them down: Suffice it to say, that I met with precious brethren in the Lord wherever I went.

I have therefore seated myself, at this lonely time of night, (1 o'clock,) after having a very pleasant dream, in the above State, as I thought. In the above named State, I thought I was at a certain creek, called Stoney Creek. A person came forward, was received and baptised; and a church was planted at that place. O, what a pleasant scene it was to hear and see such a sight. My mind was then directed to the church at Sardis, where I was permitted to hear the dealings of the Lord with a dear sister, whose name I have forgotten. But my dear brother Scarborough baptised her, in a beautiful place of water, and came up out of it as our dear Saviour did, when God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost were all visible at the same time; that is, God speaking, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye Him." Now any other baptism is solemn mockery in the sight of a holy and righteous God. O! just think what poor imperfect men will do for numbers, and fleece of various kinds, and money, the love of which is the root of all evil, says the good book; and so say I.

I hope that my pleasant dream will be realized by my dear brethren in Georgia; that is, a large number of those people where I travelled, and at different Associations, who were so kind to the Baptists in general, and their friends. O, may our God convince them of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, so that they may be made willing in the day of His power, to be christians and follow their Lord and Master into the liquid grave, and be made willing to praise and adore Him as long as they may have breath to do so, is my prayer for Christ's sake! O! I do hope that my poor feeble petitions will be heard and answered in behalf of so many of those souls in Georgia, that begged me with tears in their eyes, to pray for them and theirs; that is all who were so dear and near to them.

I will now give a short history of my travels in North Carolina and Georgia, since the second Sunday in August, 1868. I started Tuesday; got to the Country Line Association on Saturday before the third Sunday in August. Found a large concourse of people; the largest I think I ever saw at a meeting ground; good behaviour generally, and great attention paid to the word preached, all the meeting through. There were sixteen Baptist preachers met together at that place, from different parts of the State and Virginia, all much devoted to the cause of our God, in the defence of the truth, and to exposing error contrary to the truth of the Bible, which should be our guide while here on earth. The fourth Saturday and Sunday I was at Lawrence's Meeting House, (one baptised,) where the great and good man Joshua Lawrences' membership was while living here on this earth. He told us in unmistakable terms all about what he had to pass through, religiously and politically, forty and fifty years ago, at my own house and in the pulpit, and wherever his lot was cast. Now let me say to all thinking men everywhere, do you not know the Old Primitive Baptists have faithfully warned you all what fanaticism or false religion, and all the conventions, inventions, and men made societies, to christianize and moralize the world, all outside of the Bible. Show me one of these societies in the Bible, and I am for it. I mean now to take a survey of the whole scene; and what have they done? Drenched the world in blood. Just look at our country; 1,000,000 souls killed and died; cities burned; property confiscated, and the whole country lying in waste as it were, to what it has been. False religion and a false ministry is the greatest curse that ever befell a nation on earth.

Well I will try to come back to my travels. The fifth Saturday and Sunday I was at old Flat Swamp, Pitt County, at a Union meeting. It was one in deed and truth. A considerable number of ministers attended. The next Sunday three were baptised. O! what a happy meeting they had, seeing the dear children of God going into the water, following their Lord and Master. Tuesday following I started to Georgia; travelled 782 miles to get there, by having to go after Brother Bodenhamer, by the way of Charlotte, N. C. He went with me to all the Associations. On Friday we reached Reynold's station, on the Southwestern Railroad, nine miles from the Upstoi Association, where we met a large number of people on Saturday. The introductory sermon was preached by Elder J. R. Respass, a precious brother in Christ.—The delegates met together in harmony and peace. Elder John Rowe was Moderator. The whole meeting was conducted well, and we do hope a great blessing will attend that neighborhood. The houses of all seemed to be open for the comfort and consolation of the people in general.—Sixteen ministers were in attendance, all of whom preached the glorious Gospel of the Son of God, without a jarring note. More than the usual numbers added to the churches the last year. Correspondence from five Associations, or six perhaps; and Brother Bodenhamer and myself were cordially received as ministering brethren from North Carolina. It was truly cheering to meet brethren from different parts of the State, all speaking the language of Canaan, without a jarring note, taking the precious word of God as our guide from earth to heaven, as their stay and staff. On Monday we had to part, but not without a great many tears being shed by old and young. O! may such a scene produce good fruits to the honor and glory of God, is our prayer for Christ's sake.

After leaving the Upatoi Associação I stayed at brother Murray's, also the night before—may I not say with thirty or forty Baptists—may I not say in safety, ten preachers, but perhaps not as many as that—but a very large number of both. O! I shall never forget that night, when I reflect back and hear the singing of so many living souls born of God, Elder Teat leading the choir, tenor, bass and treble all at the same time, may I not say for hours together; and that scene was only a foretaste, a mere glimmering, of what will be realized in the courts of our God, where we shall all see our blessed Saviour face to face, and more perfectly praise Him forever and ever, without a veil between. O! my dear brethren, I am looking forward to that bright scene, where all of our troubles, trials and tribulations will be o'er.

To all my dear brethren in Georgia, that I got acquainted with, and all the rest who read this short epistle in ZION'S LANDMARKS, permit me to say to all as one man, or dear brethren and sisters, that I awoke at one o'clock, this 18th night of October, 1868, with the pleasing sensations of a dream or vision, which I will now relate to all of you. I thought I was realizing the relation of a young brother or sister's experience, just converted to our blessed Saviour Jesus Christ, by true and living faith, through a visitation of God's dear Spirit, or Holy Ghost or Comforter, which are all one. Now permit me to say, that the sensations of my mind were just as heavenly and divine as if I had been in Macon at Brother Sikes', or Smith's, or Churchwell's, hearing the relation from a certain brother or sister.—Now if my views of such a revelation from God, from them, was so comforting and consoling to me, may I not say with propriety, the Georgia brethren may be equally comforted, consoled and established in the truth in a relation from North Carolina, by some poor soul that God has revealed himself to. Now I want to convince you all of the truth and force of revelation from God to man, and from man to man, in our secret meditations, as with a telegraphic dispatch, all over the earth, wherever a line has been constructed, even across the Atlantic ocean. Now permit me to say to you all, that the figure is but a very faint one, only earthly, and will end when time ends. Now if we can have communications all over the earth, as I have stated, is it not reasonable to every christian taught of God, that God can and does communicate to all the heirs of promise His will concerning them, by revelation; and that when God reveals to a poor helpless sinner His love, and sheds it abroad in his heart, that sinner loves God, because God first loved him, and has revealed to him by a true and living faith, which works by love and purifies the heart. Now permit me to say, that if there is a christian on earth that denies revelation, that he does not deserve the name of being a christian; and God will say to such an one, depart from me for I know you not. Now I mean every one that does not acknowledge this great and eternal truth of revelation. I would not give a groat for every professor of religion on earth who denies revelation; all their profession amounts to nothing and worse than nothing; deceived and being deceived by false guides and false teachers, crossing sea and land to make proselytes, and when they make them they are two-fold more a child of hell than they themselves; ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth: 2nd Timothy 3d chap. 7th verse.

Dear brethren, I shall never finish my letters as to my trip in Georgia, unless I pursue a different course from what I have in what I have written. I will, therefore, take up my trip to Okmulgee Association. I left Brother Murray's on Tuesday morning, along with brother Simmons, an Elder and precious brother in Christ. I stopped to see Elder Glover, who was quite sick; but O, what a dear family I met with. I then went on to Brother Simmons' that night, thirty-five miles. Met with Sister Simmons at home, a dear christian, as I hope. The next day I was taken very sick, indeed almost unto death, as I thought; but my sickness was not unto death, as the Apostle said; but it was unto death in one sense of the word, for it only killed me more and more to this world and all its vanities, and made me more spiritually minded; and I realized that all things worked together for my good at that time, and have ever since, so far as I am a judge. O! permit me to say right here, shall I ever meet up with such dear brethren as Brother Simmons, his dear wife, our sister in Christ, in my sickness. The next day I went to Macon; stayed with Brother Sikes and Sister Sikes, who were so kind to me in my weakness and inability. The next morning I started to Atlanta, the seat of government, 103 miles. I took the Augusta Railroad, 53 miles to Social Circle; got there about nine o'clock, very feeble, but where I got good water and commenced mending forthwith. Next morning met Elder D. L. Patman, a precious brother in Christ; got in his buggy and stayed with him three days. O! what a feast to my poor soul, to find such an humble, affectionate brother, so far from home.— At that Association, I formed acquaintance with many precious brethren, among them the Montgomerys, one of whom had been Moderator of that body previously, but gave up his place to Elder Hitchcock, a good man, as I hope. In that body I met twenty-two Baptist preachers—a great many very gifted men, as I thought—four Moderators from different Associations, a large concourse of people; great attention paid to the word preached, and much feeling among the people, many crying for mercy under the agonies of sin and rebellion against a good and gracious God. O! I do hope that much good will be realized by the people round about there. The doors generally open by everybody, and the tables spread with the necessary luxuries of this life. May God's special blessings rest upon the people round about there, is my prayer, for Christ's sake. I now state that Elder Bodenhamer and myself were parted five days. He went through the country with Elder Rowe to that Association, and never got there until Sunday morning, but was well: and we were cordially received in the body.

May grace, mercy and peace be with you all, is my prayer, for Christ's sake.

LOVE—UNWORTHINESS.

Brother M. F. Randall requests my view of Solomon's Song 1:5-7.

"I am black but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me: my mother's children were angry with me, they made me the keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard have I not kept.

Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon: for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?

This is the language of the spouse typical of the church, or of Solomon symbolizing Christ. There is not, it seems to me, in all the bible any more wonderful and endearing expression of love than are employed here in the mysterious communications of wisdom. This is the song of songs, excelling all other songs, as the gospel excels all other glories, as the love of Christ and his bride is richer, deeper and more wonderful than all other loves.

The language of the spouse here, breathing forth in love-sickness the pangs of shamefacedness born of conscious unworthiness, and heightened by his glory, causing her to veil herself and shrink from publicity, sets forth the modesty of virtue, and stamps her with the seal of merit.

I am black. This is the feeling of all that know the Lord. As the sun shines in his searching glory over the soul in the chambers of the heart of the daughter of Zion, she feels her own vileness. It is not as in nature when the maid beholds herself in a glass and admires her personal charms—as her vanity interprets every feature of her face as the expression of beauty, every motion of her body as the perfection of graceful movement. For the more the light of truth shines in the soul the more of its vileness is seen and felt. How BLACK? As the tents of Kedar. They were tents spread in the desert where burning zuns scorched them into blackness, and they were without beauty. Black is the figure of death and corruption, and affords no cheering scene to the eye, and no fertility or sign of life. All that is couched in the catalogue of crime is covered by the word black.

The sun hath looked on me. Why should the sun which is the fountain of light or worthiness, make one black that it looks upon? The sun true to nature never flatters, but reveals and shows objects in their true colors. In the darkness of night we cannot discriminate or distinguish one object from another. Colors are not shown then. But when light is thrown on objects it shows each in its true character. So when God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shone in our hearts it discovered to us that which we had never before seen—our own blackness. Hence we say, look not on me, for I am vile, I am black.

Yet I am comely, for the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ is reflected, and I see the king in his beauty as the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. It is in the light of the Lord that we see two things, our secret sins set in the light of his countenance, and this causes us to shrink back and veil ourselves in shame. Still in his glory we shine as a diadem of beauty, as gems sparkling in the light. Hence while we are black as Kedar we are still beautiful in his light as the curtains of Solomon, and comely in his beauty, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners.

Reflection of the sun from objects or mediums that are transparent gives forth the charms and marvelous beauty of that great fountain of light.

There is on the spouse the name of her husband, and in her is his image so that he shines forth in her and his beams of beauty are seen in her answering to his glory, and she is like him. For when the true light shines the darkness is past. What is whiter than snow? The transforming power of cold can convert water into a substance white and bright. The sun shining on this discovers no darkness in the snow. But there is still a higher medium reflecting light than snow. Air is so transparent that in it when pure you see the sun himself as he shines, and often wonderful beauty appears. But in the resurrection still more wonderfully will the spouse appear in her husband, for when we see him as he is we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Then there will be no vile-ness or sin, deformity or darkness in us, but we shall be that which will fully reflect the glory of Jesus.

The spouse has her lamentations though in her deformed state. "My mother's children were angry with me: they made me the keeper of the vineyards, but mine own vineyard have I not kept." The Jews were entrusted with the oracles of God, had the prophets and the worship of God committed to their keeping, were especially commanded and required to preserve the truth, and keep the vineyard. The nations around hated the Jews and envied them: but the Jews did not keep their own vineyard. They utterly failed to keep the law or justice and judgment. They wrought no deliverance in the earth. When one is convicted of sin he is brought to see that though he once considered himself as superior in righteousness to others, and possessed a surplus, yet now he sees he has never kept his own vineyard, nor preserved his own purity. He now feels that all others have cause to hate him, and to be angry with him. He once boasted of his excellent goodness, but now his case is worse than that of any other. There are none even among my own mother's children that care for me. I cannot look to man, not even to my mother's children for help or pity.

What does the spouse do? Harken O daughter. Forget thy father's house, and thine own people. We must forsake all, yea even hate our own life if we follow Jesus. It is then that the king shows that he greatly desires our beauty. Her language is to her Lord and husband.

"Tell me O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon?" Love to her Lord constrains her to cry unto him, and this love is sharpened by her distressed condition. Distress sharpens the appetite for the bread of heaven. Weariness impels one to strive for rest. Destitution quickens the search for the cover and quiet of the cool shade at noon, for the searching rays of the sun are dreaded by one who has been in the desert. A taste of the sweet morsels in the shepherd's hand will cause the sheep to long for the goodly tents of Israel, and for the quiet resting places of his well-fed flocks.

The child of God knows that there is a true church of Jesus Christ, and a favored flock of God fed with his own blood and nourished with good doctrine. This people his famishing soul longs for. He does at times get so hungry. His heart and flesh cry out for the LIVING God. As the heart pants after the water-brook so his soul pants after God. Enough of the good things of the kingdom have been given him to teach him that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. He wants to find where Jesus feeds his flock, and causes them to rest at noon, or in the heat and burden of the day. Not as those who loudly profess their ability to work for the Lord are those favored poor. No, but they want to follow the shepherd where he feeds his flocks, and leads them beside the still waters, and makes them to lie down in green pastures. While there are those that go about proclaiming the wonderful things they are doing to make sheep, these feeble and hungry ones want tokens of love, and handfuls of purpose dropped for them that they may feed and rest with their beloved, flock. Then too these needy ones are always feeling that others are nearer the Lord than they are, and like little children they want to get nearer their beloved and be separated from all idols.

The answer to this enquiring soul is, "If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, Go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock." Thy way is by the footsteps of the flock. See how they have gone. Look at their footsteps. One of the surest marks of the flock is their walk or footsteps. The way they take, the life they live shows what they love, and where they have gone. Follow with them.

Feed thy kids beside the shepherds' tents. The kids are the young hungry ones of the flock, the little ones of lambs or goats. Both were clean beasts under the law. It means the young—the little weaklings, and represents this—that the hungry soul seeking the true church of God follows where the shepherds have gone before.

The way they should go is the way the prophets and apostles have gone, who are the shepherds, beside whose tents they will find quiet, resting dwelling places. These shepherds drop many a sweet, good morsel, by direction of the Chief Shepherd to feed the hungry kids, and satisfy many desires of their souls, and they will receive many heart cheering tokens of love from the best of all husbands, Jesus who is the Chief Shepherd.

A STRANGE THING.

A sheep is proverbial for quiet harmlessness and innocence. But some flocks of sheep are queer.

A good brother narrated to me recently the conduct of a pet ram.

A goat came on the premises of this pet, humored sheep. At once they began a fight. But their manner of fighting was so different it required about two days to get them drilled into business. The sheep walks backward some steps and then plunges forward with the gathering force of a running speed, and butts with much power. The goat turns partly round then rising pitches against his antagonist. As the goat would see the sheep coming he would thus turn round and rear on his hind feet, and the sheep would miss his aim. After about two days of this skirmishing they began their execution; for the goat learned to stand and receive the hard blows of this sheep, and it was soon perceived that the ram was hurting himself worse than he was the goat. So that they drove off the goat. But after that this goat was killed, and its head and horns were fastened in the fork of a tree where the sheep finding it began butting it, and knocked off one of his own horns, and would have killed himself had not the goat's head been hid from him.

Is there ever displayed in a pet preacher, or over indulged Baptist, such a temper as this, so that he would kill himself fighting a real or imaginary, a living or a dead enemy?

It is not good to praise men too much. When one wants to fight and rule he will destroy himself if allowed to do so.

Fighting goats is a poor business for sheep.

When we return railing for rail—we are in a goat-fight. When we attempt to take vengeance in our own hands we are heavy losers. The Lord fights the battles of his humble people. But when we are inclined to fight we cannot tell whether our enemy is dead or-alive, and butting it will hurt us about as much if it is dead as if it is alive.

MARKS.

"It is an honor for a man to cease from strife; but every fool will be meddling." Prov. 20: 3.

It seems that there will always be strife. It is the employment of contentious, wrangling people to make fusses. They do this under cover of faithfulness. It is no mark of a lover of peace to hear one say he must be faithful, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, if he is a rash man. The man that contends earnestly (truly, sincerely, having tasted mercy, and having a foretaste of salvation,) bears with patience and with long-suffering endures. He does not make a man an offender for a word. There is much difference between stubbornness and stickling for a ceremony or tradition, or some pet notion not taught in scripture, and the faithful regard of a lover of good men and of gospel peace.

It is an honor for a man to cease from strife. By strife is meant the passionate, angry conduct or contention of people that become enraged about anything. It matters not what the matter of contention is. It may be for something right in itself, but if anger, malice and bitter feelings are aroused that is all wrong.

Striving in anger is always wrong about anything. It is an honor for a man to cease from strife.

But every fool will be meddling. There are a good many ways and opportunities for fools to show themselves. Such opportunities for the fools never seem to be wanting. There is always a supply of both. For instance, brethren get into a wrangle about some matter, and it often is about such a matter as wise men would not strive about. For instance one will see a mote in another's eye, and will make a noise about it, when there is a beam in his own eye, and the bigger the beam the greater the noise he will make about his poor brother. One will strive to make foot-washing a test of fellowship when the bible does no such thing. It is a good thing to wash feet, and when brethren know these things they are happy if they do them. Anything the Lord teaches us to do if we know it we are happy when we do it. It is a plain command that those that believe should be baptised. We tell such of this duty. But shall we quarrel with them if they disobey? It is plainly taught that we should minister of our carnal things or worldly goods to those who have preached the gospel to us; but some of our brethren do not observe this. Now shall we bear with them, or withdraw from them? Covetousness is plainly condemned. It is plainly declared in scripture that we should withdraw from every one that is covetous; but it is nowhere said that we should withdraw from one who does not wash feet.

Suppose a fuss gets up about foot-washing, and a discussion arises. Every preacher that comes along that is a fool will want to be meddling in this strife. Usually there is some tale bearer that will be telling one side or the other, and thus widen the breach ; and you can tell who the fools are by noticing the ones that are very active in taking sides and speaking of the trouble, or scattering the flames before the winds of anger. A wise man would rather hear nothing about this strife, but be allowed to go and preach what the Lord gives him, and not what some man gives him.

When brethren get in such strife that they will not listen to counsel for peace, let them alone, just leave them alone, and do not notice them until they suffer awhile feeding on husks, and then they will desire to return home ; and if some preachers get heady and contentious, and seek to have their own way, after proper admonition and reproof to them, if they persist we had better not allow them to come among us to trouble us.

P. D. G.

CHIPS.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor. If a man loves me he does not wrong me. If I love another I cannot wrong HIM.

Busy-bodies in other men's matters have none of their own to attend to. The more of such business as this one does the more mischief he causes.

Election is a glorious theme to dwell upon. Those that are candidates for worldly offices give much diligence to secure them, and are often defeated. But no one that gives diligence to make his own election sure in matters of a gracious salvation ever fails. If we were to give half the attention to eternal matters that we do to our temporal affairs how much better would it be for us.

If each one of us were as anxious to hide a brother's failings or faults as we are to hide or excuse our own how much happier we would be ; and if each one of us were as severe in condemning our own faults as we are the faults of our brethren then we would have so much to do at home that we would seldom take up the case of our neighbors, for our own case would always be first as we know it first, AND FIRST come first served.

If each one of us would vote for his own government, or vote for a law to govern himself, as much as to govern others, then we would have a far greater equality. As we would that others should do to us we should do to them. What I want another to do to me I should do to him. If I want a man to divide his goods with me let me begin at home and first divide with him, and stop there, for I have then done my part. If I expect him to divide with me because I have divided with him then I am selfish and wrong.

Happy is the man that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth. I am not to make a rule for another, nor allow to myself that which I would condemn in another. To govern ones self is the greatest of all ruling.

Attention is called to the correction in appointments of Elders Turner and Stephenson.

ELDER JOHN D. SCOTT.

Elder John Scott was bitten by a rabid dog in the Spring. The last of July he died of Hydrophobia. It was a very sad death. Brother Scott was a true, faithful man, and a gifted preacher. His last words were Jesus, Jesus. A very wonderful display of the power of grace was shown in his last days. When the family furnish me some data I desire, according to request, to write his obituary.

OBITUARIES.

ROBERT L. WHITEHEAD.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Please publish the death of my darling little boy, which died Aug 6th, 1893, age 9 months and 18 days. His disease was whooping cough. I think he was one of the brightest and best children I ever saw. Lawrence and I said we thought it was a bad sign; but the "Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be his holy name." Oh, he could say, Mamma, so sweet. Oh, it was so sad to part with him; yet I know the Lord's will must be done and may He give us grace sufficient to make us resigned to His holy and righteous will at all times. But I hope to meet my darling little babe in that bright mansion above where there will be no more sickness, sorrow nor death, for all will be peace and love. A few days after my little baby had been dead this hymn was presented to my mind:

The little babe has gone to rest,
To reign with God forever blest;
His little tongue will always praise,
A Saviour's love, releasing grace.

MARY L. WHITEHEAD.

WALTER A. BRAZELL.

It becomes my painful duty to announce to you and our many dear brothers and sisters the death of my beloved son, Walter Brazell, son of J. R. and Martha M. Brazell, who was born Nov. 20, 1868, and departed this life March 14, 1892, which made his short stay on earth twenty three years, three months and twenty four days. Oh dear brother, I am in deep trouble, but desire to give a short sketch of his life and the comforting testimony that he left. Walter was a good and faithful child from his childhood, and was his father and mother's darling. Out of eight children there were seven sons and one daughter; all good and faithful children. I could not think that I loved one better than another, but it seemed to me that I could hardly bear for Walter to get out of my sight, he never was known to spend two nights in succession away from us, he was always good and kind to every body, was an industrious and reliable young man, never idle a minute and was the one to help me do all my work from a small child. He had not an enemy in the world, everybody who knew him loved him and spoke well of him. His voice was harmonious to my ear, it seemed to me that I could not talk to him enough, I would go to his bedside before I retired at night and there kiss his sleeping lips. But alas I am undone, my home does not seem like home to me now. Oh, brethren, I am in so much trouble, his seat is vacant at the table. Oh, yes he has left in everything a vacant place that never can be filled. But it is impossible for me to tell you how precious he was. He had never had a spell of sickness since he was quite small, until this. But had been complaining with cold like the rest of the children for sometime, but did not stop work. He came in on Saturday night, March 5th, and I said to him, how do you feel Walter, as I always did. He replied, I don't feel well Mamma, how do you feel. I soon discovered that there was something wrong with him. About seven o'clock he complained of a severe pain in his left side and commenced vomiting in a few minutes. We did all we knew for him, and at eight o'clock my son started the distance of eight miles for a doctor. The doctor arrived before midnight and kindly treated his case. And it seemed to us that he was getting along very well for two days. On Tuesday following the doctor came to see him again, and said he thought he was getting along very well. But on Wednesday he was taken with a burning in his breast, which caused him great pain. The doctor was sent for immediately, he came and kindly attended him, but he seemed to continue growing worse. He bore his sickness as meekly as a lamb; always ready to comply with anything we wished him to do, and was never known to pray to get well or for the Lord to cease his pain, but he prayed to God to forgive him of every sin and have mercy on him. He turned to me and said, Mamma I never will get well. I tried to speak to him, Oh yes Buddie, I hope you will. But O my heart was nearly broken. I would steal off and try to pray for the Lord to spare my darling son, if it could be agreeable with his holy will. But I could have no liberty at all to pray for him to live, but would rather feel to ask him if it was his will to take him, to forgive the least and every sin and to take him home to dwell with him forever. On Saturday night the doctor desired us not to let any person come into the room to speak to him, said two persons were sufficient to be with him. Sunday morning about 7 o'clock he commenced talking to us. He was very weak and could not be raised up to take any medicine, but he prayed aloud to the Lord to have mercy on him and wash him as white as snow. His prayers appeared as solid as a rock. His father asked him if he had seen himself a sinner before God, he replied, oh yes, and then said, "If I am one of God's elect I will be saved." He said the doctor did not want him to talk; but God had spared him and gave him breath to tell us these things; that all those dark clouds have passed away, and he saw a beautiful light in the North and said, Oh yes brother Welborn, I will shake hands with you in heaven. Brother Thos. Davis and Mr. Lee were standing by his bed and he told brother Davis to watch the little flock. He said he hated to leave old gray haired father, but must go where old fathers and mothers have met. Then he said, dont you see those angels up there in the house, and the wheels and bright spindles that will bear my soul away to that land. He said he had been brought to see that there is but one church and this is the true church. He was asked how he felt, and he replied, I feel better since those little cooling drops of water have fallen on me from heaven. He desired us not to grieve after him for he was going to heaven, and talked for sometime but I have only given you a short sketch. He also told us that he was dying, and at 3 o'clock in the evening he passed away. Now dear brethren and sisters, my troubles are more than I can tell, but hope that God will enable us to bow in humble submission to his holy will, and that he will put it in some of your minds to write to us and speak a word of comfort to us in our sad bereavement. Dear brother, I know I have written this obituary very lengthly but I have given but a short sketch. Dear brother, pray for us that we may be comforted. May the Lord be with you. I remain your unworthy sister in deep distress,

MARTHA M. BRASWELL.

Primitive Monitor, Primitive Baptist and Gospel Messenger please copy.

NOEL JONES.

Another one of the faithful soldiers is gone to realms of light.

Brother Noel Jones died on the 2nd day of February 1893. He was born on the 20th day of March 1821; and on the 22nd day of March 1850, he was married to Rebecca Wilson, by whom he had twelve children and raised ten, five sons and five daughters. Brother Jones was raised in a county where there were no advantages for education and therefore did not receive any education worth speaking of. He grew up somewhat without parental training and without the knowledge and fear of God. He was a young man of vim and determination and a will to labor. He was a man that could do anything he had a mind to turn his hand to do. He was a splendid blacksmith, a good house carpenter, and could make anything out of wood or iron he wanted to. He was a man of very limited circumstances when he commenced life, but being of spirit and determination he acquired a good and comfortable living. He was a splendid manager and lived bountifully in all his after life. From his own learning and practice he became quite a business man, and was a very useful man in his neighborhood, so much so that a good many looked to him for advice. He was a man of good judgment in all matters pertaining to general business. Then he went on with success as regards the world and natural life. But sometime between 45 and 50 years of age, he was awaked by Sinai's awful thunder to a knowledge of his lost and ruined state before God.

There was ever after that the guiding of the Spirit with him, an inward monitor that directed his course through the remainder of his life. He was convinced of sin sometime in 1869 or 70. He obtained a hope, and in 1872 he petitioned to the church at Seven Mile, in Sampson county, N. C., and was received by profession of faith and baptism on the third Saturday in July 1872. He was set apart for deacon on the third Saturday in May 1874, and was ordained as deacon on the third Sunday in June 1874, and continued to fill that office to the day of his death with great ability and prudence. He was very zealous for the cause of Christ and he traveled a great deal when he was able to do so far and near. The lamenting writer of this obituary travelled a good deal with Brother Jones and spent a good deal of time with him both at his own home and among the churches, his faith was sound and, unshaken, fixed on Christ as the Saviour. He was a sound disciplinarian. He was a very exemplary member of his church. He lived by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ who died and gave himself for him. His conversation was in the scriptures of truth. He entertained a good many brethren at his own home, and it was his joy and desire to meet them everywhere. He was a pattern of a man and a model christian. He was very kind hearted to his brethren and dearly loved them. He was extremely fond of singing sentimental songs such as showed the work of the Spirit in the soul. He was a spiritual man. He was a very useful man to the churches, and did a great deal of good. He was an earnest contender for the faith and a strong defender of the doctrine of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.

I believe that he is gone to glory and that his spirit is among the spirits of just men made perfect. And now my dear brethren, and sisters let all of us take example from him from this time forward.

A. WHITFIELD.

ZION'S LANDMARK.

ELDER E. F. MARTIN.

Died at his home in the county of Monroe and State of West Virginia, our esteemed brother, Elder B. F. Martin.

The subject of this notice was born in Henry Co. Va., about the year 1855, where he lived until his father moved to Smith county. There he grew to manhood, and married. There the Lord found him as he did Jacob of old, and led him about and instructed him. He taught him that salvation is of the Lord, and bid him publish the good news to his people.

About the year 1878, the church where he was a member, seeing his call, and being satisfied with his gift, set him apart to the full work of the ministry. A few years after his wife died and left him to care for two little boys.

The first time I ever saw brother Martin was at our Association in 1887. He was sent as a messenger from the Washington Association. In December 1877 he married Mary Law of our county, and soon after moved among us, where the last six years of his labor has been spent. He was a member of the Flat Woods church and we loved to have him with us. His manner of preaching was not such as to attract the worldly minded, but to the spiritual minded he was simply Christ-like, humble, loving and gentle. He possessed little of this world's goods, nor did he desire the applause of men, but was willing to labor with his own hands to minister to the wants of those around him. He leaves a wife and five children, mother, father and many friends to mourn their loss. But our loss is his eternal gain. How little did I think when I parted with him on my way to this place that I should see him no more, but alas! it is true and we must submit to Him who doeth all things after his own will.

May the Lord bless this bereavement to us all, and be a companion to our bereaved sister, and a father to the fatherless children, a lamp to our feet, and a light to our pathway, is the prayer of one who feels the loss.

S. E. BROVLES.

WILLIAM NELSON.

In Stokes county, near Piney Grove church, on the 24th of August 1893, after an illness of only a few days, died William Nelson, in the 65th year of his age. The deceased was well connected and highly esteemed in the community where he lived. He leaves a devoted wife, five children, many relatives and friends to mourn his death, but it is confidently believed by those who witnessed his demise that their loss is his eternal gain. The deceased had not attached himself to any religious denomination, but his partiality and sympathy was with the Primitive Baptists, the church to which his wife and many relatives belonged. For more than two years prior to his death the deceased had become deeply concerned about the salvation of his soul, and after he was stricken with the disease which brought about his death he often called his wife, children and friends to his bedside, and talked with them freely and rationally upon the subject of death, expressing an entire willingness to die, and of the fullest assurance of eternal rest beyond the grave.

INFANT SALVATION.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD—My concern is not about those that die in infancy, but about myself, my own grown children and others that are sinners. Thank the Lord that you express yourself as you do; it proves honesty.

Salvation by grace is the teaching of the Bible and that is far enough for any of us to go. It means the worship of God alone to a poor dependent sinner, one that the law has manifestly judged and stripped of all self-righteousness. This gives God all the glory and man none.

Yours in much unworthiness.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A LONG RAMBLE.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, MY DEAR BROTHER:—I will take this opportunity by your permission, to inform my many correspondents, who are readers of ZION'S LANDMARK, why I have not written to them in so long a time. I left home on the 27 of June 1893, boarding the train at Elkin, N. C., and went by the way of Greensboro, N. C., Greenville, S. C., Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Memphis Tenn., Little Rock, Ark., Texarkana, Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas., and spent over a month in North and West Texas, filling appointments made for me by my dear brethren in Texas. And I must say that I have never met a more kind and loving set old of Baptists in all my life, than I met in Texas. I shall never forget their exceeding kindness, and great love manifested to me. We had such glorious meetings at nearly every church and several additions to some of the churches. In North Texas, I met Elders W. L. Rogers, C. C. Pope, Asa Howard, James Staggs, J. A. Rutlege, W. O. Rutlege, J. W. Green John Priddy, Thos. Clark, —Putman and W. S. Broom and others. And in West Texas I met the following Elders. Silas N. Stephens, A. B. Koen, W. S. Harris, J. B. Donathan R. A. Biggs, W. C. Burks, and—Koen and others. And from Texas I went through the Indian Territory, and to my surprise I found the people civilized, social, as highly cultured as any people. From here I went through South East Kan., and West Mo. And thence I went through to Quincy, Illinois, and from thence to Mt. Gilead Association, Mounds, Illinois, where I met the following Elders, I N. Vanmeter, Samuel L. Dank, B. R. Warren, S. R. Williams, T. B. Ausmus, John L. Scott, Giles Reeder, S. W. Sears, Owens and others. From Mt. Gilead Association I went to Jacksonville, Ill., and thence to Winchester, Ill., and here we had a glorious meeting with one addition to the church. Attended the Morgan Association in Cass County, and I must say, from a feeling sense of duty, that I owe to these good brethren and sisters abundant kindness and great love shown me, that I have never in all my travels in 32 States and Territories met a more kind, affectionate and loving set of sound Old Baptists. Elder Geo. W. Murray is the Moderator of this very intelligent body of Old Baptists, and a more efficient Moderator I have never met than Elder Murray. Elder Giles Reeder is the Clerk of the Morgan Association and is a very precious and spiritual minded brother. Elder John L. Scott is a young minister of the Morgan Association, and a more brilliant young man I have never met, and Elder Scott is a very able young preacher, and is a very sound and consistent minister of the gospel of Jesus, both in word and deed. And O, may God keep him from the evil. I am made to thank and praise God for such bright and shining lights in our Zion, as that of Elder Scott. I again met that aged and tried soldier of the cross, Elder I. N. Vanmeter, as being very able and especially on the resurrection. I met all the following Elders at the Morgan Association besides the ones already named, J. B. Dobbs, C. C. Purviance, H. S. Peak, W. R. Dyer, Jackson Whitty, T. J. Whitty and others. I heard Elder Dobbs preach and a wonderful preacher he is. Elder Purviance is a very spiritual and poetic Brother; and I had the happy privilege of being with this dear brother some days, and the more I was with him the more closely I was attached to him. And while I was visiting with Elder Purviance in the town of Pleasant Plains, Ill, and with my precious friend and Brother F. M. Scott and very interesting family, Elder Purviance's sister, Sister Nancy Stevens died, and I was called upon to preach her funeral in the Christian church at Pleasant Plains, and notwithstanding it being in the week and a rainy morning, the large house was packed with people, and a more solemn scene I never witnessed; and I felt the power of God most mightily while preaching to this large assemblage. And then we followed sister Stephen's remains to the Cemetery, and after the interment, I was conveyed by brother F. M. Scott to Prentice, where I preached to a house full of Old Baptists at early-lamp-lighting and again next day at 11 o'clock A. M. Elder John L. Scott's membership is with this church, and a more precious set of brethren and sisters I have never met. May God's richest blessings crown their pilgrimage here below.

From here I went by R. R. to Springfield, Ill. Took in the State House of the great State of Illinois, and a magnificent structure it is. And then visited the court house of Sangamon Co., then went to Oak Ridge Cemetery; and visited the grand sight of the Lincoln Monument. And from here I went to the World's Fair at Chicago where I remained four days, and saw a great deal of this world's pride and vain glory, insomuch that I could not help thinking of Bunyan's Vanity Fair. And from here I went home, via. Indianapolis, Ind. and Cincinnati, O., and on arriving at my humble, yet pleasant home, I found all my precious little family well, for which I try to be thankful to my heavenly Father. I was away from home 2 months and eight days. And I have the answer of a good conscience toward God for every day I was gone except those spent at, and going to and from the World's Fair, and I felt that that was not my duty. I will close. I am your poor little servant in the gospel of Jesus,

WM. R. WELBORN.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I send you the following letters for the LANDMARK feeling that they are too good to be enjoyed all alone. I hope, therefore, you will publish them and that others may enjoy them as much as I have done. I have the full consent of the sisters to have their letters appear in the LANDMARK. On August the 8th Sister Williams wrote me that nine had been added to the Red Banks church since I was there, and that they were still looking for others to join. All along my tour through North Carolina I saw more manifestation of the gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit among the Lord's people than I have ever seen anywhere else on this tour reaching from Alabama, (my own State) to Ohio. While the meetings have been pleasant all along the tour there has not been the warmth altogether about them that I witnessed in North Carolina.

May the good work go on till many more, "such as shall be saved be added to the church."

Yours in love,

J. H. PUREFOY.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BROTHER PUREFOY:—I have at last attempted to write a sketch of the Lord's dealings with me, if not deceived, in compliance with your request. The first time I ever knew that I had sinned was when I was eight or nine years old. I pulled out of the ground a light-wood knot,—fell down and used profane language. I, for the first time saw that I had sinned. O how sorry I was! I shed tears freely. After then I had troubles at times, and often tried to pray the best I knew how. I was brought up by Freewill Baptist parents in a very strict way. I was married at twenty one to my present husband. At twenty three I joined the Freewill Baptists, where my parents were, but not liking some of the members I had my name put in at another one of their churches. I thought I was all right for two or three weeks. Then I got in trouble about communion with them,—did not feel I was fit and did not commune until I hoped the Lord had delivered me of my sins ten years afterwards. Not long after I united with the Freewill Baptists I got in so much trouble about my sins that at times I did not know what to do, but now and then I tried to pray. Finally at thirty two years of age, I dreamed the Lord came and took all my children, six in number at that time, and told me that I could come afterwards, and not to be troubled after them. Not long after this I dreamed I went to hell—went down some steps—looked in—saw them dancing, and suddenly, I saw them pitching head foremost and the place was filled with smoke; and the steps I was on commenced breaking. I turned around to go up the steps and just as I got on the hill the last one broke down, and I said thank the Lord. I went to another place to be judged, it was made known to me a place of sharp sickles. I got on my knees to pray till my time came to be judged. I was very much frightened, but when my time came they stripped me without any pain and there was a robe put on me that looked like glass beads, and I went marching along the narrow street to Heaven.

After then trouble continued to grow worse until it seemed that a dark veil was over me, and I thought I would die and go to torment. I tried to pray, but the more I tried the more the trouble seemed to press me. I was finally made to give up all for lost and thought I had to die and go to torment. They sent after the doctor for me, but he said he could not find anything the matter with me. I was so I could not walk without being helped along. Finally I thought I would get up and walk any how, but on attempting it fell across the bed to die, as I thought. How long I lay there I do not know. When I came to myself I said, Lord have mercy on me, and I heard a voice saying, "I will have mercy upon all that call upon me in my house." This was repeated three times and then my burden was all gone—my strength restored. I did not know what it meant. I then heard another voice saying, "The wind bloweth where it listeth and you hear the sound thereof, but cannot tell whence it comes nor whither it goes; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." Then I was satisfied and could not find sufficient language to praise God, saying, thanks be to Jesus—blessed be His name. I then could walk anywhere. I continued rejoicing in the Lord. I then felt that I ought to be baptised again and tried to ask the Lord to show me what to do. I went to a Freewill baptising and while standing there I looked over the water and saw Christ on the cross forbidding me to be baptised with them anymore, but was waiting for me. I still remained in the Freewill church, which was shown me to be all corrupt. I became troubled and told them to take my name off from among them, but they did not. After then, at times I wanted to be baptised again and desired of the Lord to know what to do; and one night while sitting up and had been talking about it, I became so I could not speak. It seemed like there was something like a web reaching from heaven to my mouth saying: "My yoke is easy, my burden is light, come take up the cross and follow the meek and lowly lamb." For ten or fifteen minutes I could not speak. Then it was said to me if I would say "Lord Jesus have mercy on me out loud I then could talk. I tried to say it to myself but could not. Finally I said it out loud, and had no more trouble about talking. My mind was then led to the Old Baptists, but it seemed there was something in the way. Finally after four years all was removed, except predestination and election. I could not understand that. Therefore I could not go to the Old Baptists. When you preached at the Court house in Greenville I became there in a condition I could not understand anything. Suddenly

I looked and behind you at the window, at the right, I saw Christ standing to your back a moment, long enough however to make me understand that he was with you; and also predestination and election for the first time was clear to my mind. I felt rejoiced and could understand it all after then, and it was a great feast to me. The next Sunday I and my husband joined the church at Red Banks and were baptised the next day, (two more gave in at the water,) my mind being relieved of the burden that had followed me so long. Dear brother, I have written only a few things of my trials and tribulations through life, now forty years old, and it was the Lord's workings with me, if not deceived. I believe you are a God called minister, and among many other things, was sent here that through you the Lord was to make plain to me predestination and election. I will forbear writing more at present and close by saying I hope you will come again, if the Lord will.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,
if not deceived,

TARLIA V. WILLIAMS.

Greenville N. C.

ELDER J. H. PUREEY, DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD I HOPE:—It is with a deep feeling sense of unworthiness that I attempt to write you, which I humbly hope will be to your edification, and the glory of God. It seems to be the mind of dear brethren and sisters at Red Banks, and also a duty we owe to you, to write and tell you of the glorious revival we have had there since your coming among us. It is their desire that I should write this letter, (and although I feel inadequate to the task) yet I know God is able even through poor sinful me, if his will, to comfort, and strengthen one of his dear children. More willingly, therefore, do I undertake this task, because I felt (after service) that I wanted to grasp your hand and tell you of the great comfort I hope I received; but I did not and could not, for tears choked my utterance, and for which I have thought much about and regretted ever since your departure. I will however (if the will of the Lord) speak of that ere I close. Hoping the blessed Lord will be with me while I write, and make glad your heart while you read, I will begin. You remember preaching at dear old Red Banks on Wednesday; well on Saturday and Sunday following, which was our regular meeting time, seeing, feeling, and as we hope realizing the effects of the word preached; for we believe dear brother that you came not to us with excellency of speech but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, caused us to expect some ingathering, knowing too that the Scripture says, "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." On Sunday two offered and were received. Monday at the water two others were compelled to come forward and tell what great things they hoped the Lord had done for them, which made four in number, a thing unusual for Primitive Baptists. These four were lambs that had been bleating around the fold for a long time. Your preaching seemed to confirm their faith altogether, strengthen their hope and encourage them to take up the cross, and follow the meek and lowly lamb through evil as well as good report. I believe my brother with all my heart that God sent you among us to comfort, build up, establish, and through his almighty power compel them to come in, for you know he sent his servants out into the highways and hedges and compelled them to come in that his house might be filled. Such a season of refreshing from the Lord, such a manifestation of his love and mighty power as was realized at the water last Monday, and could you have been there my brother, I believe in the fullness of your joy, you would have reaped the reward of your labor.

I will speak of the brother and the sister that united with the church on Sunday, especially the sister, believing that it will strengthen and encourage you. I believe the poor tried servants of God need all the encouragement by the way, and that oftentimes a word spoken in season is to them as apples of gold in pictures of silver. You remember Mr. Williams (now brother) that conveyed you from brother Tuckers to Greenville. It was he and his companion that united with the church on Sunday. Wednesday, at the Banks he received a feast from your preaching. He and wife attended your appointment that night in Greenville. There she rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory as the glorious doctrine of election was opened to her understanding. She came home fully established, and felt that the last barrier between her and the doctrine of Baptists was removed. Nor is this all my brother, before you read the text you quoted these words, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst thereof." As you spoke those words she saw Jesus by an eye of faith appear at your side, then vanish, and she believed he was with you through your sermon. Yes my my brother I believe he was with you at the Banks. I believe with all my heart that you are one of those chosen ones of the Lord, and that you are about your Father's business. I would say to you my brother press onward, for the prize is at the end of the race, and by and by you I believe will hear the welcome—"Well done faithful servant, sit down at my throne, and dwell in my presence forever at home." Doubtless you will be surprised when you remember my dear husband's afflicted condition, to hear that he baptised brother Williams. It is a miracle to the world; but we know God is able to give strength, which I believe he did, and being supported by a brother he performed the ordinance with comparative ease. It was an irresistible desire of brother Williams that he should baptise him, and so strong was his faith that he believed he could do it—though almost a helpless cripple from rheumatism. Even a brother that should aid in supporting my husband was placed in his mind, which he, brother Williams, hoped and we believed was of the Lord, showing as the poet says,

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform."

Brother Williams is strong in faith, sound in doctrine, and will ere long, we all believe be called to perform the duties of the office you are now so faithfully discharging. I said in the beginning of my letter that I wished to tell you something concerning myself, but Satan has already told me that my feelings that day was only carnal nature aroused. Be that as it may, I have a hope that it was of the Lord. That day will long be remembered, and if I never see your face again on earth I hope we'll meet in heaven. I will commence by telling you of the long dreary season of darkness which I have lately passed through, and which I hope the Lord that day was pleased to remove. I seemed to be dead almost to all spiritual enjoyment, dark and lowering clouds of sin and unbelief had so completely shrouded my mind that the little hope in which in times past I had so much rejoiced seemed to be gone. Jesus had disappeared—sorrow had filled my heart and I cried with Paul, "O, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" I had but little desire to attend meeting that day, but felt it my duty to fill my seat, and if not deceived, desired the Lord to give me a hearing ear, and understanding heart, and most earnestly did I desire that he would once more melt this stony heart of mine. I hope he graciously inclined his ear to my feeble petition, and ere you quoted the words of the text the tears were freely coursing down my cheeks. Yes my brother, when you spoke of the saints singing the endless praise of God through all eternity my little hope revived, and tears of sorrow, love and joy I hope filled my soul. Then in your deliverance the words given you were mine also, if not deceived.

"Then will I tell to sinners round,
What a dear Saviour I have found."

And although the tempter so soon suggested you are deceived, yet he was not able to take it away; nor did he succeed that day at the Banks, and that evening the song, "O for such love, let rocks and hills their lasting silence break," was continually on my mind. No wonder I wanted to grasp your hand and tell you that I hoped the Lord had once more visited a poor sinful worm as I, and not only I, for many, yes very many were fed that day from the crumbs that fell from the bountiful Father's table, and while it was his will, through you to feed them, it pleased him that the dear undershepherd should be fed also. I feel that I could write much more, but fear that instead of edifying I may weary you with such a long letter. So I will close. May the blessed Lord spare you long to comfort his believing children. May he ever be with you in all the trying scenes of this sin polluted world. May he bless you and yours with all necessary temporal blessings, and save you in heaven is the prayer of your unworthy sister, if one at all, and if one the very least in my Father's house. My husband, brother and sister Tucker, join in sending love to you and companion. I feel that I cannot close without asking you to remember me in your petitions, and O, most earnestly do I desire you to remember my dear afflicted husband. You know the Scripture tells us, "The effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much."

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—To-day I received the enclosed letter which you are at liberty to publish, or any part of it in the LANDMARK, as you may think best. Your readers will be thankful to hear that our greatly afflicted sister Ruth Taylor is more comfortable.

Since the doctors think she might be much relieved if not cured in a Hospital, let me propose to the dear brotherhood that we contribute a fund for this purpose, and place it in your hands, requesting you to arrange with the best Hospital for her care and treatment on as favorable terms as may be had, and pay the expense out of this free will fund. I will be one of 300 of your kind hearted readers to send you one dollar each for this blessed labor of love, for the relief and comfort of this patiently suffering and helpless child of our Father. His suffering son says, "I was sick, and ye visited me. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Then, dear kindred in Christ, let us show our love to Him in lovingly ministering to His greatly afflicted, needy and helpless disciple, as God enables us. The letter of her niece touchingly shows how pitiful her condition is. "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy."

D. BARTLEY.

Crawfordsville, Ind.

ELDER BARTLEY, DEAR SIR:—My dear aunt Ruth Taylor asked me to write you a few lines for her, as she has not heard from you in such a long time, and misses your good, comforting letters, as she would visits from dear loved friends. I am glad to say that my precious aunt is some better than she has been in four months; though she is still a very great sufferer and utterly unable to write at all. She cannot sit up, nor stand up on her feet; and still needs constant and careful attention. It has been about five weeks since she had the last convulsion, and we all hope it will please the dear Lord to remove them entirely, for they are so terribly bad, and effect her mind so much. She is the most patient sick person I ever saw, and talks, when she possibly can on the subject of religion all the time. Says that the Lord is so good, and Jesus so precious to her, that she can never talk of and praise the name of her precious Father and Saviour as much as she wants to. She often speaks of you as one of her best loved friends and kindred in the Lord; and how much she wishes it would please the Lord to order your steps in this portion of His heavenly vineyard. She has enjoyed the reading of your books, especially "Man Redeemed," so much that she wants every lover of the pure testimony of the merciful

Lord Jesus Christ, who comes in her room, to read it. Says it is the best work on the subject that she has ever read. She sends her warmest christian love, fellowship and fervent thanks to you, for all the kindness shown her, and for the grateful and liberal help she has received through your generous efforts, from the dear ones of the Master's flock, which has been such a blessing and help to her in her extreme illness; and says that she does not know how she would have managed to get along without it, having to hire a nurse, and so many other daily expenses, which in her extreme illness, are absolutely indispensable. The doctors think that dear aunt Ruth might be greatly benefitted, if not permanently cured, by going to some Hospital where they are prepared to treat and operate on such cases as hers. If she ever gets able to use her pen again she will be sure to write to you. She hopes you had a pleasant trip to Texas, and that your going was blessed of the Lord to the building up and edification of his people, and that you were mutually comforted and refreshed by meeting together in the Lord. She also hopes that your health has continued good and that the saints helped you on after a godly way. I hope you will excuse this badly written letter, as I am yet a little girl, and have but little education. You have been so good to my precious aunt, and I have heard her talk so much about you and your writing that I love you for her sake, and for your kindness, and have written this for her, because she has no one else to do it for her. Cousin Willie Cobb wrote to you at Bonham, Texas, but as aunt Ruth has not heard from you since then, she fears you did not get the letter. Mrs. Susie Saunders of N. Y., has written to auntie, and about fifty others, but she has no one to answer them, and fear they will think her ungrateful. The note you sent to the Signs for her correspondents has not yet come out, but she says it is due to so many letters ahead of yours, she reckons. I hope you will write to her as soon as your time will admit.

Kindly your little friend,

M. J. C.

Old Sparta, N. C.

ELDER P. D. GOLD:—I hardly suppose you have had time to think of such an insignificant and unworthy creature as I feel to be, nevertheless I have not ceased to think of you. It came into my mind sometime ago to write on hope, but I feel so utterly destitute of anything that is Spiritual or good I shrink from the task, yet the impression to write remains.

Hopes and fears checker human life. One serves to keep us from presumption, the other from despair. Some hope for fame, some for wealth, some for happiness. All hope for something. But if in this life only we have hope we are of all people the most miserable. How uncertain is this human life of ours. There is but a breath of air and a beat of the heart betwixt this world and the next.

Our heavenly Father has given us a hope of that blessed immortality where the troubles and cares of this unsatisfying world will forever cease.

Seeing we hope for such things what manner of persons ought we to be. Ah! how often does the thought occur to my mind, what right have you to hope for such things? What evidences have you? And I sometimes feel that I haven't any, and the very thought well nigh drives me to despair. Sufferings seems to be as divinely ap pointed as joy, but if we can only be brought to see they are for our good and that we need their chastening influence all will be well in the end.

It is so good for us to be afflicted sometimes, though it is not at all pleasant. We get in forbidden paths, get exalted above measure and have to be made humble. Ah! how much relief does the bursting heart sometimes get in prayer. What a privilege to go and tell Jesus. There are some sorrows too sacred to be babbled to the world. But He is acquainted with them all and was tempted in all points like as we, yet without sin.

A lady asked me sometime ago if I thought God held us responsible for every foolish thing we said. I told her the Scriptures tell us we will have to give an account of every idle word. I would like to know if you think the Christian will be judged in the day of judgment? I think their judgment is when they are convicted for their sins, but don't know whether I am right on that point or not. I have digressed from my subject, but have written as my mind ran.

How highly favored and blessed are those who have good hope through Jesus Christ, our Lord, that when they are called to leave this world of affliction and sorrow they shall be where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. I sometimes wonder why I am spared when so many that are so much better by nature and practice than I have been taken from time to eternity. But will not the judge of all the earth do right? We are to be still and know that He is God. "Many, O Lord my God are thy wonderful works which Thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward. They cannot be reckoned up in order unto Thee.

If I would declare and speak of them they are more than can be remembered.

I will close lest I weary your patience.

Your unworthy sister,
ANNIE ROBERTSON.

SPIRIT OF TRUTH AND SPIRIT OF ERROR. CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH—THE CHURCH OF AN-TI-CHRIST.

He that is born of the Spirit of God can see the difference between truth and error, between true and false doctrine. The Lord commands his beloved family to watch and pray, and when they obey they see by that light that comes from above, and being careful they see the Spirit of Christ in the church of God with meekness and fear of the Lord. It is needful that christians watch through the word for the way the Lord would have them to walk while professing to be heirs of the kingdom of Christ: for the anti-christian world has so many ways of temptations in their lust and pride, setting traps, nets, gins, pits and ditches for every one of the saints that walk not in her ways which lead to death. We see the world worships the beast, and that beast blasphemeth that worthy name on which our hope depends. This beast is always seeking prey, for his appetite calls for the blood of the saints, and has in all ages of the world, and he is the power and principles of the anti-christian church. So this power sets nations against nations to war, and kingdom against kingdom, and has led them to much blood shedding, until she is drunken with it; but she is not yet satisfied, nor can be. The king of glory has called her principles as a lion seeking whom he may devour; 1st. Pet. 5: 8. He also calls it greedy dogs; Isah 56: 10, 11. The dog that killed sheep is hard to satisfy, for after they have killed and eat to the full, they still go on to kill, which makes it appear that they are greedy. So is the spirit of Satan or Babylon. The more she destroys the more she seeks to destroy. She is guilty of the blood of all that was slain in the earth: Reve. 18: 24. Now we see here she is very fond of the rich men of the world, especially merchants. They that treat her with most kindness she tempts to commit sin at her will and pleasure. If she can get one to say he paid so and so for his goods, and that is as much again as he did pay, in order to cheat some hard working man or woman and children who go half clothed, or half fed, then her fantastical pride is tickled and she rejoices at the act, and puts on many airs before such a one. This principle visits grog shops, and when the saints pass by this way she invites them in. Her servants begin to say to them, do you ever take anything? The answer is, yes sometimes. Well come in and take some with me. The man says I hardly ever go in such places as this. Then says the servant, it is not any harm. So in he goes. Now what will you have? I will take a little good corn. The servant puts down what he calls good corn, and begins to say, this is my best. I keep it for my special friends. At the same time it is made of noxious poisons, but he drinks it. He scarcely gets to the door before he meets another and he goes through the same, and the saint says, I have just taken some. O, says he, that doesn't matter, another drink won't hurt you.

He is not a competent judge, and takes the judgment of devils, and goes on and drinks a second time. After this he is not much to persuade by the third and fourth one that asks him to take drinks. By this time he is drunken, he is heard to talk very loud, he staggers and stumbles, and is ready to speak any evil that may pass through his mind. So the result is he has with deeds and words become a dishonor and disgrace to his church. He is not keeping the commands of his King Jesus, but has put on a full Babylonish dress, so he is not like a saint, but like the young man void of understanding, passing through the streets near her corner, and he went the way to her house, in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night: Prov. 7: 8, 9. So this man dies to the fellowship of his church, and is cast away according to the rule our King Jesus gives in the the 18th chapter of Matthew. So I humbly ask the brethren to stay away from such places as these shops, where so much disgraceful conduct is carried on. Please take heed to him that says: "Watch and pray," for if we will do these things he says do he will keep us out of all such deathly places, and will renew our love for him and the brethren. Think of this my brethren. The better we serve the Lord the better we love the saints, but the more we follow the world in her wicked ways the less we love the saints; for to be carnally minded is death, and all teachings of the world, or the devil, or the flesh of man, or men are carnal, and is death. Mystery Babylon would have us to believe this carnal way is the way to life, but Christ says they would deceive the very elect if possible. Solomon says there is a way that seems right to a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. His Spirit makes the rogue believe if he will steal he will grow rich, so he tries it, and instead of riches and pleasure he finds the reward is prison, punishment and death, and should he grow rich the apostle says the rust of his gold and silver is a witness against his soul. The carnal mind says, if we will lend our money for usury it is a good way to life and riches and pleasure, and some try it, but where is that man that can do this and keep the commands of his Savior? I say in my judgment he is serving mystery Babylon, and not Christ, for he says, give not, lend, for sinners lend to sinners to receive as much again: Luke 6th chapter. Now sinners are in her broad way to death, and they lead hoping as much again. So this is the way sinners do. How shall saints do? Christ is the truth, and the way, and the life. Are not saints seeking for the way, and the truth and the life? If so he Christ and his teaching is the way, and if we are obedient children he is our life and peace. But mystery Babylon comes and tempts us with her flattery concerning her religion. She sits on her beast, holds out her golden cup to all nations, persuades them to drink of her cup of sin and filthiness of her fornication. Her religion is popular with her subjects, and takes well with them: for it is of the same spirit that was born in us. When we were born in sin we loved sin and practiced it with delight. So all her children love to serve her. They are blind but do not know it.

Mystery Babylon is her name, and it is proper indeed: for she works in mysterious ways to get honor of all. She can make a sinner believe he is going to heaven when she is leading him to hell. She makes her servants believe that sin and darkness is light and life. They teach darkness for light. They lead to death and say they are going to life. She says she is saving thousands, but is leading millions to ruin. The cry is give us money enough and we will save the world, but I believe from the word of God, give her money enough and she would bring the world to destruction, and, instead of saving the world, they would destroy that which is already saved, if it were in their power, for she would cause the Lord's servants to commit fornication in following after her whoredom, as she did in the days of Kings: See 1st Kings 21: 11. Now the Lord suffers not this cruel principle to teach in his kingdom such stuff as this: Rev. 2: 20. The king of Zion is holy. His care over his saints is so tender he speaks to them from love. The words he speaks are in the Spirit of his Father, and they are life. They convey light and life to every one of his saints that hears and does them.

The Lord in his mercy and love did call us from the power of sin and death to be conformed to the image of his son Jesus, and manifested his love to us by sending his Spirit into our hearts, revealing to us the truth of our hearts, convincing us that we were dead in sin, and that our hearts are desperately wicked above all things; and has called us with an holy calling, and made us acceptable with the Lord of glory, justifying us by his grace, making us meet for the Master's use, and making us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, saying, ye are no more strangers, nor foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of faith. So the church may well say the Lord has done great things for us whereof we are glad. He called us with an holy calling, then says to us, let your light shine, and we ought to let our light shine, and we do if it is there, but if it is not there we do not do the things he says do. Joining the church is not the proof that we are saints, but after we have joined, if we keep his commandments this is the full proof of our case. We do not expect to be saved for keeping the commandments, but if we are saved we will keep the commandments of our king Jesus and love him and his commandments and do them in love, not because we are forced to keep them by any other power than love. The power of the Spirit of God in our hearts impresses our minds to do these things he commands us to do in his word, but the Spirit of the world or Babylon teaches us not to do those things he commands us in his word. The commandments are not fast enough for this world, nor its pride. She wants something more popular than these. She has not known the Lord nor his commandments. She is blind and cannot see any good in keeping the commandments only to save the soul, and teaches this way, but the Lord saves the soul, and then commands it to observe and do his word, and live in the light and life of the word, and in full fellowship of the church, and confidence of the brethren, letting the light that is in us shine as he commands, striving to enter in at the strait gate; but while we are doing this there comes another command from our Lord Jesus saying; watch, if we neglect to keep in view, we will fail to do the things he commands us to do, for sin is in the flesh, and if we fail to watch we will be serving the world or sin. Whom shall we watch? We must watch self, for he is the greatest enemy we have ever met on earth. Keep yourself in duty and the church looks like she is in love with her Lord. Yes, see for a moment if she is. She is built of material that is pure. I mean the church of Christ. I do not mean there are no hypocrites in the church, but I mean Christ is pure, and so is his bride. What God has cleansed is not common nor unclean, but Babylon has so many ways to bewitch the saints they are beguiled of her pride, fashions and forms of her religion. Her principles have been taught in the church until the saints, having drunk of her cup, are beclouded with darkness and confusion. Paul says, if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, which word is being proved in many a case in this day. If old Mr. Big-head and all his family were excluded from the fellowship of the church she would have some peace. He is allowed to visit in the church, though he always thinks he is servant, and the saints have no rest with him without they follow him wherever he says go, which if they do they suffer for disobeying the Lord's commands. Though he says he is right, the matter is he has drunk of that cup of Babylon until he is drunk with the contents. So it would be well to keep this principle out of the church, for he is as destructive as a wolf in a sheep-pen. His prey is the humble sheep or lamb of God. He is a hypocrite, and if the church would remove him at his first appearance it would be healthful and much peace gained. But trouble will take its place if he is kept in the church, for he is an Absalom in the armies of Israel stealing the Kingdom. He is a mystery. Babylon's servant and he will work for her principle as long as he is allowed to stay among the saints. Therefore my judgment is that the church will do well to exclude all lusting principles that want to rule over the church, for the Lord says, he that exalts himself shall be abased.

EDITORIAL.

"The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness." Prov. 16: 31.

All my life there has been a charm to me about old people that are blessed with the wisdom of experience, and if their lives have been graced by good conduct. Nor have I ever favored that silly spirit that treats the feebleness of old age with contempt. It is in my mind to refer to some old men I have seen this year, though the ones named are only a part of the aged ones seen by me this year. In the Mt. Pleasant Association, that met in Kentucky this September, and the church this session was held with Sulphur Fork, are three men, brethren J. B. Turner, over 90, W. H. Ransdell, over 80, and David Pyles more than 89 years old, that were all baptized in 1829, and two of them the same day. These three old brethren have all lived in the same church ever since, with not a trouble between any of them, nor has any member of the church ever had aught against any of them. They are noted, leading men too in their community. Some men of another denomination said, "We do not understand it. Here are uncle Joe Turner and uncle Ransdell, the best men we ever knew, talking about their vileness and corruption." Brother Turner sat as moderator in the division between the Old Baptists and the Missionaries almost 60 years ago.

In September last, Elders James Wilson, James Parker and James Cavenaugh all preached on Sunday. Brother Wilson is 86 years old, brother Parker 89, and brother Cavenaugh 88. Elder Wilson received a hope in 1825—was baptised March 1827, ordained about 1831, attended the Little River Association at Reedy Prong in 1837, and has never missed a session since. He preached the introductory sermon at its present session, occupying about fifty minutes in as clean, sound a sermon as I ever heard from any man. All these three preachers have long been in the field with unblemished characters. Elder Moore Stephenson of the Little River Association is also among the aged and honorable preachers of our order.

Old brother Isaac Lamm was a deacon of Lower Black Creek church sixty years ago, and lives about seven miles from Wilson. I had never seen him, but hearing of him expressed a desire to see him. It was said, "Oh you would not enjoy visiting him. He is deaf and blind and just lies in his bed." But I wanted to see him. So I went, and found him in bed where he has been about ten years. He has a good face and I felt drawn to him. Finding he could hear some but could not see at all, I asked him his age. He said, "I think I am 103 years old." I asked him if he had any interest in the world. No, said he, "I have none, I am cut off from the world. It has no charms for me, and I do not care to live." When I asked about his hope he brightened up and said, "that is all I have." He said, "The angels are my companions. They come to see me every day and every night, and yesterday I saw a light in the sky bright as silver." When I took hold of his hand to bid him good-bye, he said, "please stay, please do not go," and his smile of love was so sweet showing the undying love of the brotherhood in him.

Why should we not visit such in the infirmities and desolation of old age?"

TRUE LIGHT.

ELDER P. D. GOLD :—Please give your views on the 9th verse of the 1st chapter of St. John.

T. J. JENNINGS.

Remarks.

"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" John 1: 9.

How many things of creation, and the most needful ones too, are employed by the Holy Ghost to set forth the preciousness of Christ, no man can number. John is moved to emblazon that glorious name by using the word light. John the Baptist was a burning and a shining light, but he was not that true light. He was sent as a witness to testify of the true light, that all might through Jesus the true light believe.

Let us notice some traits of that light.

1st. It was the light of men before men knew anything of him. As there was light before the sun, moon and stars were created, so in Jesus was life, and the life was the light of men, before there were men. As God created and provided everything needful for man before he made him, and had a place prepared for him before he had any existence or knowledge, so the life of his people was in Jesus before man's necessities were manifested, and this life was the light of men. In this light man was created, and in this light the promises of God shine forth. All the precious promises of grace shine in the brightness of Jesus the Son of righteousness who shall arise with healing in his wings.

2nd. The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not. (A) It has power to shine in darkness. The light is stronger than the darkness. The natural sun has power to shine so that the darkness flees apace. But the natural sun does not shine in darkness, the darkness yet remaining. This light shines in the heart, and causes man to see the darkness and to know his own blackness. It is a peculiar light, for it discovers the darkness; or vileness of our nature. (B) But the the darkness comprehends it not. Man, who is the subject of these operations though not the agent causing them, does not comprehend the nature and import of this light, or its shining. A convicted sinner does not know what his case is, nor when it shall end."

3d The Sun of righteousness arises with healing in his wings. Light heals. Naturally the sunlight warms the earth and hastens the growth of vegetation. If there were no heat on the earth there would be no shooting forth of vegetation, nor any growth of it whatever. Much power as the sun has to yield her increase, it cannot heal all the diseases of man, or beast, or of vegetation; but the Sun of righteousness arises with healing in his wings, and heals all our diseases. We need not be afraid of the failure of this light to heal all our diseases, and to bring us off more than conquerors through Jesus Christ our Lord. There is also the most healthy growth of all that come into the sunshine of grace.

4th. It never fails to light every one that cometh into the world. What world? The world where it shines. Every world has its sun. Our natural world has its natural sun. The kingdom of Jesus is a world and has its sun that shines in all, and lights every one that comes into that world. It is in his light that we see light. God who COMMANDED the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. It surely will shine and light every one that comes into that world of light. It never fails.

Every man that ever is enlightened then ascribes this light to Jesus. It does not come from any other quarter or source. It is the glory of God that is risen upon us. When this sun shines in one it causes him to see his own blackness or vileness and cry out, "Look not on on me, the sun hath looked on me. Behold I am vile. I abhor myself. Now the light that causes these things is no false light, but it is the true light. That power which shows you yourself and controls you, making manifest the unfruitful works of darkness is the true light.

The truth never flatters, nor says anything merely to please. The light does not flatter, it causes everything to appear in its true character. That is the true light that lights every one—that leaves out none. Every one that doeth truth cometh to the light that it may be manifested that his deeds are wro't in God. Hence it is of the truth, for there is no darkness in God who is the true light. P. D. G.

CORRECTIONS.

In Elder E. Rittenhouse's communication of last issue some serious errors occurred.

Elder S. Trott (not Pratt) is the proper reading. Elder G. Beebe was never accused of Arminianism. The word Elder Rittenhouse used was Arianism, which his enemies accused him of.

Note. I was absent in Kentucky at the time the proof reader made these mistakes which I regret.

TRIP TO KENTUCKY.

I was favored to visit Kentucky in company with Elder Lester recently. He is in better health and preached almost every day while we were in that state, and preached with his usual ability.

The brethren in Kentucky are in peace and some good meetings were given us. There is much destitution of preachers in the Licking Association. Where such able men as Elder J. F. Johnson, Elder Thos. P. Dudley and Elder Theobald once served, now they have only one preacher brother Hawkins, and his health is poor. It does look like they need preachers there. Elder Eubanks is giving much of his valuable services to them, though he lives in another Association.

Elders Badger and Durand were present at the Licking Association with Elder Eubanks. It was very refreshing to me to hear these brethren preach. At the Mt. Pleasant Association Elders Cayce and Badger were present and preached.

ASSOCIATIONS.

Our Associations I have visited this year have nearly all been in unusual peace and the meetings joyful.

In our Associations of brethren where churches are represented by accredited messengers, and all others so desiring may come and be with them in their meetings, the prime object is to see each other and hear preaching. In their nature they are social like the Jewish feasts held annually in Jerusalem where they gathered to eat and drink, or feast, worship and rejoice in the Lord God of the Hebrews. So these associations of Baptists are gathered to worship God in preaching and hearing the preaching of the gospel, and to enjoy each others company. Such meetings are not to make laws over churches, nor for them. They have merely enough business to preserve and perpetuate the organization. Preaching the gospel is the leading object of the meetings. Also in hearing from each other they learn each others standing better, and thus preserve the unity of the faith by a mutual confirmation of each other. For certainly there is a strengthening of brethren as they see each other face to face, and speak often one to another. They are also strengthened in this concert and unity of indwelling and of brotherly correspondence. When brethren are thus dwelling together and are of one mind and heart it is harder to divide them or make inroads on them. There are people that would divide them, but finding it difficult to do so as long as they are associated together they sometimes wish to break down these Associations so that they may the better accomplish their purpose.

It is somewhat like a Baptist I once read of who objected to his church for calling the roll or list of members. He said he wanted to be free and did not wish to be compelled to attend the church. The moderator replied that calling the roll was not to compel unwilling members to attend the church, but merely to find those that did not wish to attend constantly. No one that promptly attends a church when he can objects to having his name called, and such faithful members desire to explain or state the cause of their non-attendance when they are absent. It is not those that love the law that object to a law that requires each one to do right. The law is no burden but is a protection to all law-abiding citizens. The law is not made for the good and obedient, but for the lawless and disobedient, and these are the ones that object to it.

Let every Baptist walk humbly in the truth and he need have no fear of Associations.

PLEASE READ.

We are much in need of money to defray the expenses of publishing the LANDMARK. Quite a number of our subscribers are behind. The expense of publishing the LANDMARK is large and it requires considerable money to conduct it. I have reduced the price to one dollar and a half so as to place it in reach of every lover of truth. To enable me to publish it at that price it is necessary that I should collect what is due. If those subscribers who are behind would reflect that while a dollar or two is not such a large amount by itself, his dollar or as much as he can spare placed with some one elses in the same condition, and so on through the list, in the aggregate would amount to a considerable sum. So if you are due anything and can't send all send what you can spare.

Notice the date on the end of your slip.

For instance, if your name is John Smith and your date is Nov. 1-91 you are due from that date till now two years—or $3.00 and so on.

Every one nearly is handling some money now and it is much easier to raise it during the Fall months than to put it off until some other time.

To those subscribers who have done the best they could this article is not addressed, but we think there are a good many considerably behind, that with a little effort could send us a part if not all they are due.

All who feel disposed to assist the LANDMARK by obtaining subscribers we will gladly send sample copies to, and will appreciate any time that may be devoted in that direction. All friends of our faith are authorized if they feel so disposed to act as agents and help us to extend its circulation.

Attention is called to the notice of Elder D. Bartley concerning our much afflicted sister Ruth Taylor. If the brethren and friends have a mind to make contributions for her benefit, I am willing to do the best I can with the gifts in obtaining hospital treatment for her.

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAM HOLLAND.

Death! The mighty sickle, who is sent to mow the golden grain at harvest time, has again visited our land and taken from our midst one of our best citizens and a christian gentleman, in the person of William Holland, who was born and reared in Pittsylvania County, Virginia, and died at his home near Axton Va., the 24th of December 1892, at the age of 75, lacking five months. Brother Holland was the son Stephen Holland and Lucy his wife, who were good moral parents, and raised their son in a like manner. He was married to Sarah Norman when a young man and settled himself as a farmer.

There were nine children born unto them, four girls and five boys, all of whom are living and doing well. He was a man that was highly esteemed all along through life. As a worthy citizens, he was a good provider, always having plenty to live on at home. I have heard it said of him that he never bought a pound of meat nor a bushel of corn in his life, and he was a man who took a good interest in the welfare of his neighborhood, and his counsel was sought for and heeded to in most all cases where the advice of a sound minded and honest hearted man was needed. He was plain and gentle in his manners, and friendly with all. He believed in the right thing and that honesty was the right policy. And in his declining years he came to see himself a sinner before God, and he was thus awakened to the sense, that without the grace of the Almighty God his precious soul would be eternally lost. But in due time, in the time appointed of the Father, he received a peace of mind that his sins had been forgiven together with the command, "Go home to your friends and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you, and repent and be baptised for the remission of your sins."

This command he obeyed the second Saturday in July 1883, at Cascade, and lived in fellowship with that church a short time, when he was dismissed by letter and joined at Sugartree on Saturday before the first Sunday in November 1883, and remained with them until it pleased the Lord for some purpose best known to him self to call him from a world of trouble and affliction to that bright and happy shore where saints meet to part no more, on the date mentioned above. His disease was inflammation of the bladder, and his sufferings were great, so great that he had to be kept under the influence of morphine, therefore he never talked but very little during his illness. He was sick only one week. He went to see one of his sons one evening and was taken sick that night and went home next morning, and when his companion met him he told her that he had come home to die.

He had the attention of three physicians, but the mighty arm of death had laid its clutches upon him to separate his immortal spirit from its body of clay. His neighbors and friends were very attentive to visit him and do all they could for him, and his loving wife did all for him that kind hands and a warm heart could do. The family has lost in him a father that was a father in the fullest sense of the term, a husband that was worthy to be called a husband, one that was ever ready to administer to the necessities and comforts of his companion.

The church has lost a member that worthy to be called a brother.

But he has gone from among us now, as we trust to that house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." But we know dear sister Holland that these things according to nature are grievous to bear, but we must submit to His will who doeth all things well and none can stay his hand or say what doest thou. 'Tis hard for us to give up those that are near and dear to us by the ties of nature, but we do not mourn as those that have no hope, for he left testimony with us that his spirit is now basking in a mighty ocean of love and singing praises to the Father above.

And may his children and dear companion be prepared to meet him in that world that shall never end, is the prayer of one who wishes you well.

J. J. BECK.

VIRGINIA ROBERT POWELL.

By request of the child's mother Mrs. Susan L. Powell, I send for publication in the LANDMARK, the obituary of this dear little girl, the only child of Robert B. Powell deceased, and its mother who yet survives them both. Little Robbie was born on the 22nd of January 1893, and died on the 29th of Aug. 1893, making her age only 1 year, 7 months and 7 days. Her disease was indigestion of the bowels, from the troubles of which she was sick only 6 days. She was never as strong and healthy looking as some children, but was so smart and bright, and had such an intelligent look in her face that it seemed that nearly all of her kin people and friends who knew her made an idol of her, so to speak.

She had just commenced to learn to walk a few days before she was taken sick. Had commenced to talk well enough to speak many words very clearly. Cousin Robert (little Robbie's father,) and cousin Susan had not been married but little over two months before he died and left cousin Susan a widow sad and lonely, and now her dear little child has followed its father in death, which by nature no doubt makes her feel more sad and lonely; but we feel that she should take courage and go on, feeling that they are both now enjoying that everlasting happiness with the Father in Heaven, where all the blessed people of God shall be at rest forever and ever. Cousin Robert was such a good and pious boy, and talked of his hope in Christ, and left such good news when he died that we feel sure that he and little Robbie are now happy together. Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Cousin Susan asks the prayers of all God's people.

She has our heart felt sympathy in her bereavements. May God smile on her in mercy all through life and at last save her in Heaven where she may be happy and praise Him with all the Heaven born hosts forever and ever is my humble petition for Christ's sake. Amen.

JAMES T. SMITH.

Was born July 13, 1877, and died November 21, 1891. He was the son of Thompson N. and Aramittie H. Smith. He was well on Friday night. On Saturday he seemed to be resting easy. I intended going to church that morning at Lynche's Creek, and made ready and went. I had not been there long before they sent for me. I came home and found him speechless, and dying. He lived one hour after I got home. He was a kind, loving, truthful and obedient boy to his parents. It seemed that he could not bear to see them in trouble. If he thought one of his brothers was out of humor with him he would not go to sleep until all was right. I have heard him say to his brothers, you ought not to let the sun go down on you out of humor with any one. He was industrious and quick tempered, but not stubborn. If he did or said any one wrong he was ready and willing to make it right. He was no professor of religion, but seemed to hate what was wrong. He read the Bible through in the year 1891. I do hope he was changed. I know the Lord is able and will do all that is just. It seems to me there is a strange thought rushing through my mind, he is safe, safe in the arms of Jesus. May the Lord help me in all my troubles and sadness. Darling Jimmie, O how sweet his kind voice was to me. I want all the christian people to pray for me and our little family.

PENNY STEPHENSON.

Penny Stephenson departed this life March the 8th, 1893.

Mother was born and raised in Samson Co. N. C., and was married to my father, Alvin Stephenson, April the 6th 1856. Mother was 62 years old at her death. As a wife and mother she was faithful and diligent, affectionate and kind. She joined the church at Fellowship, Johnston Co. N. C., the first Saturday in August 1877, and was baptised by Elder J. E. Adams, and lived a consistent member until her death. She filled her seat when it was in her power. Her walk was that of an humble christian, her conversation was such as becomes a godly woman, ever putting her trust in him who is able to save. She never wearied in doing well to all around her so far as she was able. Mother was taken sick with La-Grippe about one month before she died, and was very sick for two weeks, but had recovered so much so as to attend to her domestic affairs. She cooked her dinner, sat down to the table, and while eating gently passed away. She died without a struggle, went in peace leaving 7 children, a devoted husband, 4 brothers, 3 sisters, and 7 grand children, and many relatives and friends to mourn her loss, but we cannot mourn as those that have no hope.

Her funeral was preached by Elder Moore Stephenson.

We miss her so much. May each of us by the grace of God live in humble submission to all his wise and holy dispensations. Mother was sick with typhoid pneumonia some few years ago, and while sick she said she saw her mother and her 4 little babes in Heaven, and she was going to them. She had only 3 children dead at that time, but since her daughter, Priscilla Stephenson, died aged 26 years, 9 months and a few days, who joined the church at Fellowship, Johnston Co. N. C., the first Sunday in June 1888, and was baptised the same day by Elder J. E. Adams, and lived a consistent member until her death, which occurred the 11th of May 1891, from congestion of the brain. I feel that mother and her four little babes that she spoke about are now in Heaven singing that new song of Moses the servant of God and the song of the Lamb. Oh may we all remember her counsel and advice, and try to live for the master's cause and be prepared each of us by his grace to meet dear mother in a better world. Dear readers, no one knows the loss of such a mother only those whom God has blessed with such and has also taken away. Had it not been for the power and mercy of him who is ever able to strengthen the weak, I should have long since given up in despair.

MARY MELISSIE MORGAN.

By request of brother G. H. Morgan I write you a short notice of the death of his beloved wife.

She was born July the 24th, 1831, and died April 6th, 1893. Sister Melissie had been a consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church for upwards of 12 years. Her house was a home for Baptists, and we all loved to sit and listen to her conversation. Her constant theme was salvation by grace during her last days with us. She seemed perfectly resigned. And the last words she uttered to her bereaved husband were, "I am passing over Jordan, and will soon be on the banks of sweet Canaan." Much might be written concerning this dear sister. I can truthfully say I never met a more worthy sister in every respect, and we believe our loss is her eternal gain.

May God sanctify this bereavement to the good of relatives, brethren and sisters, and may we all meet her again on the sweet banks across the river.

"Gone from a world of trouble,
Reached a fairer shore;
To rest forever with Jesus,
And live in his precious love."

EDMUND WILKINS.

By request of his widow I send you for publication in ZION'S LANDMARK the obituary notice of the death of her husband Edmund Wilkins. He was born February 14, 1845, and died May 9th, 1890. He was married to Vitulia Reece, December 27, 1865. He united with the Primitive Baptist church in the year 1869 at Ward's Will where his membership remained till the time of his death. He was strongly devoted to the church, ever filling his seat when his health would permit. He was ever ready to contribute to defraying of his church expenses and to the support of the ministry.

But he is taken from our midst and the church at Ward's Will has lost a faithful member. His wife has lost a kind husband, his child an indulgent father, and many friends to mourn our loss. But we do not mourn as those that have no hope. He bore his afflictions with great patience and seemed to be resigned to the Lord's will, to wait the time when the final summons should come. He expressed a great hope till his death. The members of the church would often meet at his house and sing for him. His favorite hymn was,

While sorrows encompass me round
And endless distresses I see,
Astonished I cry can a mortal be found,
Surrounded with troubles like me, &c.

L. SAMMONS.

ELDER JOHN D. SCOTT.

This brother was born in Wilson Co, (now) N. C., about 60 years ago. He united with the Primitive Baptists about 1871, and was baptized at White Oak church by Elder Jesse Baker. He was ordained to the gospel ministry on 1st Sunday in June 1874. He departed this life on Monday morning after the 5th Sunday in July 1893.

He was by nature of a fearless, strong character, and, though honest and square, open and manly in his dealings, yet was a rough and very profane man I have been told.

But when he was shown by the God of Israel what he was a very wonderful change was wrought as to his inward life, and it was manifested in his conduct. People who knew him felt he was a truthful, candid, direct, honest man, fearless of men, yet respecting their rights. I think he would not knowingly have injured any one in the least. As a preacher he was at times wonderfully profound on the sovereignty of Almighty God, and tender in dwelling on the grace of God to sinners. He made no compromise with sin or insincerity. He was grandly faithful in declaring what he understood to be the truth. Few men labored in the ministry as much as he did among those within my knowledge. I have wondered if I would walk as far in rough weather if necessary to meet my appointments as he often did. He was thus diligent in business and fervent in Spirit, and he was highly esteemed among the churches he served, and he is much missed. Bold as a lion against wrong, tender as a gentle woman toward the humble, he sought the interests and honor of his Lord, and the good of his chosen.

I come now to relate the uncommon and sad manner of his death. He was bitten last Spring on his nose by a large rabid dog. He went to Durham to be treated by a mad-stone, and it was thought that he was cured. He preached several times after he was bitten.

About 5 days before his death he was seized of a burning pain in his stomach, and an uncontrollable thirst for water, and was soon thrown into spasms. He could not endure the sight of water though he so thirsted for it.

He said to die of Hydrophobia was a fearful, horrible death, but if the Lord called him that way he was willing thus to go. He asked his friends not to treat him as a dog if he did thus die. Though he had many spasms, yet he made no attempt to harm any one even then. This is I think uncommon. His last words were Jesus, Jesus.

His friends were kind and did what they could to relieve him. How sad a death. Yet how sweet to feel that the grace of God prevails above and overmasters even the fury of a rabid dog.

The dog that bit brother Scott was a strange one—not of that neighborhood. I often wonder why people have so many dogs—poor people that hardly can feed a pig have two or three dogs. What are they worth? Nothing on earth. Yet they eat as much as a hog would. The bible does not speak a word in favor of dogs, but much against them. That truthful book speaks much in favor of sheep, yet we keep dogs and have no sheep, knowing that dogs kill sheep. How depraved. Surely we are foolish. Our own conduct proves our folly and depravity.

Elder Scott fell by the bite of a dog. I will quote some words his step-son wrote me concerning his last days.

"As to his death I can say, that he died as he had lived fearless and calm. He was conscious only at short intervals, and his theme seemed to be his future state, and he expressed a willingness to go as the Lord and Master might call. He did not express any doubt as to his future happiness. And said he was ready to go when the summons came. He said to die with Hydrophobia was a fearful, horrible death, but if the Lord called him that way he was perfectly resigned. He told me his troubles about natural or temporal things had been great, but in comparison with spiritual or Divine things they sank into insignificance, and in the trying hour of death his prayers were that peace might be restored in Zion, and prosperity again surround her. The present church troubles seemed to be uppermost on his mind, talked freely and said he might have appeared a little unreasonable at times, but he said that he could and would die free from malice, and that his heart was filled to overflowing for the church. In an effort to drink water he fell back exhausted, and exclaimed that he was burning with thirst, but could not drink now, but would soon pass over the river where he would drink that sweet water and never thirst again.

Very truly yours,
L. O. HAYS."

Elder Scott had his faults, and P. D. Gold has his faults too. Elder Scott possessed to me some lovely, noble traits, and his death was very sad to me.

I was present and spoke with Elder J. S. Woodard at his burial.

May the Lord bless his bereaved wife and the family.

P. D. GOLD.

REBECCA ELIZA LEE.

Sister Rebecca Eliza Lee, died at her residence in Sampson Co. N. C., on the 12th day of April 1893, in the eighteenth year of her age.

Her father died when she was quite young, and her mother had quite a struggle to bring up her children, but with diligence and prudence did bring them up in comfortable and respectable circumstances, and in the year 1849, she was married to Elam Lee, by whom she had 6 children, and brought up three, one son, and two daughters. Sister Lee was a lady of very good mind and judgment, was a very energetic lady, very domestic and a very good provider. She was very prudent and managed her household well. She trained her children up under the nurture of religion, and the admonition of the gospel, was very kind to her neighbors. Sometime about the year 1868, she became greatly concerned about her future welfare, and was troubled much for a long time, and in the year 1870, she obtained a hope, and on the 3rd Saturday in June 1873, she petitioned to the church at Seven Mile, and was received into fellowship and on Sunday following was baptised. Sister Lee was faithful in all she did. She was really an exemplary member of her church and an exemplary woman in her neighborhood. She was very kind to the brethren and sisters, and entertained a good many of them at her own house. She was very devoted to the cause, and became more and more so the older she got, and for two or three years before she died, she talked freely about the change, and was always anxious to hear preaching. She often talked about it to me and often asked me to read and talk for her. Her walk was always orderly and christian like. She was expecting to die and looked forward to the time of her departure from the world. She fell from her chair at the breakfast table and died instantly. She fell to rise again. She died in the triumphs of faith, and really we believe she is now in mid glory where the angels are marching in the foreground of the eternal throne of God.

A. W. WILFIELD.

MARTHA A. DUPREE.

Martha A. Dupree died January 22nd 1893. Her age was 75 this May. She was the wife of W. R. Dupree. She never bore any child but me, and O it did seem so hard to give her up, though I feel like it is a sin because the Lord was so kind, so merciful to spare my dear mother to me so long, and I feel like she is better off. Her disease was abscess of the stomach, from which she suffered greatly. She often spoke of dying, but said Jesus could make a dying bed soft as downy pillows, but said if she died and did not join the Primitive Baptists she would not die satisfied. The last time she was ever at church was the 4th Saturday and Sunday in last September at Old Sparta. She said she wanted to unite with the church so bad she did not know what to do, but felt too unworthy; but O I do miss her so bad.

Brother Gold, please pray for me that I may be resigned to the will of the Lord in all things.

R. A. LITTLE.

REQUEST.

As there is a goodly number of names that I have sent as subscribers for the LANDMARK, some that were due some last year and several more this fall, I desire to say to these very dear brethren that our Editor is in need of money to carry on the paper. And now let us not forget him now while we are marketing our crops, it will be thankfully received. If we can't pay all now lets pay what we can.

You can send it to P. D. Gold, Wilson, N. C., or if you will hand to me I will send it and you will be receipted for the same.

Your friend and brother I trust,
S. C. THOMPSON.

Ellsbown, Miss.

NOTICE.

Having had many requests for "Man Redeemed" (the book on Resurrection,) I will have a new edition published in cloth binding at 50 cents, provided 500 copies will be taken. Therefore all who want it will please inform me by postal card how many they will order, when the book is ready, of which notice will be given through our Baptist papers.

Elder J. W Gardner from Saulston to Goldsboro, N. C.

MUSIC.

We have often thought that our people (parents and others) should encourage their children more than they do to learn to sing. Practice in singing under a good teacher or help is needful to improve ones singing. We need not expect our children to learn to sing unless we encourage it or offer them opportunities. We are so afraid of being called Arminians that we neglect plain duties often. We should encourage our children to sing, to read the bible and thruthful books or papers, and to attend our preaching.

Our brethren, Elders Durand and Lester, have published a Note and Tune Book composed of choice hymns with good old fashioned tunes. Let our people supply themselves with these Books and encourage singing in their families.

Our children should be brought up to respect and honor the worship of God by being required by their parents to attend the worship, and to interest them in singing will aid in this matter.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted please inform me of it. When you can, always send money by Money Order, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter or by Express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and post offices should be written plainly.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—With the kindest of feelings for you and others who may agree with your views, I must dissent from your editorial of June 15, 1893, on the subject of washing the Saints' feet. There has been much controversy in our papers on this subject, therefore I have hitherto refrained from writing anything relative to it, but I now feel inclined to write for the sake of peace. Many and sometimes bitter arguments have been used on both sides of the question, but I want to write in a Spirit of love and forbearance. It is possible for a man to contend for the truth in a bad spirit. Let us reason together in good will. Those who have written in opposition to feet-washing seemed to lose sight of the fact that there is a difference between the Passover and the feast of the Passover. The Passover lasted but one night, whereas the feast of the Passover lasted seven days, and the last day of that feast was frequently called the great day. "Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the Lord." (Exodus 13:6.) "In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the Lord's passover. And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the Lord; seven days ye must eat unleavened bread." Lev. 23:5, 6. "And in the first day there shall be an holy convocation to you: No manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done for you." (Exodus 12:16.) "And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire." (Exodus 12:10.)

From the foregoing texts of Scripture you see plainly that the Passover commenced and ended on the fourteenth day of the first month, and that the feast commenced on the fifteenth day of the same month—just one day later.

I am free to admit that the Saviour washed the Saints' feet before the feast, but I do not agree that he washed them before the passover. The truth is he washed them at the passover, the night before the feast commenced. The Jews were required to put leaven out of their houses on the evening of the fourteenth day of the first month, but the feast in celebration of the passover did not commence till the fifteenth day of the same month.

Sometimes the passover and the said feast taken as a whole are called the feast of the passover.

There is nothing in the Scriptures to show that the supper given in Bethany was any stated feast all.

At this supper we have an account of the plotting of Judas against the Saviour, but Christ himself does not in his own conversation allude to it, whereas at the communion supper he does refer to his betrayal by Judas. I will here quote from all the four writers:

"And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you that one of you shall betray me." Mat. 26: 21.

"And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you one of you which eateth with me shall betray me." Mark 14: 18.

"But behold the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." Luke 22: 21.

"When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in Spirit and testified and said, Verily, verily I say unto you that one of you shall betray me." John 13: 21.

All parties admit that Matthew, Mark and Luke here gave a conversation which took place at the passover and communion supper, an in-as-much as John records the same conversation as taking place at the supper to which he alludes, I am forced to the conclusion that the supper from which Jesus rose and laid aside his garments to wash the disciples' feet was the identical communion supper referred to by Matthew, Mark and Luke, and not a supper in Bethany. It was in Jerusalem at the communion and not in Bethany that the Saviour talked about his betrayal. Also his allusion to Peter's denying him, serves as another coincidence, identifying the supper to which John alludes as being the same communion supper alluded to by Matthew, Mark and Luke.

It seems that Judas began at Bethany to concoct his plans to betray the Saviour, but he evidently left there before he consummated them, because he "went to the chief priests" to sell him, and they lived at Jerusalem.

From the foregoing reasons I am fully established in the opinion that it is right to wash the Saints' feet at the communion supper, yet I do not wish to be so overbearing as to try to compel others to conform to my wishes. "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord we persuade men." 2nd Cor. 5: 11.

A little more persuasion and a little less tyranny on both sides of this question would, no doubt, work a salutary effect in our churches which are in commotion on the subject of feet-washing. If those who are opposed to feet-washing would cease to inter meddle with those who engage in it, and those who do practice it would quit trying to coerce others into their views, then we would see a better state of affairs.

I wish every Baptist in the world would practice this duty, but I am not in favor of tearing churches and Associations asunder in order to force them into measures. It is better to lead sheep than to undertake to drive them. Some years ago in a church which I was serving there was a good brother, who for two successive communions refused to wash feet.

We did not interfere with him at all, but simply left him to battle with his conscience, and the Lord convinced him and he is now a strong advocate for feet-washing.

I cannot think there is any sin in the practice of washing feet at the communion, therefore I cannot see any good reason for the antagonism manifested by those who oppose the custom.

If they do not want to wash, they certainly could allow those who, for conscience sake, wish to do so, to engage in it without being molested.

I hope all parties will abstain from inter-meddling with the discipline of churches with which they are not connected and thus heal the wounds that may have been inflicted.

Solomon tells us that where no tale-bearer is strife ceases, and Peter said we must be no busy body in other men's matters.

Many brethren who omit foot-washing are so far ahead of me in some other christian duties that I do not feel competent to criticise their short comings.

May the Lord give all of us a Spirit to do right and forgive those who trespass against us.

Yours in christian love,

JAMES S. DAMERON.

Hopper, Rockingham Co. N. C.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—My mind has been impressed with this question, "What is regeneration?" I understand it to be a new birth; the work of the Holy Spirit by which the believer experiences a change of heart. Regeneration, then is not a production of something from nothing, as when God created the Heaven and the earth; but is a renewing, a reproducing, a recreating or forming anew of that which was previously created and formed. In Gen. 1: 26, 27 we learn that Adam was created in the image of God. And in Eph. 4: 24, Col. 3: 10 we learn what constituted that image, and also what constitutes the regenerated or renewed man, namely, The new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him. Man, then as he came originally from the hand of God, bore the impress of the nature of his Maker, was the child of God, and being so, was like God, holy and upright in his nature and being, having a will in accordance to the will of God, and a knowledge which enabled him to comprehend the will of God, and a disposition of will and power of soul to obey God and enjoy his holy and glorious presence in the garden of innocence. By the entrance of sin the soul became dead to the obedience and love of God, dead in trespasses and sins, lost all power and will to obey God. This being the state of man by sin and transgression, the soul in regeneration is begotten again see (Peter 1:3; 1st John 5:1) renewed, see (Titus 3:5) reproduced in the likeness of God, created again (Eph. 2:18) quickened into life again (see Eph. 2:1) reinvested with that original image of God with which it was at first endowed, namely; knowledge, righteousness and holiness. Thus is the soul again enabled to love God supremely and hold sweet converse with him, as when angels stood sentinel amid the shades of Eden, and God walked therein in the cool of the day, before man had known nakedness and felt shame. Regeneration, then, comprehends that, the first work in the soul; the beginning of the inner and the better life; the foundation stone of our spiritual house, just as the resurrection will be the capstone of the same. This first principle of sound, a sound belief, this solem truth, this vital and most important fact is plainly taught and forcibly expressed by various terms in the scriptures, some of which have been already referred to as quickened. Eph. 2: 1. "And you hath quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins, literally made alive, revived vivified." Action cannot be in the absence of life, therefore regeneration, renewing or quickening into life is the first thing done in the soul in order to action. Eph. 2: 10 says, "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we (the regenerated) should walk in them. Before God said, "Let there be light, and there was light," the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. At the command of God light appeared and drove back the darkness. So the soul in a state of unregeneracy is without form of obedience, covered by worse than Egyptian darkness, no spiritual love there to send up incense to the throne of God; no songs of praise and gratitude is heard rising up from the ruins of the soul, breaking the stillness of natures night and ascending to Him from whom all blessings flow. It is barren and lifeless until created in Christ Jesus, that is regenerated, born again. No child ever cried, hungered, thirsted, or was clothed until born. So no man ever uttered the language of the publican, God be merciful to me a sinner, or hungered and thirsted after righteousness, or felt his need of being clothed with the righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ until born again, regenerated. Then if regeneration be the first work done in the soul, and consists in a renewal, a reproduction, a reforming of the life of God therein, by what power is the work effected? By what power was it originally created, formed, produced? Was it not God, who, without means or instrumentalities, breathed into the nostrils of Adam the breath of life and Adam became a living soul. Shall a less power renew the soul now. As in the beginning nothing but the direct power of the Spirit of God wrought in the soul of man will regenerate it, nothing short of the inspiration of God can and does create anew a sinner dead in trespasses and sins. Suppose that creation is removed; tell me, is there any power, save the power of God, which could reform and replace the sun, moon, stars and earth, together with all animated nature. Tell me what power but that which created the Heaven and earth could ever restore them to their original order and beauty. In vain have men tried to even make better the nature of their fellow man, much less renew it. With all the efforts of men, with all the inventions and ingenuity of man the nature of man today is the same as it was when Cain slew Abel. Man continues still to slay his fellow man; he still bears false witness, steals, commits adultery, covets his neighbors' goods, bows down before idols as at first. Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrites, for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte and when he is made ye make him two fold more the child of hell than yourselves. Regeneration is the work of God is plainly taught us in the parable of the sower, recorded in Luke. The chief, if not the only instrument claimed by some, the work mongers, to be necessary in regeneration, is here omitted namely, the written word. The honest heart here answers to regeneration and is represented by the good ground. The seed is the word of God. Now why did the seed which fell on the good ground germinate and bring forth fruit with patience. Was it not because of and owing to the state of the ground previous to the falling of the seed. The ground was good, and what made it so? The seed. No this could not be, because it was good before the seed fell thereon. Besides destroying the analogy, it would be false to say that the seed prepared the ground for its own reception. Moreover it is evident that out of four different kinds of ground, only one brought forth fruit. Where shall we find the cause of this difference.

Not in the seed; the seed were perfectly good in each instance, and all things else being equal, must have brought forth fruit equally good and equally abundant. The cause then of the different results must have been in the ground and existed before the falling of the seed thereon. Then is it not plain that regeneration not only precedes and is necessary to the reception of the word, but that it is effected independently of the word. The word can act only as a motive power. There can be no motive engendered without a conscience. For instance, in vain do we admit light into the blind man's room, for he has no eyes to see. In vain do we introduce music into the room of the deaf, for there are no ears to hear it. Before regeneration the sinner has no spiritual existence, no eyes to see, no ears to hear, no heart to understand, nor will to obey. These faculties are wanting, and are the result of direct creating energy without means. See Mark 8: 18. Eve was a type of the church, but in her creation there were no means in the hand of God but the rib of Adam, so in regeneration there are no means in the hand of God but the soul of the sinner which is made a new man. It is said in John 3: 3. "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. We know the word was originally from above but not now. The calling of disciples and of Zechariah was after the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. The opening of the heart of Lydia was before her receiving the word. We are said to be born, not of the will of the flesh, not of blood, not of the will of man, but of God. Christ in his discourse on regeneration to Nicodemus, says: "Ye must be born again." I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. In the following passages we are said to be born of God, no means mentioned. 1st John 2: 18, 3: 9, 4: 7, 5: 1, 4: 18. Equivalent to this is the promise in Ezek. 36: 26, 27. But if the soul is renewed at once and without means, why do we not have peace at once. The love and peace of God is withheld, or hid for a time. I suppose to show the person regenerated by repentance and sorrow for sin, the evil of sin, and the value of salvation, so they well know how to sympathise with those who mourn because of sin. When repentance has done its perfect work, faith, which brings peace, shows us how and why we are accepted in the beloved, and is further evidence to the regenerate that he is regenerated. He that believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God, but no man can thus believe save he who is regenerated before he has faith. The written law is a type or picture of the law written on or in the heart in regeneration; a glass reflecting the image of him that is regenerated in heart; a witness corroborating the testimony within; and so it confirms and convicts the regenerate heart of sin, of the need of holiness, and of the impossibility of justification by the deeds of the law. Rom. 3: 20. This I believe to be the use of the law, and here I recognize it as the literal means of conviction, and of repentance, after being born again. Being convicted of sin by the law as an instrument changed from the love of sin to the love of holiness, from indifference to alarm, the soul seeks after peace with God, but being ignorant of that of Christ for which it labors, knowing nothing as taught by the law. It seeks in silence the claims of justice by his own good deeds and obedience.

So he then turns his repentance toward God, whose law he has violated. This shows the inability of the sinner to render satisfaction to injured justice. And now the soul fully hungers and thirsts after righteousness. During this anxiety, from first to last, it is the subject of the gospel address and gospel promises. Hence it is here the duty of the ministers of the gospel (and at all times as they know not who may be weary and heavy laden with sin) to urge the power of the gospel and hold up faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Faith sets the soul free, by it sinners are justified, that is by that which faith sees or lays hold of or upon. Which is Christ Who is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. This revelation of Christ to the soul, like the law written upon the heart, is the work of the Holy Ghost or Spirit. Like the law also in its revelation, nothing is revealed to the soul but what is written in the Scriptures namely, Christ the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

Verneil Station, Ga.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD, BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—I have just returned from the Eachacomee Association where was a refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Oh what a glorious time we had. The Lord was there and brought us to a banqueting house and the banner over us was love! And not by human observation, but ere we were aware—if one may speak for all, or nearly so—the Spirit, as a "still, small voice" said, "Eat, O friends!" And while we feasted, and that banner waved its unmistakable signal of welcome; love itself as the essence of the gospel, as Christ, and as God by invisible, almighty power impelling banished fears and doubts and worldly pride and trouble, and so melted, blended and absorbed each heart to unity, as to realize to some extent, at least, the words of Jesus, "I in you, and you in me, and I in the Father." Was not that a heavenly place in Christ Jesus? And oh, after so long and so trying a sojourn in the weary wilderness—aye the terrible wilderness, how truly I felt it was good to be there—how blessed to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory! Truly God is love! Truly God is good to Israel.

The radiant glow of this divine love that filled the soul, encircled the brow and crowned the face of each—even the otherwise ugly, with beauty and light, till I would say, not only figuratively, "How beautiful the feet of those who bring glad tidings;" also literally how beautiful the faces of those who gladly receive them this day. They were indeed comely. The sun seemed to shine with more strength and glory and all the world of inanimate nature more beautiful. Ah, all things are glorified with the presence of Jesus. The presence is all the heaven I ask, save his likeness.

The shout of praise and thanksgiving was heard each day. I have never seen such a universal earnestness and eagerness to hear preaching. Elder Draughn of your state, and who preached such a glad and glorious sermon, in conclusion, said he had never seen such eagerness, nor such good order for such a concourse of people. There were eleven or twelve ministers beside those of that Association; and all, without an exception, preached with unusual demonstration of the Spirit and power.

I talked with most of the ministers, and they all tell me about the same from all sections;—that their minds for a few years past have led them to leave the doctrine and preach experience and practical godliness &c., and the practical effect was a general awakening to life and activity; since when they have been baptizing and building up. How long have I prayed that Zion might arise and shine, in that the glory of the Lord is risen upon her once more before I die. Oh how I have desired to see it, and glory in it, ere I die! And now is it possible that a general awakening and shining is begun? The Elders from different parts tell me the signs indicate it. Right here at home the Baptists seem more dead or sleepy, than elsewhere in the state. Yet there are good signs of reviving right here. Oh that the Lord would startle them with the words, "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead."

I attended our (Upatoie) Association also a few days before the above: we had good preaching and a good time there. I discerned a strong under-current, or suppressed current of spiritual emotion there. Some of our people are so afraid of natural emotion or sympathy, and condemn it so loud that I fear some resist the Spirit and bear false witness against themselves. How sweet and welcome to me the out-burst of true praise to Jesus' name! So pleasing is this true spiritual shout of praise, as the false is abominable.

Dear brother Respass was too feeble to attend the two Associations mentioned; but has attended two at greater distance since. I forgot, in proper connection, to tell you we have several young and promising preachers in this section of the state.

One of these—Elder McDonald of Vienna Ga., so strongly solicited me to make him and family a visit of some weeks or months, that I have promised, the Lord willing, to do so; thinking, perhaps, I may find some situation down there whereby to make something. Besides I anticipate great pleasure in visiting his family and father and seeing many brethren and sisters. My whole time now is devoted almost entirely to the Baptists; but for them what should I do in this world, how could I bear this life? The Lord in great mercy and loving kindness has reconciled me to a great extent to my bereavement and poverty. Yet, thus desolate and homeless, what should I do but for the church of God. And how good is the Lord? The brethren and sisters are so extremely kind and thoughtful, they press me with loving solicitations from all sides to send conveyance for me to visit them and then send me home; and to our "meetings" far and near. I had no adequate idea of the love and consideration—sacrificing consideration, the brethren—not here and there, at home, but generally and far and near have manifested for me, me so unworthy, so unprofitable, and so unable to reciprocate. This goodness of God through his dear people humbles me to tears and grateful thanksgiving.

I am boarding with Fannie, but spend much of my time among the brethren.

You know I am but two days your junior, yet my health is almost good. I did not get off to Grayson County Tex., to see my only sister this fall, but hope to go next Spring or Fall. The Lord ever guard and guide you and all his people.

INFORMATION WANTED.

(From the Primitive Baptist.)

ELDER S. F. CAYCE, DEAR BROTHER:—I am impressed to go to all of our churches (the Primitive Baptist) in the State of Mississippi. I want assistance from the brethren in the different parts of our state, in finding all of the Associations, and the localities of their respective churches. And therefore would be pleased to have the clerks of the several Associations to send to me one of their latest minutes. I will expect on my way to border on the lines of Alabama and Tennessee, and attend appointments in each state near said lines. I will expect to travel by private conveyance, and will expect to travel in the southern portion of the state first, as I aim to travel during the winter. I aim to carry my wife with me. And I aim to carry my instruments also, so as to make my traveling expenses if possible. The Gospel Messenger and ZION'S LANDMARK will please copy. For several months I have been so much impressed to go, that I have not been sufficiently contented to attend to the duties of my profession. And as there are many Baptists in the state that do not know me, nor what my profession is, I will state that I am a dentist. I want all of the Baptists in the state to feel free in making inquiry about me, of any orderly Baptists anywhere. I am known in five associations in the state, to wit, Talahatchie, Hopewell, Primitive, Little Black and Bethany. Any Baptist wishing to learn my standing can write to any of the ministers of our faith they may choose who know me, or to any of the associational clerks who know me. As I am in the Hopewell association, will give the names of our ministers (ordained) and their Post Office address, Elds. A. B. Morris, Denmark, Miss., J. P. Pilkinton, Air Mount, Miss., Wm. M. Buredshaw, Oakland, Miss. And also the names of P. O. address of two of the clerks, to wit, W. L. Goodwin, clerk of the Hopewell association, Taylors, Miss., and Z. R. Brister, clerk of the Primitive association, Vaiden, Miss., and also Eld. D. J. Neal, Duck Hill, Miss. (Bro. Neal is in our association.) As early response as practicable will be appreciated, as I do not want to start out in the dead of winter. I aim to go to the bounds of the Primitive association, and next into bounds of Bethany association and then towards the southern boundary of the State, so as to be there in winter. Bro. Cayce please publish this soon. All who may want to correspond with me can address me at Water Valley, Miss.

WM. GUESS.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Sickness has prevented me from visiting any of our Associations this fall, except one day at the Contentnea where I was very sick. I wish to express my thanks to my brethren and friends who were so kind to me in my sickness and especially to Dr. Cox who visited me and administered to me free of charge. I shall ever remember them with a grateful heart.

Notwithstanding I was not able to hear but one sermon (the introductory at Contentnea by Elder Pitt,) yet I feel that the Lord was with me and I was not allowed to despond. Elder Pitt's sermon was surely prepared by the Lord for that special occasion, for everything necessary was in it. If brethren who listened to it would heed his admonitions the schisms that are now in the body would cease and all would be peace and love.

I am glad that there is a disposition manifest among our brethren to preserve the unity of fellowship among the Primitive Baptists even if they have to reject some who are now among us. We had better have peace and smaller numbers than so many in confusion. I have never thought our numbers too large nor seen any need of any division but if we have any who want to depart let them go so that the rest may have peace. Such divisions have taken place many times but the church has continued on just the same, and so it will again. Of old some went out from us because they were not of us and they went out that it might be manifest that they were not of us. Each time that there has been an off-shoot it is but the same thing over again and it simply amounts to adding another persecuting enemy to the already long list that are now in the world. It is also further proof that we are the church of the living God. One thing I regret, in all these divisions there are some good brethren and sisters who are deceived by those whom they have allowed to lead them and they have to suffer with the transgressors. This we cannot help. All we can do is to go on straight forward in the service of the Lord and thus let our light shine and if the will of God be so they will be led back into fellowship again.

I think it is time now that our churches had a deliverance of unholy preaching and unholy preachers and if any come among us riding hobbies rebuke them, and if they will not hear tell the churches where they hold their membership, and if they will not act close our doors against such preachers for we see that it genders strife in our midst, and we are not to receive those who sow the seed of discord among brethren.

However much we may think of a brother, one thing we should not forget: The church of Christ is above every man and for that cause we should contend even if it separate the best friends.

We are taught that in the kingdom of God there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage therefore in the church there is neither husband nor wife, father nor son, mother nor daughter, for all are one in Christ. Therefore we have no right to follow any man nor woman but Christ is our leader and to Him should we look even if it prove to be the sword of the Lord that sets the father against the son and the mother against her daughter &c.

One thing I want to caution our brethren in the ministry about. When you travel don't meddle with other people's business. It seems reasonable to me that a pastor should know more about the difficulties in his own church than a travelling preacher, and a travelling preacher is altogether out of his place when he goes to advising brethren in regard to their church troubles, and if he is not cautious he will have a dog by the ear before he knows it. Also there is a fault in the brethren in this matter: When travelling ministers come among you don't be telling them of your troubles: they have no right to know them. Suppose you tell a preacher all about your troubles and he suits his discourse to your case can you say that he preached by revelation from the Lord? Not so. The Lord was not in it at all, the revelation was from you and therefore from a corrupt source. Tell your own individual troubles and heart burnings, the deep places through which the Lord has brought you and your deliverances He gives you and thus you will strengthen the preacher and show that he needs more than your money. Many a way-worn traveller has been cast down because brethren would tell of the church troubles in their midst and justify themselves in all things when they would have been strengthened by hearing what the Lord had done for the soul of his companion, or if not that by silent rest.

The one thing needful is to preach Jesus, the way, the truth and the life. Paul determined to know nothing among the Corinthian brethren but Christ and Him crucified and that is enough for any of us to know among the brethren everywhere. Dreams, visions and revelations are good when they come from the Lord, but they cannot take the place of the Bible in the church of God. So many of them arise from the frenzied condition of the mind that they should be well weighed by the scriptures and found sound before we set any store by them.

What great exploits one has done is not gospel and cannot take the place of the gospel, but tell us what the Lord has done. Even our Lord did not go about telling what he had done, but he went doing. The Apostles did not consume their time telling what they had done but went preaching peace by Jesus Christ. Are not these examples worthy for us to follow.

I did not expect to say so much at this time but simply to say to the brethren that my health is improving and I am staying at home these two weeks to try to rest up.

I trust the good Lord will strengthen us and cause us to walk in wisdom's way that we may inquire after truth and walk in it.

Yours in a good hope through grace.

ELDER LESTER.

Elder Lester's health is good it appears. In a recent visit with him I found him in fair health, and able to endure labor and fatigue pretty well. He has baptized several in Kentucky recently. We hope he will write for the Landmark more than he has been doing.

SPIRIT OF TRUTH AND SPIRIT OF ERROR. CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH—THE CHURCH OF AN-TI-CHRIST.

And according to the rule he must hear the church and the church hear him; but he is evil enough to contend and say, I have got the Scripture on my side, and generally makes the brethren believe it, and draws them off from their duty to do something else the Lord has not ordered, nor commanded, and instead of the word justifying him like he argues, it condemns him in all his ways. Having not the Spirit he has no love nor care for the saints, but to lord over or rule them. Jesus says, if the light that is in you be darkness how great is that darkness. Now it might seem strange to many that the church is so confused in this day, but if you will look directly at every case you will see a preacher at the head of that confusion arguing some point, claiming to spiritualize the word, and this has been one great hurt to the peace of Zion in my judgment. Because they can speak well is no proof that they are called and sent of God to preach his gospel. See 2nd Cor. 10:13, 15. If they are the called of the Lord they should be dealt with as the word directs. The preacher should be careful and the church should be careful not to hold a preacher because he is a preacher until he destroys the church, or the peace of it: See Matthew 5:29, especially when he is as a wolf among sheep, and has proven that he is in love with that evil woman that teaches by flattery, and brings the saints to death and confusion. Christ says, by their fruit ye shall know them. So by the Spirit that is in a preacher you can tell whether he is in the service of God, or in the service of the world; for the fruit of the Spirit that is in him betrays him, for it matters not how well he can speak, he must show in his preaching the Spirit of the words and acts of the Lord. Jesus teaches meekness; so does the called preacher. Jesus preaches humbleness, so does the preacher he has sent to preach. Jesus teaches kindness; so does his preacher. Jesus teaches love to God and love to men, and proved it in his acts and deeds. He suffered for our sakes, so must the preacher suffer for his brethren, not pleasing himself, but suffer or bear his cross, doing the will of his master in honor to his master, not to himself. He is to be always abounding in the work of the Lord, in meekness and fear of the Lord. The Lord will bless the preacher that watches after and looks to the Lord for help, and not to men, that follows Christ and not men, that preaches not to please men. Paul says, for if I yet please men I should not be the servant of Christ: Gal. 1:10. No other Spirit but that of Babylon will preach to please men. This is her ungodly curse. She has her thousands at this, but the servants of God preach the truth as God impresses it on their minds, and when Christ is in the preaching there is power in it, and it has its effect to condemn or justify; therefore all that feel to be a witness to the truth preached rejoice and thank the Lord for the blessed news. On the other hand, all this truth condemns are displeased, and speak hard sayings about it. So it is now, and so it was in the Apostles' day, in Christs' day, in the Prophets' day, and they all spoke the truth in the Lord, and they suffered much for speaking this truth by Babylon and her false prophets and kings of the earth. She holds her cup out to the kings causing them to commit fornication with her in killing these godly men of old, and her temptations are no less now than then. Now some say they are apostles and are not. They have been tried and found to be liars. Rev. 2:2. All these are the servants of Babylon, whether in the church of Christ or anti-Christ. They are neither sheep nor lambs, but they are deceivers described in 2nd Peter 2nd chapter, and Jude. These being without the spiritual kingdom of Christ, spake evil of things they understood not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption, and these spirits we tolerate in the church is the reason our dear brethren are scattered abroad in much confusion. Their leaders have caused them to err from the truth, and they are dead to the fellowship of the church. For many of them I feel sorry, and I pray the Lord that he may help them to repent of their folly and come back home, if they are his children. But I believe they now think they are the only faction that is right, but, poor deceived souls, they are bewitched unto their ruin. Jude tells us (in the 11th verse) where they are saying, Woe unto them, for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward and perished in the gain saying of Core. It is the poison of that cup of mystery Babylon that has made these brethren drunk and led them to death and ruin. As far as I can see the church is the same that it was 25 years ago. The ministers preach the same doctrine, hold to the same faith, do the same round of duty in every respect, and if it is the case that there is yet a preacher that does preach any other doctrine than that of Christ and his Apostles, my judgment is like the Apostle Paul's, let him be accursed, or excluded. All those troubles that I am acquainted with are something the Apostles never said much or but little about. He that wants a fight seeks to get it up some way or other. Some men under the influence of the cup of Babylon find fault of their wives, and begin to abuse them, finding fault in all the duty their wives have performed, and oftentimes their duty is performed better than the men's that are confusing the peace and happiness of their wives. She begins to reason with him because she loves him, but it does no good, for a fuss he intends to have with her calling her hard names. He knows how to effect his wishes, and instead of trying to make her happy he determines to bring her to sorrow and trouble. So it is with the evil man that wants to confuse the church. He begins to be wise in his own conceit, and the church is soon all wrong, let him tell it. The church begins to reason with him, but to no avail. It is his purpose to rule or ruin, but the church fears to meddle with the matter for fear they will do wrong, so they overlook the word of the Lord, and let him go on with confusion until the peace of the church is destroyed. The church pleading her innocency, desiring to hear them preach love and peace and comfort to them, but all his preaching is about his hobby to confuse the church. So love among the brethren begins to grow cold, and their company is not as much enjoyed as it was in days past. Every one inquiring what is the matter, but none can tell: but the matter is, if it must be told, the preacher has rode his hobby through the midst of them dividing them as he went. So here divisions take place, and the members begin to take sides with some one they think is right. The result is this preacher has gained a young daughter for mystery Babylon: for they go out and set up to themselves, and call themselves the church. Then to let them tell it every body that does not take sides with them is wrong, saying hard things of the faithful in Christ who walk not after their imagination. Now the preacher that leads this way when he sees he is cast out begins to persecute the church in his preaching, but it follows that he perishes away as time rolls by, or calls in help from mystery Babylon and casts out a flood of false doctrine in honor to her that sits on the beast with the golden cup in her hands full of filthiness of her fornication. See Rev. 12:9 to the last verses. Some might believe this occurrence took place in the eternal heavens, but the word does not teach it. Let me ask some questions on the same. Was ever Satan in Heaven? Was there ever war in Heaven? Was there ever any birth or bearing in Heaven? Is there any wilderness in Heaven? No, is my answer. But it is in this kingdom on earth which is a Heaven to saints when she lets her light shine. Then we sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Our love and union and communion with the saints is a heavenly feast to us, especially when we hear the gospel preached with the Spirit and power and love of God who saves us with everlasting salvation. This makes the saints rejoice in the hope of glory. It confirms their hope and renews their love, so the church becomes a heaven to them that hunger and thirst after the righteousness of Christ. But, on the contrary, if the devil comes in and speaks to their fearful souls through the minister, the saints are made to grieve and lament over their sad condition. This he often does through the ministers. Some think those men that the Apostles spoke of speaking great swelling words to make merchandise of you, are of other denominations, but the Apostle says they are among you, and if we will watch for them we will find them. See 2nd Peter 2nd chapter. He says, among you, the church. Now if Christ's and the Apostles' writing spoke to the church the word you means the church, and these men that Paul speaks of that shall depart from the church or faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils are among the faithful in Christ, Paul's prophesy is coming to pass in these days. One Apostle says they are spots in your feasts. (Jude 12.) Paul says again, evil men shall wax worse and worse, and the time will come when she will have all things under her control, which she cannot have as long as the kingdom of Christ is in the world letting her light shine unto the praise and honor of her God and his son Jesus. He saith my sheep hear his voice, and they follow him and he will give them eternal life, and they shall never perish. Yes they will live in him and to his praise in spite of all that the world's principles can do to prohibit them. He says every plant my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up. So it is eternal truth. All hypocrites that get in the church may flourish for a time, but they will show the church who they are after a while, and when the church applies the rule of her King they are found not worthy to dwell among the saints and they are out of His kingdom.

On the other hand he says, "blessed is he that holds out faithful to the end." See Rev. 21: 25, 26. "But that which ye have already hold fast till I come, and he that over-cometh and keepeth my words unto the end to him will I give power over the nations."

Therefore let us watch and see who is preaching the gospel of Christ, and who is preaching for mystery Babylon. The servants of God preach the same doctrine that Christ and the Apostles preached, and no other; but the servants of Babylon preach things they never did preach, nor gave command to preach; but Jesus commanded his disciples to preach what he commanded them. He preached love to his disciples, and commanded them to preach it to brethren, to the poor in spirit, to the mourner, to them that hunger and thirst after righteousness, to the persecuted saying, blessed are these for their reward is in heaven; and if preaching love does not comfort the church then the preaching of Christ is a failure to them because of unbelief. They may have a crown, if so they must repent and come back to their first love, and then the preaching of the gospel will be a comfort to them again. The preacher's duty in such a case is to apply the remedy that Christ commands which is such as these, showing people their transgressions, or rebuke them sharply that they may be sound in the faith; and if this is done in love it will heal the sore if they are the sheep of Christ; but always remember preaching must be done in love, if not it will scatter the sheep. Christ speaks of calling sheep and leading sheep, but no where I find does he warrant driving sheep, or forcing the brethren to their duty. Now as I have already stated some have preached that which Christ and his Apostles never did, nor command to be preached. The church is a home for the christian let his color be what it may: and no difference between the members to be made on the account of their color, but some have preached a difference, sowed the seed of discord among the brethren and caused divisions, strife.

Who is he that has done this? Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned and avoid them. These troubles come by negligence, the church not doing the things the word commands: for where offences are or disorder by any brother the words of Holy Writ say to the church, withdraw thy self. An ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure. The troubles might be nipped in the bud when young and tender if we would do what the word commands (Rom. 16: 17;) and Matthew 18: 6; Mark 9: 42; Luke 17: 2.) Now all these words come from Christ and are truth. So we have the word as a guide if we would use it for our guide, but we fail to do so, and thus we fail to save the church from trouble and confusion: for mystery Babylon's servants try to come in at every weak point. While she has one preaching on the color of the skin that people are clothed with, another is sowing discord about the duty of the church preaching things Christ and the Apostles never preached, nor commanded to be preached. If the light that is in you be darkness how great is that darkness? Let every preacher examine the word and see what the Apostles preached and be careful and preach the same, any other is unprofitable, and does not comfort the church, but scatters the flock. Let them be as wise as serpents, and as harmless as doves, but be careful not to be wiser than that which is written, keeping themselves at the feet of Christ and the brethren. We had better watch all men, and judge not a man for what he says he is, but what we find him to be; for by their fruit ye shall know them, and the fruit of the Spirit of Christ is love, meekness, gentleness, kindness, pity, fear, mercy. So let us watch the spirit of man, for he is deceitful, and the faithful servant does not care if he is watched, when he is doing the best he can and trying to do better, but he that would deceive is apt to dislike it if he is watched. He will soon show what kind of a spirit he is ruled by, if we treat him like the word tells us; but if we do not watch him he can lead us to our hurt, and I do believe that is the hurt with the church at present, not doing the things he says do, but in doing the things that men say do. Think of this. Suppose an officer of the law transgresses would he be counted faithful by the law? No, he would be like us when Christ has saved us by his love and mercy, and then commanded us to keep his word in view and do what it commands, and then some one else tells us to do contrary to his word, and we heed the man, and not God, he then threatens us with death; for if ye live after the flesh ye shall die. So again what would you think of a child if his parents tell him to do a certain duty, and he goes and does contrary to what he was told to do, and you know it to be so. Again would you count that child faithful? No, he is unfaithful and will be sure to bring his parents to trouble sooner or later. So if the disobedience of the natural child is the cause of natural trouble, so does the disobedience of the spiritual child cause spiritual trouble. Suppose a father sends his servant out to feed his sheep, and to take care of the little weakly lambs, and that servant instead of taking the food the Master has prepared for his sheep, should take a basket of rocks or bricks and going to the herd throws the contents of the basket with all his might, and breaks their bones and bruises their flesh, would the lambs thrive on a continual application of this kind of food? He would nearly or quite destroy that flock. "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently and visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction, and keep yourselves unspotted from the world." This James says is pure religion. If so this will do to teach to the churches and will make for peace and love among brethren. Christ calls all that labor and are heavy-laden and says, I will give you rest. Then he says, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls." Matt. 11 : 27—29. Remember, he says, learn of him. So go to him to know what to do, and after you have learned do it, and not short of it: but if you will do what he commands you will be able to resist mystery Babylon's temptations, and her persecutions will not seem so hard for you to endure: for if you do those things he says there will be love enough with you to have good will for all men and them, and pray for them, even your enemies. There will be light enough in you to see the riches of his grace plain enough to praise him in your walk, and sing praise to him with your tongue. There will be faith enough in you to believe what he says is true. Without this your nature keeps you in the dark, and makes you believe if you give to the poor it is forever gone, but your obedience to him gives faith to believe it will be measured to you again double measure, and He will be your King of kings and your Lord of lords, and renew your hope of eternal life with the light of his spirit, revealing his promises to you. Now I ask and pray that the preachers be more careful what they preach, and that the churches be more careful whom they fellowship, and that members be more careful to prove all things, and hold fast that which is good, cease putting their trust in men, but trust in God and his Son Jesus. I have written this letter for two reasons only. First, I have been impressed to write about fifteen years, and I trust it will relieve my mind. Second, I trust it may prove a blessing to the church of God. I trust it is written in the spirit of Christ. Brethren, farewell. Your servant.

ELDER P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—When the LANDMARK arrived to-day my wife read the request of dear brother Bartley in regard to sister Ruth Taylor. I told her to send one dollar for purpose named. I felt it my duty. I had rather give $50 if I had it in such a cause as this than to pay one cent to send the gospel to the heathen that we hear so much about these times. We read that in the days of the Apostles that they had all things common and no man claimed ought that he had as his own or was his own—but all common. But they went from house to house and ate their bread with gladness of heart. Now in conclusion I will say that I pray that the Lord may put it in the hearts of his people to think more about the suffering brethren and sisters in the future than they have in the past. Remembering that Christ said while on earth, "The poor ye have always with you, &c." And again he says, "He that doeth it (i.e.) doeth alms to one of these little ones doth it unto me." While sister Ruth Taylor is a poor afflicted creature in that sense, from what I have read of her she is rich in grace, which is the greatest legacy that any poor worm of the dust can fall heir to. My desire is that she may be remembered the remainder of her sojourn here below, and at last received home to glory where pain and suffering will be known no more forever.

VIEWS REQUESTED.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR BROTHER:—Paul says in 1st. Cor. 9th chapter "Even so has the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." Does it have a two-fold meaning? If I have sown unto you spiritual things is it a great thing to reap your carnal things? What does this mean? We want your views on this duty; on going to preaching, visiting the fatherless and widows, giving to the poor, visiting the sick, and all the duties you can think of, and oblige
A. FRIEND.

Remarks:

Our friend has laid out a large field for us to plow in, nevertheless by the word of the Lord we plow in hope. Perhaps no writings of Paul nor any other in the Bible dwell more fully on preaching, or its objects and uses, than do these epistles to the Corinthians; and among other matters Paul here treats of the duties of those who hear or receive preaching, that is believers that are fed and profited by preaching.

It is ordained of God that they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel. What does this mean? While Paul declares what it means, a covetous Baptist also has his interpretation. One that does not want to give or minister of his carnal things, or worldly substance, to a gospel preacher puts a meaning on this Scripture according to the prevailing or leading spirit of his nature. For we interpret Scripture according to the spirit or power that is in us, whether it be good or evil. Such an one says, "the living that a gospel preacher is to have in preaching is the good feeling he has while preaching. That is enough for him. When I am hearing the gospel I do not hunger for natural food, nor does he while preaching. He has a better living than natural things. Preachers have a good time any how. The Lord takes care of them. I have to lose time or quit my labor to go and hear them preach, and no one gives me anything for that."

Is that what Paul means when he says, "if we have sown unto you in spiritual things (or preached the gospel to you) is it a great thing if we reap or receive your carnal things 1st Cor. 9: 11. Does this language need any explanation? None. Words could not make it plainer. First, if we have sown unto you &c. There is a sowing before there is a reaping. We notice that when one preaches a member or members of those that hear comes up to the preacher and says, you told my feelings to-day, come and see us again. That is all the reaping the preacher gets. What has been sown? I doubt very much if a hearer is profited by preaching who never yields or gives anything but words to the preacher, or if a hearer is indeed blessed who never gives anything to his preacher but words of praise. No, one except a vain preacher could live on them, and his living is all to the flesh.

God loves a cheerful giver. God loves a preacher who preaches, not for money, praise, or filthy lucre, but because he loves the truth. God loves a hearer who gives of a cheerful, ready mind of his carnal substance to the gospel preacher.

Some Baptists are this way. One of their dispositions is that if a traveling preacher comes along they will give him some money. This is not objected to. But here, a church has a pastor living in their midst who preaches regularly to them. They do not give him anything, or very little, if anything, yet he needs it as much or more than the traveling preacher. Here is a Baptist right near you in need. You do not help him. One that you have never seen appeals for help. You give to him. We do not condemn your giving to that one in need far off from you that you have never seen. But you should help your neighbor that is in need. You should help your pastor far more than you do any other preacher. That is your duty, and you are wrong if you do not. You ought to be ashamed to vote for a man to serve you as pastor that you feel under no obligation to help. Whenever Baptists give more freely of their carnal things to their pastors then they will have better times. Their pastors will then feel that the churches love them, and have some concern for them and appreciate their services. What poor evidence does a church give that she esteems her pastor that gives him nothing, or almost nothing for his labors. There is nothing that Baptists need reformation on much worse than this. Do not call a man to preach for you if you do not esteem him as good a preacher as the other preachers are, and then you will esteem him more highly for the work's sake. Do not call a preacher to serve you if you would rather hear any visiting preacher than to hear him. Do not call a pastor that you do not want to hear preach at every one of your meetings. We have no business of ordaining preachers that all or any of us do not love to hear. What a wrong is inflicted on the brethren at large by turning out one to preach that no one wants to hear, or that has to go to traveling among churches away from home to get a congregation.

A true gospel preacher will never beg. He will suffer before he will do that. He will not hint that he wants certain things. If you wait until a true preacher asks you for anything you are slow to feel your duty. If your own heart does not prompt you to give you are slow in your duty, and I do not know that the Lord is with you.

It is ORDAINED of God that they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel. They must first preach it, and those that are fed will help or minister unto the true preacher.

Baptists are too slow, or not careful enough, in maintaining good works. We talk but do not. We say be ye warmed, and be ye filled, but we do not give the things that warm and fill. We do not clothe the naked, nor feed the hungry. We know we are wrong in these matters. We are vain talkers. Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only deceiving your own selves. It is bad to deceive yourselves. You may think by much talk you make a good impression. Well, good talk is nice: but be ye also doers of the word.

To visit the fatherless and widow, the poor and needy in this world's goods, in their affliction, and to relieve them, and keep yourself unspotted from the world, or keep far from every evil work, is pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father.

When one unites with the church of Christ he promises to serve the Lord. This he does visibly in serving his brethren. You promise to keep your word, pay your debts if possible, owe no man any thing but to love one another. But you may owe in other ways than in money. You may owe a brother a grudge, or ill will, or malice. You should not owe any one any such a debt. The only debt you should never get through paying is to love one another. You should be prompt to attend your meetings, bear your part in church expenses, live right at home in your own family. You belong to the Lord and to one another. You should be forward to help the poor, visit the sick, relieve their necessities. Some people say they never have anything to spare to help others. Some people do not try hard to have anything in that way. Some feel no obligation to try to help others. What sort of Baptists are these? They do not labor much or even try to save, but spend their money for their own gratification, and make no self-denials, for the sake of their brethren. Some try to get rich in worldly goods and do not give.

The rule of the bible is to lay by as the Lord has prospered you and give to him that is in need—not to him that will not labor or work if he or she is able, but such as are really in need.

Some Baptists are lazy, or do not try to have anything, and when they get sick or old have to be helped. No one loves to help such Baptists as that. You ought to act in such a way that if you get in distress others will remember your former good conduct and willingly help you.

Do you ever pray in your family, or ever read the bible in your family?

To fear God and keep his commandments is the whole duty of man.

When our preachers tell their own members more of their own faults, and talk less about the faults of other denominations; and when our churches and individual members quit meddling with the affairs of others, when our preachers declare the whole counsel of God more fully, the doctrine, duties and experience, or everything taught in the Bible, and the brethren give more earnest heed to the things they hear, and earnestly try, all of us, preachers, deacons and all other members, to live and walk in the counsel of the Lord fully from love to God and to one another we will be blessed in the deed and prosper in Israel.

P. D. G.

ELD. P. D. GOLD, DEAR FRIEND:—Will you please give me your views, through the LAND MARK on the following Scripture, in Joshua 10: 12, 14. Joshua commanded the sun and moon to stand still. I am a little child, if one at all, and I hope that I am one, and not deceived, a friend to the holy cause, and I have taken the liberty to write to you for information on this Scripture.

Yours respectfully,

LILLIE MAY BURCHAM.

Remarks:

"Then spake Joshua to the Lord in the day when the Lord delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon in the valley of Ajalon.

And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of Jasher? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.

And there was no day like that before it or after it, that the Lord hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the Lord fought for Israel."

There was never a day like this one, neither before it or since then. So it is a most notable day, and hence it is proper to consider it. This fact has been the subject of much cavil among those that deny the divine control of all God's works.

As a literal fact we have no doubt but that the sun and moon did both stand still as declared.

Joshua was a great captain of Israel, and a bright leader. He had an honor never accorded to another man, namely that of leading the most wonderful nation on earth into the possession of the best country ever inhabited by man. This was under the especial leadership of Jesus the Captain of the Lord's Host of which Joshua was a type.

The especial vengeance of heaven was poured out on the enemies of Israel, and they were subdued under the leadership of Joshua. While during a great battle Israel was pursuing a great army of Amorites, retreating enemies, Joshua spake to the Lord, &c. You observe that he spake to the Lord, then the sun and moon stood still.

The Sun rules the day, and the moon rules the night. (See Gen. 1: 16-18.) If the sun rules the day as the Bible declares what would be the way to stop time, would it not be done by stopping the sun and moon? What would be the proper way to stop a buggy while running that was being drawn by a horse. It would be to stop the horse.

The sun governs or rules the day and the moon rules the night. Then stop the sun and moon and you have locked the day and night or made them stationary. The sun and moon have a motion and that controls the earth or day and night. When the sun and moon stop therefore day and night also stand still.

We cannot understand that such a man as Joshua under the inspiration of God speaking to the Lord to command the sun and moon to stand could have made a mistake. The fact of their obedience to him is such a proof of the correctness of his command that it has never been overthrown. What could scientific men who reject this miracle do in the way of staying the course of nature? With all their seeming knowledge of nature's secrets they cannot make one hair white or black. He who made the sun and moon hears the word of Joshua and they obey the power of Him who made and rules them.

A common notion is that the sun and moon have no motion. They rule the day and the night.

The command or word of Joshua was in truth and no mistake was made. The fruit or effect of his command proves that those under the inspiration of God could make no mistakes. When he orders the sun to stand still that stops all the motion of the universe, and there is rest while Israel is avenged of her enemies.

These enemies are the combined forces of the Amorites. Five Kings are confederate to resist the march of Israel. It is a most notable battle. It represents the war between the flesh and spirit. The old man (five members, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness which is idolatry) warring against the new man. But they cannot endure the light. In the gospel day or the shining of the Sun of righteousness in the king's realm this glorious light of Zion Israel marches victoriously against his enemies. These enemies have their strength in darkness or the night, but cannot stand in the day or before the sun. But the darkness or night is also under the power of the sun, for the sun and moon rule in conjunction. There is of course a sense in which there is opposition between day and night, and between the works of the day or light, and the darkness or the night. All the Lord's works shall praise him. In the spiritual sense all God's works are light, for in him is no darkness at all. Satan's works are represented by darkness. But God works every thing according to its nature. He works in his people both to will and to do of his good pleasure, and he rules the wicked according to their nature to accomplish his will. So far as they aim and purpose it is for the gratification of their own will or nature, or they mean it for evil, but God means it for good. It is the nature of a spider or a dog to bite, of a lion to tear and devour, of Satan to destroy, of the night to cover up evil, or furnish an opportunity to the wicked to do what they perhaps would be afraid to do in the light; but thinking their shameful deeds may be hid in the night they choose darkness for their perpetration. Thus they are allowed each to show its nature and work out that which is within.

But in the gospel God brings everything to the light. That is it is one day—not day and night, but sun and moon stand still, or it is the gospel day wherein the light makes manifest, and the enemies of Israel are slain. Thy sun shall no more go down, nor thy moon any more withdraw herself.

The sun represents Jesus or the gospel day, for he is the sun of righteousness arising with healing in his wings. The moon represents the law, and under the feet of the church supports her glorious standing as she is clothed with the sun. She is then fair to behold, and there is no darkness, fair as the moon and clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners, and the enemies of truth cannot stand before her, and the gospel day is therefore the utter confusion of all these enemies of Israel. For the Lord fights the battles of his people. There never has been before a day like this, nor ever will be again.

END OF VOLUME.

This issue closes the 26th volume of ZION'S LANDMARK.

For almost a quarter of a century the present Editor has been writing for its columns.

One that never changes is either so wise that in the beginning he foresees all that is proper to be done, and has the firmness to do this; or he is such an imbecile as never to be instructed any by the development of circumstances, or occurrence of events calling for changes.

This writer does not profess to be of the former, and would not like to be such as the latter. The doctrine advocated in this paper was declared long ago by Him who inspired holy men of old to write as they were moved. Therefore, the doctrine not being mine, this cannot be changed.

As to my own sentiments or judgment of matters occurring, so far as I am aware the same principles that guided me in the beginning of my editorial career guide me yet.

Times change as well as seasons and men, but principles never.

Having obtained mercy of the Lord I continue to this present time. By divine favor and clemency I am before you, and my desire is to extol that mercy and grace.

By the favor of my brethren, which has borne much from me, I still appear before you. Thanking you for past forbearance I hope for its continuance.

OBITUARIES.

ELDER BERNARD GREENWOOD.

Elder B. Greenwood was born in Weenscr, East Friesland, Kingdom (now Province) of Hanover, Germany, Sept. 24, 1827, and died in his 66 year, in Wilson, N. C., Sept. 1st, 1893. His parents were members of the Holland Reformed (Presbyterian State church), and had him sprinkled in infancy, and "confirmed" when 14 years of age, at which time he was put to the tailor's trade in his father's workshop, and attended a High School two hours a day, excepting Saturday and Sunday. Though dead in sin, and enamored of the world, and having his head full of a do and live system of religion, he thought himself a good christian, until at 16 years of age, he was awakened at midnight with a with the solemn and piercing words, "God is holy, what art thou?" For the first time seeing himself a hell-deserving sinner, he wept aloud, and to his brother, who was in bed with him and heard him and asked him if he was sick, he replied, "No, John, I am such an awful sinner." He betook himself to the reading of the Bible, and to prayers and tears and resolutions, but grew worse and worse until, when seeming about to sink in to endless perdition, he heard the crucified Saviour say to him: "Come unto me, thou weary and heavy laden, and I will give thee rest. I, even I, have blotted out all thy transgressions for my name's sake, and thy sins and thine iniquities will I remember no more." And his heart replied: "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee: wherefore, O Lord I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Then he rejoiced with unspeakable joy in God his Saviour. His parents and other relatives thought him greatly deluded, not being able to understand his case. At the age of 20 as required by the laws of his country, he entered the army. At 22 he married and stayed a year in the place (Nienburg) where his wife's parents resided, and then returned, with his wife and child, to Weeger. A few days afterwards he heard his father's foreman tell him of a poor, little sect of Free Grace Baptists just started in their town—humble, upright, and inoffensive, but despised and persecuted by all other religionists. He sought their acquaintance and society, and though warned by his father, that, if he joined them, his customers would desert him, and he would starve his family, he united with them, and was baptised in 1853, in the day-time—the other members having been baptised in the night-time for fear of their enemies, who would not only ridicule but also assault them. Then for several months he was indeed persecuted, and almost starved; but, in 1854, by the pecuniary assistance of his brother John, who was an infidel and then living in Cincinnati, Ohio, he and his wife emigrated to America, leaving their little boy most sorrowfully with his own parents, for want of money needed to bring him. Nearly three years afterwards the child was brought to his rejoicing parents by a younger brother of Elder Greenwood's. They lived in Cincinnati five months, and then moved to Clover, Clermont Co. O., where in 1856 they found a church of Old School or Primitive Baptists, who were like the Free Grace Baptists of Germany in both faith and practice. When lacking about two months of being 30 years old, (Luke 3: 23; "And Jesus himself began to be about 30 years of age,") was deeply impressed upon him in connection with the gospel ministry; and in August 1857, the Clover church licensed him to preach; and by the authority of the church at Lynchburg of which he was then a member, Elders Brooks and Hite ordained him to the ministry in 1857. Looking for sound and warm Baptists, and, at the same time for a place where he might support his family by working at his trade, he removed in 1860 to Charleston, W. Va.; in 1862 to Hillsboro, O.; in 1865 to Cincinnati, and then to Madison, Ind.; in 1866 to Evansville, Ind., (where he preached both in English and in German, and baptised several, and buried his only child, then nearly 16 years old); in 1869 to Corydon, Ind.; in 1871 to Columbus, Ind., (where he lived 8 years in worldly prosperity but in spiritual poverty); and in Jan. 1880 to Wilson, N. C., where (with the exception of about a year at La Grange, N. C.) he and his wife lived till the time of his death. He became a member and the pastor of Sandy Grove church, in Nash Co., N. C., and attended many church and Union and Associational Meetings, and made many preaching tours in North Carolina, Georgia and Texas, and visited at one time the Associations in North Eastern States.

Elder Greenwood was solemn and earnest in prayer and preaching, saw and proclaimed Jesus in every text, felt himself to be nothing but a wretched sinner saved by grace alone, went down in great depths and rose to great heights in his experience, and gave every particle of the glory of salvation to the Lord. Few men were as ready as he quote an appropriate passage of Scripture on every occasion in life. He had his failings, as all of us have; and he would have been one of the last persons in the world to claim perfection in the flesh.

After 8 months distressing illness of dropsy of the heart, during which he had to sit up in his chair most of the time, but manifested a spirit of humble child-like submission to the dealings of his Heavenly Father, he fell peacefully asleep in Jesus; and, after some touching and comforting words spoken to many friends gathered in his house by Elder G. T. Daniel, from John 11: 25, ("I am the resurrection and the life,") his remains were interred in Maplewood Cemetery, at Wilson, N. C., Sept. 2nd, 1893.

The Purpose of Zion's Landmark.

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of truth.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God and the Father, Jesus the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of Gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

The Subscription Price of Zion's Landmark.

For single subscribers $1.50 per year. The getter up of Club of eight subscribers, or a larger number, $1.50, each will receive the LANDMARK free for time club is made.

The subscribers in clubs need not all be at the same Post Office, and names can be sent from time to time in making up clubs: also in renewing clubs the same rule may be observed.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and the new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send the money due, if anything is due, and also state his postoffice.

Each subscriber keep his paper paid up if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should give the old and the new names.

If a paper has not been received please inform me of it. When you can, pay by Cash, Postal Note, Check, or Draft, or Registered Letter.

Persons to whom he has paid for the paper by noticing the enclosed card should be requested to act as agents.

Names of agents should be written plainly.

Remittances of P. O. orders, money, drafts, or Registered Letters, should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

SOME THOUGHTS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD :—

If a knowledge of the theological literature of past ages is necessary to spiritual health and comfort, and if it is with the finite mind that we understand spiritual things and have a knowledge of God, then our spiritual knowledge and comfort depend upon the strength of our intellectual powers, and upon our ability to read and study, and we have the one only in such degree as we possess and employ the other. This I do not believe. The child of God does not depend for spiritual comfort or benefit upon his natural strength of mind, nor upon his knowledge of what has been written in books, other than the Bible, whether good or bad. Though one may be much benefited by reading some writings of godly men, as thousands have been, yet another who could not read or has not read that same writing is not therefore deprived of that proportion of comfort. He may have been receiving his food, his benefit at the same time in speaking with some experienced person of these precious things of the Spirit. There is no writing of any uninspired man that is of such a character that the comfort or spiritual instruction of any living soul depends upon a knowledge of that.

A good gospel sermon preached to any of God's people at any time has done its work then. That sermon is not to be written down and used as a model and measure by which to try others in the future. Only Scriptural inspired language can be used in that way. The working of spiritual life will produce the proper sermon for to-day. There must be life in what we have. It must be given us to-day. The form of words used in conference of brethren or in a sermon yesterday, are not to be held as necessary to be used to-day. There is no form of words that are to be "held fast" thus but inspired words.

There may be a thousand trees in an orchard, and no two of exactly the same shape. Who would set up a certain tree as a model, and say, henceforth every tree must have just such branches as this, and just as many, and of just the same shape; we will allow no other tree to grow in any other shape! The answer would be, "Let the life decide the shape of the tree. What we want is the true life, and then the growth will be all right." "No Scripture is of any private interpretation." "If I have had a Scripture that has comforted me, I cannot say to you, "Unless that Scripture comes to you just as it did to me, and you have just the same thoughts of it, you are mistaken in supposing it has comforted you." It has been given to thousands of the Lord's people, under thousands of different circumstances for their comfort, and it will be given to thousands more, and no one of them can write out the circumstances and thoughts and feelings connected with his experience of it, and set it up as a test and measure by which all future experiences of it must be tried. Sunshine cannot be stored up to-day for use to-morrow. It must come from the sun every time its power is felt, not from the one upon whom it shined with power yesterday. So the word must come from Jesus directly every time to the one who must be benefitted by it, not from the one who felt its power yesterday. But while the circumstances differ, and the thoughts and feelings differ, in the infinite variety of cases, as the trees differ, and every leaf differs in shape, the life is the same in all, and light that falls upon all varieties of objects in so many different situations, is the same light and the same every day. One thing is true of life in the tree on the earth and in the "tree of righteousness:" it will teach every branch to bear the same kind of fruit. And one thing is true of light from the natural sun and from the Sun of righteousness: it will always produce its own effect directly, and will draw the attention of everything upon which it falls to itself. The tree is not warmed to-day by the light and heat that another has received yesterday and which that tree has now transmitted to this, nor will the tree that is now enlivened and invigorated by the sunshine ever be drawn toward any other tree by the power of that light, but will be drawn upward toward the sun. So no tree of righteousness will ever receive one ray of spiritual light from any other. No man of God will ever receive one particle of light or help of this kind from another. And if ever credit is given by one child of God to another for any of this vital light it is the mistaken notion of the carnal mind. For the spirit looks to God alone. The tree of righteousness receives the light always and everytime from the Sun of Righteousness; and not only that but it gives him the glory. It looks toward him, drawn by the power of that light that came with healing.

Why then, one may ask, should any one write or speak of what the Lord has shown him. First, I would answer, because he cannot help it. If he can help it and refrain, it would be about as well for him to do so. And if it is from an ambitious feeling (though there is nothing else in our flesh) that one writes the use of his writing is doubtful. But when the power of that life and light are felt there is a pressure upon one to express it. He must speak or write to be refreshed, like Elihu. And what is the object then, or the use of this speaking or writing? For mutual confirmation and comfort, these who write or speak are witnesses. What they say is testimony. The evidences and the testimony are not the reality, nor can they have the power of the reality. But how strengthening, refreshing, comforting to each other, this mutual testimony is. "Come all ye that fear God, and I will tell you what he hath done for my soul." Those that fear God love to hear that testimony, for it tells what they have felt. The enemy has greatly tried them with doubts as to whether the Lord has really done anything for their souls. Now they hear the very things they have felt, and are assured that this is the Lord's work.

It seems strange to me that any man of vital experience should be afraid that the church of God would fall into a habit of wrong interpretation of Scripture, unless they should be able to go back through some centuries of theological writings, and study what learned men of past ages have said. My own settled belief is that the more a child of God enters into this theological study, and an examination of the libraries of scriptural literature, the colder he will become, for he is getting further and further from the Sun, the center and source of all light and heat.

I do not in this disparage the learned authors, nor depreciate the true value of the writings of experienced men. But I do assert that the study of what men of God have written in the past is not the way the Lord has shown to be his way in teaching his people, in bringing them into the riches of his house, and in preparing his servants for usefulness in the church of God. Each one must have an experience of every truth that it is for him to know for himself; and it is by the inspired Scriptures, and not by the writings of any man, however sound and experimental, that the truth of this experience is to be tested. And every servant of God must come to the people with only that which has been commanded him of God; that which has been wrought in his own soul. The writings of others that he has read may have been of great benefit and comfort to him as witnessing to his experience, and confirming his soul; but they cannot add to his preparation for the work of the ministry. If he has gathered from any one of them, or from anything he has heard from men, any of that which he ministers, to that extent he is not a servant of God but a plagiarist. The man of God is thoroughly furnished unto all good works by the Scripture which is given by inspiration of God.

The Lord has kept his church so long in the world. He will still keep her. He will be the foreguard of his people and their reward. He will tell them his secret in the darkness, as he has always done, and they shall speak it in the light. When they turn to the right hand, or when they turn to the left, they shall hear a voice behind them saying, this is the way, walk ye in it. And when a servant comes from God to reprove, rebuke or exhort them, pointing out their errors, he will come, not with words of men, nor with the pages of theological science for them to study, but with the plain and simple word of God which they have seen and felt and heard and tasted in their experience, and will thus be at once commended unto their consciences in the sight of God.

SILAS H. DURAND.

ELDERS GOLD AND LESTER; Dear Editors, having awoke this morning at two o'clock while in a dream singing, I feel that the field; of thought is being explored so much in my mind, concerning the condition of the people of God or the Primitive church together with the whole of our state and national movements in conforming to fashion, that I cannot sleep any more to night, and I desire to pen down a few thoughts for the readers of the LANDMARK, as there are so many hundreds and perhaps thousands of them that I shall never see or speak to upon these matters of so much importance to the church of Christ. I had dreamed of being with Elder Samuel Arrington, a faithful minister of Mayo Baptist Association who passed away some 12 or 15 years ago. In his life he was very particular to observe the Old LANDMARKS., and follow in the footsteps of the fore-fathers in the transaction of all church and Associational business, and not to follow after the fashions of other people. Seeing the great departure as an eye witness myself this had given great concern, and inexpressible grief to me for several years. I had said often that if our fathers were raised to life again, and were to assemble with some churches and associations they would hardly recognize their own people. This aged and departed Elder stood by me this night in my dream, and told me that he could not enjoy setting in associations and churches as they are conducted now, because of so much fashion and oppression, meaning that all authority was in the hands of a few who exercise lordship, while others in church or counsel were not heard, or allowed to openly speak and give their light or views upon laws, rules or regulations to be adopted: consequently they were not free to represent the interest assigned them, but are oppressed. All now must be improved and shortened, or done by committee. How many committees has Christ or his apostles ordered to be held in the church, or even in the yearly counsel at Jerusalem. All matters pertaining to the government were considered by all in one body, (not some promoted and others oppressed.) Where is the Old way? Where is liberty, Where is even the full right of suffrage? Where is full unity? And to speak of this great government of state and United States: we elect men we deem faithful to represent us, and when they get to the legislative halls they are discouraged. (Why) because all bills to be offered must be considered by these important committees. A few men do all the business. It is just as they say. It is no wonder that men so responsible to their constituency are made sick and tired of such business assigned them. These things have increased from year to year: too much legislation by a few for the churches and associations to follow. Reader, does the church and association to which you belong transact business just as they did when you first knew them? Is even the voice of the church taken in the same way? No; but it is too droll and old fashioned to raise the hand. This may be changed to look better. This is just tradition any way. But stop, reader. Do we receive any of the ancient LANDMARKS that our fathers have set in any other way but traditionally? If we may remove or change one may we not with the same right change or even remove all of them? Customs of church are LANDMARKS to us. Remove them not. I now will conclude upon these things for the present, and turn to the close of my dream. Having thought upon the condition of the Primitive church collectively for a long while with a degree of sorrow for those things, my mind in the dream was called to meditate personally for myself over my own spiritual condition, when an old and familiar song that I often heard sung among Baptists when I was a boy, came into mind and I began to sing it.

When thou my righteous Judge shalt come,
To take thy ransomed people home,

Shall I among them stand?

I had begun singing the 2nd stanza and awoke with joy beaming in my very soul. I was singing aloud, and from that inward joy untold I hope this morning to inhabit and realize its fullness in heaven. Yours in hope,

E. M. BARNARD.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—From some cause unknown to myself, but known to God, the above subject has been impressed on my mind to write, but it seems to me it is too much for me, containing as it does, so much of importance to one who has been translated from darkness to the marvelous light of God's dear Son. If the impressions be of God I have no apologies to make, but if not then I wish to apologise for following an imperfect spirit. Let your light shine is a command of our blessed Lord and Saviour, and is addressed to those who have the light of life, to those in whose hearts God has shined and given them the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus, to them who are as a city set upon a hill, whose light cannot be hid, to them who have been born of God it is addressed as a command, showing how we should live in this world. Paul says I beseech you brethren to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye have been called with all lowliness and meekness, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, also to keep our bodies under, and our garments unspotted from the world. Brethren, are we doing this? I for one say we are not; for if we were there would not be so much wrangling, backbiting and trying to devour each other as is the case in some of the churches of the Saints. We are to let our light shine, not put it under a bushel, but on a candle stick that it may give light. Not visit the grog shops and drink with the drunken, and thus bury deep in the earth the talent to obscure the light, to make a spot on the garment, but stay away from such places that we may show to the world that we have been with Jesus, have been taught of him, and thus let our light shine. To my mind a bar-room is the devil's wallowing hole, a trap which he has set to entangle christians and we find this trap has a bait which is pleasing to the taste, so by one going in he is not looking at the trap but at the bait in the trap, and partakes of the bait and is caught, while if he had kept away he would not have been caught, and would have had a conscience void of offence which is now gnawing as a lion and consuming his joys which he would have enjoyed had he kept away, and would not have brought a reproach upon the cause as he has. The world is ever watching to see if an old Baptist will not step in one of these places so that they can make true the adage, "The hard shells are a people that love brandy." It has not been long since I had one to say to me that she saw one of our members go in to a bar-room, and said she, that she had more confidence in him that. Now how this sounds, how could I answer her knowing it was true? I would ask where was the light made manifest in his act? It was gone, was obliterated, was hurled to the back-ground while the old man went in to get a drink: which did him no good, and I had to bear the act or the reproach for him. So I say if we can not stay away from bar-rooms we ought to be dealt with, and if our churches were to act faithful they would deal with all such as frequent these places.

Brother Gold, what do you think of a Baptist who will in any way deal in or with an illicit distillery? I withhold my thoughts for fear some would say I intend to persecute, which I do not; but Paul says, we are to be subject to the powers that be: for they are ordained of God, and if that power says that we should pay ninety cents on the gallon, and we say it is too much, and make it without leave or license, do we do right? I say not, and all such as do should be reprov'd sharply, and if that will not do they should be at once dealt with. See Romans 13 chapt, and think for yourselves. What I have said on the above point I hope is of the spirit that prompts me, and that the Spirit of God. I feel to present a few more thoughts on the subject, and then come to a close. One is the carelessness in some to attend our meetings. Paul says, we ought not to neglect the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is. It seems that there were in Paul's days some that did forget the assembling of themselves together, and it holds good to this day, which is much to be regretted for if we wish to be blessed we should be faithful for unto such is the promise given. It seems to be common with some to stay away on our Saturday meeting, or rather go to some town and there engage in the festivities of the world, instead of going to preaching. Do they let their light shine before men? When we become so careless as to always follow the inclinations of the flesh what evidence have we, or do we manifest, that we are the children of light? If the light in thee be darkness how great is that darkness? I would to God that Primitive Baptists would live more to the honor and praise of their King, and keep out of such things as are forbidden by the word of God. I do not live as I wish too. My walk is perverse, my speech unseasoned with grace. But Oh! how I long to live in honor to my Lord and Master in all honesty and soberness. I will close by saying to Brethren everywhere, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; thus letting our light so shine before men that they seeing our good works may glorify our Father which is in heaven. May the God of all peace smile on us all, is the prayer of your unworthy brother, if one at all.

OUR PEOPLE IN TEXAS.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—Again I am at home, after a long summer tour of about two months in Texas, from which I was sadly called back by the sickness and death of my older Brother, near Rose Hill, Ill. who peacefully fell asleep in Jesus Sept. 1.

Then I attended the Sandy Creek (Ill.) Association with my wife, and greatly enjoyed hearing dear Elder Hassell in four very instructive sermons.

While in Texas I visited 26 churches, was present at 5 Associations, met with many hundreds of our people, many of our preachers, heard, much preaching and witnessed the reception of 27 believers into gospel and church fellowship, who came confessing their sins and testifying of their faith and hope in the Lord Jesus. The most of them came to us from the Arminian Baptists, being starved out there, three from the Methodists, and one from the Presbyterians. Besides these many others are being added to the church in Texas in different places, as brethren inform me.

In the main the church and ministry in Texas are sound in the gospel of Christ, as I believe, holding the faith of God's elect and continuing in the Apostles' doctrine and in fellowship, rejoicing in Christ, and discarding all human merit. They are much given to assembling together for gospel preaching, going long distances, taking their whole families in covered wagons, and this was cheering to me.

Wherever I went my testimony among them was gladly received by the entire brotherhood, the ministry included. And I found a sound and strong gospel ministry, many active and useful preachers. Some of them however are too much given to debating publicly with the champion preachers of one of the Arminian orders until their preaching is too combative, or too much in the line of controversy, as it seemed to me, instead of simply preaching the gospel of Christ.

The Baptists of Texas are given to hospitality, and they greatly endeared themselves to me by their love of and fellowship in the truth.

Yours in the love of Christ.

D. BARTLEY.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—By request I will give you my experience in religious matters, and also a sketch of my life before I tasted the love of God. I still feel unworthy, but I hope that the Lord is my shepherd. I have been a mourner ever since I was a child. I was raised by christian parents. My father and mother always taught me to tell the truth. I learned while quite small that if I had done very wrong I always escaped punishment by telling the truth; so I learned to love truth. My parents told me that God loved good children. I soon found that I was not good enough to please God. It filled my heart with trouble so that I was afraid to go to sleep at night fearing to never awake, and I knowing if not I would be lost. My mother has of often told me in the morning that she heard me praying in my sleep. My mind was thus wearied about six years. Often when with my companions who were enjoying themselves I could not see any pleasure in their sport. They would say to me what is the matter with you, thinking at times that I had been offended but not so, yet could not dare tell them what was the matter with me. Earthly pleasures afforded me no delight. In heavenly joys I had no share: so there was no pleasure at all for me. When 16 years of age I was attending meeting at the Two Mile Bridge church. There seemed to be many enjoying the meeting, but I could not enjoy myself. I had been at home quite a week from them still sad and unhappy, when one day it seems to me that there was nothing but death and destruction awaiting me. It was the darkest day of my life. I left the house in order to be alone. I walked down the path singing my Jesus I love thee, I know thou art mine. For the all the folly of sin I resign, and I had not gone but a short distance until the darkness fled. I praised God with a loud voice. My mother heard me and came to see what the matter was. When she saw me she ran to me praising God too. I felt at that time there was no more trouble for me. I had taken no notice of the difference in the churches, and had not noticed that there was so much difference in their belief. I joined the church called the Christain Bride: After I settled my mind and took notice of the belief of the church it did not agree with my mind. In about two years the church was scattered, and I remained out of a home in any church for near 10 years, although I was in no church for so long I went to all meetings in my reach. I was married at the age of 18 in the year 1883. In a short time after my marriage my husband was taken ill with rheumatism. Then my trouble had first began. I became almost discouraged. Some times I would neglect my duties so long that I would think that I was to be lost after all. Then I would pray and find relief. I never can forget how one time I had neglected my duty for some time. I began to think that the Lord did not hear my prayers, and what was the use to pray: so I went on for some time without trying to pray. At last I became afflicted in my limb so that I could scarcely walk. I would worry around the best I could, but did not pray. I had no heart to pray. At last one evening I wished to get some eggs out of a pile of brush under a bank. I first thought if I get in there can I get out? There is no one near to help me. At last I thought if I can get in such a place I know I can get out, so I went on. I found it very easy to get in the brush, but when I went to get out I could not move. I could not raise myself up from where I was. I looked and listened for some one to help me out, but there was no one near. After all earthly hope had failed my heart sank within me. I cried Lord, have mercy on me, and the Lord heard me, for I straightway walked out with out even a single pain. So I found that there is need of prayer. Jesus waits to be gracious and he will hear those who put their trust in him. In April 1891 my husband was called to go, his death gave me much sorrow, leaving me the mother of 4 little helpless children. I find it very hard to obtain a support for the little family, but by help is of God: we have good health and have not suffered for food. I began to attend meeting at the Primitive Baptist church. There I found pleasure. I never knew before that I was a Primitive Baptist in belief. I never before found any one that could tell my mind. I had neglected my duty by staying out of the church that I felt unworthy to join, for sometime feeling that I was in a very dark place, and would always think am I fit, or am I not? I dreamed one night that I was in a very dark place, and logs and stumps were in my way. The place seemed strange to me. At last a light appeared a short distance from me, and there was some one in the light.

I went nearer the light and saw it was brother T. S. Moss, so I asked him if he could tell me the way out of that dark place. He said, yes, I am well acquainted with this dark place, and took my arm and led me to the light. In two months after this brother Moss took me by the arm and led me down into the water, and baptized me. I feel that he led me out of that dark place which I dreamed of.

I have enjoyed myself better since joining the Primitive Baptist church than I ever enjoyed myself in my life, finding a happy home. The church seems to prosper very much. My desire is for the prayers of all of God's people, for I am very weak, but hope when done with the troubles of this world that I will be found worthy, through Jesus of an inheritance in a better world than this where there will then be no sickness, sorrow, pain nor death in that bright world, where parting is no more. I hope to meet you all dear brethren and sisters in that bright world, although we may never see each other here on earth we will know each other there. None of us know when the time is that we must give up this mortal dwelling, but if we live by Jesus we need not fear death. Sometimes if I knew I must die, I would only say, "The Lord's will be done," while at other times I think if I was called away it would be hard to say his will be done, feeling so unworthy that I think I would be counted an unworthy servant.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD AND LESTER:—I have been requested to write my experience of grace and have it published in the LANDMARK although I feel unworthy and dependent on the Lord for understanding. I have been troubled over my soul for 20 years or more, and never shall forget the time I first saw I was a sinner, for I thought death was my portion, and that hell was my doom, and would beg to the Lord to save me a poor lost sinner, feeling that if I go to hell I will go begging the Lord for mercy. I saw I could do nothing to save myself, for it seemed I had never done a good deed in my life: so if left to me I was forever lost. I would walk the yard and house and cry, and all I could say was Lord be merciful to me a sinner.

I would look on the ants crawling and feel that I would gladly exchange with them, for I knew they were better off than I.

I would beg to the Lord to take such feelings off of me, and let me be as I once had been, but it seemed to impress upon me harder. I felt like I did not have a friend in the world, that my dear husband hated me, and I have often asked him if did not hate me. He would say no, Luly, why you must be going crazy, and the worst of all I felt that the Lord had forsaken me. Oh! the trouble I have seen I can't tell, but while in this low down state these comfortable words came to me one day while crying to the Lord for mercy something it seemed spoke to me and said, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love, and with loving kindness have I drawn thee." Oh! how good it made me feel. I can't express, but I know I was trying to praise the Lord for his love to me, and thought I would try and do better, and live nearer to him the rest of my days, for I felt like they could not be but few, and this I do know, if I know anything, that there has been a change in me, and that I was not the one to make that change, nor had anything to do with it: for if I had I should have remained as I was. The things I once hated I now love, I had this dream during those troubles. I dreamed I went to the north door of my house and looked out, and in the North I saw judgment, the blackest smoke I ever saw, and above that smoke was the prettiest road which glittered like gold, and in that road was Christ before riding the prettiest horse I ever saw, and the road was full of angels riding horses behind him, and something spoke to me and said that was charity, so I turned and went to the other door which was south, and thought I would see how it looked out that way, and I saw something like a small wagon body full of angels, and that shined and glittered like gold, and among the angels were my two little girls that have been dead 12 years, and are in heaven I hope, and they were singing these words, and beckoning their hands toward me. "God is calling his angels home. And in among them you are; one," and I awoke. It was a dream, but oh! how good I felt, like I loved every body, and wanted and tried to praise the Lord with all my heart, and after this I had a love for God's people more and more. The love seemed to grow stronger and stronger towards them, but Oh, I would think how can they love me so full of sin as I feel to be. I have tried to pray when I felt like praying and felt like I wanted to be a christian above all things. I had an impression to go to the church, but would feel like my hope was so little I would throw it by, but I found I could not and be satisfied, so the 1st. Saturday in Setember I went, for I felt like I could not stay away any longer; but could not talk much, and to my surprise was received, and baptised the next day. I felt so good when brother Farmer gave me his hand to go down in the water. I thought I never could sin any more; but I have many doubts now: but my little hope gives me joy at times.

I thought I would not write this but feel constrained to do so.

Your sister in Christ I hope, LOUVENIA COKER.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I have oftentimes had the impression to write to the household of faith, to them that believe in God and God alone. Oh how it makes me rejoice to feel that my heart's desire is to worship him in Spirit and in truth, and to give him all the praise, glory and honor while on this earth, though I feel that I have sinned, and done many things that I ought not to have done, and oft times am almost ready to complain and think my lot is hard, forgetting for the moment that our blessed Saviour had not where to lay his head, but he became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief to redeem his people from endless woe; and the powers of Satan cannot prevail against it. Oh glorious truth, happy thought. I believe there is no condition in which God's dear people can be placed, or are found, but Jesus the precious Saviour is found ever near them to guide them in every time of need. Yes, dear brethren and sisters, satan may arise and tempt us, and lead us astray; but I am sure if we are of the elect he cannot lead us astray any farther than the blessed Savior sees fit to let him; though he leaves us awhile to be tempted, yet he will come in every time of need and reveal his lovely face which is more than all the world to me. Oh how precious he was when we were away down in that horrible pit and no one to help us and no way to get out. When Jesus comes with his outstretched arms, and lifts us out and stands us on that solid rock which is Christ Jesus. Tho' at times I feel cast down, and feel that I am as prone to sin as the sparks are to fly upward, and when I would do good evil is present with me, and at times feel that wife, children, mother, brothers, sisters and friends have all forsaken me, and have doubts and fears that I am not one of God's elect, yet blessed be his holy name, when I feel so cast down there comes a still small voice into my poor heart, saying, "Bear it with patience, I will not forsake thee. I love thee with an unchanging love." Are thou not willing to bear these light trials and troubles for one that has loved thee and called thee, and has died to set thee free! Then I can only rejoice and say, yes, dear Lord, send such troubles and trials as Thou seest I stand in need of, that I may love thee more and serve thee better while on earth I stay. Though I feel my stay on earth will not be long, but my desire is that my remnant of days may be spent to his praise, I feel to be the worst of sinners, and if saved at all it is through the love and mercy of Christ, our Saviour, and nothing that I have done or ever will do. Right here, I will tell you I believe in works, but not to work to try to get to heaven, but to work out what the Spirit within tells us to do, and nothing more; for by grace are ye saved through faith and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God: not of works lest any man should boast, for we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Eph. 2: 8, 10; and thus give God all the glory and praise, for he bled and died to save our poor sinful hearts, and gave us clothes to wear and food to eat, and quickened us when dead that we might hear his precious gospel and understand, which is Jesus and him crucified. Then oh then is that not enough to praise him every day of our lives. "I am persuaded that neither life, nor death, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor heights, nor depths, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Rom. 8: 38 39.

STEPHEN CRAFT.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I write to many of our brethren, sisters and friends through ZION'S LANDMARK, as I promised to let them hear from me when I returned from the several associations I attended in the eastern portion of North Carolina, to wit: Little River, Eno, Contentnea, White Oak, and Black Creek. I think I can say of a truth that I was glad that I was there at all of those meetings, and all others we had during the six weeks of my tour. I visited no place of worship with the Baptists that I do not want to meet them again. Our meetings were pleasant, our exercise and parting were lovely, so much so that we can look back in praise to him that blessed us so much, and say with David, "Bless the Lord Oh my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name:" also he said again, "Oh that men would praise the Lord, for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men." I feel like I love peace with God and man. There was a time in my life that I felt that God was angry with me, and I was not able with all my prayers and cries to reconcile him. I was too vile a sinner in that condition. I felt that I should die and eternal torment was my doom, and that God was just and hence I was condemned: but these words came into my mind from some source, "To you this day a Saviour is born," and all Heaven rejoiced, and there was a peaceful feeling of rejoicing in the Lord I hope I cannot forget, and such love for him and his people that the thought is sweet to me, and when I hear of anything among his people that is calculated to disturb our peace, my mind runs back to these things in the way I hope I can return to my first love, in which I so much delight, that I never take any part in confusion if I can reasonably stay out of it. I have been trying to serve churches since 1870 in my weak way, and there is not a man or woman that is or has been in the Primitive Baptist church anywhere but what I can now meet and shake hands with them in friendship, and I feel glad that it is so, for I feel so much better in a good humor that I feel perhaps others do too. I find at this time some trouble in Eastern N. C., upon the subject of feet-washing. It has got to that that fellowship is lost, and both parties say publicly and privately that they do not make feet-washing a test of fellowship. Some think perhaps to wash at the time of each communion, others think once in each year as their fathers did is right, so they practice that way; but we cannot find that the apostolic churches follow it as church practice. The Apostle refers to the widow to be taken care of by the church that she washed the saints' feet in connection with the household duties, and nothing more. This being our church authority we think it best not to devour each other upon this subject. Christ did wash his Disciples' feet, and gave the example very clear, but as he did not say to them that you should wash each others feet after each supper, we do not think that we should try to force it, or not fellowship our brethren that differ with us upon this subject. My feeling and practice is this and has been satisfactory so far as I know. The churches I serve are blessed with peace generally, and some increase. When any of the five churches wish to engage in washing each others feet, they make appointment and prepare for it, and I serve them the best I can. If communion season comes on and they do not arrange for feet-washing I serve them also.

When I meet with churches at those seasons who never engage in washing feet I serve them. If our church members visit other churches and do not engage in washing feet we have no charge against them. If any member or members wash, or do not wash, we feel like they have the privilege of following the dictates of their conscience which we cannot control, and if we try by dictating to them what they should do we see no spirit of feet-washing in it. My feelings are, and my admonitions, to let all wash feet when and where, and just as often as they wish, and let them allow others the same privilege of meeting as they feel. As preachers have the name of starting these difficulties perhaps we would do well not to assume too much of the priestly power as dictators, and be servants, as we should be. I do not feel that I have the right to say to any church, if you do not follow my orders or teaching I will not commune with you. This appears to be lording it over our brethren. Then let us as servants of Christ leave off the practice of strife and confusion, admonish our brethren to live together in peace and not be biting and devouring each other, remembering that the Lord is not the author of confusion but of peace. Then let all lay down contention upon those points that cause trouble and never can bring us any thing better: a lifetime trouble is poor pay for our labor. Let us work for something better.

As I have written much more than I intended I will close by asking the brethren to bear with my weakness. If any have a word of comfort would be glad to hear it as we are commanded to attend to things which make for peace, things wherewith we may edify one another.

Love to all,

JAS. A. BURCH.

DEAR BRETHREN GOLD AND LESTER:—The church of God seems to be upon a very sure foundation, being with the glory of God the highest object of the trinity in eternity. "When he established the heavens Christ was there." "I have loved thee with an everlasting love," before he settled the hills, or ever the earth was made there, the head was and so the body, for it was necessary to the well being of one that the other should exist also. So remote is the antiquity of the church that no tongue nor tradition can tell. The pen of the historian fails to state, no human mind can locate the time when she first began, or describe the unknown period when she was first beloved. The first traces we have of her existence in earthen vessels was in Adam and Eve. Both of them were sinners, and were made sensible of it, were both also figurative, Adam of the head, Eve of the body: for she lived in Adam as a part of his body before her separation from his side. So the church lived in Christ before its militant career. Her presence with or in the side of Adam was not of her accord, nor her separation even by her consent; so the family of God are not so by their effort or consent: "You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." The church appears more vivid in Abel where persecution and martyrdom set in because of righteousness. Thence up through the ages we have a succession of unerring Landmarks guiding God's weary pilgrims through an unholy wilderness like a sure star directing them to the coming of their head and captain whose blood secures for all the train of these a fair peaceful heaven of everlasting rest.

"Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Brethren let us take heed, lest we should forget our first love, and to satisfy the lust of this old, dangerous, sinful, corrupt flesh should try to turn loose some of the above named gates. Could we see that at such time we hurt the feelings of God's little children to satisfy our flesh by desires we are opening one of hell's flood-gates upon them, and though the gates of hell shall not prevail yet we are guilty as though they should. We surely would be more careful. She has a form of government of which God alone is sovereign, no other has a right to lord it over her. She is a city that shall not be left to other people, but shall stand forever, a city not forsaken, a city set upon a hill that cannot be hid, the Eternal God being her refuge. Blessings be upon all God's children. Pray for us. J. F. MILLS.

ONES JUDGMENT.

One man may say, my judgment is weak and does not influence any one else except myself. But the fact is a man's judgment controls himself however weak or incorrect it may be. A man follows his own judgment good or bad.

A man's judgment is made up and determined or cast by the character of his mind and inclinations. For instance, a lawyer sets out with the intention of giving his full service to his client, and very readily interprets his oath, interest and duty to be that he shall do every thing possible for his client, using all his learning and ability as a speaker and all the quibbles and technicalities of the profession for the benefit of his client. It is very easy for him to slide into this view of the matter, because he is the more apt thus to serve and please his client and also gain other clients, for the more successful he is the more others will demand his services, and that will increase his profits and swell his fame. So here are two powerful motives that control him—namely gain and reputation.

The selfish nature of man inclines him to think well of those that think well of him, and to believe that those he thinks most of are the best people in the country. Hence a lawyer thinks that a client that desires his services is a good man. He will therefore easily persuade himself that his client is innocent. Lawyers are apt to think therefore from this treacherous self interest that unconsciously warps their judgment that THEIR clients are good men, and that the clients they are against are bad men—that their own clients are seeking justice, or are accused—while the opposing ones or the accusers are the wrong ones. It is so easy for an able, shrewd lawyer to persuade himself that his client is innocent. He forms that judgment of him, and hence he will exert himself to the utmost to establish the innocence of his client who is accused, or of showing that his client has a just claim to all that he is demanding. Thus his own judgment has deceived him, for every man who places himself within the scope and range of temptations of this sort, such as defending a man guilty of crime, or failing to do his duty, or that makes unlawful demands on another, will be snared and taken in the meshes of that net.

A man has no safe-guard for his conscience and judgment who lends himself to the service of men that aim to do wrong things, or that defend those guilty of wrong.

When a man's motives are to do right fully unfettered by any reward his judgment is clearer and more correct.

Such is the constitution of a man's mind that he cannot act as a professional in a line of conduct that defends wrong-doers, or aids them, without his judgment being warped. Such is the weakness of man's mind that it requires a single purpose to do right and preserve his judgment.

Nor can a man who strays into dark and questionable ground possibly measure the extent of his own departure from the line of a pure and unbiased judgment. A gift perverts the judgment. A reward will have its measure of influence over a man's judgment. A fee will fully compel a lawyer to do his utmost for a client that he would say is innocent, however guilty an unbiased mind would pronounce him.

This perversion of judgment misleads wherever it exists. A preacher may become infatuated with some dogma or creed, and this will cause him to side always with his own preconceived opinions even though they have no appearance of truth. A religious debater will soon have his mind filled with exposing the notions of a combatant, and hardly see any one else, and during his sermon he will be answering his positions, and demolishing them, for few speakers of this sort will set up a stouter antagonist than they are able to handle and overthrow. So instead of the milk and meat of the sincere word he gives us vexed questions or bones of contention, or an illustration of his ability to overthrow his adversary, and his skill in polemics.

This preacher's judgment is warped or blinded by his carnal desire to overthrow an adversary. But this is not the true object of preaching the gospel of Christ Jesus our Lord. To feed the flock of God, which he has purchased with his own blood, is an aim of preaching the gospel that should never be lost sight of.

To be prepared for this presupposes a heavenly call and qualification from God. This gives a sound mind or the best judgment, and he that is blessed with it walks in the light of God's countenance. God gives his people a sound mind, a single eye, a discerning heart and willing footsteps to follow Jesus.

One in dealing in a disciplinary sense with his brethren must have the Spirit of the truth, and that always includes the love of the brethren. A man who hates his brother or strives for the mastery in vain would claim that he is faithful to God's word. One cannot love God nor his word that hates his brother. If a man therefore hates his brother we may know that his judgment is blinded. Nothing perhaps will more pervert one's judgment than hatred to a brother. Anger rests or dwells in the bosom of fools, and they make no effort to cast it out, but give it full quarter. When anger rules there can be no good judgment.

A church cannot deal with a member who is in transgression unless she mourns or laments his conduct, and feels the grief of it, for if she is prompted by natural revenge her judgment is blinded.

If the judgment or mind of the Lord is in a man or a church then they are prepared to act righteously in matters claiming their attention. When the mind or judgment of the Lord is in men then they execute the will of God here in earth which is always right.

VOLUME XXVII.

We again cast forth. In entering upon another year of our career we know nothing of the future. But suppose we did would that change it all? No, in no wise. For what is foreknown as coming to pass could not be changed by man's being informed of it. What is appointed will certainly be fulfilled, however much men may fight against it. That which is appointed of God shall come to pass. There is one thing of which we have comfortable assurance and that is that the doctrine advocated in this paper is right and therefore will stand, and hence our labor, if we labor in the Lord, is not in vain. With encouragement therefore, we enter upon this, another year of our labor of love, for we love this doctrine and the people that believe it, and this love works no ill to his neighbor. We labor therefore, willingly hoping it is not in vain in the Lord. Casting bread on the waters, expecting that it may be gathered up after many days, is hopeful labor. May the readers of the LANDMARK be blessed with the bounty of the Lord's presence and favor. When our labors on earth are ended may we be received into the presence of the Lord where there is peace forever more. For in this world we have tribulation and sorrow, and our sorrow increases. If it is the good pleasure of God to gather us all home, after the sorrowful days of this earthly life are consumed, it will all be well with us.

P. D. G.

After many months of silence, as to writing, I am privileged to say that at present my health is much restored, and I trust I shall soon be entirely well, or as much so as it has been my lot hitherto to be. My mind for some time has not inclined much to writing, but has been as usual in speaking. I hope in the future to write more, not that I feel that what I may say will be to much profit, yet so long as my name is associated with our dear brother Gold in the LANDMARK, I shall feel that I am expected to say something to our many readers upon the great and ever precious theme of the religion of our Lord and his dear people. Not that I write simply because I might be expected so to do, but because it is a privilege, and when we have a mind, a pleasure to express, though feebly, to the household of a common faith, such thoughts as an exercise in the things which accompany salvation may now and then produce. When we are given a thought of the great goodness and never ceasing mercies of our covenant-keeping Redeemer, we so often find comfort in presenting it for the consideration of others, we may think for the moment that we simply want to relieve our minds for the comfort there is in doing so, but that seems rather selfish. Again we may form a conclusion that we are burdened by this thought, and we write or speak merely to relieve our mind, but that is not a very liberal view to take of it. We are entirely selfish in this conclusion. Again, we conclude this is so instructive and comforting to us we want to give it to others with a desire that they may be like us benefitted thereby, but this seems rather fraught with conceit, as if others who know more than we do and who are better than we are could appreciate those things so needful to us and so much more than we—who are so unworthy deserve. No I cannot instruct them with this. It meets my case but they are so far ahead of me in knowledge, this that I esteem so highly and which is to me all and in all is not sufficient to attract the attention of such good people. I will keep it unto myself and enjoy it. Why do we write then? Why do we preach? Why do we go to the church and tell the people of God that which we have seen and heard and handled of the word which is our life? We write because we have a mind to, an impression, a drawing out of mind, a desire to communicate to and enter into correspondence with those whom we love in the Lord for the truth's sake; that there may be through such medium consolation ministered according to the mutual faith of each. We preach because we are called and sent under commandment, by the great Captain of our salvation, with a message to deliver to his people, to feed the sheep and lambs, to minister, to edify, to comfort, console, build up, establish, confirm and perfect the saints in the belief of the truth as it is revealed in and to them according to the revelation of Christ in them the hope of glory, that their fellowship may be with us, and with the Apostles, and truly theirs was with the Father, and with His son Jesus Christ.

We go to the church and tell what we hope the Lord has done for us that we may, in our feeble way, acknowledge our faith in Christ, our hope in His resurrection and our love for his people, that we may have, if possible, their fellowship, love, peace, communion and tender regard. As the infant is inclined to nestle close to its mother's heart and partake of the fond and abiding assurances of the most affectionate and endearing solicitude of which her life and being are capable, so the child of God longs to come into the midst of the church and humbly sit at the feet of Jesus in heavenlies in him, that the pulsations of that life which it sees in the church may send forth its blessed influence to quiet fears and anxieties, remove doubts, give consolation and peace, to impart evidences of mutual faith, hope, love and fellowship, and that the solicitude of the church may be assured, and the comforts of a home with loved ones abound. This is but a feeble attempt to describe these things, yet no doubt it is no less so than the seeming ability of many a trembling child of God to enter into that which is most earnestly desired, the fellowship of the saints of God. What an indescribable and blessed privilege it is to be given a home in the heart and affection of the children of God. And yet how unworthy am I of such a favor, sinful and unfit as I feel myself to be. I cannot regret having been received among them, nor of having been baptized. Whether I have in these twenty years been of any benefit to the church I cannot say, but I feel assured it has been of great benefit to me. I know the Lord has spoken good concerning his people, and that they have done me good.

It is good for all who love the Lord and his people to be identified with them and follow him.

P. G. L.

A MANIFEST DIFFERENCE.

"If the Lord have stirred thee up against me, let him accept an offering: but if they be the children of men cursed be they before the Lord; for they have driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, go serve other gods:" 1st Sam. 26: 19.

This scripture, as well as many others, shows the difference between the works of the Lord which are always righteous, and the works of wicked men which the Lord does not approve.

Saul is pursuing David to destroy him. David is fleeing to avoid Saul's presence and escape death. Saul pretends that David is his enemy and plotting his death. David has an opportunity to slay Saul, yet he wholly refuses to do so, and on the occasion of his magnanimous conduct in sparing Saul's life, when every plea of self-defense according to man's view of things would have justified him in taking Saul's life, he reproves Saul by raising the important question, "now, therefore, I pray thee, let my Lord the King hear the words of his servant. If the Lord have stirred thee up against me, let him accept an offering." That would prove that you are serving the Lord. If he has moved you to this he will hear you, or receive your offering when you make it. The Lord had not stirred Saul to kill David. The Lord PREVENTED Saul from killing him. An evil spirit from the Lord—not the Spirit of the Lord, was stirring Saul. His jealousy, envy, rage and hate, or this evil spirit of men, was driving him along. This evil spirit was cursed before the Lord, and Saul was cursed in being led by it. It was so cruel it had driven David a righteous man out of Israel saying to him, go serve other gods. This cruel spirit often gets among God's people and causes much distress, but woe be to the man by whom the offense cometh. It was woe to Saul for he fell in shame, and death overtook him in his confusion.

In the history of Israel an attentive or instructed reader will see the difference clearly set forth between the Lord's works and the works of the ungodly, and how that God makes the wrath of man to praise him. It is not wise to hold that a pure fountain can send forth bitter water, that wickedness can proceed from God, for according to the proverb of the ancients David says, wickedness proceeds from the wicked. (1st. Sam. 24: 13), nor is it wise to hold that wicked men do anything but wickedness. It is equally unwise to hold that the wicked acts of the wicked could ever frustrate or defeat the purpose of God. But it is safe to hold that the wisdom of God is so high and far above the wisdom from beneath that it causes the acts of even the wicked to subserve the purpose of God so that he is glorified in all things.

P. D. G.

"WHAT IS REGENERATION?"

Brother B. C. Headrick has a communication in last issue of the LANDMARK I wish to notice somewhat, especially in two points.

1st. What is regeneration? Answer (a) it is not RESTORATION. According to his view, if I understand him, it is restoring man to the image or likeness of God he possessed before his transgression. This would be a RESTORATION or placing him back where he was originally. To place one where he was before is to RESTORE HIM. This is not regeneration.

(b). Regeneration is not being born OVER which would be reformation of the old or first birth so that the first birth would disappear, but it is being born again of another origin. One's first birth is of the flesh. When one is born again he is not born of the flesh, but born of God or born from above. Adam was the creature of God—not his son. Nor was he holy in his first creation, nor was he spiritual. He was a natural man of the earth earthly: 1st Cor. 15: 46. Regeneration is altogether a new order of birth as high above the estate of man in his creation or estate in Eden as the substance is above the type, or as light is above shadow, as reality surpasses image, or as Christ is above Adam. In the regeneration Christ makes all things new. In the regeneration Christ suffered under the law and satisfied and magnified it, is raised from the dead and sits upon his throne of glory where there is no sin, nor death, but everlasting holiness and joy. Here all things are new. They that follow him shall inherit everlasting life. This was never in Adam, nor was it obtainable in that way. In Adam's creation there was nothing given him through or because of birth. But those born of God, or in the regeneration inherit of God as his children everlasting life which is everlasting holiness and spirituality.

2nd. WHAT is born again? It is not any special part of the man, such as his soul, or spirit, or body. But it is the MAN that is born again. Except a MAN be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God. Soul embraces the entire

man. When God breathed into Adam the breath of life man became a living soul. Eight souls were in the Ark. In this sense soul includes the man. True there is a distinction between soul, body and spirit. But it is the man that is quickened. You (not your soul) hath he quickened. Blessed be God who hath begotten us (not our souls) again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Salvation embraces the whole man. If the soul were born again and made holy how could we ever sin again or do wrong, for the soul includes the mind, will, &c. We get mad, talk wrong, think wrong, and do wrong. This we could not do without the concurrence of the soul or some of its powers.

Then by regeneration a new life (Christ) is revealed by the Spirit of God in the man, not changing any special part of the man into holiness, but changing the standing of the man, bringing him out from under the law into the gospel, from works to grace, so that we are changed from the glory of the law to the glory of the gospel, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his. The new man is the revelation of Jesus Christ in us the hope of glory, and we are manifested as children of God by new affections that are spiritual, or that hate sin and love God and his children; yet there is the old man with a corrupt mind, nature, lusts that war against the soul, or the new man, The Christian then has in the elements of his earthly nature every corruption, and as born of God the Kingdom of Heaven dwells in the new or hidden man of the heart. The more we write of this mystery the more the mystery appears, and the greater, for we can never explain a mystery.

DID THEY HEAR THE VOICE ?

Elder R. M. Mabry requests me to notice the discrepancy, or that which seems to be, between Acts 9 and 7 and 22 and 9.

In the 9th chapter and 7th verse it reads, "And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man." Whereas in the 22d chapter and 9th verse it reads: "And they that were with me saw indeed the light and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me."

The question is, did those who were with Paul hear the voice, or did they not? In the first instance the writer of the Acts, who is believed generally to be Luke, is giving an account of the incident, while in the second instance Paul is giving it himself in his defence before the multitude. It would seem reasonable to suppose that Paul's account is correct, but even this account was recorded also by Luke in the general report of the Acts of the Apostles. While supposing in regard to the matter it does not seem reasonable that the recorder would contradict himself on a subject which seems to be of some importance, from the fact that whether those with Paul did or did not see the light or hear the voice, the facts as touching Paul would have been the same had reference to those with him been omitted. But the fact that reference to them in regard to seeing the light and hearing, and yet not hearing, the voice, is thrown in, there is importance attached to it and we must understand it without the idea of contradiction on the part of the writer. It is possible that a better form of translation might have been rendered, but we will not presume upon that point.

My judgment is that both of these declarations are substantially correct. When Christ was here in the flesh he healed natural diseases and forgave sins. He raised, or brought forth the dead again to natural life, and he quickened the dead and raised them up and bro't them into the realization of spiritual life, even in himself, as he is the resurrection and the life. Those round about heard the voice of Jesus and saw Lazarus come forth, but they did not hear as Lazarus heard, nor did they come forth as he did. Father, glorify thy name. Then there came a voice from heaven saying, "I have both glorified it and will glorify it again. The people therefore that stood by and heard it said that it thundered, others said, an angel spoke to him." John 12: 28, 29. On this occasion there were those who heard the voice, but did not understand who it was that spake or what was said. So the men who were with Paul saw the light and heard the voice, but they did not know whence it came, who it was that spake, nor what was said, but Paul receiving the life saw the light, heard the voice and knew who it was that spake unto him in the sense of eternal life, light and salvation in a personal or individual revelation of Jesus in his power and salvation, and a personal, individual, special call of Saul to a saving knowledge of Christ, his electing love, distinguishing grace and unconditional salvation.

There is a sense in which men see and do not perceive, and hear and do not understand. Acts. 28: 26. These men saw the light, but did not perceive what manner of light it was, they heard the voice but did not understand who it was that spake, nor what was said. There was no salvation in these things for them, and yet they were not altogether unaware of what was being done, or that some strange and wonderful light was shining, some wonderful voice was heard, and a marvellous work was being done. These things were specially and individually for Saul, who saw, perceived, heard and understood.

While these men do not seem to have been benefitted as was Saul by these things, yet they are in some degree witnesses of what Saul saw and heard. The devils knew Christ and gave testimony that he was the Holy One of God, and yet they were not saved, but the man in whom they were was saved. Wicked men have been made to bless the people of God and to know that God is the God of the whole earth, and yet we are not told that these same men were saved.

I hope I have made my thoughts sufficiently plain to the reader. If I am not correct in my view would like to hear from some one else.

UNION MEETING.

The next session of the Piney Grove Union is appointed to be held with the Church at Mount Olive, to commence, the Lord willing, on Friday, before the 5th Sunday in December next. At this time and place the Churches composing said union have agreed to organize an Association. All brethren and sisters are invited to attend, especially ministers.

We desire Brother Jonah Williams and Elder Faucette to attend and be with us.

Done by order of Conference on Saturday before the 5th Sunday in October last.

GEO. ROBBINS, Moderator.

W. A. HILLARD, Clerk.

CORRECTION.

DEAR BROTHER GOLD:—I see in the Index to Vol 26 of the LANDMARK that you have me credited with an article on page 315 as the author when it should have been Joshua Mewborn. I highly endorse the views expressed as I have been of that opinion for long time before he wrote it, and I feel that I have not ability or spiritual knowledge to write such, therefore please make the correction if you can. Your little brother, L. J. H. MEWBORN. Jason, N. C.

Elder C. D. Bray writes that, owing to the condition of his family, he was unable to fill his appointments published in LANDMARK of Nov. 1st. He hopes to be able to fill them in December.

OBITUARIES.

HERBERT T. THORN AND SAMUEL J. D.
THORN.

Will try to give you and the brethren a short sketch of my two sons. Herbert was the seventh son and youngest born unto Samuel H. Thorn and wife Frances, of Edgecombe County, N. C., was born the 14th of May 1868, and died at Fort Clarke, Texas, the 14th of December 1892, making his stay in this life 24 years and 7 months. Herbert was a mystery to all who knew him in his boyhood days. He was kind and accommodating but very quick tempered, but was one that could not hold malice, he was truthful and believed in honesty. At the age of 15 or 16 years he joined the Methodists in one of their protracted meetings, and was a faithful member while staying with them, about 4 years, and verily believed he was doing God's service. But when it pleased the Lord to show him the error of his way he seemed to be changed in every way. He was humbled and was made to love the things he once hated. He seemed to love everything that was Christ-like; he united with the Baptists at Old Town Creek, was baptized by Elder B. C. Pitt and remained in that faith to his death. His last letter to me, wrote a few days before his death said "pray for me father that my faith fail not." He frequently would say when he was a boy that if he ever got to be a man he wanted to travel some to see the country he lived in. On the 27th of December, 1890, he bade us farewell, and when he kissed me a thought came in my mind that when you got out of my sight it would be the last time I would ever see him in this life, thinking that I would be the one to pass away before his return, but alas, God knowing best ordered it otherwise. He had a right to claim His own as I hope he was. Herbert often said he never wished to live to be old, he never wanted to live to be more than thirty years old. I have often heard him say he never studied death as much as he studied being prepared for death when it came. Herbert first went to Florida where he clerked in a hotel at St. Augustine, Fla., until April, when he went from there to Boston, Mass. where he got into a newspaper office. The work affected his eyes so he had to give that up, and then he was persuaded to join the U. S. army which he regretted soon, because he found no Baptists there. He said there was religion of other faiths and they were very rowdy, but especially were the Roman Catholics very rowdy. He wrote of several contentions he had with other faiths, as soon as they found out his belief they would pounce on him, but it seemed to him that the Lord would be with him and fight the battles for him. He said a soldier's life was an easy one and he fared as well as he wished so far as eatables were concerned, but the loss of the company of the brethren gave him more trouble than anything else. His captain wrote to me after his death a letter of sympathy and said he was an excellent soldier and his last hours were quiet and his death painless.

SAMUEL J. D. THORNE.
